INDIAN NEWSPAPER REPORTS, c1868-1942,

from the British Library, London

Part 8: Punjab 1896-1924; Sind 1936-1939; Burma 1938-1942; Bihar and Orissa 1920

Adam Matthew Publications

ADAM MATTHEW PUBLICATIONS LTD
Pelham House
London Road
Marlborough
Wiltshire
SN8 2AA

Indian Newspaper Reports, c1868-1942
from the British Library, London

Part 8: Punjab 1896-1924; Sind 1936-1939; Burma 1938-1942;
Bihar and Orissa 1920

All documents in this microfilm edition are held at the British Library, London

Images of the documents are copyright ©British Library 2009

This microfilm edition first published in 2009 by Adam Matthew Publications Ltd and copyright © Adam Matthew Publications Ltd 2009

Filmed at the British Library, London and by Capita Total Document Solutions, Bicester

All rights reserved. No part of this publication may be reproduced without prior permission

PUBLISHER'S NOTE

Indian Newspaper Reports, c1868-1942
Part 8: Punjab 1896-1924; Sind 1936-1939; Burma 1938-1942; Bihar and Orissa 1920

Part 8 consists of newspaper reports for the Punjab 1896-1924; Sind 1936-1939; Burma 1938-1942; Bihar and Orissa 1920. The Indian Newspaper Reports from the Asia, Pacific and Africa Department at the British Library, constitute an important series to be found in the Record Department Papers of the Oriental and India Office Collections. The reports consist of abstracts of Anglo-Indian and Vernacular newspapers for the different regions of India.

Punjab

Introduction

After the First Anglo-Sikh War from 1845 to1846, the area of the Punjab between the Sutlej and Beas rivers and Kashmir were ceded to Britain. Some British troops were stationed in the Punjab to oversee the regency of Maharaja Dhalip Singh who was a minor and the Sikh army was reduced greatly in size. In 1848 unrest spread throughout the Punjab between the Sikh troops and the British which developed into the Second Anglo-Sikh War. This resulted in the annexation of the Punjab by the British East India Company in 1849 and the Punjab becoming a province of British India.

The geographical and political predominance of the Punjab made it one of Britain's most important assets with Lahore as a centre of learning and culture and Rawalpindi becoming an important centre for the British army.

At the beginning of the twentieth century the Punjab became a centre for anti-British sentiment and called for independence from Britain, culminating in the Indian National Congress proclaiming independence from Lahore in 1930. The All-India Muslim League grew stronger in this period and in 1940 the Lahore Resolution of the League to work for Pakistan made the Punjab a centre stage for the violence between the majority Muslims and the Hindu and Sikh minorities which was to result in the ultimate partition of the Punjab in 1947.

Punjab Newspaper Reports, 1896-1924

The reports were completed weekly and consist of typewritten abstracts of the contents of Native Newspapers published in the Punjab. The early reports contain a list of the newspapers looked at, divided into Urdu, Hindi and Gurmukhi. The place of publication is given and the circulation number. Hamdard-i-Hind for example in 1900 had a readership of 500 which had grown by 1903 to 3,300. The later reports are divided into English, Urdu, Persian and Gurmukhi.

Around 100 newspapers were looked at weekly giving a wide spectrum of opinion, including: Arya Gazette, Jahan Numa, Kaisari Akhbar, Lahore Punch, Punjab, Punjab Theosophist. The majority of the reports contain an extra section devoted to topical subjects such as the Punjab disturbances. These give extracts on the subject from extra-provincial newspapers in cities such as Calcutta and Viswamitra.

The earlier abstracts are divided into the following themes:

Political, Home and Abroad
General Administration
Kine Killing
Native States
Legislation

Later abstracts have additional themes of Education and Communal and Religious.

Topics are wide ranging, with much on the call for independence and the growth in popularity of Gandhi. Topics include:

- Famine
- The Congress movement
- Complaints against the police
- Cholera
- The situation in China, Russia, Turkey
- Native Press
- Zamindars
- Assaults by Europeans on Indians
- Visits by the Viceroy
- Punjab Alienation Bill
- Establishment of military colleges
- Railways – expansion, grievances
- Muhammedans and the National Congress
- Political prisoners in India
- All-India Muslim League
- Letter bombs

- Indian Press Act
- Indian students in England
- Hindu University
- Afghan campaign
- Rowlatt Act
- National Congress

Sind

Introduction

Karachi was the first part of Sind to be occupied by the British East India Company in 1839, and by 1843 all of the remaining parts (except for the state of Khairpur) were under the jurisdiction of the British. Sind was made part of the Bombay Presidency in 1847 and the British built railways, developed the postal service, constructed canals and opened up education to all.

Sind became a vociferous centre for freedom from British rule. In 1918 the Sind branch of the All-India Muslim League was established by Ghulam Muhammad Bhurgari and Abdullah Haroon was elected President in 1920. Muhammad Ali Jinnah, the prominent Muslim leader, was educated at the Sindh-Madarsat-ul-Islam in Karachi and later practiced law there.

In 1936 Sind became a separate province and after the partition of Pakistan and India in 1947 it regained its self rule.

Sind Newspaper reports, 1936-1939

The newspaper reports consist of typed monthly abstracts of Indian newspapers published in Sind for an important period in its history. Lists of newspapers are not given but the name of the paper and the issue referred to are given next to the abstract.

Newspapers consulted include: Sind Observer, Public Opinion, Sind Sentinel, Sind Samachar, Karachi Daily, Daily Gazette, Maha Gujerat.

The material is not divided into themes but all manner of subjects are covered including WW II, self government, foreign politics, the Native Press and Gandhi.

Topics include:

- All-India Muslim League
- Rejection of the Federation by Indian Princes
- Re-election of Subash Bose as President of the Indian National Congress
- Indians' attitude to Britain's involvement in World War II
- Partition of Palestine
- Cotton prices

- Abdication of Edward VI
- Withdrawal of Indian troops from Abyssinia
- Establishment of the Federal Court
- Pandit Jawaharlal's attacks on the Press Laws
- Gandhi's policy of non-violent boycotts
- Gandhi's faith in Dominion status for India
- Congress Party's success in the General Election of 1937

Burma

Introduction

After the Third Anglo-Burmese War Burma was made a province of India in 1886, with the capital at Rangoon. After the opening of the Suez Canal the demand for Burmese rice grew and much of the land was taken over for cultivation of the crop. The work was mostly carried out by indentured Indian labourers and whilst the Burmese economy grew all the power and wealth remained in British hands. The civil service and the army were staffed by Indians and the Anglo-Burmese community and there was much discontent among the Burmese.

By the beginning of the twentieth century the nationalist movement, Young Men's Buddhist Associations had begun to take shape and a new generation of Burmese leaders who had been educated abroad began to clamour for more autonomy for Burma. In the 1920's there were strikes by university students and anti-tax protests. This came to a head in 1930 when the Galon rebellion had to be put down by British troops and the Dobama Asiayone (We Burmans Association) was formed. A second university strike by students took place in 1936 which spread to Mandalay and led to the formation of the All Burma Students Union. The unrest culminated with Burma becoming a separately administered territory in 1937. In 1938 discontent in the oilfields of Burma turned into a general strike and in Rangoon and Mandalay protestors were killed by the British.

Ba Maw served as the first Prime Minister of Burma, but was succeeded by U Saw from 1939 until 1942 when he was arrested by the British for communicating with the Japanese.

The Communist Party of Burma was co-founded in 1939 by Aung San. When the Japanese invaded Bangkok in December 1941 Aung San announced the formation of the Burma Independence Army and hoped that the Japanese would rally to his side but instead they asked Ba Maw to form a government. He was declared head of state and his cabinet included Aung San as War Minister. In 1943 the Japanese declared Burma independent but this turned out to be a sham and in 1945 the Burma National Army rose up against the Japanese and Aung San began negotiations with the British which lead to the rout of the Japanese from Burma by May 1945.

Burma Newspaper Reports, 1938-1942

The newspaper reports are divided into weekly abstracts. The lists of newspapers consulted show a wide variety of opinions. Titles include: New Mandalay Sun, Progress, New Light of Burma, Deedok, Sun, Daily Gujerati, Thakin Thadinsa.

Most of the monthly reports begin with a very interesting general introduction which gives an overview of the week's news and the material is then divided into the following themes:

Political Military
Educational Communal Economic
Miscellaneous

Topics covered include:

- Hunger strikes and political unrest
- Independence for Burma
- Immigration of Chinese and Indian workers
- WWII, the Japanese and Nazis
- Burmese Army
- Taxes
- Modernisation of agriculture and industry
- Reform of the education system
- Riots and demonstrations
- Coalition government
- Situation in Mandalay
- Strikes by oil-field workers and students in Rangoon
- Religious disturbances between Hindus and Muslims

Bihar and Orissa

Introduction

The territories of Bihar and Orissa were part of the Bengal Presidency, the largest British province in India until 1912 when they were separated from Bengal after a long local campaign forming the Province of Bihar and Orissa. The Province saw much support for the nationalist movement and for Gandhi. In 1936 the Province was divided into two: Bihar which included Bihar and Jharkhand and Orissa and the princely states.

Bihar and Orissa Newspaper Reports, 9-16 October 1920

Only two weeks of reports exist. They are divided into:

Foreign Politics
Native States
Home Administration
General
Miscellaneous

There is a separate section for Oriya Newspapers.

Topics included are:

- Police
- Working of the courts
- Jail sentences
- Education
- Railways
- Irish politics
- WW I

Liz Sargut
January 2009

TECHNICAL NOTE

Our microform publications are prepared and produced in accordance with recommended and established guide-lines for the production of microform of superior quality. These conform to the recommendations of the standard guides to good microforming and micropublishing practice.

Attention should be drawn to the nature of the material. As with all printed sources the inking is variable. Darker and lighter inks, or a dark ink and a light pencil note, can appear on the same page. There are instances when the paper has been badly stained, discoloured, or faded with exposure to light over a period of time. Some pages are torn, crumpled or cropped. Occasionally volumes have been tightly bound and material is slightly obscured in the inner margin. The curvature towards the spine of such volumes inevitably results in some distortion of the text. Sometimes the original paper is quite thin and this results in showthrough which can make the print difficult to read. Every effort has been made to minimise these difficulties and some openings are microfilmed more than once in an attempt to bring out all the features of the original. Nevertheless these original characteristics present difficulties of image and contrast which stringent tests and variations of density cannot entirely overcome.

The most responsible care has been exercised in the filming of this unique collection and every effort has been made to ensure that this microform publication meets the standards established by the Association for Information and Image Management (AIIM), the American National Standards Institute (ANSI) and prevailing European standards.

INDIAN NEWSPAPER REPORTS, c1868-1942
from the British Library, London

Part 8: Punjab 1896-1924; Sind 1936-1939; Burma 1938-1942; Bihar and Orissa 1920

CONTENTS OF REELS

REEL 1

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| IOR/L/R/5/180 | Punjab Newspaper Reports | 1896 |
| IOR/L/R/5/181 | Punjab Newspaper Reports | 1897 |

REEL 2

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| IOR/L/R/5/182 | Punjab Newspaper Reports | 1898 |

REEL 3

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| IOR/L/R/5/183 | Punjab Newspaper Reports | 1899 |

REEL 4

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| IOR/L/R/5/184 | Punjab Newspaper Reports | 1900 |

REEL 5

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| IOR/L/R/5/185 | Punjab Newspaper Reports | 1901 |

REEL 6

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| IOR/L/R/5/186 | Punjab Newspaper Reports | 1902 |
| IOR/L/R/5/187 | Punjab Newspaper Reports | 1903-1904 |

REEL 7

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| IOR/L/R/5/188 | Punjab Newspaper Reports | 1905-1906 |

REEL 8

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| IOR/L/R/5/189 | Punjab Newspaper Reports | 1907 |

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| REEL 9 | | |
| IOR/L/R/5/189 | Punjab Newspaper Reports | 1908 |
| REEL 10 | | |
| IOR/L/R/5/190 | Punjab Newspaper Reports | 1909 |
| REEL 11 | | |
| IOR/L/R/5/190 | Punjab Newspaper Reports | 1909 |
| REEL 12 | | |
| IOR/L/R/5/191 | Punjab Newspaper Reports | 1910 |
| REEL 13 | | |
| IOR/L/R/5/192 | Punjab Newspaper Reports | 1911 |
| REEL 14 | | |
| IOR/L/R/5/193 | Punjab Newspaper Reports | 1912 |
| REEL 15 | | |
| IOR/L/R/5/194 | Punjab Newspaper Reports | 1913 |
| REEL 16 | | |
| IOR/L/R/5/195 | Punjab Newspaper Reports | 1914 |
| REEL 17 | | |
| IOR/L/R/5/196 | Punjab Newspaper Reports | 1915 |
| IOR/L/R/5/197 | Punjab Newspaper Reports | Jan-June 1916 |
| REEL 18 | | |
| IOR/L/R/5/198 | Punjab Newspaper Reports | July-Dec 1916 |
| REEL 19 | | |
| IOR/L/R/5/199 | Punjab Newspaper Reports | 1917 |

REEL 20

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| IOR/L/R/5/200 | Punjab Newspaper Reports | 1918 |
| IOR/L/R/5/201 | Punjab Newspaper Reports | 1919 |

REEL 21

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| IOR/L/R/5/202 | Punjab Newspaper Reports | 1920-1921 |

REEL 22

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| IOR/L/R/5/203 | Punjab Newspaper Reports | 1922 |

REEL 23

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| IOR/L/R/5/204 | Punjab Newspaper Reports | 1923 |
| IOR/L/R/5/205 | Punjab Newspaper Reports | 1924 |

REEL 24

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| IOR/L/R/5/206 | Sind Newspaper Reports | 1936-1939 |

REEL 25

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| IOR/L/R/5/207 | Burma Newspaper Reports | 1938-1942 |
| IOR/L/R/5/208 | Bihar and Orissa Newspaper Reports | 9 -16 Oct 1920 |

[ Confidential. ]

[ Vol. XXV. ] [ No. 1. ]

SELECTIONS

FROM THE

NATIVE NEWSPAPERS

PUBLISHED IN THE PUNJAB.

Examined up to 6th January 1912.

---

CONTENTS.

Page.

I.—Politics.

(a) Foreign—

1. The Turco-Italian War (Watan) ... ... 7

(b) Home—

2. The transfer of the Capital to Delhi (Bharat) ... 7
3. The new administrative changes and the Punjab (Hindustan) ... ... ... ib.
4. The annulment of the Partition of Bengal and the Observer (Bharat, Hindustan and Loyal Gazette) ... ... ... ... 8
5. The royal boons and political prisoners (Jhang Sial) ... ... ... ... 9
6. The royal boons and the Indian press (Haq) ... ib.
7. The Pioneer and Muslim loyalty (Millat) ... ib.
8. Muhammadans and Government (Vakil) ... 10

II.—Afghanistan and Trans-Frontier.

Nil.

III.—Native States.

Nil.

IV.—Kirp-killing.

Nil.

V.—Native Societies and Religious Matters.

9. Swami Dayanand (Khalsa Sewak) ... ... 10

VI.—Legislation.

Nil.

Page.

VII.—General Administration.

(a) Judicial—

Nil.

(b) Police—

Nil.

(c) Municipal and Cantonment affairs—

Nil.

(d) Education—

Nil.

(e)—Agriculture and questions affecting the land—

Nil.

(f) Railways and Communications—

Nil.

(g) Postal matters—

Nil.

(h) Miscellaneous—

10. The Darbar honours and Sikhs (Loyal Gazette) ... 11
11. The new rupee (Waqt and Shanti) ... ... ib.
12. The oriental literary titles (Ahl-i-Hadis) ... 12

LIST OF NEWSPAPERS AND PERIODICALS EXAMINED BY THE SPECIAL BRANCH AS IT STOOD ON THE 6TH JANUARY 1912.

| No. | Name. | Locality. | Name of Publisher. | Circulation. |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| | ENGLISH. | | | |
| | DAILY. | | | |
| 1 | Tribune ... | Lahore ... | Bihari Lal ... | 1,758 copies. |
| | TRI-WEEKLY. | | | |
| 2 | Panjabee ... | Lahore ... | Mul Chand ... | 2,424 „ |
| | BI-WEEKLY. | | | |
| 3 | Observer ... | Lahore ... | Nizam-ud-din ... | 1,000 „ |
| 4 | Punjab Times and Frontier News. | Rawalpindi ... | J. R. Thapur ... | 200 „ |
| | WEEKLY. | | | |
| 5 | Arya Patrika ... | Lahore ... | Devi Chand ... | 650 „ |
| 6 | Harbinger ... | Do. ... | Durga Parshad ... | 300 „ |
| 7 | Khalsa Advocate ... | Amritsar ... | Bahadar Singh ... | 752 „ |
| | MONTHLY. | | | |
| 8 | D. A.-V. College Magazine... | Lahore ... | Saraswati Nath ... | 1,000 „ |
| 9 | Forman Christian College Notes. | Do. ... | ... | ... |
| 10 | Jijnasu ... | Do. ... | Ishwar Das ... | ... |
| 11 | Practical Medicine ... | Delhi ... | ... | ... |
| 12 | Punjab Educational Journal | Lahore ... | R. B. Mohan Lal ... | 700 copies. |
| 13 | Punjab Mission News ... | Do. ... | Revd. Wigram ... | 250 „ |
| 14 | Ravi ... | Do. ... | Mr. B. M. Jones ... | ... |
| 15 | Review of Religions ... | Qadian (Gurdaspur) ... | Sadr Anjuman Ahmadia, Qadian. | 800 copies. |
| 16 | Science Grounded Religion... | Lahore ... | Dev Rattan ... | 25 „ |
| 17 | Teacher ... | Dinga (Gujrat) ... | Kanhaya Singh ... | 200 „ |
| | URDU. | | | |
| | DAILY. | | | |
| 18 | Afghan ... | Peshawar ... | Shekh Muhammad Abdulla | ... |
| 19 | Akhbar-i-'Am ... | Lahore ... | Govind Sahai ... | 630 copies. |
| 20 | Paisa Akhbar ... | Do. ... | Abdul Aziz ... | 1,011 „ |
| 21 | Watan ... | Do. ... | Muhammad Insha Alla ... | ... |
| 22 | Zamindar ... | Do. ... | Zafar Ali Khan, B.A. ... | ... |
| | BI-WEEKLY. | | | |
| 23 | Vakil ... | Amritsar ... | Abdul Aziz ... | 1,970 copies. |
| | WEEKLY. | | | |
| 24 | Afghan ... | Peshawar ... | Saiyid Muhammad Abdulla | 500 „ |
| 25 | Ahl-i-Hadis ... | Amritsar ... | Sanaulla ... | 925 „ |
| 26 | Ahluwalia Gazette ... | Do. ... | Lehna Singh ... | 500 „ |
| 27 | Army News ... | Ludhiana ... | Hira Lal & Co. ... | 1,300 „ |
| 28 | Arorbans Gazette ... | Amritsar ... | Labh Singh ... | ... |
| 29 | Arya Gazette ... | Lahore ... | Bhowani Das ... | 550 copies. |

LIST OF NEWSPAPERS AND PERIODICALS EXAMINED BY THE SPECIAL BRANCH AS IT STOOD ON THE 6TH JANUARY 1912—CONTINUED.

| No. | Name. | Locality. | Name of Publisher. | Circulation. |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| | URDU—CONTINUED. | | | |
| | WEEKLY—continued. | | | |
| 30 | Badar ... | Qadian, Gurdaspur district | Muhammad Sadiq ... | 200 copies. |
| 31 | Bharat ... | Jullundur ... | Thakur Sheoratan Singh | ... |
| 32 | Civil and Military News ... | Ludhiana ... | Saiyid Muhammad ... | 1,325 copies. |
| 33 | Curzon Gazette ... | Delhi ... | Mirza Hairat ... | 111 „ |
| 34 | Delhi Gazette ... | Do. ... | Sajjad Husain ... | 200 „ |
| 35 | Edward Gazette ... | Abbott-abad ... | Muhammad Latif ... | 200 „ |
| 36 | Hakam ... | Qadian, Gurdaspur district | Yakub Ali ... | 900 „ |
| 37 | Haq ... | Delhi ... | Kasim Ali ... | 200 „ |
| 38 | Haq Pasand ... | Amritsar ... | Ram Nath ... | 382 „ |
| 39 | Hindu ... | Lahore ... | Hari Lal Sharma ... | ... |
| 40 | Hindustan ... | Do. ... | Ram Sarn Dutt ... | 8,070 copies. |
| 41 | Jhang Sial ... | Jhang ... | Prabh Dyal ... | 2,262 „ |
| 42 | Islam ... | Lahore ... | Abdul Latif ... | 200 „ |
| 43 | Kapurthala Akhbar ... | Kapurthala ... | Hamid Husain ... | 155 „ |
| 44 | Loyal Gazette ... | Lahore ... | Amar Singh ... | 200 „ |
| 45 | Lytton Gazette ... | Delhi ... | Bulaki Das ... | 1,000 „ |
| 46 | Millat ... | Lahore ... | Shuja Ulla ... | 1,500 „ |
| 47 | Mister Gazette ... | Do. ... | Ali Bakhsh ... | 150 „ |
| 48 | Munir ... | Jhang ... | Hafiz Khuda Bakhsh ... | 200 „ |
| 49 | Musalman ... | Amritsar ... | Sana-ulla ... | 400 „ |
| 50 | Nur ... | Qadian, Gurdaspur district | Muhammad Yusaf ... | 200 „ |
| 51 | Nur Afshan ... | Ludhiana ... | Revd. Dr. E. M. Wherry | 500 „ |
| 52 | Paisa Akhbar ... | Lahore ... | Abdul Aziz ... | 8,377 „ |
| 53 | Parkash ... | Do. ... | Krishan ... | 1,723 „ |
| 54 | Punjab Advocate ... | Mianwali ... | Karm Chand, Bahl ... | 1,000 „ |
| 55 | Punjab Samachar ... | Lahore ... | Hira Lal ... | 705 „ |
| 56 | Rajput Gazette ... | Do. ... | Thakur Sukhram Das ... | 650 „ |
| 57 | Municipal Gazette and Sada-i-Hind. | Do. ... | Din Muhammad ... | 500 „ |
| 58 | Sadiq-ul-Akhbar ... | Bahawalpur ... | Maulvi Ata Ullah ... | 392 „ |
| 59 | Ditto ... | Rewari ... | Safdar Hussain ... | 200 „ |
| 60 | Sanatan Dharm Pracharak... | Amritsar ... | Rulia Ram ... | 200 „ |
| 61 | Shanti ... | Rawalpindi ... | Kishan Chand Mohan ... | 300 „ |
| 62 | Sialkot Paper ... | Sialkot ... | Todar Mal ... | 500 „ |
| 63 | Siraj-ul-Akhbar ... | Jhelum ... | Maulvi Fakir Muhammad | 450 „ |
| 64 | Tahzib-ul-Niswan ... | Lahore ... | Mumtaz Ali ... | 240 „ |

LIST OF NEWSPAPERS AND PERIODICALS EXAMINED BY THE SPECIAL BRANCH AS IT STOOD ON THE 6TH JANUARY 1912—CONCLUDED.

| No. | Name. | Locality. | Name of Publisher. | Circulation. |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| | URDU—CONCLUDED. | | | |
| | WEEKLY—concluded. | | | |
| 65 | Victoria Paper ... | Sialkot ... | Gian Chand ... | 600 copies. |
| 66 | Wafadar ... | Lahore ... | Fazal-ud-din ... | 600 „ |
| 67 | Waqt ... | Do. ... | Ali Husain ... | 200 „ |
| 68 | Watan ... | Do. ... | Muhammad Insha Ullah,... | 1,800 „ |
| 69 | Zamindar ... | Do. ... | Zafar Ali Khan, B.A. ... | 750 „ |
| | FORTNIGHTLY. | | | |
| 70 | Biwah Samachar* ... | Lahore ... | Ram Chand ... | 300 copies. |
| 71 | Kam Dhenu ... | Ludhiana ... | Daulat Ram ... | 100 „ |
| 72 | Mohyal Gazette ... | Kala, Jhelum district ... | Mehta Sham Das ... | 250 „ |
| | MONTHLY. | | | |
| 73 | Arorbans Parkash ... | Lahore ... | Salig Ram ... | 200 copies. |
| 74 | Arya Musafir ... | Jullundur ... | Wazir Chand ... | 1,300 „ |
| 75 | Indar ... | Lahore ... | Dharampal, B.A. ... | 3,000 „ |
| 76 | Jauhar ... | Amritsar ... | Muhammad Ismail Khan | 200 „ |
| 77 | Kakezai Social Reformer ... | Lahore ... | Fazl Din ... | 200 „ |
| 78 | Makhzan ... | Delhi ... | Abdul Kadir ... | 4,000 „ |
| 79 | Rafiq ... | Lahore ... | Charinji Lal ... | 500 „ |
| 80 | Sadhu ... | Do. ... | Sheobart Lal ... | 500 „ |
| 81 | Martand ... | Do. ... | Kanhya Lal ... | 250 „ |
| 82 | Raghbir Patrika ... | Do. ... | Prab Dial ... | 500 „ |
| 83 | Zaban ... | Delhi ... | Hamid Hasain ... | 500 „ |
| | GURMUKHI. | | | |
| | WEEKLY. | | | |
| 84 | Khalsa Sewak ... | Amritsar ... | Jiwan Singh ... | 1,000 copies. |

* Not received during the week.

I.—Politics.

(a)—Foreign.

The Turco-Italian War.

1. The Watan (Lahore), of the 22nd December 1911, has a paragraph entitled "The Turco-Italian War and Muslim loyalty." The attitude of Indian Muhammadans, says the paper, towards the Turco-Italian War can under no circumstances be regarded as subversive of British neutrality. Even the Anglo-Indian papers have admitted that Indian Muhammadans are extremely loyal to His Majesty the King-Emperor, and that their loyalty is based on a solid foundation. They certainly cannot be charged with disloyalty for expressing feelings of regret and sorrow at the brigandage of Italy. Their loyalty has been tried on the most crucial occasions, and has not been found wanting. After referring to the conduct of Italy in waging war against Turkey and practising unheard-of oppression on Arabian men, women and children in Tripoli, the paper says that the conduct of Indian Muhammadans in collecting funds in aid of the Muslim sufferers from the war is not in the least opposed to British neutrality. They are sure that England is not a partisan of Italy in the present war. They should, however, bear in mind that the present is a very critical time, and they are surrounded by hostile neighbours who try their utmost to make even their good deeds appear black in the eyes of Government. Although they have full confidence in the British authorities' sense of justice, they should be careful not to afford any malignant person an opportunity of misrepresenting them. They should also take care that the Red Crescent Society does not take any steps to send volunteers consisting of Indian Muhammadans to join the Turkish army against the Italians without the sanction of the Government of India. If they act in this way, they are free to show their heart-felt sympathy for Turkey, to pray for the success of the Turks, to collect subscriptions in aid of the Muslim sufferers in Tripoli, to quietly boycott Italian goods, and to adopt every constitutional means of expressing their deep abhorrence and indignation at the conduct of the Italians.

(b)—Home.

The transfer of the Capital to Delhi.

2. The Bharat (Jullundur), of the 22nd December 1911, has a paragraph headed "Government is committing a mistake." The modification of the Partition of Bengal, says the paper, is an ordinary affair, and even the Bengalis have admitted that it is a small matter compared with the transfer of the Capital to Delhi. There can be no doubt that the Government has committed a gross mistake in making this transfer. It is an admitted fact that Bengal is the commercial and intellectual centre of India, and all those movements which, rightly or wrongly, have gone to make modern India, have originated in that (part of the) country. These movements, however, are apt to create numerous difficulties, and it is most necessary for Government to check or arrest them, which can only be done if Government remains in close touch with public opinion. The transfer of the Capital to Delhi is probably as bad as the retention of the Government of India at Simla all the year round. The transfer has given the people an opportunity of suspecting that Government wishes to fight shy of the above-mentioned difficulties, and is anxious to inflict punishment on those who have created them. It is also an admitted fact that the transfer will inflict severe material and commercial injuries on Calcutta.

The new administrative changes and the Punjab.

3. The Hindustan (Lahore), of the 29th December 1911, says that by the new administrative changes announced on the occasion of the recent Darbar, Delhi and its environments will be taken away from the Punjab. It is true that neither the Punjabis nor the Punjab Government have offered any opposition to the change, but, nevertheless, the Punjab should receive compensation for this loss, and this being the case, it is advisable that Sind should be annexed to this province.

The annulment of the Partition of Bengal and the Observer.

4. The Bharat (Jullundur), of the 22nd December 1911, publishes a paragraph headed "The ingratitude of the Observer." From a perusal, says the paper, of the despatch which Lord Hardinge forwarded to the Secretary of State for India suggesting modifications in the measure for the Partition of Bengal, it is evident that it was not so much through fear as through a desire to conciliate Bengal that the Government of India was pleased to suggest those modifications. It is this consideration which has brought about the modification of the Partition, and it is this same consideration which has led the people to raise shouts of joy all over the country. It has, however, now transpired that there is a large number of people in the country, who, instead of feeling joy at these pronouncements, are expressing their disapprobation of the annulment of the Partition. These persons have hitherto been mostly numbered amongst the European community, but the Observer also has now thought fit to join them. In a recent issue that paper opines that the annulment of the Partition of Bengal has benefitted Hindus alone, and has inflicted on Muhammadans severe injuries, for which the transfer of the Capital of the British Indian Empire to Delhi scarcely forms an adequate recompense. It is also of opinion that a right-minded person cannot but observe, after perusing the papers in connection with the above-mentioned measures, that the King-Emperor paid a visit to India merely to seek a pretext for undoing the Partition of Bengal. Is it not the height of ingratitude on the part of the editor of the Observer, asks the Bharat, to write in this strain? The King-Emperor's visit to India is an occasion of universal rejoicing, and it is not desirable that it should be regarded with regret and sorrow. Nothing can surpass in bare-faced impudence this attempt to misinterpret and misrepresent the significance of the Royal visit to India. After remarking that even Lord Curzon, who was mainly responsible for carrying out the Partition of Bengal, did not consider it opportune to oppose the annulment of the measure, the paper takes the Observer to task for doing so at the present juncture, and remarks that it is a pity that the paper named has not even stopped there, but has gone so far as to assert that it was through fear that the Government of India transferred the Capital to Delhi. Has it come to this, it asks, that, in the words of the Pioneer, attempts are made in season and out of season to inflame the minds of Muslims, even in the smallest matters, and that no heed is paid to the policy pursued by the British authorities in political matters, and that opposition is offered to it without any legitimate ground whatsoever? Are not these writings calculated to overstep the bounds of law, and create excitement in the country?

The Hindustan (Lahore), of the 22nd December 1911, publishes a paragraph headed "Opposition to the royal boons by a Muslim newspaper." After stating that a communication opposing the royal boons has been published in the Observer, the paper remarks on the strong and objectionable language in which it has been written. Can there be a bolder and more shameful insinuation, it asks, than to allege that His Majesty the King-Emperor came to India, not to celebrate his coronation, but merely to announce the annulment of the Partition of Bengal? At the present moment, when the people are rejoicing throughout the country over the coronation celebrations, and are expressing their feelings of loyalty to the throne, it is a gross insult to declare that His Majesty's visit to India was a mere pretext for undoing the Partition. Probably not even an Anglo-Indian newspaper would, under the present circumstances, have dared to display such effrontery as the Observer has done. Moreover, can there be a greater insult to the mighty British Lion than the assertion that the Government of India transferred its Head-quarters to Delhi through fear, not considering it safe to remain (at Calcutta). If this is not sedition, it is difficult to say what sedition is. This attitude on the part of the Observer shows that "our Muhammadan brethren" have become too fastidious, and are ready to threaten Government, even in small matters which may happen to be opposed to their views. The time has come for this to be brought to the notice of His Honour the Lieutenant-Governor, in the Punjab Legislative Council, by some Hon'ble Member, so that the Observer and papers of a similar nature may receive a lesson, and be kept from straying from the right path.

The Loyal Gazette (Lahore), of the 1st January 1912, writing under the heading "The beginning of a bad spirit amongst Muhammadans," refers to the above-mentioned communication, and regrets that, although Muhammadans have received special concessions from Government in consideration of their admitted loyalty, some short-sighted Muhammadan journalists are engaged in causing friction between their co-religionists and Government. If Government and Muhammadan statesmen take no steps to put an end to this state of affairs, it is quite possible that these journalists will succeed in causing as much deplorable estrangement between Government and the followers of the Prophet as existed between Government and Bengalis, and which the advent of His Majesty the King-Emperor in the country has happily removed. It is to be hoped that the Muhammadan leaders will regard with abhorrence the spirit in which the above communication has been written, and prove to Government that they have no sympathy with such writings.

The royal boons and political prisoners.

5. The Jhang Sial (Jhang), of the 23rd December 1911, has a note entitled "The royal boons and political prisoners." The paper understands that 11,763 prisoners, both civil and criminal, have been released in honour of the Delhi Darbar, and says that although there are undoubtedly among the ex-convicts one or two journalists who were punished for sedition, the arrangement has not given satisfaction to the Indian people. They were anxious to see a large number of political prisoners set free, and entertained the hope that Tilak would be restored to liberty, and Babu Arabindo Ghosh and others, who have been living in exile through fear of arrest, allowed to return to their homes. After remarking that there were no political prisoners at the time of the great Darbars of 1877 and 1902, it states that now-a-days, when not a few Indians have been sent to jail for serving their native land by means fair or foul, it is only natural that the people should be anxious to see these political prisoners set at liberty. In conclusion, it expresses the hope that His Excellency the Viceroy will reassure the public by ordering the release of a larger number of prisoners in honour of this great occasion, bearing in mind the fact that at the previous Darbars so many as 16,188 prisoners were released, as compared with 11,763 on the present occasion.

The royal boons and the Indian press.

6. The Haq (Delhi), of the 22nd December 1911 (received on the 3rd January 1912), has a note entitled "Why has the Indian press been deprived of boons granted by the King-Emperor?" It was hoped, says the paper, that His Majesty would recognize the plight of the Indian press and Indian journalism, for which the Press Act has created many difficulties, hedging them round with legal restrictions, and would take the matter into his serious consideration. The Haq also entertained the hope that the wide-awake Lieutenant-Governor of the Punjab would, in honour of the Imperial Darbar, be so good as to order the refund of the security which it had been made to furnish. These hopes, however, have not been realised, and the Indian press has received no boon from His Majesty. It then goes on to express gratification at the boons conferred on the country by the King-Emperor, but regrets that, although His Majesty several times passed by the Press Camp, the representatives of the Indian press failed to respectfully invite his attention to the Press Act and the deplorable condition of their brethren. After quoting the Shanti's remark that the condition of the Indian Editors is no better than that of prisoners, the paper says that it is unfortunate that the Indian press took no steps to bring the matte to the notice of the authorities, as otherwise it would certainly never have been deprived of the royal favour.

The Pioneer and Muslim loyalty.

7. The Millat (Lahore), of the 21st December 1911 (received on the 2nd January 1912), publishes a leader headed "The loyalty of Muhammadans and universal brotherhood." The paper takes the Pioneer to task for questioning the pure-minded and disinterested loyalty of Muhammadans, and says that the manner in which the Anglo-Indian daily of Allahabad has adversely criticised the Right Hon'ble Maulvi Sayad Amir Ali looks as if the honour which the Right Hon'ble gentleman enjoys in the Privy Council was entirely in its keeping. After remarking that Muhammadans are loyal because their religion teaches them to be so, the paper expresses surprise that when Austria, France, Germany and Russia support Italy they are praised, whereas when Muhammadans merely express in words their sympathy with Arabs and Turks, they are condemned, and held up to opprobrium as a band of unprincipled persons. It then endeavours to show that a Muhammadan cannot be a hypocrite and disloyal, and concludes by saying that Muhammadans emphatically request Government, which they regard as a Muslim and a national one, to come forward and save Turkey, Persia, Morocco, Tripoli and other countries from the aggression of European Powers. They have reason to believe that Government will eventually do this.

Muhammadans and Government.

8. The Vakil (Amritsar), of the 27th December 1911, publishes an article headed "Religious antagonism in Bengal." In the course of this it says that there is nothing which wounds the hearts of Muhammadans more than the fact that they are interfered with in the performance of their religious duties, and that the public peace is thereby disturbed. It then describes several incidents published by a certain correspondent in the columns of the Musalman of Calcutta, in which Hindus sought the help of the local police in order to prevent the Muhammadans of Kira Gachi and Madanpur, in the Satkhira Sub-Division of the Khulna district, and of Hakampur, in the Basirhat Sub-Division of the district of 24-Parganas, from sacrificing kine on the occasion of the recent Bakr-'Id, and remarks that comment on them is needless. It has, moreover, come to know that similar incidents have occurred in the United Provinces, and also in Behar, and is afraid that if steps are not taken to prevent them in future, serious difficulties will arise. It is true that it is the duty of the authorities to prevent disturbance of the public peace, but this does not mean that Muhammadans should be prohibited from making calls to prayers, reading namaz, and offering sacrifice, merely because Hindus are offended thereby. The police certainly cannot be congratulated on their strange conduct, for nothing can be more surprising than that one community should be deprived of full liberty in the performance of their religious duties merely to please another. The Vakil is of opinion that the question is not (merely) a Hindu-Muhammadan one, seeing that the very liberty and safety of the country are involved. Should not the Government, it asks, consider what consequences are likely to ensue if Muhammadans are prevented from performing their religious duties, which they have been doing unmolested for a long time past, or if restrictions are imposed on them in their performance of the same? If such incidents were to happen next year, it is difficult to say what serious discontent and uneasiness would be created in the minds of Muhammadans. Government knows full well the consequences of interference in religious matters, and every Indian feels grateful that it abstains from meddling with his religious affairs. The (Muhammadan) public, however, wish to know whether the incidents reported by the Musalman's correspondent, if true, do not constitute interference with their religious liberty, whether the conduct of the police in the matter does not call for notice, and whether steps should not be taken to re-assure the public that the Police department is impartial in the discharge of its duties and that Government maintains even-handed justice between Hindus and Muhammadans.

V.—Native Societies and Religious Matters.

Swami Dayanand.

9. In continuation of its previous remarks (vide paragraph 12 of Selections No. 49 of 1911), the Khalsa Sewak (Amritsar), of the 29th November 1911 (received on the 3rd January 1912), says that it is an admitted fact that an Arya does not preach a precept until he has begun acting on it. This being the case, who can say that Swami Dayanand, who remained celibate from his boyhood, did not begin practising niyog? It may also be asked how many Arya men and women have been ascertained by the Census Department to be engaged in spreading the doctrine of niyog. Again, how many Aryas are there who are practising celibacy in the manner in which the Swami is alleged to have done? Was Dayanand the son of a Jat, or of a Brahman? How did he die? Was not his death suspicious? It is, moreover, a well-known fact that Bawa Dayanand was kept by Sikhs when he paid a visit to the Punjab. Let the Aryas say whether the Bawa and his followers were not guilty of abusing hospitality in trying to ruin the Sikhs. Let them also say whether there is any difference between niyog and prostitution. In conclusion, it says that on receiving replies to the above it will put another string of questions to the Arya Samaj.

VII.—General Administration.

(h)—Miscellaneous.

The Darbar Honours and Sikhs.

10. The Loyal Gazette (Lahore), of the 1st January 1912, has a note entitled "Bawa Gurbakhsh Singh has been created a C.I.E." The paper says that it has learnt with sorrow and regret that Bawa Gurbakhsh Singh, Bedi, a Hindu, who, through the kindness of Sir Louis Dane, has already been made a member of the Punjab Legislative Council in place of Sardar Partab Singh, has also received the title of C.I.E. on the occasion of the Darbar at Delhi. It cannot understand whether the titles conferred this year have been given in consideration of public services rendered by their recipients, or whether they have been granted in recognition of family claims or religious position. It is a matter for extreme regret, it adds, that no Sikh leader has been granted a title this year. Perhaps the prophecy of Bawa Gurbakhsh Singh and his followers, that the day was coming when they would succeed in prejudicing Government and the public against Sikhs, and in so humiliating the latter as to reduce them to the condition of Arya Samajists, is about to be fulfilled. Proceeding, it says that Bawa Ujagar Singh gave Rs. 4,000 to the late King Edward Memorial Fund, whilst Bawa Gurbakhsh Singh contributed only Rs. 500, and expresses surprise that, while the latter is made an Hon'ble and a C.I.E., the former has received no distinction whatever from Government. This can only be accounted for by the fact that Bawa Gurbakhsh Singh has joined the Hindu Sabha, and by becoming its President has come to know how titles and distinctions can be obtained from Government. After stating that, of the neo-Sikhs, Sardar Sundar Singh Bahadur, Bhai Arjan Singh of Baghrian, Sardar Jogindar Singh, Home Minister of Patiala State, and Kanwar Daljit Singh, Rais of Jullundur, have not received any titles, it expresses the hope that on some future occasion the above-named public servants and leaders of the neo-Sikhs will receive titles and distinctions at the hands of Government.

The new rupee.

11. The Waqt (Lahore), of the 23rd December 1911, has a note headed "The new coin of the King Emperor George V." A few days ago, says the Editor, somebody told him that the obverse of the new rupee, which bears the effigy of the King Emperor George V also bore the figure of a pig. He could not, however, believe this, not seeing how, after the bitter experience of the Indian Mutiny, Government could have taken a step calculated to wound the religious feelings of Hindus or Muhammadans. He, therefore, took a magnifying glass, and with the help of that instrument detected on His Majesty's robes an animal which could be suspected to be a pig, but which might possibily be an elephant. As, however, this is causing great excitement in the minds of Muhammadans, and they do not like touching (the coin), it is to be hoped that the Government of India will take prompt steps to remove this suspicion from the minds of the Muhammadan public.

The Shanti (Rawalpindi), of the 30th December 1911, also writes to the above effect, and says that as excitement over the coin has spread even to villages, and Muhammadans consider it objectionable to touch it, it is to be hoped that Government will take prompt measures to have the impression of the animal removed.

The Oriental literary titles.

12. The Ahl-i-Hadis (Amritsar), of the 22nd December 1911, has a note entitled "Oriental literary titles (such as) Shams-ul-Ulama, &c.; worthy of attention by the Imperial Government." After thanking Government for the announcement at the Coronation Darbar at Delhi that in future reasonable stipends will be given to persons on whom oriental titles such as Shams-ul-Ulama, &c., are conferred, the paper enquires whether Government has any means of ascertaining the qualifications of the men whom it considers deserving of these titles. It then goes on to suggest that before conferring oriental titles Government should see whether the person recommended holds any diploma of an Oriental College, or, failing that, whether he has studied oriental languages in any communal institution, and if so, to what extent. Consideration should also be given to his writings and publications, which are the best criterion of his abilities. It is not advisable, it adds, that persons who have rendered some public service should be honoured with literary titles, as this is calculated to lower the titles in the estimation of the public. The paper concludes by expressing the hope that Government will take its reasonable suggestion into serious consideration.

LAHORE:
The 6th January 1912.

J. M. K. MISICK,
Assistant to Deputy Inspector General of Police,
Criminal Investigation Department, Punjab.

27 JAN 1912
INDIA OFFICE

Punjab Government Press, Lahore—10-1-12—50-107—T. W. L.

[ Confidential. ]

[ Vol. XXV. ] SELECTIONS [ No. 2. ]

FROM THE

NATIVE NEWSPAPERS

PUBLISHED IN THE PUNJAB.

Examined up to 13th January 1912.

---

CONTENTS.

Page.

I.—Politics.

(a) Foreign—

1. Turkey and European Powers (Millat) ... 19
2. Events in Persia and Tripoli and Indian Muhammadans (Zamindar) ... ... ... ib.
3. Russia and England and Muhammadans (Zamindar) ... ... ... ... 20
4. England and Persia and Afghanistan (Zamindar) ib.
5. The meeting held at Lahore to express sympathy with Persia (Zamindar and Paisa Akhbar) ... ib.

(b) Home—

6. His Imperial Majesty's message (Tribune) ... 21
7. The annulment of the Partition of Bengal (Waqt) 22
8. The annulment of the Partition of Bengal and Muhammadans (Zamindar) ... ... 23
9. The annulment of the Partition of Bengal and Muhammadans (Vakil) ... ... 24
10. A suggestion to include Sindh in the Punjab (Watan) ... ... ... ... ib.
11. The new Capital (Paisa Akhbar) ... ... ib.
12. Muhammadans and Government (Hindustan) ... 25
13. Muhammadans and Hindus (Paisa Akhbar) ... 27

II.—Afghanistan and Trans-Frontier.

Nil.

III.—Native States.

Nil.

IV.—Kine-killing.

Nil.

V.—Native Societies and Religious Matters.

Nil.

Page.

VI.—Legislation.

14. A suggestion for the repeal of the Press Act (Shanti) ... ... ... ... 27

VII.—General Administration.

(a) Judicial—

15. A suggestion to raise the Punjab Chief Court to the status of a High Court (Paisa Akhbar) ... 27
16. Imprisonment for saluting (Panjabee) ... 28

(b) Police—

Nil.

(c) Municipal and Cantonment affairs —

Nil.

(d) Education —

Nil.

(e)—Agriculture and questions affecting the land—

Nil.

(f) Railways and Communications —

Nil.

(g) Postal matters—

Nil.

(h) Miscellaneous—

17. The new rupee (Hindu) ... ... 28

LIST OF NEWSPAPERS AND PERIODICALS EXAMINED BY THE SPECIAL BRANCH AS IT STOOD ON THE 13TH JANUARY 1912.

| No. | Name. | Locality. | Name of Publisher. | Circulation. |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| | ENGLISH. | | | |
| | DAILY. | | | |
| 1 | Tribune ... | Lahore ... | Bihari Lal ... | 1,758 copies. |
| | TRI-WEEKLY. | | | |
| 2 | Panjabee ... | Lahore ... | Mul Chand ... | 2,424 „ |
| | BI-WEEKLY. | | | |
| 3 | Observer ... | Lahore ... | Nizam-ud-din ... | 1,000 „ |
| 4 | Punjab Times and Frontier News. | Rawalpindi ... | J. R. Thapur ... | 200 „ |
| | WEEKLY. | | | |
| 5 | Arya Patrika ... | Lahore ... | Devi Chand ... | 650 „ |
| 6 | Harbinger ... | Do. ... | Durga Parshad ... | 300 „ |
| 7 | Khalsa Advocate ... | Amritsar ... | Bahadar Singh ... | 752 „ |
| | MONTHLY. | | | |
| 8 | D. A.-V. College Magazine... | Lahore ... | Saraswati Nath ... | 1,000 „ |
| 9 | Forman Christian College Notes. | Do. ... | ... | ... |
| 10 | Jijnasu ... | Do. ... | Ishwar Das ... | ... |
| 11 | Practical Medicine ... | Delhi ... | ... | ... |
| 12 | Punjab Educational Journal | Lahore ... | R. B. Mohan Lal ... | 700 copies. |
| 13 | Punjab Mission News ... | Do. ... | Revd. Wigram ... | 250 „ |
| 14 | Ravi ... | Do. ... | Mr. B. M. Jones ... | ... |
| 15 | Review of Religions ... | Qadian (Gurdaspur) ... | Sadr Anjuman Ahmadia, Qadian. | 800 copies. |
| 16 | Science Grounded Religion... | Lahore ... | Dev Rattan ... | 25 „ |
| 17 | Teacher ... | Dinga (Gujrat) ... | Kanhaya Singh ... | 200 „ |
| | URDU. | | | |
| | DAILY. | | | |
| 18 | Afghan* ... | Peshawar ... | Shekh Muhammad Abdulla | ... |
| 19 | Akhbar-i-'Am ... | Lahore ... | Govind Sahai ... | 630 copies |
| 20 | Paisa Akhbar ... | Do. ... | Abdul Aziz ... | 1,011 „ |
| 21 | Watan ... | Do. ... | Muhammad Insha Alla ... | ... |
| 22 | Zamindar ... | Do. ... | Zafar Ali Khan, B.A. ... | ... |
| | BI-WEEKLY. | | | |
| 23 | Vakil ... | Amritsar ... | Abdul Aziz ... | 1,970 copies. |
| | WEEKLY. | | | |
| 24 | Afghan* ... | Peshawar ... | Saiyid Muhammad Abdulla | 500 „ |
| 25 | Ahl-i-Hadis ... | Amritsar ... | Sanaulla ... | 925 „ |
| 26 | Ahluwalia Gazette ... | Do. ... | Lehna Singh ... | 500 „ |
| 27 | Army News ... | Ludhiana ... | Hira Lal & Co. ... | 1,300 „ |
| 28 | Arorbans Gazette ... | Amritsar ... | Labh Singh ... | ... |
| 29 | Arya Gazette ... | Lahore ... | Bhowani Das ... | 550 copies. |

*Not received during the week.

LIST OF NEWSPAPERS AND PERIODICALS EXAMINED BY THE SPECIAL BRANCH AS IT STOOD ON THE 13TH JANUARY 1912—CONTINUED.

| No. | Name. | Locality. | Name of Publisher. | Circulation. |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| | URDU—CONTINUED. | | | |
| | WEEKLY—continued. | | | |
| 30 | Badar ... | Qadian, Gurdaspur district | Muhammad Sadiq ... | 200 copies |
| 31 | Bharat ... | Jullundur ... | Thakur Sheoratan Singh | ... |
| 32 | Civil and Military News ... | Ludhiana ... | Saiyid Muhammad ... | 1,325 copies |
| 33 | Curzon Gazette ... | Delhi ... | Mirza Hairat ... | 111 „ |
| 34 | Delhi Gazette ... | Do. ... | Sajjad Husain ... | 200 „ |
| 35 | Edward Gazette ... | Abbott-abad ... | Muhammad Latif ... | 200 „ |
| 36 | Hakam ... | Qadian, Gurdaspur district | Yakub Ali ... | 900 „ |
| 37 | Haq ... | Delhi ... | Kasim Ali ... | 200 „ |
| 38 | Haq Pasand ... | Amritsar ... | Ram Nath ... | 382 „ |
| 39 | Hindu ... | Lahor ... | Hari Lal Sharma ... | ... |
| 40 | Hindustan ... | Do. ... | Ram Sarn Dutt ... | 8,070 copies. |
| 41 | Jhang Sial ... | Jhang ... | Prabh Dyal ... | 2,262 „ |
| 42 | Islame ... | Lahore ... | Abdul Latif ... | 200 „ |
| 43 | Kapurthala Akhbar ... | Kapurthala ... | Hamid Husain ... | 155 „ |
| 44 | Loyal Gazette ... | Lahore ... | Amar Singh ... | 200 „ |
| 45 | Lytton Gazette ... | Delhi ... | Bulaki Das ... | 1,000 „ |
| 46 | Millat ... | Lahore ... | Shuja Ulla ... | 1,500 „ |
| 47 | Mister Gazette ... | Do. ... | Ali Bakhsh ... | 150 „ |
| 48 | Munir ... | Jhang ... | Hafiz Khuda Bakhsh ... | 200 „ |
| 49 | Musalman ... | Amritsar ... | Sana-ulla ... | 400 „ |
| 50 | Nur ... | Qadian, Gurdaspur district | Muhammad Yusaf ... | 200 „ |
| 51 | Nur Afshan ... | Ludhiana ... | Revd. Dr. E. M. Wherry | 500 „ |
| 52 | Paisa Akhbar ... | Lahore ... | Abdul Aziz ... | 8,377 „ |
| 53 | Parkash ... | Do. ... | Krishan ... | 1,723 „ |
| 54 | Punjab Advocate ... | Mianwali ... | Karm Chand, Bahl ... | 1,000 „ |
| 55 | Punjab Samachar ... | Lahore ... | Hira Lal ... | 705 „ |
| 56 | Rajput Gazette ... | Do. ... | Thakur Sukhram Das ... | 650 „ |
| 57 | Municipal Gazette and Sada-i-Hind. | Do. ... | Din Muhammad ... | 500 „ |
| 58 | Sadiq-ul-Akhbar ... | Bahawalpur ... | Maulvi Ata Ullah ... | 392 „ |
| 59 | Ditto ... | Rewari ... | Safdar Hussain ... | 200 „ |
| 60 | Sanatan Dharm Pracharak... | Amritsar ... | Rulia Ram ... | 200 „ |
| 61 | Shanti ... | Rawalpindi ... | Kishan Chand Mohan ... | 300 „ |
| 62 | Sialkot Paper ... | Sialkot ... | Todar Mal ... | 500 „ |
| 63 | Siraj-ul-Akhbar ... | Jhelum ... | Maulvi Fakir Muhammad | 450 „ |
| 64 | Tahzib-ul-Niswan ... | Lahore ... | Mumtaz Ali ... | 240 „ |

LIST OF NEWSPA PERS AND PERIODICALS EXAMINED BY THE SPECIAL BRANCH AS IT STOOD ON THE 13TH JANUARY 1912—CONCLUDED.

| No. | Name. | Locality. | Name of Publisher. | Circulation. |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| | URDU—CONCLUDED. | | | |
| | WEEKLY—concluded. | | | |
| 65 | Victoria Paper ... | Sialkot ... | Gian Chand ... | 600 copies. |
| 66 | Wafadar* ... | Lahore ... | Fazal-ud-din ... | 600 „ |
| 67 | Waqt ... | Do. ... | Ali Husain ... | 200 „ |
| 68 | Watan ... | Do. ... | Muhammad Insha Ullah... | 1,800 „ |
| 69 | Zamindar ... | Do. ... | Zafar Ali Khan, B.A. ... | 750 „ |
| | FORTNIGHTLY. | | | |
| 70 | Biwah Samachar* ... | Lahore ... | Ram Chand ... | 300 copies. |
| 71 | Kam Dhenu ... | Ludhiana ... | Daulat Ram ... | 100 „ |
| 72 | Mohyal Gazette ... | Kala, Jhelum district ... | Mehta Sham Das ... | 250 „ |
| | MONTHLY. | | | |
| 73 | Arorbans Parkash ... | Lahore ... | Salig Ram ... | 200 copies. |
| 74 | Arya Musafir ... | Jullundur ... | Wazir Chand ... | 1,300 „ |
| 75 | Indar ... | Lahore ... | Dharampal, B.A. ... | 3,000 „ |
| 76 | Jauhar ... | Amritsar ... | Muhammad Ismail Khan | 200 „ |
| 77 | Kakezai Social Reformer ... | Lahore ... | Fazl Din ... | 200 „ |
| 78 | Makhzan ... | Delhi ... | Abdul Kadir ... | 4,000 „ |
| 79 | Rafiq ... | Lahore ... | Charinji Lal ... | 500 „ |
| 80 | Sadhu ... | Do. ... | Sheobart Lal ... | 500 „ |
| 81 | Martand ... | Do. ... | Kanhya Lal ... | 250 „ |
| 82 | Raghbir Patrika ... | Do. ... | Prab Dial ... | 500 „ |
| 83 | Zaban ... | Delhi ... | Hamid Hasain ... | 500 „ |
| | GURMUKHI. | | | |
| | WEEKLY. | | | |
| 84 | Khalsa Sewak ... | Amritsar ... | Jiwan Singh ... | 1,000 copies. |

* Not received during the week.

I.—Politics.

(a)—Foreign.

Turkey and European Powers.

1. The Millat (Lahore), of the 4th January 1912, publishes an article headed "Dangerous moves: let us think how to counteract them." Turkey, says the paper, is a sort of thorn in the side of European Powers which cannot bear to see an Asiatic Power ruling over a portion of Europe, especially if the country concerned is inhabited by Christians. They are desirous of crushing Turkey if they can gain their end by avoiding all responsibility in the matter. After referring to their under-hand practices in Turkey, the paper says that they have now pushed Italy to the front under the impression that if she succeeds they will gain their end, but if she fails they will again resort to further left-handed practices in Turkey. Turkish diplomacy has so far been too weak to cope with the above diplomatic move; and although Turks and Arabs are gaining the admiration of the world by their bravery and valour, still, on the whole, while the influence of European Powers is increasing, that of Turkey is on the wane. The only way to secure the safety of Turkey is to involve all European Powers in war if she is compelled to go to war; but it is useless to expect that either Turkey, Persia or Afghanistan can do this effectively. The paper then goes on to say that another thing which is exercising the minds of European Powers is the apprehended enthusiasm and union of Muhammadans. They will now take steps to prevent Muhammadans from uniting or showing any enthusiasm in their cause. But if Indian Muhammadans were to use foresight and discretion, they could, through their rulers, exercise deep and abiding influence in bringing about a change in the attitude of Europeans towards them. They should, in the first place, take steps to tell the British Government that they are loyal to it and then should assure Europe, through the Government named, that if they are left unmolested they are prepared to co-operate in promoting the progress and civilisation of the world.

In another place the paper dwells upon the critical condition of Muhammadans, and, after remarking that a fire is raging in the Muslim world, that the enemies of Islam are determined to crush its followers, that Morocco is being overrun by Spain and France, that the whole of Europe is united to ruin Turkey, and that Russian butchers are shedding blood in Persia, it calls upon Muhammadans to lend pecuniary aid to their brethren (in distress).

Events in Persia and Tripoli and Indian Muhammadans.

2. The Zamindar (Lahore), of the 28th December 1911, has a paragraph entitled "Happiness in one house and sorrow in the other." It says that while the Pope of Rome, King Victor Emanuel of Italy, the Czar of Russia, and the whole of Christendom are rejoicing over the advent of Christmas, Muhammadans are involved in deep mourning on account of the Muharram. Their grief this year is all the more acute, seeing that their brethren are being slain before their very eyes, their sisters are being rendered helpless and widows, and their children are being put to death. After referring to the telegram from Naib-ul-Saltanat, Tabrez, in which it is alleged that innocent women and children are being slaughtered in cold blood, that 500 Persians have attained martyrdom, and that the Russians have dismantled the most ancient and magnificent building in Persia, the Editor says that it is impossible to give expression to the feeling which the above telegram has created in "our" minds. "O Powers of darkness and misery! how long shall we continue to be thus oppressed! O God, if Thou art in heaven, and Thou art truly in heaven, how can thy sense of shame and wrath endure this oppression?" Continuing, it says that it is a pity that, although the King Emperor is present in "our" midst, there is none to represent the feelings of Muhammadans over the events in Persia, &c., to His Majesty, and to tell him how his seven crores of Indian Muhammadans are passing their days in anxiety and mental torture. Those, however, who can approach His Majesty are not inclined to do so through fear of placing their titles, reputation and wealth in jeopardy; even though Persia be ruined, or Italy wage war on Tripoli. Anyone making the true feelings of Muhammadans known to His Majesty will lay them under a deep obligation, for it is their belief that if the King Emperor comes to know of the same, he is sure to exert his influence to prevent oppression and bloodshed.

Russia, England and Muhammadans.

3. The Zamindar (Lahore), of the 27th December 1911 (received on the 6th January 1912), publishes a poem on the Turco Italian war. In the course of this the poet says that once the shout of "Allah-o-Akbar" is raised "we will compel Rome to give up the use of her arms." Italy has scattered righteousness to the winds, while the mirror of the justice of Europe has grown dim. In waging war against Turkey, Italy has but one object in view, and that is to sweep Muhammadans out of existence; and for this she is putting forward lame excuses. The time has now come when the weak are being kicked by the strong, and small fish are being swallowed up by the alligator. Is this the civilisation, asks the poet, on which the Christian world prides itself, and which Franks regard with such self-complacency? Might and bigotry are in these days rampant in Europe, where Kings are preparing for war (lit. engaged in doing physical exercises), and Bishops and other Christian clergy are living a life of indifference and ease (lit. indulging in bhang). The poet then refers to Russian aggression in Persia, where rivers of innocent blood are flowing, and says that, if Russia continues to follow its present line of policy, the time is not far distant when the turn of Kabul will come. Indeed, where can we seek justice when every movement in St. Petersburg creates a response in London? It is to be hoped that Sir Edward Grey will now change his policy if he cares in the least for the reputation and honour of England. In conclusion, the poet refers to union between Hindus and Muhammadans, and says that unity between two communities is not impossible in a country which is dominated by the same kind of civilisation, language, and colour.

England and Persia and Afghanistan.

4. The Zamindar (Lahore), of the 4th January 1912, has a paragraph headed "Military movements in Afghanistan". Referring to the remarks made by a correspondent in the Pioneer about the movements of troops in Afghanistan, the paper says that the apprehensions which have been causing deep anxiety and uneasiness in the minds of the people for some time past are now assuming serious proportions. The North-Western gates of India, the closing of which ensures the peace and safety of the country, are about to be opened by the impending collision between Russia and Afghanistan. It is an open secret, it adds, that Russia has for a long time been casting wistful glances at India; but so long as British statesmen adhered to the policy of maintaining the integrity of Persia and Afghanistan, the invasion of India was for Russia nothing more than a pleasant dream. Unfortunately, however, for Asia, and especially for India, Sir Edward Grey has suffered himself to be completely dominated by Russian influence. When Russia announced that she had taken military possession of Northern Persia, the editor had a haunting fear that the days of Afghanistan were numbered. If, unfortunately for Great Britain, Sir Edward were to decide the fate of Afghanistan in the way he decided that of Persia, it would be difficult to see what "our" end would be. Sir Edward Grey is now a fast friend of Russia, but, as a British subject, the editor cannot but declare openly that this friendship is not likely to prove beneficial for England.

The meeting held at Lahore to express sympathy with Persia.

5. The Zamindar (Lahore), of the 5th January 1912, has an article contributed to it by its Assistant Editor headed "A meeting in Lahore to express sympathy with Persia." The local Muhammadans, says the writer, held, on the 3rd instant, a meeting in the Badshahi mosque with a view to expressing their abhorrence at the Russian aggression in Persia and their sympathy with the last named country. Next he publishes the proceedings of the meeting with a view to showing that the same was attended by hardly 500 persons, and that Nawab Fateh Ali Khan, the president of the meeting, read a short speech which he had written at home, and then moved a resolution himself, in which regrets were expressed for the attack which the Persians had made on the British Consul, and in which the Government of India was requested to pay due consideration to the feelings of Muhammadans and to maintain the independence and integrity of Persia. After remarking that no speeches were allowed to be delivered on the occasion and that the meeting appeared more like a game of "hide and seek" than an assemblage to transact serious business, the writer says that, at the earnest request of the audience, Maulvi Zafar Ali, B.A., delivered a speech in which he described in becoming language the attitude of Muhammadan leaders, and observed that if the leaders named were to serve their community at the sacrifice of their personal interests Muhammadans would see better days at an early date. Those who are called leaders, should, under no circumstance, resort to flattery in the discharge of their duties, because, if they do so, they are traitors to the community to which they belong. He further said that when the Foreign Minister of England is committing a gross political and moral blunder in permitting Russia to have a free hand it is incumbent on Muhammadans to raise their voice against Sir Edwards Grey's conduct in the matter.

Writing on the above, the Paisa Akhbar (Lahore), of the 6th January 1912, says that some people say that, as no man was allowed to deliver a speech at the above meeting, it was a lame affair and that it will fail to make any impression on Government. They apparently think that if those people who are in the habit of uttering spicy and fiery speeches had been allowed to speak, the meeting would have proved a success. Continuing, it says that it has transpired that after the meeting had dispersed one of the few persons remaining behind in the mosque rose and delivered a speech in which he gave vent to the feelings which were upper-most in his mind (the reference is to the Editor of the Zamindar). The speaker went so far as to apply the epithets of traitors, etc., to the promoters of the meeting. It is, however, to be seen whether the conduct of men like Nawab Fateh Ali Khan and other responsible leaders—who performed their duties in a manner expedient at the present critical juncture—or that of the "fiery youth," who misleads not only himself, but the younger generation of his community also, is in the right. Next the paper endeavours to justify the conduct of the Muhammadan leaders in question; and says that under the present circumstances the Prophet's followers are face to face with a very critical situation, seeing that, while, on one hand, Italy was guilty of committing a highly tyrannical act by forcibly taking possession of Tripoli, the Russian bear, on the other, has begun to take possession of Persia, and the European powers, which had, on the occasion of the late Græco-Turkish War, prevented Turkey from laying hands on Thessaly, have taken no steps to dissuade Italy from committing heartless acts of aggression. Moreover, the modification of the Bengal Partition has given a direct blow to the interests of Muhammadans of Eastern Bengal. This being the case, Muhammadans should, instead of allowing themselves to be carried away by feelings of mistaken zeal and resentment, act after deep and careful deliberation.

(b)—Home.

His Imperial Majesty's message.

6. The following is from the Tribune (Lahore), of 12th January 1912:—

"The reply of his Imperial Majesty the King-Emperor to the address presented to their Majesties by the University of Calcutta must have been read with the most genuine delight and most sincere satisfaction by every one interested in the progress of this country. The stately dignity of the utterance, the far-sighted and liberal spirit of statesmanship underlying it, the exalted rank and the august personality of the speaker and above all, its outlook of beaming beneficence and radiant hopefulness invest his Majesty's reply with a truly unique significance * * * * *

* * * * *

"The watch-word of his Imperial Majesty's reply to the address, as he himself says, is Hope. Six years ago, at the great banquet at Guildhall, his Majesty in his capacity of heir-apparent to the Throne sounded the truly regal note of sympathy. The Reform measures of Lord Morley and Lord Minto and Lord Hardinge's administration had already succeeded in introducing a wider infusion of sympathy in the administration and the crowning benefit of this noble policy has been conferred by the Imperial visit and the boons, which have conciliated and gratified the whole country. The watch-word which his Imperial Majesty now gives is Hope. 'On every side,' says the King-Emperor, 'I trace the signs and stirrings of new life. Education has given you hope; and through better and higher education, you will build up higher and better hope.' Now what are these 'higher and better hopes,' referred to in the gracious Royal words? What are the 'signs and stirrings of new life,' brought about by education, to the ultimate development of which his Majesty refers with loving approval and gracious satisfaction? The Royal assurance is deeply significant. And there can be but one meaning attached to it,— the meaning which is strengthened by reference to an ever-memorable passage in the Government of India's despatch to the Secretary of State in which the former speaks approvingly of the policy of giving to Indians a larger measure of self-government in their own affairs and gives its sanction to the ideal of provincial autonomy, advocated more than fifty years ago by John Bright. The ideal of a federation of self-governing provinces within the larger federation of the British Empire has been the pole-star of the hopes and aspirations of educated Indians, and it has at last received the assent and approval of the Sovereign. Now education in all its branches and phases is the only means by which this consummation so devoutly to be wished for will be attained. It is therefore that our Sovereign blesses and encourages the progress of education and assures us that 'the cause of education will ever be very close to my heart.'

His Majesty's reply is seemingly addressed to the Calcutta University. It is meant, however, for a much wider body. As the address itself said, the entire body of Indian Universities or for the matter of that, the whole and ever-increasing body of the educated Indian people were represented in that address, and the King-Emperor's reply was addressed to them all. 'It is my wish,' said his Majesty, 'that there may be spread over the land a net-work of schools and colleges, from which will go forth loyal and manly and useful citizens, able to hold their own in the industries and agriculture and all the vocations in life.' We trust that the exponents of the policy that schools cannot create industries will carefully ponder over the Royal words. His Majesty rightly thinks that without a network of schools and colleges, Indians will not be able to hold their own in the industries. It is therefore right and proper that the fifty lakhs which have been by the command of His Majesty allotted to 'truly popular education' should include, as it does, technical education in its scope. But His Majesty is no less emphatic, as we have pointed out, on the need of universal education. As His Majesty says in his own beautiful and impressive way, 'It is my wish too that the homes of my Indian subjects may be brightened and their labour sweetened by the spread of knowledge, with all that follows in its train, a higher level of thought, of comfort and of health.' His Majesty here unmistakably reveals his innermost desire for universal education throughout this country. Mr. Gokhale's Bill has the self-same object in view and without the introduction of compulsion it is impossible to have universal education. We trust that the critics of the Bill will examine the significance of these Royal words and judge for themselves if they are not acting in contravention to His Majesty's desire by their failure to support it.

Gracious and supremely hopeful as the Royal utterances are on general, technical, agricultural and mass education, His Majesty by no means ignores the claims of collegiate and post-graduate education. His Majesty made a gracious reference to the work of the Indian Universities, viz., the conservation of ancient learning and the pushing forward of Western science and arts. He laid due stress on the larger provision of teaching Faculties and ampler opportunities of research and particularly on the up-building of character. It is by these and other means that we can 'build up higher and better hopes' of a nobler and more glorious destiny, to which his Imperial Mejesty so sympathetically and approvingly referred. That will be the ultimate outcome of the work of education which has been aptly described as the work of the British race in India. The watchword of Hope given by the King-Emperor points to that glorious destiny and will certainly remain as the working faith of the Indian reformer and is sure to be realised at no very distant date."

The annulment of the Partition of Bengal.

7. The Waqt (Lahore), of the 23rd December 1911 (received on the 3rd January 1912), publishes a paragraph headed "The annulment of the Partition of Bengal." The annulment in question, says the paper, has caused feelings of deep regret and sorrow in the minds of Indian Muhammadans in general, and in those of Bengal in particular. The measure is not only extremely objectionable from an administrative point of view, but also betrays weakness on the part of Government. It sacrifices the interests of the people of Eastern Bengal and especially those of the Muhammadan residents. It is true that steps have been taken to maintain equality between Hindus and Muhammadans in the newly-constituted province of Bengal, but there can be no gainsaying the fact that Muhammadans will have no separate entity as compared with the educated and influential Hindus. Truly has Nawab Vicar-ul-Mulk said that the wars declared by Russia and Italy against Persia and Tripoli respectively, coupled with the annulment of the Partition of Bengal, have caused an unbearable shock to the feelings of Muhammadans. Not only Lord Curzon, Lord Morley, and numerous members of the House of Lords and House of Commons, but also Anglo-Indians have declared that they regard with disfavour the new territorial redistribution of Bengal. Nor is this to be wondered at, seeing that no self-respecting community can tolerate such weakness (on the part of Government). It is, however, to be regretted that the unwise counsels of some highly-placed officers have led the Government to embark on a measure which has aroused feelings of deep disappointment and resentment, not only amongst a great and politically important community like that of the Muhammadans, but also amongst Anglo-Indians, with the result that the feelings of joy which the royal boons were expected to arouse have not been manifested.

In another place the paper reproduces the communication on the subject published by Nawab Vicar-ul-Mulk in the columns of the Aligarh Institute Gazette.

The annulment of the Partition of Bengal and Muhammadans.

8. The Zamindar (Lahore), of the 4th January 1912, publishes a contribution from the pen of "A special supporter of the Zamindar," who passes under review the chief political event of the year 1911, and refers to the Peace Conference held at Allahabad, which, he says, proved a failure owing to unfavourable circumstances due to the existing relations between the two communities in India being greatly strained. He also refers to the deputation of the Indian National Congress which waited on Lord Hardinge, the Census operations which gave rise to diverse controversies and the Coronation of Their Majesties the King-Emperor and the Queen-Empress at London; and says that the political horizon of India, which looked stormy for some years past, has somewhat cleared of late while the number of cases of murder, plunder, and dacoities has greatly decreased as compared with that of past years. Continuing, he refers to the Turco-Italian War, the Imperial Coronation Darbar at Delhi, and His Majesty's announcement about the annulment of the Partition of Bengal; and says that the annulment in question marks a new era in the political history of India. Lord Hardinge's statesmanlike move has put an end to cases of murder and dacoity and also the killing of highly-placed officers by bombs, to which Bengalis resorted in order to secure the undoing of the partition of their province. It is said that the annulment of the Partition has greatly injured the feelings of Muhammadans, but this cannot be believed, seeing that Muhammadans had never requested Government to partition the province named. Government effected the partition by the exercise of its own free-will and now it has annulled the same, being prompted by similar feelings. Muhammadans have, therefore, no cause for complaint against the new measure. If Muhammadans have any grievance it is that the circumstances which appeared favourable for their betterment through the Partition, which was carried into effect without their consultation, have, by the new measure, now ceased to exist. But this grievance cannot be regarded as having any weight in comparison with the success which the Bengalis have achieved by their years of agitation. Verily, the annulment of the Partition is an unparalleled victory for public opinion. Muhammadans should learn a lesson from the efforts of Bengalis and the tenacity displayed by them in continuing their struggles till their agitation was crowned with complete success. Indeed, they achieved success after undergoing great sacrifices, seeing that in carrying on the agitation their leaders were deported, their fellow-countrymen were hanged, and their brethren were consigned to jail. If Bengalis have gained success to-day, Muhammadans can meet with a similar success to-morrow, provided their leaders pay heed to the feelings and aspirations of the members of their community and abstain from stooping to sycophancy in order to secure honours and titles for themselves. It is easy to mourn over the weakness of Government in annulling the Partition, but it is difficult to follow in the footsteps of Bengali leaders.

Continuing his remarks in the paper's issue, dated the 5th January 1912, the writer says that in his capacity as Viceroy, Lord Hardinge was responsible for the maintenance of peace in the country. When he came into the country, he saw, with his own eyes, how unrest and agitation were prevailing in it. He knew that Bengalis were unyielding, that they did not hestitate even to make murderous attacks on high officials, and that if a Bengali were to commit a deplorable crime prompted by bitter rage during His Majesty's sojourn in India, he, as the highest and most responsible authority in India, would be liable to serious blame. As a matter of fact, His Excellency was more anxious about his own name and fame than solicitous for the Bengalis or desirous of conferring benefits on Muhammadans. It is for this reason that he got the annulment sanctioned and had the same announced by His Majesty. This move on His Excellency's part has knocked the bottom out of all future disturbances. Proceeding, he refers to the transfer of the Capital to Delhi, and says that although this will displease Bengali Government servants, still the whole of India is satisfied with the change. He concludes by remarking that His Excellency's name will ever be remembered for these measures.

9. The Vakil (Amritsar), of the 3rd January 1912, reproduces the communication of Nawab Vicar-ul-Mulk, published in the Aligarh Institute Gazette and says that the sentiments contained therein reflect the public opinion of Indian Muhammadans on the subject of recent territorial redistribution in the country. There can be no denying the fact, it adds, that Muhammadans consider that these changes are calculated to prove of great hardship to them and that they have been forced to be reconciled to their lot. It concludes by remarking that if, before the departure of His Majesty the King-Emperor from India, no reasonable and satisfactory arrangements are made to safeguard the interests of the Muhammadans of Bengal, it is difficult to say what changes will take place in the feelings of seven crores of His Majesty's loyal Muhammadan subjects or what injury will be done to their feeling of sincerity.

The annulment of the Partition of Bengal and Muhammadans.

10. The Watan (Lahore), of the 3rd January 1912, has a note entitled "Sindh should be incorporated with the Punjab." Referring to the proposal to sever Delhi from the Punjab the paper says that, while the Government and the inhabitants of the Punjab have accepted the change with feelings of sincere loyalty and pleasure, they think that it is incumbent on the Government of India to give adequate compensation to the Punjab before carrying it into effect. After remarking that the Punjab can rightly claim to be the right-hand of India, seeing that the Punjabis constitute the flower of the British army, it dwells on the commercial importance of Karachi, and says that the Government of Bombay has very little influence in Sindh which it is no exaggeration to say it regards as its step-son. There is, besides, a natural rivalry between the two great ports of Bombay and Karachi. If, therefore, under these circumstances, Sindh is joined to the Punjab, not only will the evils to which it is subjected by the existing arrangement be removed, but Sindh also will have an opportunity of sharing the material and moral progress which is going on in the Land of the Five Rivers.

A suggestion to include Sindh in the Punjab.

11. The Paisa Akhbar (Lahore), of the 22nd December 1911 (received on the 6th January 1912), publishes a leader headed "Delhi, the new Capital." Writing about the administrative changes announced in the Royal Proclamation, the paper says that if no reasonable compensation (for the loss of Delhi) is given to the Punjab its greatness and importance, which have already been reduced by the loss of the Frontier Province, will receive a serious and intolerable blow, and the area and population of a province of 65 years' standing will be rendered smaller than that of the newly constituted province of Behar and Orissa. It then quotes the Secretary of State's remarks on the necessity for placing Delhi directly under the control of the Government of India, and observes that they are based on high political considerations. It, however, remains to be seen how the new capital will be constituted, and under what sort of administration it will be placed. It would be inexpedient to place Delhi under an administration analogous to that of Ajmere-Marwara, where Executive Officers are invested with enhanced powers and Commissioners are entrusted with higher judicial work, seeing that it has enjoyed the advantage of regular judicial courts for the last 55 years, and has been accustomed to that liberty and justice which a Chief Court or a High Court alone can give. There is no foundation for the belief that the inhabitants of Delhi will ever agree to have in their city a judicial system similar to that referred to above, seeing that, as a matter of fact, they are anxious to have a High Court. It seems advisable to point out that Delhi is a very large centre of commerce and industry, and consequently cases arise every day, which because of their peculiarity or of the value of the property under dispute, can only be tried on the "original side" of a High Court or Chief Court. The number of cases of this description will be increased by the transfer of the seat of Government to Delhi, with the result that the Imperial Government will have to face the necessity of appointing a judicial officer capable of being entrusted with the work not only of the appellate but also of the original side. Again, if the Delhi Municipal Committee were to be entrusted with all the powers enjoyed by their confréres in Bombay and Calcutta, Delhi would no doubt profit by it, and its citizens would have occasion to feel proud of the improved condition of their city.

The new Capital.

Muhammadans and Government.

12. The Hindustan (Lahore), of the 29th December 1911, publishes a leader headed "A cursory glance at the spirit which is now working in the minds of Muhammadans." Hindus, says the paper, are extremely grateful to the King-Emperor for the boons which His Majesty conferred on the country on the occasion of the Delhi Darbar. They are convinced that their King-Emperor and the present Government of India are as sympathetic towards the people as such noble and high-born personages should be. All the Hindu papers, without a single exception, have expressed their feelings of gratitude, and even Bepin Chandra Pal has sent a telegram of thanks to Government. It now remains to consider what effect the royal boons have had on the minds of His Majesty's Muhammadan subjects, or, in other words, what spirit animates them on the present occasion. Before any attempt is made to ascertain their feelings at the present moment it is necessary to say that Indian Muhammadans may be conveniently divided into two classes, viz :—(1) the educated, and (2) the middle and lower classes. After remarking that the communication which Nawab Vicar-ul-Mulk has recently published in the Aligarh Institute Gazette fairly represents the feelings and aspirations of educated Muhammadans, the paper reprints the communication in question, and says that what the Nawab intends to convey, in a suppressed tone and complicated language, is that Muhammadans are displeased at the annulment of the Partition of Bengal, which they are inclined to attribute to weakness on the part of Government. They also go so far as to assert that they cannot in future trust a Government which has unsettled a measure repeatedly declared to be a "settled fact." The Nawab also says that some Muhammadans are so displeased with Government that they are preparing to join the National Congress and to sever all connection with the Muslim League. He would, however, advise his co-religionists not to do this, but to have full confidence in their own powers and resources. This, says the Hindustan, is tantamount to threatening Government, and to saying that, now that Government has given Muhammadans an opportunity for complaint, some of them will go the length of throwing in their lot with the Hindus. The Nawab has taunted Government with annulling the partition and paying heed to the feelings of the Bengalis. This means that it is the duty of Government to respect the feelings and interests of Muhammadans alone, without thinking of Bengalis and other communities. The Nawab also hints that the Muhammadan community stands between Government and Hindus, and that if the former goes the length of displeasing them they will make common cause with Hindus. This is not only an insult to the relations which should exist between Government and its subjects, but is also an unfounded attack on the intellectual capacity of Hindus. Are Hindus so foolish as to always remain hostile to Government, or to suffer "their Muhammadan brethren" to join them when it is in the interests of the latter to do so, only to throw them over when they find the union no longer profitable? After remarking that all these insinuations are wrong and absurd, the paper says that the Nawab holds the British Government responsible for wounding the feelings of Muhammadans, because it refrained from interfering in Tripoli. This shows that Muhammadans are apt to expect too much, and that if their hopes are not realised they are apt to fret and fume and intimidate Government. As regards the Nawab's exhortation to Muhammadans that they should try to stand on their own legs and have confidence in their own strength, it says that this is a piece of advice to which neither Government nor Hindus can take exception. If the communication in question is a true exposition of Muhammadan public opinion in this country, it is fair to conclude that the Royal boons have, to a certain extent, filled the minds of Muhammadans with resentment; owing to their having been, hitherto, under the mistaken impression that Government had regard for them alone and not for any other community in India. Moreover, in administering these ambiguous threats to Government, Muhammadans have another object in view. They wish Government to grant them another series of extraordinary concessions in some form or another. In order to gain this end they are resorting to a policy of intimidation mingled with flattery. On the one hand they are looking askance at Government, with eyes full of resentment, and on the other they are praying for special favours with folded hands. This is the spirit which is working in the minds of Muhammadans at the present moment, but it is probably not very dangerous. What does Government care for the threats or unjustifiable resentment of any community? So far as Hindus are concerned they will regard it, from a distance, as an interesting experiment; but, at the same time, they will continue to advise their Muslim brethren not to demand special favours from Government, nor threaten Government that they are going to join the National Congress—especially when that body is not anxious to do anything contrary to the wishes of Government.

The paper then refers to the spirit which animates the middle and lower class Muhammadans. This, it says, is quite different to that of the educated Muhammadans. Those who are working hard to create this spirit in the minds of the general Muhammadan public have their sources of inspiration, not in India, but in Persia, Turkey, Tripoli, &c., and they are presenting these questions in a religious garb before the ignorant Muhammadan public. It is owing to this policy that the latter regard their happiness and sufferings bound up, not with India, but with Turkey and Persia; and this, at times, proves dangerous. This spirit is fast gaining ground, and is about to sway the minds of the entire Muhammadan public in India. It is progressing very rapidly in the Punjab, where steps are being taken, in the name of religion, to create blind excitement in the minds of the ignorant. Of the Punjab papers which are vigorously engaged in promoting this spirit the Zamindar stands foremost. This paper, and others of a similar nature, do not tell Muhammadans what their present political condition is, or how it can be improved; but are constantly preaching that the Muhammadans of Egypt, &c., and not their Hindu or Christian neighbours, are joined with them in a tie of brotherhood, and that they have no country which they can call their own. With this object in view these papers, while charging a Christian Government like the British with intentionally wounding the feelings of Muhammadans by not bringing its influence and power to bear on Italy with a view to preventing her from waging war on Tripoli, are telling Muhammadans that the Turco-Italian War is really a war between the "Cross and the Crescent," and are exhorting them to go to Rome, to destroy the Vatican of the infidel Pope, and to erect a mosque in its place. These sermons, so constantly preached by the Zamindar, have created in the minds of ignorant Muhammadans a feeling of hatred for Christians and Christianity. Nor is this all. Attacks are also made on the British Government and its Ministers, who are accused of being not only unsympathetic but hostile towards Muslims. After quoting extracts from articles published in the Zamindar in corroboration of its statement, the paper says that there can be no denying the fact that the writings of the Zamindar have created a most objectionable and dangerous spirit in the minds of Muhammadans, which is growing day by day. Government, being responsible for the maintenance of peace in the country, should not lose a moment in taking steps to extirpate this spirit as soon as possible.

Muhammadans and Hindus.

13. The Paisa Akhbar (Lahore), of the 3rd January 1912, publishes a leader headed "The policy of Indian Muhammadans in respect of Hindu-Muhammadan relations." Since the annulment of the Partition of Bengal, says the paper, Indian Muhammadans have been considering what their future national policy should be in respect of Hindu-Muhammadan relations. Some of them are of opinion that the Government of India has committed a gross mistake in doing away with the Partition, which Lord Morley had repeatedly declared to be a "settled fact." In yielding to an agitation through fear, it has impressed on the people that the assurances of a Viceroy or a Secretary of State for India cannot stand against agitation and opposition, and that the "settled fact" of a mighty Government like the British can be unsettled. Those who are in the habit of carrying on agitations have now a precedent before them that the decisions of Government can be set aside. Those, on the other hand, who were allies and supporters of Government have been discouraged, and are doubting how far they can in future rely on its word and promises. Consequently Muhammadans are anxious to adopt agitation as their national policy, and to join the ranks of the Indian National Congress at an early date. There can be no denying the fact that the relations between Hindus and Muhammadans should be extremely friendly, but the progress of the latter is not entirely dependent on this. It may please Hindus, but it will endanger the integrity and separate entity of Muhammadans. After referring to the Urdu-Hindi, cow-killing, and other questions, on which the two communities hold conflicting views, the paper says that Muhammadans should think twice before joining hands with the members of the Indian National Congress.

VI.—Legislation.

A suggestion for the repeal of the Press Act.

14. The Shanti (Rawalpindi), of the 23rd December 1911 (received on the 3rd January 1912), publishes a leaderette headed "The Partition of Bengal and the Press Act." The stringent laws, it says, which have lately been passed by Government, owe their origin to the Partition of Bengal. Now, however, when the political horizon is clear, and the country is full of joy and happiness owing to the annulment of the Partition, it is most desirable that Government should repeal them, especially the Press Act. After remarking that District Magistrates demand heavy security even from those papers which are favourably reported on by the police, the paper urges Government to repeal the Act, thereby allowing those who are pursuing journalism as a profession to lead a peaceful life.

VII.—General Administration.

(a)—Judicial.

A suggestion to raise the Punjab Chief Court to the status of a High Court.

15. The Paisa Akhbar (Lahore), of the 6th January 1912, has a paragraph headed "The Courts of Delhi." The paper says that now that Delhi has been made the Capital of India it now remains to be seen what courts it will be subjected to. It is inconceivable that a separate High or Chief Court will be given to Delhi, and hence there is every probability of its being placed under the jurisdiction of the Punjab Chief Court. This being the case, there seems to be no reason why the status of the Chief Court should not be raised to that of a High Court.

16. The following is from the Panjabee (Lahore), of 11th January 1912 :—

Imprisonment for saluting.

"Elsewhere we publish an account of a curious trial of a boy of seven who has been sentenced to a week's rigorous imprisonment for the fault of shouting out at a European the word: 'Salaam.' The officer who has distinguished himself for this cruel sentence is a Madras Civilian, and our readers can see what effect this will produce on the public mind. King-Emperors might come and go and their presence might conciliate and cheer up a sad people. But Civilian administrators in the mofussil go on with their wonted manners and methods which practically undo all the good work done in a whole decade. Boys are boys everywhere, and what necessity was there to be so severe on a child of seven who had the audacity to salute a European in his own childish way? We do not think India will ever be really conciliated unless some Civilian and other proud officials who deal with the public are less severe and do unto the people of India as they themselves would be done by. We hope the case will attract the attention of the higher authorities and that they will issue such instructions to the district officials as will tend to establish a more respectful and humane treatment of the Indian people."

(h)—Miscellaneous.

17. The Hindu (Lahore), of the 28th December 1911, has a note entitled "(Un-) reasonable objection to the new rupee." Some people in the bazars, says the paper, refuse to accept the new rupee on the grounds that the obverse bears the figure of a pig amongst the collars of Indian orders round the neck of the crowned effigy of the King Emperor. After remarking that this "wickedness" owes its origin to some mischief-makers who are anxious to inflame illiterate Muhammadans and prejudice their minds (? against Government), the Editor says that he has seen with the help of a magnifying glass that the figure in question is that of an elephant. There is no reason, he adds, why this should be taken advantage of in order to inflame the minds of Muhammadans, especially when the elephant is admitted to be an emblem of royalty. These people, therefore, who refuse to accept the coin are committing a serious legal offence. It is the duty of all sensible persons to warn their illiterate brethren against such a mistake, and to impress on them that refusal to accept the coin is tantamount to offering an insult to the King-Emperor and his Government. Such unreasonable conduct on the part of the above-mentioned people is reprehensible, and serious notice should be taken of it, especially at a time when His Majesty's popularity has reached its highest mark in the country.

The new rupee.

LAHORE:
The 13th January 1912.

C. STEAD,
Assistant to the Deputy Inspector-General of Police, Criminal Investigation Department, Punjab.

Punjab Government Press, Lahore—18-1-12—95—107—T. W. L.

[ Confidential. ]

[ Vol. XXV. ] SELECTIONS [ No. 3. ]

FROM THE

NATIVE NEWSPAPERS

PUBLISHED IN THE PUNJAB.

Examined up to 20th January 1912.

---

CONTENTS.

Page.

I.—Politics.

(a) Foreign—

1. The Turco-Italian War and Egypt (Paisa Akhbar) 35
2. Russia and England (Paisa Akhbar)... ... ib.
3. Russia, Persia and Indian Muhammadans (Zamindar) ... ... ... ... ib.

(b) Home—

4. The annulment of the Partition of Bengal and Muhammadans (Zamindar) ... ... 35
5. The future policy of Indian Muhammadans (Paisa Akhbar) ... ... ... ... 36
6. The future policy of Indian Muhammadans (Vakil) 37
7. Muhammadans and Hindus (Rajput Gazette) ... ib.
8. Suggestions for better administration of India (Harbinger) ... ... ... 38
9. The new Capital (Tribune) ... ... ib.
10. The Muslim League and the Congress (Tribune)... 40
11. Executive Council for the United Provinces (Tribune) ... ... ... ... ib.

II.—Afghanistan and Trans-Frontier.

Nil.

III.—Native States.

12. Hyderabad affairs (Paisa Akhbar) ... ... 40
13. The Times and the Gaekwar (Tribune) ... 41

IV.—Kine-killing.

Nil.

V.—Native Societies and Religious Matters.

14. Complaint against the Musafir of Agra (Haq) ... 41
15. Nawab Vicar-ul-Mulik's rumoured resignation (Observer) ... ... ... ... ib.

Page.

VI.—Legislation.

Nil.

VII.—General Administration.

(a) Judicial—

16. Honorary Magistrates (Paisa Akhbar) ... 42
17. Pleaders in the Punjab (Observer) ... ... ib.

(b) Police—

18. The arrest of the Khan of Hoti (Paisa Akhbar)... 42
19. The Police and the Royal Visit (Panjabee) ... 43

(c) Municipal and Cantonment affairs—

Nil.

(d) Education —

Nil.

(e)—Agriculture and questions affecting the land—

20. Grievances of Indian zamindars (Zamindar) ... 43

(f) Railways and Communications—

Nil.

(g) Postal matters—

Nil.

(h) Miscellaneous—

Nil.

LIST OF NEWSPAPERS AND PERIODICALS EXAMINED BY THE SPECIAL BRANCH AS IT STOOD ON THE 20TH JANUARY 1912.

| No. | Name. | Locality. | Name of Publisher. | Circulation. |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| | ENGLISH. | | | |
| | DAILY. | | | |
| 1 | Tribune ... | Lahore ... | Bihari Lal ... | 1,758 copies. |
| | TRI-WEEKLY. | | | |
| 2 | Panjabee ... | Lahore ... | Mul Chand ... | 2,424 „ |
| | BI-WEEKLY. | | | |
| 3 | Observer ... | Lahore ... | Nizam-ud-din ... | 1,000 „ |
| 4 | Punjab Times and Frontier News. | Rawalpindi ... | J. R. Thapur ... | 200 „ |
| | WEEKLY. | | | |
| 5 | Arya Patrika ... | Lahore ... | Devi Chand ... | 650 „ |
| 6 | Harbinger ... | Do. ... | Durga Parshad ... | 300 „ |
| 7 | Khalsa Advocate ... | Amritsar ... | Bahadar Singh ... | 752 „ |
| | MONTHLY. | | | |
| 8 | D. A.-V. College Magazine... | Lahore ... | Saraswati Nath ... | 1,000 „ |
| 9 | Forman Christian College Notes. | Do. ... | ... | ... |
| 10 | Jijnasu ... | Do. ... | Ishwar Das ... | ... |
| 11 | Practical Medicine ... | Delhi ... | ... | ... |
| 12 | Punjab Educational Journal | Lahore ... | R. B. Mohan Lal ... | 700 copies. |
| 13 | Punjab Mission News ... | Do. ... | Revd. Wigram ... | 250 „ |
| 14 | Ravi ... | Do. ... | Mr. B. M. Jones ... | ... |
| 15 | Review of Religions ... | Qadian (Gurdaspur) ... | Sadr Anjuman Ahmadia, Qadian. | 800 copies. |
| 16 | Science Grounded Religion... | Lahore ... | Dev Rattan ... | 25 „ |
| 17 | Teacher ... | Dinga (Gujrat) ... | Kanhaya Singh ... | 200 „ |
| | URDU. | | | |
| | DAILY. | | | |
| 18 | Afghan* ... | Peshawar ... | Shekh Muhammad Abdulla | ... |
| 19 | Akhbar-i-'Am ... | Lahore ... | Govind Sahai ... | 630 copies. |
| 20 | Paisa Akhbar ... | Do. ... | Abdul Aziz ... | 1,011 „ |
| 21 | Watan ... | Do. ... | Muhammad Insha Alla ... | ... |
| 22 | Zamindar ... | Do. ... | Zafar Ali Khan, B.A. ... | ... |
| | BI-WEEKLY. | | | |
| 23 | Vakil ... | Amritsar ... | Abdul Aziz ... | 1,970 copies. |
| | WEEKLY. | | | |
| 24 | Afghan* ... | Peshawar ... | Saiyid Muhammad Abdulla | 500 „ |
| 25 | Ahl-i-Hadis ... | Amritsar ... | Sanaulla ... | 925 „ |
| 26 | Ahluwalia Gazette ... | Do. ... | Lehna Singh ... | 500 „ |
| 27 | Army News ... | Ludhiana ... | Hira Lal & Co. ... | 1,300 „ |
| 28 | Arorbans Gazette ... | Amritsar ... | Labh Singh ... | ... |
| 29 | Arya Gazette ... | Lahore ... | Bhowani Das ... | 550 copies. |

*Not received during the week.

LIST OF NEWSPAPERS AND PERIODICALS EXAMINED BY THE SPECIAL BRANCH AS IT STOOD ON THE 20TH JANUARY 1912—CONTINUED.

| No. | Name. | Locality. | Name of Publisher. | Circulation. |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| | URDU—CONTINUED. | | | |
| | WEEKLY—continued. | | | |
| 30 | Badar ... | Qadian, Gurdaspur district | Muhammad Sadiq ... | 200 copies. |
| 31 | Bharat ... | Jullundur ... | Thakur Sheoratan Singh | ... |
| 32 | Civil and Military News ... | Ludhiana ... | Saiyid Muhammad ... | 1,325 copies. |
| 33 | Curzon Gazette ... | Delhi ... | Mirza Hairat ... | 111 „ |
| 34 | Delhi Gazette ... | Do. ... | Sajjad Husain ... | 200 „ |
| 35 | Edward Gazette ... | Abbott-abad ... | Muhammad Latif ... | 200 „ |
| 36 | Hakam ... | Qadian, Gurdaspur district | Yakub Ali ... | 900 „ |
| 37 | Haq ... | Delhi ... | Kasim Ali ... | 200 „ |
| 38 | Haq Pasand ... | Amritsar ... | Ram Nath ... | 382 „ |
| 39 | Hindu ... | Lahor ... | Hari Lal Sharma ... | ... |
| 40 | Hindustan ... | Do. ... | Ram Sarn Dutt ... | 8,070 copies. |
| 41 | Jhang Sial ... | Jhang ... | Prabh Dyal ... | 2,262 „ |
| 42 | Islame ... | Lahore ... | Abdul Latif ... | 200 „ |
| 43 | Kapurthala Akhbar ... | Kapurthala ... | Hamid Husain ... | 155 „ |
| 44 | Loyal Gazette ... | Lahore ... | Amar Singh ... | 200 „ |
| 45 | Lytton Gazette ... | Delhi ... | Bulaki Das ... | 1,000 „ |
| 46 | Millat ... | Lahore ... | Shuja Ulla ... | 1,500 „ |
| 47 | Mister Gazette ... | Do. ... | Ali Bakhsh ... | 150 „ |
| 48 | Munir ... | Jhang ... | Hafiz Khuda Bakhsh ... | 200 „ |
| 49 | Musalman ... | Amritsar ... | Sana-ulla ... | 400 „ |
| 50 | Nur ... | Qadian, Gurdaspur district | Muhammad Yusaf ... | 200 „ |
| 51 | Nur Afshan ... | Ludhiana ... | Revd. Dr. E. M. Wherry | 500 „ |
| 52 | Paisa Akhbar ... | Lahore ... | Abdul Aziz ... | 8,377 „ |
| 53 | Parkash ... | Do. ... | Krishan ... | 1,723 „ |
| 54 | Punjab Advocate ... | Mianwali ... | Karm Chand, Bahl ... | 1,000 „ |
| 55 | Punjab Samachar ... | Lahore ... | Hira Lal ... | 705 „ |
| 56 | Rajput Gazette ... | Do. ... | Thakur Sukhram Das ... | 650 „ |
| 57 | Municipal Gazette and Sada-i-Hind. | Do. ... | Din Muhammad ... | 500 „ |
| 58 | Sadiq-ul-Akhbar ... | Bahawalpur ... | Maulvi Ata Ullah ... | 392 „ |
| 59 | Ditto ... | Rewari ... | Safdar Hussain ... | 200 „ |
| 60 | Sanatan Dharm Pracharak... | Amritsar ... | Rulia Ram ... | 200 „ |
| 61 | Shanti ... | Rawalpindi ... | Kishan Chand Mohan ... | 300 „ |
| 62 | Sialkot Paper ... | Sialkot ... | Todar Mal ... | 500 „ |
| 63 | Siraj-ul-Akhbar ... | Jhelum ... | Maulvi Fakir Muhammad | 450 „ |
| 64 | Tahzib-ul-Niswan ... | Lahore ... | Mumtaz Ali ... | 240 „ |

LIST OF NEWSPAPERS AND PERIODICALS EXAMINED BY THE SPECIAL BRANCH AS IT STOOD ON THE 20TH JANUARY 1912—CONCLUDED.

| No. | Name. | Locality. | Name of Publisher. | Circulation. |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| | URDU—CONCLUDED. | | | |
| | WEEKLY—concluded. | | | |
| 65 | Victoria Paper ... | Sialkot ... | Gian Chand ... | 600 copies. |
| 66 | Wafadar* ... | Lahore ... | Fazal-ud-din ... | 600 „ |
| 67 | Waqt ... | Do. ... | Ali Husain ... | 200 „ |
| 68 | Watan ... | Do. ... | Muhammad Insha Ullah... | 1,800 „ |
| 69 | Zamindar ... | Do. ... | Zafar Ali Khan, B.A. ... | 750 „ |
| | FORTNIGHTLY. | | | |
| 70 | Biwah Samachar* ... | Lahore ... | Ram Chand ... | 300 copies. |
| 71 | Kam Dhenu ... | Ludhiana ... | Daulat Ram ... | 100 „ |
| 72 | Mohyal Gazette ... | Kala, Jhelum district ... | Mehta Sham Das ... | 250 „ |
| | MONTHLY. | | | |
| 73 | Arorbans Parkash ... | Lahore ... | Salig Ram ... | 200 copies. |
| 74 | Arya Musafir ... | Jullundur ... | Wazir Chand ... | 1,300 „ |
| 75 | Indar ... | Lahore ... | Dharampal, B.A. ... | 3,000 „ |
| 76 | Jauhar ... | Amritsar ... | Muhammad Ismail Khan | 200 „ |
| 77 | Kakezai Social Reformer ... | Lahore ... | Fazl Din ... | 200 „ |
| 78 | Makhzan ... | Delhi ... | Abdul Kadir ... | 4,000 „ |
| 79 | Rafiq ... | Lahore ... | Charinji Lal ... | 500 „ |
| 80 | Sadhu ... | Do. ... | Sheobart Lal ... | 500 „ |
| 81 | Martand ... | Do. ... | Kanhya Lal ... | 250 „ |
| 82 | Raghbir Patrika ... | Do. ... | Prab Dial ... | 500 „ |
| 83 | Zaban ... | Delhi ... | Hamid Hasain ... | 500 „ |
| | GURMUKHI. | | | |
| | WEEKLY. | | | |
| 84 | Khalsa Sewak ... | Amritsar ... | Jiwan Singh ... | 1,000 copies. |

* Not received during the week.

I.—Politics.

(a)—Foreign.

The Turco-Italian War and Egypt.

1. The Paisa Akhbar (Lahore), of the 8th January 1912, has a note entitled "Maintenance of Egypt's neutrality." Two or three days back, says the paper, it learnt from a Reuter's telegram that the British Government has despatched a man-of-war to Egypt with sealed orders. It also learns from some Arabic newspapers that a correspondence is passing between the Governments of England and Italy on the subject of permitting Turkey to despatch war stores to Tripoli through the deserts of Egypt. After remarking that some suspicion must have been aroused on the subject, the paper says that the sealed orders in question are causing much anxiety in the minds of Indian Muhammadans (lit. people) because the appointment of Lord Kitchener instead of a civilian officer, has aroused the apprehension of some people who fear that the British Government may adopt warlike measures in Egypt. There are, however, others who attribute the appointment in question to the Turco-Italian War.

Russia and England.

2. The Paisa Akhbar (Lahore), of the 10th January 1912, publishes a cartoon in which the Czar of Russia is represented as carrying a stone with a view to completing a half-built staircase against the wall of Afghanistan. Beyond the wall are the pictures of a mosque and a temple representing India. On the right of the Czar is the picture of King-Emperor George V. The letter-press runs as follows:—

"The Czar of Russia—'My dear Emperor of India, please help me a little in the upbuilding of this staircase of stones, so that I may rise on the wall and see what is beyond it.'

The Emperor of India—(contemptuously), Czar! What you think is wrong. I never help such persons."

(Well done!)

Russia, Persia, and Indian Muhammadans.

3. The Zamindar (Lahore), of the 9th January 1912, publishes a leader headed "I do not know how to resort to flattery." When the Roman Empire, says the paper, was in its last throes of death and was about to be swept off the face of the earth, there was nobody to carry out its administration except some insane ministers of the Christian Church and eunuchs in charge of the Seraglio. Something like this is the present condition of Indian Muhammadans. Those people, who are called the leaders of the Muslim community, are worse than impotent, while the duty of improving the views of Muhammadans has fallen to the lot of a few journalists who are so addicted to foul language and abusive writings that good people are afraid to raise their voices against them. Can there be any doubt about the misfortune of a community, asks the paper, whose leaders pass their days in resorting to degraded sycophancy and shameful flattery, who hesitate to lay the wounded and offended feelings of their co-religionists before Government through fear of being deprived of the honours or titles enjoyed by them, whose leading journalist has once been punished for a shameful offence like that of theft and has also embraced another religion for a few pice (the reference is to the Editor of the Paisa Akhbar), who are so bold as to mis-appropriate public money to themselves (the reference is to the Editor of the Watan), and who feel pride in working as spies for the Police?

(b)—Home.

The annulment of the Partition of Bengal and Muhammadans.

4. The Zamindar (Lahore), of the 10th and 11th January 1912, publishes a communication from one Shaikh Faiz Ali, of Shahabad, Hardoi District, entitled "The present time and the political stage." The writer publishes an account of the Delhi Darbar, and says that he had an occasion to see the British Army. He can only say that the soldiers and sepoys were well disciplined and well armed, but he cannot but observe with regret that he could form no opinion about cannon and guns, because, in the words of the poet, "we pass our days among those whe run away from the battlefield and have never seen guns or artillery." How ardently he wished that the Government would trust its subjects and permit once more "men like us" to use arms and to learn the noble art of warfare! He has, however, every hope that now that Delhi has once more the honour of being the capital, Indians will be allowed to use arms freely sooner or later. Indeed, it is a pity that, while the subjects of many Native States in India are allowed the free use of arms, it is only the subjects of British India who have been deprived of this right. Continuing, he refers to the annulment of the Partition of Bengal, and says that there can be no denying the fact that an excellent opportunity was selected to announce the annulment in question. It is absolutely wrong to say, he adds, that the rights of the Muhammadan community (of Bengal) will not be adequately safeguarded, seeing that those who hold contrary views on the subject do not perceive that Indian Muhammadans generally are not in a position to understand political problems unless they learn them from unforeseen circumstances or from those measures of Government which teach them lessons, accidental or otherwise. He cannot see what advantages they would have gained if the two Bengals had been kept separate. It is possible that, in the event of the Partition of Bengal having been maintained, Muhammadans might have enjoyed the right of slaughtering cows in slaughter-houses or some similar advantages; but it must be conceded that a community gains its rights, not by these methods, but by acting in a united manner. It is an undoubted fact that the manner in which Muhammadans have conducted themselves of late has caused them immense injury which they could have easily avoided if they had wished to do so. This injury is that they have, by their conduct, managed only to provoke the enmity of Hindus, with the result that at present such ill-feelings exist between the two communities that they do not exchange even personal greetings. Muhammadans have lost their sway, but there are still some good-hearted Hindus who urge their co-religionists to maintain friendly relations with Muhammadans. If, however, the two communities continue to be hostile to each other, the time is not far distant when Muhammadans will feel the need of leaving this country bag and baggage and residing in a place not inhabited by Hindus. It was only the other day that past Muslim greatness had such influence on the minds of Hindus that the latter dare oppose Muhammadans in (even) small matters; but the times have now changed, and Hindus feel no respect for them. This being the case, Muhammadans owe a deep debt of gratitude to His Majesty the King-Emperor for annulling the Partition of Bengal.

The future policy of Indian Muhammadans.

5. The Paisa Akhbar (Lahore), of the 9th January 1912, publishes an article headed "What should Muhammadans do now?" At present, says the paper, Muhammadans are much exercised as to what policy they should adopt now. Should they become more closely allied to Hindus, or join the Indian National Congress, or follow Hindus in resorting to agitation in order to gain their political aspirations, or continue their former policy of passive acquiescence? After remarking that they should not act with haste in deciding their future policy, the paper says that, if it is decided that they should follow in the footsteps of Hindus and carry on their work quite independently of other communities, they should, in the first place, see whether they possess the requisite amount of capacity and material; because it is useless to expect that they will achieve their end without possessing wealth, influence, unity, and sufficient educational qualifications. If, on the other hand, they wish to enter into more cordial relations with Hindus or join the Congress, they will surely lose that individuality on which the fulfilment of their wishes depends. Even if they do so, they should see whether Hindus are prepared to meet them half-way. Hindus may do this in provinces like Bengal and Madras; but, unfortunately, for certain reasons it must be admitted that it is extremely difficult in the Punjab. The only way, therefore, to enable Muhammadans to secure their salvation is to firmly establish their individuality and to endeavour to improve their internal condition; so that Government may show respect to them as a community and pay heed to their demands, while Hindus may also be willing to make an honourable alliance with them.

The future policy of Indian Muhammadans.

6. The Vakil (Amritsar), of the 6th (received on the 16th) January 1912, has a note entitled "Our future policy." After remarking that Muhammadans will always remain grateful to Lord Curzon for carrying out the Partition of Bengal, which conferred inestimable blessings on the Muhammadans of Eastern Bengal, the paper deplores the modification of the measure which was repeatedly declared by Ministers to have been "a settled fact." It says that the Bengalis, who were once notorious for their timidity, have showed great courage and perseverance in continuing their agitation against the measure, and have now had the satisfaction of seeing their efforts crowned with success. On the other hand the Muhammadans, who in their simplicity placed implicit confidence in Government, kept themselves aloof from the extremists, and afforded proof of their admitted loyalty, have had their peace disturbed by the Bengali agitation; and now the advantages which they expected to gain from the partition have disappeared. Government is, however, not to be blamed for this, nor does any blame attach to the Hindus. The fault lies solely with Muhammadans themselves, who could not distinguish between what is beneficial and what is injurious. There can, however, be no denying the fact that the reunion of the two Bengals has caused them an intolerable injury, and it is natural that they should feel its severity. But what should Muhammadans do now? Hitherto they have been in the habit of showing the greatest simplicity in dealing with public affairs; but the time has now come when they should amend their old policy or adopt an entirely new one. They should learn a lesson from the conduct of Hindus, and should translate into action what they profess with promptitude, vigour, and perseverance.

Muhammadans and Hindus.

7. The Rajput Gazette (Lahore), of the 6th (received on the 15th) January 1912, publishes a leader headed "The future policy of Muhammadans and the imperative duty of Hindus." The paper says that those considerations which have obliged Muhammadans to seek to associate with Hindus are so important and complex that it would be extremely dangerous for Hindus to acquiesce in their change of policy without going deep into the question. After remarking that all the continuous efforts of Hindus to bring about a union between the two communities, as also the speeches of Mr. Gokhale on the subject and the attempts of the Allahabad Peace Conference, have so far proved abortive, it says that, when the majority of far-sighted Hindus saw that Muhammadans were replying to their offers of unity by boycotting Hindu shops at the instigation of Muhammadan newspapers, they came to the conclusion that Muhammadans would never express their willingness to make common cause with them unless they were forced to do so by the exigencies of circumstances. The recent change in the attitude of Muhammadans, therefore, came as a surprise. Soon, however, an event occurred which dispelled all doubts on the subject. On the 26th December last a meeting was held at Poona under the auspices of the Bombay Presidency Muslim League, which was presided over by Sir Agha Khan and which made the need of changing Muslim policy as clear as day-light. The meeting was attended by a few Hindus also, who were probably ignorant of the true feelings working in the minds of their Muhammadan fellow-countrymen. After quoting from the speech delivered by the Hon'ble Maulvi Rafi-ud-din, the paper says that the invasion of Tripoli and Persia by Italy and Russia

respectively, and the understanding which exists between the last-named country and Great Britain in the matter of Russian aggression in Persia, have prompted Muhammadans to change their policy and achieve their end by securing the support of Hindus. There is, however, no harm in Hindus sympathising with Muhammadans in the matter, but, before doing this, they should see how their co-operation with Muhammadans would affect themselves, as also the British Government. The paper then quotes from a communication by the Right Hon'ble Mr. Amir Ali, in which he expresses the apprehension that British indifference to the occupation of Tripoli and Persia is likely to compromise the loyalty of Indian Muhammadans, and reprints an extract from the Zamindar of the 26th December last, in which the paper named says "Pull out the eyes of the wretched man who frowns insolently at Islam and reduce to dust anybody whom you find insulting and degrading the same." It then goes on to say that the above shows the attitude of Muhammadans to which Hindu support is desired. Hindus have already got a bad name, and the doings of some of the short-sighted members of their community have more or less prejudiced Government against them. The advent of His Majesty the King-Emperor, however, has caused a wave of loyal sentiment to pass over the length and breadth of the country, and Hindus should not allow its beneficial and far-reaching effects to be lost. They should also remember that while Muhammadans depend greatly on Muslim countries like Turkey, Persia and Afghanistan, &c., Hindus have no other Government to rely upon than the British. After remarking that Hindus never obtained any benefit by helping or making common cause with Muhammadans, and after giving historical references in support of its assertion, the paper says that the former have nothing to do with Turkey, Persia, &c., and that they should always keep in view the interests of Government and show their loyalty and devotion to it. If, however, Muhammadans or other communities come forward to help Hindus in devising means to maintain peace in the country and promoting the stability of British rule they are warmly welcome.

Suggestions for the better administration of India.

8. The following is from the Harbinger (Lahore) of 14th January 1912:—

"The Royal Visit has put an end to all murmurs of the people with regard to administration. His Imperial Majesty has done more than the people expected. The race hatred got up by the pseudo-patriot should now be thrown into the limbo of oblivion. For the better administration of the country His Imperial Majesty should sojourn in India in winter to do Indian business. It is said Emperor Aurungzeb read applications himself even at the age of 80 years. In his time the Muhammadan rule reached the zenith of its power. So it is useless to do the work of India in England 12,000 miles afar. It should be done on the spot.

* * * * * * * *

"The Imperial Majesty's visit suggests a good many changes for the cementation and the formation of the British Empire in India. Association with the English forces English ideas upon us. One of them is to rule by a Parliament. So an Indian Parliament is necessary. It should be composed of half the members of the English Parliament and half of Natives. Of the natives, half should be retired officers and the rest representatives of the people of well-known loyalty. Loyalty should be the elective principle, and not religion—Hinduism and Muhammadanism as now. This change in administration will be very much to the growing taste of the English, as they want to see India. So they will gladly come as members of Parliament and have the Christian scientific satisfaction of doing justice on the actual presentation of facts, and not through coloured reports mixed with idiosyncrasies of writers."

The new Capital.

9. The following is from the Tribune (Lahore) of 18th January 1912:—

* * * * * *

"The reason why Calcutta was chosen for the capital of the British Empire in India and no one thought of Delhi so long is not far to seek. Unlike the previous conquerors of India the English did not come by land. Invasion used always to come through the Khyber Pass from the days of Alexander downwards, and no previous ruling dynasty was a maritime Power of any importance. Coming through the Punjab the former rulers of India found it convenient to establish the capital as close to the North-West Frontier as possible, Delhi and its neighbourhood had been the site of many capitals from the remotest Aryan and Hindu times, and it naturally attracted the founders of later empires. The English did not come to India by land, nor did they come as invaders and conquerors of the country. They came merely as traders and they came across the ocean. The political ascendancy of England was of slow growth. In the ordinary course of things Bombay would have been the capital of British India, but the conditions in the west of India were not favourable in the early history of British occupation. The feeblest rule was that of the Nawab Nazims of Bengal, and by a natural law the steps of the English were directed towards that province. It was in Bengal that the English first established political power and Calcutta naturally became the seat of the Governor of Bengal and subsequently of the Governor-General of India. The advantages of Calcutta as the capital were obvious. It is on the seaboard, and sea-going vessels can come up directly under the ramparts of Fort William. Steam and electricity were still unknown. The Emperor of Delhi still sat on the throne of the Moghuls as a pale spectre of a vanished power. Communications were difficult, travelling was unsafe; the roads were infested by Thugs. Even Murshidabad or Patna could not be thought of for a capital, and Charnock's village rapidly grew to be the capital city in spite of its unhealthiness and its proximity to the Sundarbans. After 1857 and 1858 Delhi became associated with a terrible and tragic memory recalling many previous ones of a similar nature. Delhi may be the Imperial city, but it has witnessed the shedding of more blood than any other city in India.

* * * * * *

"The insuperable objections against Delhi passed in the course of time. The railway, the telegraph, the steam vessel, annihilated distance. Calcutta remained the capital, but the Government of India passed eight months out of the twelve at Simla which was more distant, and, until very lately, more inaccessible than Delhi. But it made little difference whether the Government was at Simla or Calcutta. Almost everything is done by telegraph. At one end of the wire sits the Secretary of State for India and the Viceroy at the other, and all matters relating to the administration are quickly settled. The ways of the world have changed and the prosperity of a city does not depend on the seat of the Government. Bombay is no whit behind Calcutta, while as an industrial centre it is far ahead, and yet Bombay was at no time the capital of India. The analogy of the United States and Canada has been frequently quoted though we are not quite sure that it holds. The form of government in both the United States and Canada is such that it is not very material where the Government is located because it is democratic and is always in touch with public opinion. The Government of India is bureaucratic, and it is essential that it should be always open to the influence of a healthy, vigorous public opinion. In the despatch to the Secretary of State for India, the Government of India laid stress on the fact that it was not desirable that the Government should be unduly influenced by Calcutta opinion and that Calcutta opinion was not always the opinion of India. But no attempt was made to meet the weighty objection that it was not desirable that the Government of India should cut itself away from all opinion. There is no public opinion in Simla, there is none in Delhi, and we do not believe any will come into existence for a long time. It is being surmised that on account of the transfer of the capital important newspapers will be started in Delhi and a strong public opinion will soon be created. Of this we have grave doubt. Newspapers flourish where they find readers, and the number of readers in Delhi is not likely to be large for a long time. The most influential Anglo-Indian paper, the Pioneer, is published at Allahabad, where there is very little public life and still less public opinion. We are not urging any objections of our own to the transfer, but we are pointing out that those who maintain that the Government of India will lose by getting out of touch with all public opinion have a pretty strong case. But the future is hidden from us and an attempt to pry into it would be unprofitable.

"From the point of view of striking the imagination the transfer of the capital is undoubtedly the most important of the administrative changes announced. Delhi and its traditions and memories were consigned to the oblivion of the past. The historic ruins—the most extensive that can be seen anywhere—interest the traveller and the sightseer, but there is nothing that binds Delhi to the present. Calcutta is the sign manual of the British rule in India. It is as old as British rule, it has grown and prospered with the spread and consolidation of the British Empire in India. Calcutta was founded by the present rule, but no Government can say that it founded Delhi, for its existence as a capital is pre-historic and it can be traced back to the dim region of mythology. The environments of Delhi are melancholy; in Calcutta the one dark memory is that of the Black Hole, and even that would have remained buried in history but for Lord Curzon's fancy of raising an obelisk near the place which is inside the General Post Office. But in Delhi everything is a relic, everything is a symbol of vanished greatness, bearing witness to the immutability of the law by which nothing human endures. Those marvels of different schools and ages of architecture are mere memories of great things that have been. We see on all sides a past procession of empires and the rest-houses, as it were, that they built as they passed along. A new capital is going to spring up by the side of the ruins of ancient capitals—a capital of an empire mightier even here in India than any known in history or mythology. The Emperor of India to-day reigns over an empire undreamt of by the Moghuls or the great Aryan heroes of epic times. But in architecture the imperial conceptions of the Moghuls stand unrivalled, and it is now impossible to build as they built. Architecturally therefore the new capital will not be able to emulate the triumphs of art in Delhi and Agra, but it will have a unique importance of its own. Delhi has been the Capital of Hindu and Mahomedan empires; it will now be the capital of a Christian Empire so that nearly all the principal religions will be represented in the new metropolis of India. It will symbolise a sequence of empires and religions and will emblematize the harmony of conflicting faiths. People will say, if all roads lead to Delhi all religions and all empires lead to the House of God.

The Muslim League and the Congress.

10. The following is from the Tribune (Lahore) of 18th January 1912 :—

"It is a gratifying sign of the times that an increasing number of Muhammadans of culture are coming to view the unifying ideal of the Indian National Congress with approbation. On the eve of the recent Session of the Indian National Congress, a meeting of influential Muhammadan leaders was held in Calcutta under the presidency of the Hon'ble Nawab Sayed Muhammad, at which suggestions for a rapprochement with the Hindus were made by the Hon'ble Dr. Suhrawardy, some time Principal of the Islamia College, Lahore, and other speakers. An important office-bearer of the All-India Muslim League also attended the last Session of the Congress as a delegate. Only the other day the Secretary of a District Muslim League suggested the desirability of the Muhammadans joining the Congress movement. Mirza Sami-ulla Beg, a well-known Muhammadan leader of Lucknow, has now written to the Pioneer asking the Muhammadans to accept the Congress ideal of self-government within the British Empire as their goal. That ideal, he is firmly convinced, is by no means an impossibility. On the other hand, it will bring the Muhammadans in unison with their Hindu brethren in political aspirations and may also lead to the solution of the Hindu-Muhammadan question to a certain extent. He does not see any reason why Hindus and Muhammadans should not tie themselves with the same bonds which bind a Buddhist and a Christian Japanese or a Protestant and a Roman Catholic Englishman. When such bonds are forged, cow-killing questions, Mohurram and Dasehra riots will, he says, all be things of the past and all other differences will sink into insignificance before the unifying influence of the higher and the greater problems of the country. It is not necessary, however, to the realization of this ideal, as he points out, that denominational institutions and leagues should be abolished. As we pointed out some time ago, the attempt should be made to harmonise and not to neutralise differences. The writer also takes the same view. The advice he gives to the Muslim League is to serve, with due regard to the interests of Muhammadans, as the feeder rather than the drainer of the Indian National Congress. Will the other members of the Muslim League accept this advice?"

Executive Council for the United Provinces.

11. The following is from the Tribune (Lahore) of 18th January 1912 :—

"The high-handed and unconstitutional manner in which Sir John Hewett has disallowed the resolution on an Executive Council for the United Provinces shows the breadth of his outlook and the depth of his statesmanship. The Coronation Darbar has brought him deserved fame and his ability is indisputable. But it is very doubtful whether his spirit is liberal and his sympathies are with the people of the country. The fact of the ability of a single administrator does not affect the excellence or otherwise of a system of government. Lord Curzon was a much abler man than Sir John Hewett, but he never thought of dispensing with his Executive Council or ignoring it." * * * *

* * * * * * * *

III.—Native State.

Hyderabad affairs.

12. The Paisa Akhbar (Lahore), of the 10th January 1912, publishes a communication headed "The expectations of Hyderabad have not been realised even on the occasion of the (Coronation) Darbar." The writer, Abdullah of Kasmandi, says that there was every hope that the most loyal ruler of the premier Native State of India would receive a very high title commensurate with his position and that the assigned districts of Berar would also be restored to him; but it is to be regretted that the same was not realised, notwithstanding the fact that honours were showered on even smaller States like Kapurthala, Kota, &c. Nor is this all. In some respects, the small States were accorded preferential treatment as compared with Hyderabad, and what has pained His Highness the Nizam most, is the fact that, while his Prime Minister, who is a G.C.S.I., was not presented to His Majesty, the relations and servants of other States had the honour of being duly presented. After remarking that the days have gone by when it was advisable for one to suffer in silence, the writer says that these are the days of struggle and that Hyderabad should follow in the wake of Baroda, and should continue to lay its desires before the Government of India.

The Times and the Gaekwar.

13. The following is from the Tribune (Lahore) of 16th January 1912 :—

"The scurrilous attack on the Gaekwar in the Times was not an editorial comment, but was telegraphed by the special correspondents at the Coronation Darbar at Delhi. Thus there is no secrecy about the authorship of the malignant charges preferred against the Gaekwar. We see the fine Roman hand of Mr. Lovat Fraser, for the other correspondent was a stranger to India, in this string of libels. We have an evidence of his method in his book on Lord Curzon. While extolling his hero to the skies Mr. Lovat Fraser has fallen foul of a score of other personages, including the Amir of Afghanistan. The annulment of the Partition of Bengal must have given a very rude shock to Mr. Lovat Fraser, and he readily seized the opportunity to vent his spleen against the Gaekwar, who has never been a persona grata with Anglo-Indians or Anglo-Indian journalists."

V.—Native Societies and Religious Matters.

Complaint against the Musafir of Agra.

14. The Haq (Delhi), of the 5th (received on the 16th) January 1912, has a note entitled "Will nothing be done to put an end to the foul-mouthedness of the Musafir?" The Musafir (Agra), says the paper, is bent upon wounding the feelings of Muhammadans, but the latter consider it derogatory to the dignity of their community to retaliate. Besides, Muhammadan papers are silent through fear of being called upon to furnish security, with the result that the Musafir is abusing Islam to its heart's content. In support of its assertion the Haq quotes an extract from the Musafir's issue, dated the 24th November 1911, in which the paper named makes the following observation :—

"It is absurd to say that the (entire teachings of) Islam lead to good (results), seeing that mischief, depravity, murder, bloodshed, religious bigotry, malice, enmity, jehad, violence, sin, plunder, fighting, fraud, adultery, sensuality, polytheism and the worship of created beings are all, as we have been showing by a reference to the Quran, the creations of Islam."

In the above passage, says the paper, the Musafir has attributed all the vices in the world to Islam, and all this must have lacerated the hearts of Muhammadans. It is, however, a matter for regret that the Government of the United Provinces is unaware of the wiles of this paper.

In another place, the paper publishes a communication headed "mischief-makings by the Musafir of Agra: worthy of the attention of the Government of the United Provinces." The writer—one Muhammad Ali of Delhi—complains that the Musafir of Agra is in the habit of abusing Muhammadans and Christians and, in support of his allegations, quotes extracts from the paper's issue, dated the 1st December last.

Nawab Vicar-ul-Mulk's rumoured resignation.

15. The following is from the Observer (Lahore) of 13th January 1912 :—

* * * * * * * *

"We cannot conceal from ourselves the fear that Nawab Vicar-ul-Mulk's retirement from public life, whenever it comes, will be a great, we might say an irretrievable, loss to the Indian Musalmans. He is the one man in whom all sections of the community have absolute confidence and his lead of Muslim India has been a brilliant success from every point of view. It will be a task of the greatest difficulty to find a suitable successor of his, and the conviction has gradually forced itself on the community as a whole that Nawab Vicar-ul-Mulk's resignation will cause a void which it will take years to fill up. But his retirement at the present moment would be nothing short of disastrous, and the Muslim University will have received a heavy blow even before it has been actually launched. We, therefore, beseech him, in the name of the Indian Muhammadans, to reconsider his decision and to abandon his intention of untimely retirement. We are not unaware, and the community cannot be unaware, of the full extent of the sacrifice that we demand of him. But in view of the gravity of the issues at stake and the fact that his services are simply indispensable at this juncture, we trust Nawab Vicar-ul-Mulk will rise to the occasion and will not fail his people in the supreme hour of their need. They are deeply indebted to him for what he has already done for their cause, and even in their selfish disregard of his personal comfort, they are not likely to under-estimate the magnitude of the personal sacrifice at which the Nawab will agree to serve the national cause. God alone can reward him for his self-sacrificing zeal; but the grateful prayers of a whole community will also be his to compensate him for his troubles."

VII.—General Administration.

(a)—Judicial.

Honorary Magistrates.

16. The Paisa Akhbar (Lahore), of the 10th January 1912, publishes a leader headed "Honorary Magistrates and the Police." In the Police Administration Report for the year 1910-11, says the paper, the Inspector-General of Police makes the following observation: "There are instances where the work done by Honorary Magistrates has not been satisfactory; for instance, in Lahore out of a total of 624 cases under section 34 of the Police Act and under the Municipal Act sent for trial in their courts not less than 103 ended in discharge." This remark, it adds, is simply absurd, and before making the assertion the Inspector-General should have considered that it was quite possible that the Police had dishonestly challaned some innocent persons or that the Honorary Magistrates found the evidence against the accused so weak and insufficient that they were obliged to discharge them. Indeed, the Inspector-General should have given a couple of instances in which the accused persons were acquitted notwithstanding the fact that there was ample evidence against them. The Inspector-General of Police also alleges in the above report that the Honorary Magistrates of the Montgomery District were not interesting themselves or co-operating in the administration. It is, however, difficult to see why the Inspector-General should have gone to the length of commenting on the work of Honorary Magistrates. Probably he relied on the reports of the Superintendents of Police, who were led to make the above remark because the Magistrates named had failed to decide all cases sent up by the Police in the latter's favour. His allegations are, however, baseless and unnecessary; seeing that the most probable explanation of the above affair is that the Magistrates were obliged to discharge cases sent up by the Police on insufficient evidence.

Pleaders in the Punjab.

17. In discussing the probable effects of the Punjab Chief Court Circular dated 3rd January 1912 restricting the number of Pleaders to be enrolled in future, the Observer (Lahore) of 13th January 1912, makes the following remarks:—

* * * * *

"The more we ponder over the question, the greater is our surprise at the arbitrary orders now issued. Indeed, the artificial character of the arrangement proposed cannot but militate against the efficiency of the profession of law. Instead of the great principle of supply and demand being allowed to regulate the number of men taking to the legal line, we find the Punjab Chief Court bent on setting up an unnatural standard and thereby introducing a purely artificial element in the consideration of the question.

"When, however, one considers the condition of Muhammadans, the circular becomes still further open to objection. The number of Muslim lawyers in this Province, as in other parts of the country, is very limited. It is only recently that the Musalmans have realised their deficiency, and although Muhammadan students of the Law College are still much fewer than Hindu scholars, there seems to be an awakening among the Musalmans in this respect. Being poorer than other sections of the country, the Muhammadans cannot be expected to make up their deficiency by going to England. They had only their own Province to fall back upon. And just when they were bestirring themselves, the Chief Court circular, limiting the number of pleaders and granting licenses to those only who stand highest in order of merit, has come upon them as a bolt from the blue. This is certainly as it ought not to be. We, therefore, appeal to the Chief Court to reconsider the matter and withdraw a circular which has evoked the disapproval of all sections of Indian society."

(b)—Police.

The arrest of the Khan of Hoti.

18. The Paisa Akhbar (Lahore), of the 8th January 1912, has a note entitled "The misfortune of the Khan of Hoti." Adverting to the arrest of the Khan the paper says that, although it is not desirable to comment on a matter which is sub-judice, still it must be observed that the manner in which the Khan was arrested shows that he had been very severely dealt with. He is a well-known rais in the Frontier Province and is considered an influential personage by the Government. A man of his position, in whose case there is no fear of absconding, was arrested and was marched in hand-cuffs through the bazars (of Hoti) amidst the cries and lamentations of his subjects. He was refused bail of a lakh of rupees, and his brother and son obtained an interview with him in the jail with great difficulty. All these facts raise the apprehension that the Khan is not likely to obtain justice at Peshawar, and it is therefore desirable that his case should be transferred to the Punjab.

The Police and the Royal Visit.

19. The following is from the Panjabee (Lahore) of 16th January 1912 :—

"Like poor Dick in David Copperfield, who could not put his pen to paper without King Charles' head peeping in through every chink and crevice of his mind, the poor Indian cannot take part in any public function, however innocent, without the Police stepping in here and there to mar his enjoyment of the thing. Even on so happy and auspicious an occasion as the Royal Visit his devoted back was honoured with frequent contact with the Police baton. During the Durbar days at Delhi complaints of ill-treatment at the hands of the Police were not few, and at the Polo grounds, as is well-known, the 'management of the mob' had reached such a pitch of efficiency as to necessitate Royal intervention. At Arrah they would not allow the people to get within twenty yards of His Imperial Majesty, though to their humiliation the fences were at the supreme moment removed by Imperial command. In Calcutta they surpassed themselves, and even the Englishman has referred to 'complaints' that the Police showed a 'want of consideration' and 'adopted methods for keeping back crowds which might well have been resented.'

"These 'methods for keeping back crowds' consisted in a free and indiscriminate use of the Regulation lathi irrespective of position or sex. During the processions Maulvi Liakat Hussain and his party rescued with much difficulty a number of inoffensive citizens from the Police baton under the very shadow of the Government House. Two constables have been dismissed from service by a kind-hearted officer who was eye-witness to the methods they adopted of managing the 'mob.' But it was not always the underlings whose zeal outran discretion. At one place a Deputy Commissioner of Police, it is said, went so far as to attack women! A number of Indian ladies, it appears, were allowed by a certain high officer to take their places at a stand on the route of procession. Shortly after the Deputy Commissioner of Police referred to came, and, without enquiring how the ladies happened to be there or even asking them to leave the place, ran his horse right into their midst! At ordinary times such actions of the police would hardly cause much surprise in India, but they stand out in shocking relief against the resplendent background of a national rejoicing on the happy and auspicious occasion of a Royal visit."

(e)—Agriculture and questions affecting the land.

Grievances of Indian zamindars.

20. The Zamindar (Lahore), of the 7th January 1911, publishes an article headed "A petition to Lord Crewe, the Secretary of State for India, from Indian zamindars, the most voiceless and neglected subjects of His Majesty the King Emperor George V." The paper refers to the boons conferred by His Majesty the King-Emperor on the occasion of the Coronation Darbar at Delhi on the various sections of his Indian subjects, and says that the Right Hon'ble the Secretary of State may not perhaps know that there is such a community as that of zamindars, who are poor, helpless and voiceless, and who have received no concessions on the above occasion, although the world has been benefited by them. India is essentially an agricultural country, and it is the zamindars alone who have to work hard and brave all the inclemencies of weather in order to supply provisions and delicacies to those who live in bungalows, obtaining for their own share the worst that can be imagined. It is they who contribute crores of rupees to the Government treasury, while Government servants receive lakhs from the same. It is, however, strange that, while the latter have been given half month's salary as a boon, those who fill the Government Treasury by selling their cattle and seeds, by mortgaging their ornaments and utensils, and by raising loans on interest from money-lenders have been thrown into the cold shade of neglect. They have been ignored because they do not wield the pen or resort to beating of drums in order to make known their feelings and condition, because they do not own daily papers published in English, and also because they have no members of Parliament to befriend their cause. They are voiceless and helpless and are neglected by the authorities ; and perhaps the Secretary of State may have learnt from official reports that, in the present year particularly, their standing crops have been seriously injured by drought. And now, over and above this, they have failed to obtain royal boons on the occasion of the Darbar. They have not, however, lost all hope, seeing that His Lordship is still here, and it is to be hoped that before his departure he will induce His Majesty the King-Emperor to either reduce the land revenue demand by one-half in honour of the Coronation or to make considerable reductions in the same.

LAHORE :

The 20th January 1912.

C. STEAD,

Assistant to the Deputy Inspector-General of Police, Criminal Investigation Department, Punjab.

Punjab Government Press, Lahore—25-1-12—98—107—C. D.

[ Confidential. ]

[ Vol. XXV. ] SELECTIONS [ No. 4. ]

FROM THE

NATIVE NEWSPAPERS

PUBLISHED IN THE PUNJAB.

Examined up to 27th January 1912.

---

CONTENTS.

Page.

I.—Politics.

(a) Foreign—

1. Russia and Persia (Zamindar) ... ... 51
2. Muhammadans and the British Government (Zamindar) ... ... ... ib.
3. The Pioneer and the Times on Persian affairs and Indian Muhammadans (Zamindar) ... ib.

(b) Home—

4. Lord Crewe and self-government in India (Paisa Akhbar) ... ... ... ... 52
5. Government and Indian Muhammadans (Zamindar) ib.
6. The Zamindar and Muhammadans (Hindustan) 53
7. An objectionable poem (Hindustan) ... ib.
8. An India Council for the King (Panjabee) ... ib.
9. The Hindu-Muhammadan problem (Panjabee) ... 54
10. The annulment of the Partition of Bengal (Observer) ... ... ... ... 55
11. The Punjab Council Regulations (Observer) ... 56
12. Sind and the Punjab (Tribune) ... ... ib.

II.—Afghanistan and Trans-Frontier.

Nil.

III.—Native States.

13. Kashmir affairs (Rajput Gazette) ... ... 57

IV.—Kine-killing.

14. Kine-killing and Muhammadans (Jhang Sial) ... ib.

V.—Native Societies and Religious Matters.

15. The Gurukula (Loyal Gazette) ... ... ib.
16. A complaint against the Afghan newspaper (Jhang Sial) ... ... ... ... 58

Page.

VI.—Legislation.

17. The Punjab Tenancy Act Amendment Bill (Tribune) ... ... ... 58
18. The Press Act (Jhang Sial) ... ... 59

VII.—General Administration.

(a) Judicial—

19. A complaint (Hindustan) ... ... 60

(b) Police—

Nil.

(c) Municipal and Cantonment affairs—

Nil.

(d) Education —

Nil.

(e)—Agriculture and questions affecting the land—

Nil.

(f) Railways and Communications—

Nil.

(g) Postal matters—

Nil.

(h) Miscellaneous—

Nil.

LIST OF NEWSPAPERS AND PERIODICALS EXAMINED BY THE SPECIAL BRANCH AS IT STOOD ON THE 27TH JANUARY 1912.

| No. | Name. | Locality. | Name of Publisher. | Circulation. |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| | ENGLISH. | | | |
| | DAILY. | | | |
| 1 | Tribune ... | Lahore ... | Bihari Lal ... | 1,758 copies. |
| | TRI-WEEKLY. | | | |
| 2 | Panjabee ... | Lahore ... | Mul Chand ... | 2,424 copies |
| | BI-WEEKLY. | | | |
| 3 | Observer ... | Lahore ... | Nizam-ud-din ... | 1,000 copies. |
| 4 | Punjab Times and Frontier News. | Rawalpindi ... | J. R. Thapur ... | 200 „ |
| | WEEKLY. | | | |
| 5 | Arya Patrika ... | Lahore ... | Devi Chand ... | 650 copies. |
| 6 | Harbinger ... | Do. ... | Durga Parshad ... | 300 „ |
| 7 | Khalsa Advocate ... | Amritsar ... | Bahadur Singh ... | 752 „ |
| | MONTHLY. | | | |
| 8 | D. A.-V. College Magazine... | Lahore ... | Saraswati Nath ... | 1,000 copies. |
| 9 | Forman Christian College Notes. | Do. ... | ... | ... |
| 10 | Jijnasu ... | Do. ... | Ishwar Das ... | ... |
| 11 | Practical Medicine ... | Delhi ... | ... | ... |
| 12 | Punjab Educational Journal | Lahore ... | R. B. Mohan Lal ... | 700 copies. |
| 13 | Punjab Mission News ... | Do. ... | Revd. Wigram ... | 250 „ |
| 14 | Ravi ... | Do. ... | Mr. B. M. Jones ... | ... |
| 15 | Review of Religions ... | Qadian (Gurdaspur) ... | Sadr Anjuman Ahmadia, Qadian. | 800 copies. |
| 16 | Science Grounded Religion... | Lahore ... | Dev Rattan ... | 25 „ |
| 17 | Teacher ... | Dinga (Gujrat) ... | Kanhaya Singh ... | 200 „ |
| | URDU. | | | |
| | DAILY. | | | |
| 18 | Akhbar-i-'Am ... | Lahore ... | Govind Sahai ... | 630 copies. |
| 19 | Paisa Akhbar ... | Do. ... | Abdul Aziz ... | 1,011 „ |
| 20 | Watan ... | Do. ... | Muhammad Insha Alla ... | ... |
| 21 | Zamindar ... | Do. ... | Zafar Ali Khan, B.A. ... | ... |
| | BI-WEEKLY. | | | |
| 22 | Vakil ... | Amritsar ... | Abdul Aziz ... | 1,970 copies. |
| | WEEKLY. | | | |
| 23 | Afghan ... | Peshawar ... | Saiyid Muhammad Abdulla | 500 copies. |
| 24 | Ahl-i-Hadis ... | Amritsar ... | Sanaulla ... | 925 „ |
| 25 | Ahluwalia Gazette ... | Do. ... | Lehna Singh ... | 500 „ |
| 26 | Army News ... | Ludhiana ... | Hira Lal & Co. ... | 1,200 „ |
| 27 | Arorbans Gazette ... | Amritsar ... | Labh Singh ... | ... |
| 28 | Arya Gazette ... | Lahore ... | Bhowani Das ... | 550 copies. |
| 29 | Badar ... | Qadian, Gurdaspur district | Muhammad Sadiq ... | 200 copies. |

LIST OF NEWSPAPERS AND PERIODICALS EXAMINED BY THE SPECIAL BRANCH AS IT STOOD ON THE 27TH JANUARY 1912—CONTINUED.

| No. | Name. | Locality. | Name of Publisher. | Circulation. |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| | URDU—CONTINUED. | | | |
| | WEEKLY—continued. | | | |
| 30 | Bharat ... | Jullundur ... | Thakur Sheoratan Singh | ... |
| 31 | Civil and Military News ... | Ludhiana ... | Saiyid Muhammad ... | 1,325 copies. |
| 32 | Curzon Gazette ... | Delhi ... | Mirza Hairat ... | 111 „ |
| 33 | Delhi Gazette ... | Do. ... | Sajjad Husain ... | 200 „ |
| 34 | Edward Gazette ... | Abbott-abad ... | Muhammad Latif ... | 200 „ |
| 35 | Hakam ... | Qadian, Gurdaspur district | Yakub Ali ... | 900 „ |
| 36 | Haq ... | Delhi ... | Kasim Ali ... | 200 „ |
| 37 | Haq Pasand ... | Amritsar ... | Ram Nath ... | 382 „ |
| 38 | Hindu ... | Lahore ... | Hari Lal Sharma ... | ... |
| 39 | Hindustan ... | Do. ... | Ram Sarn Dutt ... | 8,070 copies. |
| 40 | Indar ... | Do. ... | Dharm Pal, B. A. ... | ... |
| 41 | Islam ... | Do. ... | Abdul Latif ... | 200 copies. |
| 42 | Jhang Sial ... | Jhang ... | Prabh Dyal ... | 2,262 „ |
| 43 | Kapurthala Akhbar ... | Kapurthala ... | Hamid Husain ... | 155 „ |
| 44 | Loyal Gazette ... | Lahore ... | Amar Singh ... | 200 „ |
| 45 | Lytton Gazette ... | Delhi ... | Bulaki Das ... | 1,000 „ |
| 46 | Millat ... | Lahore ... | Shuja Ulla ... | 1,500 „ |
| 47 | Mister Gazette ... | Do. ... | Ali Bakhsh ... | 150 „ |
| 48 | Munir ... | Jhang ... | Hafiz Khuda Bakhsh ... | 200 „ |
| 49 | Musalman ... | Amritsar ... | Sana-ulla ... | 400 „ |
| 50 | Nur ... | Qadian, Gurdaspur district | Muhammad Yusaf ... | 200 „ |
| 51 | Nur Afshan ... | Ludhiana ... | Revd. Dr. E. M. Wherry | 500 „ |
| 52 | Paisa Akhbar ... | Lahore ... | Abdul Aziz ... | 8,377 „ |
| 53 | Parkash ... | Do. ... | Krishan ... | 1,723 „ |
| 54 | Punjab Advocate ... | Mianwali ... | Karm Chand, Bahl ... | 1,000 „ |
| 55 | Punjab Samachar ... | Lahore ... | Hira Lal ... | 705 „ |
| 56 | Rajput Gazette ... | Do. ... | Thakur Sukhram Das ... | 650 „ |
| 57 | Municipal Gazette and Sada-i-Hind. | Do. ... | Din Muhammad ... | 500 „ |
| 58 | Sadiq-ul-Akhbar ... | Bahawalpur ... | Maulvi Ata Ullah ... | 392 „ |
| 59 | Ditto ... | Rewari ... | Safdar Hussain ... | 200 „ |
| 60 | Sanatan Dharm Pracharak... | Amritsar ... | Rulia Ram ... | 200 „ |
| 61 | Shanti ... | Rawalpindi ... | Kishan Chand Mohan ... | 300 „ |
| 62 | Sialkot Paper ... | Sialkot ... | Todar Mal ... | 500 „ |
| 63 | Siraj-ul-Akhbar ... | Jhelum ... | Maulvi Fakir Muhammad | 450 „ |
| 64 | Tahzib-ul-Niswan ... | Lahore ... | Mumtaz Ali ... | 240 „ |

LIST OF NEWSPAPERS AND PERIODICALS EXAMINED BY THE SPECIAL BRANCH AS IT STOOD ON THE 27TH JANUARY 1912—CONCLUDED.

| No. | Name. | Locality. | Name of Publisher. | Circulation. |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| | URDU—CONCLUDED. | | | |
| | WEEKLY—concluded. | | | |
| 65 | Victoria Paper ... | Sialkot ... | Gian Chand ... | 600 copies. |
| 66 | Wafadar* ... | Lahore ... | Fazal-ud-din ... | 600 „ |
| 67 | Waqt ... | Do. ... | Ali Husain ... | 300 „ |
| 68 | Watan ... | Do. ... | Muhammad Insha Ullah... | 1,800 „ |
| 69 | Zamindar ... | Do. ... | Zafar Ali Khan, B.A. ... | 750 „ |
| | FORTNIGHTLY. | | | |
| 70 | Biwah Samachar ... | Lahore ... | Ram Chand ... | 300 copies. |
| 71 | Kam Dhenu ... | Ludhiana ... | Daulat Ram ... | 100 „ |
| 72 | Mohyal Gazette ... | Kala, Jhelum district ... | Mehta Sham Das ... | 250 „ |
| | MONTHLY. | | | |
| 73 | Arorbans Parkash ... | Lahore ... | Salig Ram ... | 200 copies. |
| 74 | Arya Musafir ... | Jullundur ... | Wazir Chand ... | 1,300 „ |
| 75 | Indar ... | Lahore ... | Dharampal, B.A. ... | 3,000 „ |
| 76 | Jauhar ... | Amritsar ... | Muhammad Ismail Khan | 200 „ |
| 77 | Kakezai Social Reformer ... | Lahore ... | Fazl Din ... | 200 „ |
| 78 | Makhzan ... | Delhi ... | Abdul Kadir ... | 4,000 „ |
| 79 | Rafiq ... | Lahore ... | Charinji Lal ... | 500 „ |
| 80 | Sadhu ... | Do. ... | Sheobart Lal ... | 500 „ |
| 81 | Martand ... | Do. ... | Kanhya Lal ... | 250 „ |
| 82 | Raghbir Patrika ... | Do. ... | Prab Dial ... | 500 „ |
| 83 | Zaban ... | Delhi ... | Hamid Hasain ... | 500 „ |
| | GURMUKHI. | | | |
| | WEEKLY. | | | |
| 84 | Khalsa Sewak ... | Amritsar ... | Jiwan Singh ... | 1,000 copies. |
| 85 | Punjab Reporter ... | Do. ... | Ganda Singh ... | ... |
| 86 | Punjabi Surma ... | Lahore ... | Gian Chand ... | 1,000 copies. |

* Not received during the week.

I.—Politics.

(a)—Foreign.

Russia and Persia.

1. The Zamindar (Lahore), of the 17th and 19th January 1912, publishes a communication headed "The present times and the political stage." In continuation of his previous remarks (vide paragraph 4 of Selections No. 3) the writer—one Sheikh Fayyaz Ali of Shahabad, Hardoi district—gives an account of the events of the Turco-Italian War and goes on to discuss Russo-Persian relations. He observes that, as Persia is a Muhammadan Kingdom, Muhammadans naturally sympathise with it in its present oppressed condition and repeatedly urge Great Britain to save the Shah's dominions from falling into the hands of Russia. They are, however, apparently ignorant of politics; otherwise they would have urged Great Britain to hasten to take her share in the Partition of Persia, because this would have certainly met with the approval of the Cabinet. Indeed, they should bear in mind that there is no section in the political code of Europe making it obligatory for the strong to attend to the voice of the weak. Continuing, the writer says that, failing to induce Great Britain to take action in the matter, they turned their attention to Turkey, which published a strong note in connection with Russian aggression in Persia. In reply Russia admitted Turkey's right of interference in Persian affairs, and this practically means that the latter country is in every way entitled to a share in the Partition of the Shah's dominions. Next the writer says that Persia can only be saved by either the exertion of Persian nationalists or by her surrender to Turkey. Proceeding, he says that the proposed Russian railway through Persia will benefit Great Britain, seeing that the awakening among Egyptians is causing her not a little uneasiness concerning the protection of her route to India. In conclusion, he says that Russian aggression in Persia has made a deep impression on the Afghans, who are watching the manner in which the Anglo-Russian Convention is being carried into effect with great anxiety.

Muhammadans and the British Government.

2. The Zamindar (Lahore), of the 16th January 1912, publishes some verses from one "Anjum," of Gya, in which the writer says that, although (Indian) Muhammadans are living far from their co-religionists in Tripoli and Persia, still, bound as they are to the latter by the chain of Islam, they cannot but feel uneasy when they hear accounts of troubles and misfortunes befalling them. Continuing, he deplores the want of the sense of honour and shame in Muhammadans; and says that Europe has trampled on Morocco, the condition of Persia is pitiable, the fate of Turkey is trembling in the balance, and decline has overtaken Islam. He also ridicules the vaunted philanthropy of Europe, which has destroyed Morocco and is now practising oppression on innocent Persia; deplores the abject condition of Islam, the star of the glory of which was at one time in the ascendant; and says that there is nobody for Muhammadans to appeal to in their present distress except the British Government.

The Pioneer and the Times on Persian affairs and Indian Muhammadans.

3. The Zamindar (Lahore), of the 13th January 1912, has a note entitled "Poison and its antidote." It is a pity, says the paper, that semi-official organs like the Pioneer and the London Times are writing about Persian affairs in a manner calculated to deeply offend the feelings of Muhammadans. After stating that the Pioneer's remark, viz., "we have not the least care for the religious feelings of Muhammadans," and the Times' remark, viz., "one drop of the blood of a European soldie is more valuable than the liberty of the entire Persian nation," (sic.) are poisoned arrows inflicting on the feelings of Muhammadans wounds calculated to remain unhealed for centuries, the writer says that he holds, as an article of faith, that the British public, in spite of their imperial power and greatness, are naturally just and righteous. Hence it is that while the writings of the Pioneer and the Times are as poison to Muslims, those of the Daily Chronicle and the Daily News serve as an antidote. The paper then publishes extracts from the papers named in support of its assertion, and says that now, when the Islamic world is enveloped in the darkness of calamities and distress, the efforts of Lords Curzon and Lamington and the sympathetic attitude of truth-loving and sincere papers like the Daily Chronicle and the Daily News serve as balm to the wounded hearts of Muslims. If Russia had taken possession of the whole of Persia, Muhammadans would have silently mourned over Persia's fate. They would have thought that the ruin of poor, unfortunate Persia was due to her inability to withstand her enemies, and that her weakness had laid her open to the aggression and brigandage of the Czar of Russia. But now their hearts are deeply wounded when they see a short-sighted British statesman making common cause with the brigand Emperor, and doing a thing which is causing the most widespread grief throughout the whole Muslim world. Is it quite in accordance with Sir Edward Grey's political faith that, in addition to foreigners, even Englishmen should be afforded an opportunity of alleging that the British Lion is a partner in the unholy conspiracy? As British subjects, it is the duty of Muhammadans to strain every nerve to maintain the greatness of the British Lion, and to see that the national honour of the British people is not lowered in the estimation of the world. But this is only possible if they have sufficient confidence in themselves, and also strength enough to prove a pillar of iron for Great Britain in time of need.

(b)—Home.

Lord Crewe and self-government in India.

4. The Paisa Akhbar (Lahore), of the 15th January 1912, has an article headed "Lord Crewe, the Secretary of State for India, and the dream of self-government in this country." It is generally believed, says the paper, that there is every probability of a liberal and broad-minded statesman like Lord Crewe conferring self-government and extraordinary rights on the Indian people, and some people even go the length of saying that it would not be surprising if, in a decade or so, Indians are granted the colonial form of self-government. There can be no doubt that the establishment of the colonial system of self-government in India at the present moment is considered to be further beyond the range of practical politics than the annulment of the "settled fact" of the Partition of Bengal; but when the latter apparent impossibility has been rendered possible, there appears to be every probability of self-government being conferred on the country. It is quite possible that some people may still cling to the belief that England will never be so far guided by "statesmen of the Congress school" as to confer Swaraj on Indians without consulting the views of seven crores of Muhammadans on the subject; but they should bear in mind that the feelings of Muhammadans were totally disregarded in bringing about the annulment of the Partition of Bengal. There is, however, every possibility of the "statesmen of the Congress school" inducing Muhammadan leaders to establish a modus operandi on the basis of mutual understanding; and a rapprochement between the two communities in a manner calculated to safeguard Muslim rights and interests is eminently desirable.

Government and Indian Muhammadans.

5. The Zamindar (Lahore), of the 17th January 1912, has a note entitled "A ray of hope." It says that sometime ago the Pharaoh-like and God-forgetting Editor of the London Times made the heart-lacerating remark that one drop of a European soldier's blood was more valuable than the liberty and independence of the entire Persian kingdom. This, it adds, took the Muhammadan world by surprise; seeing that the paper named is known to represent the thoughts and feelings of the statesmen of England. At the present moment, England has the pride and distinction of governing more Muhammadans than any other country. Under these circumstances it is natural that Muhammadans should feel deeply hurt if a member of the ruling race goes to the length of attacking Muhammadans or Muhammadan countries in the manner the Times has done. Accordingly, Indian Muhammadans held meetings in different cities in India to protest against the Times' remarks referred to above and forwarded an account of the proceedings of those meetings to the Imperial and the Indian Governments, as also to Sir Edward Grey, with the result that the eyes of the Times were opened and it has now come to realise the errors of its ways. Not only has the Times changed its attitude, but Sir Edward Grey also has been forced to admit his mistake. This should serve as an object lesson to Indian Muhammadans, who are convinced that Englishmen alone in the whole of Europe are apt to raise their voices in support of justice and good faith whenever they come to know the true condition of affairs.

The Zamindar and Muhammadans.

6. The Hindustan (Lahore), of the 12th January 1912, publishes a paragraph headed "Advice to Muhammadans to follow in the erring footsteps of Bengalis." It publishes an extract from the Zamindar in which the paper named urges Muhammadans to learn a lesson from the struggles of Bengalis and their tenacity in carrying on an agitation against the Partition (vide paragraph 8 of Selections No. 2), and says that the form in which the article has been laid before crores of Muhammadans is not only dangerous in the extreme, but open to grave objection. Bengalis, it adds, resorted to agitation in order to secure the annulment of the Partition; but the Zamindar urges Muhammadans to do likewise, without telling them the end in view. Does it show that the paper named is wise or wishes the Muhammadan community well, when it exhorts Muhammadans to act as Bengalis unfortunately did and bring upon themselves deportations, imprisonment, and hanging? When Bengalis did this they were sharply reprimanded; now Muhammadans are incited to do exactly the same to gain their ends and are told that the Bengalis, who resorted to illegal methods and paid the penalty of the law, have performed a "sacrifice" which is worthy of imitation by the Muhammadan community. Can it be doubted that these teachings are bad and calculated to cause a breach of the peace? It is, however, a matter for satisfaction that many sober-minded Muhammadans are opposed to such teachings. It is the duty of Government, which is responsible for the peace and well-being of the country, to put an end to such writings. Indeed, all reasonable persons are expressing surprise at its inaction.

An objectionable poem.

7. The Hindustan (Lahore), of the 12th January 1912, has a note entitled "Attempts to inflame the minds of Muhammadans." Attempts, says the paper, are being made on all sides to inflame the minds of Muhammadans. Dr. Muhammad Iqbal, who once sung the song "Our India is the best of all countries in the world," subsequently sang in a different tune, the burden of which was "we are Muhammadans, and the entire world is our home." He has now descended into the arena again and has tried in a poem to inflame the minds of his co-religionists in language at once guarded and significant. But whatever the language may be, there can be no denying the fact that a secret motive inspires the poem. This cannot be concealed from the eyes of those who are in a position to see. The paper then goes on to publish a few verses from the Doctors' poem entitled "Glad tidings of morning."

An India Council for the King.

8. The following is from the Panjabee (Lahore), of 18th January 1912:—

"The Pioneer makes a novel suggestion that the King should have an India Council and that the present Cabinet, being a party body, is not competent to advise His Majesty in Indian matters. It is only an unbridled Anglo-Indian paper that can put forward a claim so palpably absurd as this. If the King and his constitutional advisers can deal with the affairs of the whole British Empire, they are certainly competent to deal with India. But the Pioneer's plea is to rise superior to the party influences of the Home politics. But in so doing it is asking for some form of specialisation of Indian control and thus to secure the supremacy to Anglo-Indian policy and methods. That would be a calamity for India; for what abiding good we have been enjoying is the effect of direct Parlimentary control of India. 'It is right and necessary,' says the Allahabad paper, 'that the executive power in India should have the power of swift and occasionally secret decision.' Why? If this is the trend of Anglo-Indian thought produced as a consequence of the Royal visit, we must deplore the sad use to which the great event is put. We rather think that as a consequence of the Royal visit India is to be governed for the benefit of Indians and they should have a constantly increasing share in it."

The Hindu-Muhammadan problem.

9. The following is from the Panjabee (Lahore) of 20th January 1912 :—

"So long as the wind blew uninterruptedly in the direction indicated by the Muslim League, the talk of a Hindu-Muslim rapproachement was gall and wormwood to the 'forwards' among the Indian followers of the Crescent. As soon as the wind has veered round, and refuses to follow the directions of the Muslim League, everybody in the Muslim League camp has begun to talk of a 'change of policy' with regard to 'other communities,' particularly the Hindus. Apparently policies and principles are like achkans and angrakhas to be changed with every variation in the temperature, however sudden or accidental. Almost everybody who is anybody in the Muslim League camp—who, on the eve of the Coronation Darbar, would have boxed your ears if you had asked him for a change of policy—loudly advocated a change of policy, even to the extent of embracing the Hindus, as soon as the Royal announcement modifying the Partition of Bengal was made. The Hindus have never courted a quarrel with the Muhammadans. Rather it may be said to their credit that they have sought peace with their Muslim fellow-countrymen, and have tried to maintain it, even at the sacrifice of their own interests. If they have of late given up the job, at least in some parts of India, it is due to the utter hopelessness of the task. More than once during the last quarter of a century occasions have arisen on which Hindus and Muhammadans have solemnly entered into a bond, so to say, to stand by each other in future; but they have proved only temporary or rather accidental alliances which have been brought to an abrupt termination by our Muslim friends as soon as circumstances have arisen promising more butter on their side of the loaf. History seems to be repeating itself on this occasion also, and it is for our Muslim League friends to see that it does not repeat itself quite to that extent it did on former occasions. For the wind, whether in the physical or the political world, is proverbially variable, and the direction it has taken to-day may not be maintained to-morrow. Policies and principles are things which are expected to be more stable than weathercocks.

"The above warning is prompted by the repetition at the present moment of a curious phenomenon which has characterised every attempt at rapprochement from the Muslim camp in the past. They have always begun by laying the whole blame for Hindu-Muslim hold-aloofness at the doors of the Hindus. The Muslims have always been the aggrieved party and the Hindus the 'offenders.' On this occasion the old game—whose resurrection at this particular moment is ominous—is being played with a vengeance. In the course of a long communication to the Muslim Review of Allahabad a 'Plain speaker' gives a detailed list of Muslim grievances against the Hindus which, he gravely informs the world, stand in the way of a Hindu-Muslim rapprochement. The alleged complaints, which are on the lips of more than one Muslim friend of ours, are characteristic of one who is at a loss to explain his own conduct in a doubtful business and tries to hide his confusion in incoherent expressions at other people's expense. So long as Hindus and Muhammadans, says the writer in the Muslim Review, studiously abstain from eating together or inter-marrying with each other, the unity of Hindus and Muhammadans would be a remote chance. This is seeking conciliation on impossible grounds. There has of late been a movement among the 'forward' school of Muslims not to take any food 'contaminated' by the touch of a Hindu. This, we are told, is in protest against the Hindu custom not to take food at the hands of a non-Hindu. The fact is conveniently forgotten that it is not from the hands of Muhammadans alone that the Hindus take no food, but at those of all non-Hindus, aye even at those of their own co-religionists belonging to different castes. The same regarding interdining and intermarrying. Seeking unity with the Hindus till the latter might take to dining with Muhammadans and give their sons and daughters in marriage to Muslims is tantamount to seeking no unity at all. Because two communities do not interdine or intermarry, that is no reason why they should be constantly at loggerheads with each other! The absence of interdining or intermarriage is really not so serious a barrier to the cultivation of brotherly, or at least friendly, relations, at any rate politically, between two communities destined to claim the same country as their own for all time to come.

"In fact, the Hindus and Muslims, especially the large masses, have ever lived in amity and concord, and whatever there has been of late of estrangement and discord has its origin in the development of a sudden and selfish hankering among a section of educated Muhammadans for a 'larger share' of official favours. Thirty years ago things were different, but then Sir Sayed Ahmed thought Hindus and Muhammadans as his two eyes, and had seen no motive to do away with one of these in order to see only one side of things. In this connection we cannot do better than see what a Muslim Leaguer himself, in this supreme moment of rude awakening, has to say regarding things as they were then and as they are now. In the course of a letter to the Pioneer Mr. S. Raza Ali, Secretary, District Muslim League, Moradabad, writes :—

"'We, Indian Mussalmans, have been pursuing a definite and deliberate policy which has resulted in an almost total estrangement between our Hindu fellow-subjects and ourselves. Thirty years ago people certainly had greater respect for religion than they have to-day, but the distinction between a Hindu and a Muslim was practically unknown outside the sphere of strictly religious matters. Everything is so changed now-a-days.'

" Mr. Raza Ali is one of the high priests of the separatist propaganda and has done his level best to keep Hindus and Muhammadans apart in all matters pertaining to their common national interests. Yet such is the chastening effect of an unexpected blow that he has relapsed to sobriety with a bound and has come out with the truth, the whole truth, regarding the situation. We read—

"'Now, who is responsible for the feeling in the country? Of course, the Mussalmans say this is due to the aggressiveness of the Hindus, whose desire is predominant to be in every walk of life. But when the country is freed from this scourge of religious bitterness, I am afraid the future historian will have to apportion the major portion of the blame on the minor community.'

" There is another significant confession :—

"' Our Hindu fellow-subjects may have a legitimate grievance against us because we lavished on our co-religionists of Turkey and Persia the love that was the due of our neighbours, or because we lived for generations on the banks of the Ganges and the Jumna, yet we always dreamed of the Euphrates and the Tigris.'

" This an obvious dawn of wisdom which we hope no circumstances will arise to quench on the horizon. Mr. Raza Ali thinks that the dreams of Pan-Islamism are going to vanish with Turkey and Persia, and since British policy 'cannot take into consideration the feelings of the Muslim subjects of the Empire,' the time has come for a change of policy with regard to Hindus. The Hindu leaders, he thinks, desire unity, but 'they want it in reality, not in name.' Exactly. The solution of the Hindu-Muslim problem, he says, would afford considerable relief to the Government. That also is true. It is also the King's wish. His Imperial Majesty's farewell message to India, understood in its proper spirit, carries a distinct hint in this direction. There must have been something in the special invitation to the Aga Khan, the high priest of the separatist propaganda, at the Imperial departure at Bombay. Indeed, all indications point to the desirability of our Muslim League friends realising the blunder of separatism."

10. In an article headed "Nawab Vikar-ul-Mulk's views" the Observer (Lahore), of 20th January 1912, makes the following remarks :—

The annulment of the Partition of Bengal.

* * * * * * * *

" As for the main issue itself—the revocation of the Partition—we have to state that it has unquestionably given rise to disappointment among the Muslims of Eastern Bengal, and to irritation throughout the rest of Muslim India. Without questioning the equitable character of the basic principle of Lord Curzon's policy, Lord Hardinge's Government have striven to over-emphasise a merely sentimental grievance and to lay unction to the Bengalee sore, without, as it appears to the Musalmans, paying correspondingly great attention to Muslim sentiment and taking full note of the sacrifice which the change is bound to exact from the Musalmans of the United Provinces. Their irritation is all the keener for the abruptness of the move and the unexpectedness of the manner in which the change has been effected without consulting Muhammadan opinion. The signal triumph of Bengalee agitation, despite repeated official assurances to the contrary, has created quite a ferment in Muslim circles; and Nawab Vikar-ul-Mulk, the worthy disciple on whom the mantle of the great Syed has fallen, was certainly within his rights in drawing forcible attention to the feeling. It may be news to Mr. Siraj-ud-din that as a result of the new situation, one of the Vice-Presidents of the All-India Muslim League has openly gone over to the Congress fold; that a public meeting at Calcutta has discussed the question of the Muslim attitude towards the National Congress; and that many voices have been raised, asking for a reconsideration of Muhammadan policy and re-adjustment of the political focus of the Indian Musalmans. And yet Mr. Siraj-ud-din would have us believe that Nawab Vikar-ul-Mulk stands alone in his criticism of the measure.

" Of course, the innate good sense of the Muslim community has asserted itself; and on second thoughts they have recovered their normal composure. The fact that the change has been proclaimed from Royal lips is the deciding factor in the situation. Though disappointed, they accept the announcement as marking the consummation of the will and pleasure of their sovereign, and as such they bow their heads in obedience to the Imperial command, in the confident hope that suitable measures will also be taken to safeguard their vital interests and to assure to them the continuance of the advantages which had accrued on the separation of Eastern Bengal from Western Bengal."

The Punjab Council Regulations.

11. The following is from the Observer (Lahore) of 20th January 1912 :—

* * * * *

"But although the 'settled fact' of the Bengal Partition has been unsettled, the Musalmans still place too much reliance on the sense of justice and fidelity to promise of the Government of India to entertain any fears on the score of their separate representation. They cannot for obvious reasons support the Hindu campaign against the regulations. It is against their interests and, they feel, against the real interests and political progress of the whole country.

"But with regard to the regulations of the Punjab Legislative Council, the Musalmans are at one with the Hindu critics in wishing for a re-consideration of the Regulations of the Provincial Council. This is the only Province which grants no communal representation to either section of the Indian community. In spite of the repeated representations of the Muhammadans, the anomaly has not yet been removed. It was by the merest accident that last time the Muhammadans secured three out of the five seats open to election in the Provincial Council. The Hindus have, however, closed their ranks now, and it is almost certain that next time Musalmans will hardly get more than a seat or two by election out of the seven seats now proposed to be filled in by this method. The Punjab Legislative Council consists of 25 members, of whom 14 are non-officials. Musalmans constitute 54 per cent. of the population and are, therefore, entitled to nearly 8 of the 14 non-official seats. They are, however, content with the 7 seats allotted to them and do not grudge a slightly disproportionate representation to other communities. When, however, it is remembered that Government has recently limited the field of nomination by throwing open two seats to the District Boards, and that unless the regulations are modified, the Muhammadan elected members are certain to be in an overwhelming minority, if any are elected at all next time, it is not unnatural that they should appeal more strongly than ever for a removal of the anomaly.

"This state of affairs can be remedied in one of three ways. The Government may follow the rules regulating the general elections of most of the first class municipalities and grant communal electorates to both Hindus and Muhammadans. To this the Musalmans would not object, provided their interests are duly safeguarded. Secondly, the examples of other Provinces may be followed and sufficient separate representation granted to the Musalmans alone by the constitution of separate Muhammadan electorates. This would be welcomed by the Musalmans and bring the Punjab in line with other Provinces. Thirdly, existing electorates might be required to return Hindus (including the Sikhs) and Muhammadans alternately. This should meet with the approbation of all who object to the creation of an 'iron wall' between Hindus and Muhammadans. It would minimise friction and lead to the election of men liked by both Hindus and Musalmans. It is, at any rate, incumbent on the Government to modify a system of elections which is unpopular with both Hindus and Muhammadans and gives satisfaction to none."

Sind and the Punjab.

12. The following is from the Tribune (Lahore), of 24th January 1912 :—

"Vehement protests, but not very vocal, are being made in Sind against the amalgamation of that province with the Punjab. We have been indignantly assailed for making such a proposal, but beyond mere negation all our arguments have remained unanswered. The Punjab is backward—coming from Sind such a charge is mildly surprising—the Punjab Government is backward, the Punjabis are selfish and they will swamp Sind, and so on and so forth. Well, the Punjab is so backward that there are five fully equipped first grade colleges in Lahore, a distinction which belongs to no other city in India except Calcutta. Although an inland city Lahore is a great industrial centre and business is expanding in every direction. We have not the slightest intention of seeking to benefit the Punjab at the cost of Sind, or of subordinating the interests of that Province to those of the Punjab. What we propose is a scheme of mutual benefit which will be helpful to Sind and the Punjab alike. We have said that Sind has derived no benefit from the connection with Bombay, and a mere denial of this statement does not prove the contrary. Sind is severely let alone and has no share in the progress and prosperity that have come to the Bombay Presidency. In the professions, in the public service, there is no comparison between Bombay and Sind. Only one Sindhi holds the office of Sessions Judge. No Sindhi has ever been appointed Collector and none will ever be appointed. It is contended that the education Sindhis receive is superior to that of the Punjabis. Perhaps that is the reason why only one or two Sindhis have passed the Indian Civil Service examination while more than half-a-dozen Punjabis are in that service, although the British connection with Sind is earlier than with the Punjab. May we inquire how many Sindhis have passed the Indian Medical Service examination and what is the number of Sindhi Assistant Surgeons? The Punjabis are so backward that the largest number of Indians in the Indian Medical Service are Punjabis, Punjabi Civil Surgeons and Assistant Surgeons can be counted by the score while some of the best physicians and surgeons in the country are Punjabis. The Punjabis have availed themselves of every opportunity open to them and there are splendid examples of associated effort among them.

They are not to blame if the Punjab Government has not kept pace with the people. The amalgamation of Sind, as we have pointed out, must inevitably react on the Government which would be improved directly. The public opinion of Karachi and Sind and the non-official European opinion of Karachi would make themselves felt while the claims of Karachi to development will never be ignored. United Sind and the Punjab may become a great industrial and commercial Province, especially after the construction of the Trans-Persian Railway. Even otherwise the Punjab is making headway, but Sind will never be a partner of Bombay in its greatness and achievement."

III.—Native States.

Kashmir affairs.

13. The Rajput Gazette (Lahore), of the 13th January 1912, publishes an article headed "The Paisa Akhbar and the Jammu and Kashmir State." The Paisa Akhbar, it says, publishes an account of a case, in which the accused, one Raja Hayat Ali, a Musalman rais of the Kashmir State, and others were sentenced to death by the State Courts. The Hon'ble Mian Muhammad Shafi, who advocated the cause of the accused and who felt convinced that justice was not done to the latter, submitted an appeal to the Government of India through the Resident of the State. The Government of India, however, finding the accused wholly innocent, ordered their acquittal; but they were not released from jail until the Hon'ble Mian Muhammad Shafi had moved the Assistant Resident at Sialkot.

Commenting on the above the paper says that, simply because the complainant in the above case was a Hindu, the Paisa Akhbar tries to exaggerate the alleged injustice and hardship caused to the accused. In doing so it is guilty of creating disunion, and of widening the gulf between Hindus and Muhammadans.

IV.—Kine-killing.

Kine-killing and Muhammadans.

14. The Jhang Sial (Jhang), of the 13th January 1912, has a paragraph headed "Kine-killing and Muhammadans." Now, says the paper, that Muhammadans are going to effect a change in their policy it is necessary to tell them plainly that, so long as they do not give up slaughtering cows there is no probability of amicable relations being established between them and Hindus.

V.—Native Societies and Religious Matters.

The Gurukula.

15. The Loyal Gazette (Lahore), of the 14th (received on the 25th) January 1912, publishes a leaderette headed "The Gurukula has been exposed." While establishing the Gurukula, says the paper, Mahatma Munshi Ram tried his best to convince the Arya public that the institution named would create eminently learned scholars who would help in the dissemination of the Vedic religion throughout the length and breadth of the world. It is for this reason that he succeeded in collecting lakhs of rupees from Arya Samajists. How far, however, the institution named has helped in the attainment of the end the Lala had in view can be gathered from the statements which five Arya Samajists of Kasauli communicated on the 15th September 1910 to Lala Ram Krishen, President of the Arya Priti Nidhi Sabha, after visiting the institution personally. They also embodied the result in a book in which they have proved the following:—

(1) That gross illegalities are committed (Aryashahi) in the administration of the Gurukula.

(2) That all gentlemen and learned persons invited to the Gurukula are insulted.

(3) That the students and teachers of the institution are in the habit of committing unnatural offences.

(4) That students of the Gurukula are in the habit of quarrellin with each other.

(5) That unnatural offences are committed by the students with each other.

Next it reproduces the communication which one Pandit Atma Ram, Bedi of Behbiyal, Ambala District, published in a recent issue of the Indar, in which the writer states that he sent his four sons to the above institution, and that when they returned he found that not only had they made no progress, but that they had lost even their health. The paper concludes by urging all those who are champions of morality to join with the Editor of the Indar in protecting the children of their simple-minded fellow-countrymen.

A complaint against the Afghan newspaper.

16. The Jhang Sial (Jhang), of the 13th January 1912, publishes a paragraph entitled "Fresh mischief-making by the Afghan—worthy of the attention of Government." Some time ago, says the paper, the Afghan called Hindus by the opprobrious names of "cowards," Dhoti Parshads, &c., and charged the latter with promoting their advancement by sending their womenfolk to the authorities. The charge in question was not an ordinary one, seeing that it was levelled against Hindu women, who used to throw themselves into the fire in order to save themselves from dishonour. As a consequence, Hindus raised an outcry, and they were justified in doing so. Questions were asked on the subject in the Imperial Legislative Council, and the Afghan was going to be crushed when the Frontier Government came to its rescue and saved its vile existence from complete destruction. Instead of learning a lesson from this it has become even more mischievous than before. Commenting on an article appearing in the Shanti (Rawalpindi), in which the paper named says that among Hindus it is discreditable for a man to resort to bigamy during the lifetime of his first wife, the Afghan says that the holy Vedas also enjoin that brothers should, if they can manage to live in peace, marry a common wife, and that if they can sink all their differences the residents of a whole village should remain satisfied with a single wife. The Afghan then goes on to say "O, Hindu Ranis and the goddesses of chastity! God has given you wealth and every comfort. He has also endowed you with great beauty. Why are you then niggardly (in your dealing with others)? . . . . . What is their use if you do not show generosity, courage and forbearance and satisfy the wants of others? . . . . ."

Commenting on the above extract the Jhang Sial says that the Afghan has shown bad taste in ridiculing "Hindu Ranis and goddesses of chastity" by telling them that it is high time that they revelled in the pleasures of youth and committed promiscuous adultery. After remarking that the Afghan would never have dared to attack Hindus as it has done now if it had been punished for its conduct in the past, the Jhang Sial urges the Government of the Frontier Province to take steps to prevent the Afghan from publishing similar remarks in the future.

VI.—Legislation.

The Punjab Tenancy Act Amendment Bill.

17. The following is from the Tribune (Lahore), of 26th September 1912:—

"Among the Bills that are upon the anvil of the Punjab Legislative Council is the Punjab Tenancy Act Amendment Bill. That the state of the present law is highly unsatisfactory and anomalous can be readily admitted. As Mr. Justice Rattigan observed in 24 P. R. 1907, it often leads to a travesty of justice, which is not surprising since the plaint and the plea are within the mutually exclusive jurisdiction of two different courts, civil and revenue, neither of which has the jurisdiction over the entire dispute. The Chief Court accordingly recommended that the law be amended to remove the anomaly, and specifically suggested that the civil court be allowed jurisdiction over the entire dispute between the litigating parties. This was, however, not accepted by the Local Government, which has since introduced the aforesaid amending Bill excluding the jurisdiction of the Civil Courts and enlarging that of the Revenue Courts. The Hon'ble Mr. Shadi Lal in his able and well-reasoned Note of Dissent made a strong protest against this attempted transference of the legitimate work of the Civil Court to that of the Revenue Court. In every civilised system of law, as he pointed out with great force, it is the nature of the suit that determines the forum and not the plea of the defendant. But in the Punjab it seems everything is being made topsy-turvy. Here the Government in its anxiety to confer upon the Revenue Courts an extensive jurisdiction, unheard of in any other province, is going to ignore altogether the nature of the suit. It is thereby going to do violence not only to every well-established principle of law, but to destroy the rights of the Civil Courts. Even the Civil & Military Gazette, which is usually a faithful henchman of the local executive, is constrained to characterise the remedy proposed by the Local Government as a 'bizarre' one. It says that the probable effect of the Bill does not appear to have been grasped by the Local Government, and requires its careful and close attention. It rightly points out that 'the mistrust of the capacities of the Civil Courts implied in the Bill is a very grave matter, and if it is justified their early closure is imperatively called for.' The Chief Court, however, has full confidence in the Civil Courts. The local Anglo-Indian newspaper does not think that the Punjab Government really mistrusts the Civil Courts. It only seeks a way out of the impasse. But the remedy proposed is worse than the disease. The possibility of the province, as pointed out by it, running the risk of finding itself under two distinct legal systems, is indeed grave. There is, however, a simple and ready way out, though it is strange to find it not occurring to the local Anglo-Indian newspaper. It is to make the jurisdiction of the Civil Courts in this province stand on an equality of footing with the jurisdiction of Civil Courts in other provinces and to amend section 73 (3) of the Punjab Tenancy Act so that the Civil Court may have jurisdiction over the entire dispute between the litigating parties. This was recommended by the Chief Court and would be heartily welcomed by the litigants. The course proposed by the Civil & Military Gazette of having the different branches of the case decided by the courts having at present jurisdiction over them is open to the objection of delaying the decision of the case. Already the law's delay is proverbial and we should be chary of any further addition to it. The best and simplest method is to let the Civil Court have jurisdiction over the entire dispute between the parties."

The Press Act.

18. The Jhang Sial (Jhang), of the 13th January 1912, publishes an article headed "The Press Act also is worthy of being repealed." After remarking that now, when 'a settled fact' like the Partition of Bengal has been annulled, Indian journalists feel confident that the day will soon come when the Press Act will also be repealed, the paper says that it is much to be deplored that journalists are regarded with suspicion and are required to furnish securities like ordinary felons. There can be no denying the fact, it adds, that some journalists have overstepped the bounds of moderation; but it is unwise to punish the entire Press for the faults of one or two of its members. The Press Act makes no distinction between the innocent and the guilty; and even those who expressed their satisfaction at the passing of the measure have now begun to decry it. Since the passing of the above law scores of papers that were noted for their unstinted loyalty to Government have been suppressed. As a matter of fact, Government intended to crush mischievous journalists; but the latter have managed to keep themselves in the back-ground and still continue to make attacks (? on Government) from behind the scenes. The law has failed to mend the ways of these mischievous persons, although it has caused immense trouble to noble-minded journalists. Moreover, the dread of the Criminal Investigation Department has so far enervated them as to make it difficult for them to see which of their articles can be classed as objectionable. After remarking that the entire press is unanimously opposed to the Press Act and that the National Congress has, in its recent sitting, adopted a resolution to the same effect, the Editor urges the Government of India to repeal the Act in honour of His Majesty's visit to India. The paper also publishes a cartoon in which an eagle labelled "The Press Act" is shown clutching the turbans of two Indian journalists in its claws. The journalists, while glancing backwards at the eagle, are on their bended knees in an attitude of supplication before His Majesty the King-Emperor, who is about to board a ship in the offing. The letter press is as follows:—"The journalists are praying with folded hands to His Majesty to repeal the Press Act before his departure, so that they may be released from the bloody claws of the law which has endangered their honour and prestige."

VII.—General Administration.

(a)—Judicial.

A complaint.

19. The Hindustan (Lahore), of the 12th January 1912, has a note entitled "The new stringent rules restricting the enrolment of pleaders in the Punjab." It refers to the rules recently promulgated by the Chief Court restricting the enrolment of pleaders, and says that they are calculated to cause serious disappointment and loss to those educated persons who intend to follow the legal profession. After remarking that it will be unjust and unkind to deprive those pleaders of the right of practising in Courts who have passed the prescribed law examinations, the paper says that the imposition of the above restrictions at a time when every Punjabi hopes that the Punjab Chief Court will be raised to the status of a High Court is likely to fill their minds with doubts and misgivings. The manner in which the announcement of the above rules has suddenly been made clearly shows that no regard whatsoever has been paid to public opinion. There is, however, room for modification of the rules; and this can be done by allowing those persons who have passed the law examination to practice in the following year if they cannot be permitted to practise in the same year.

LAHORE:

The 27th January 1912.

C. STEAD,

Assistant to the Deputy Inspector General of Police, Criminal Investigation Department, Punjab.

Punjab Government Press, Lahore—1·2·12—106—107—C. D.

[ Confidential. ]

[ Vol. XXV. ] SELECTIONS [ No. 5. ]

FROM THE

NATIVE NEWSPAPERS

PUBLISHED IN THE PUNJAB.

Examined up to 3rd February 1912.

---

CONTENTS.

Page.

I.—Politics.

(a) Foreign—

1. Turco-Italian war (Zamindar) ... ... 67
2. The Turco-Italian war (Zamindar) ... ... ib.
3. The Turco-Italian war and the Russian aggression in Persia (Zamindar) ... ... ... ib.
4. The Englishman and Muhammadans (Paisa Akhbar) ... ... ... ... 68
5. Capture of Turks on English and French vessels by Italians (Observer) ... ... ... ib.

(b) Home—

6. The Governor of Madras (Tribune) ... ... 69
7. Government and Muhammadans (Curzon Gazette and Musalman) ... ... ... ib.
8. Muhammadans and their future policy (Zamindar) ib.
9. Alleged unreasonable demands of the Muhammadans of Bengal (Tribune) ... ... 70
10. Muhammadans and Hindus (Parkash) ... 71
11. The Tribune and the Nawab Vicar-ul-Mulk (Observer) ... ... ... ... 72

II.—Afghanistan and Trans-Frontier.

Nil.

III.—Native States.

12. Mr. Keir Hardie and the Gaekwar of Baroda (Tribune) ... ... ... 72
13. The new ruler of Nabha (Observer) ... 73

IV.—Kine-killing.

Nil.

V.—Native Societies and Religious Matters.

Nil.

Page.

VI.—Legislation.

Nil.

VII.—General Administration.

(a) Judicial—

14. The Chief Court's Circular restricting the enrolment of Pleaders and Muhammadans (Zamindar) 73

(b) Police—

Nil.

Nil.

(c) Municipal and Cantonment affairs—

Nil.

(d) Education —

Nil.

(e)—Agriculture and questions affecting the land—

Nil.

(f) Railways and Communications—

15. Entertainment given to the Manager, North-Western Railway, by the Indian staff (Tribune) 73

(g) Postal matters—

Nil.

(h) Miscellaneous—

16. Complaint against Mr. Zafar Ali, Editor of the Zamindar (Millat) ... ... ... 74
17. The Edward Gazette newspaper (Edward Gazette) ... ... ... ... 75

LIST OF NEWSPAPERS AND PERIODICALS EXAMINED BY THE SPECIAL BRANCH AS IT STOOD ON THE 3RD FEBRUARY 1912.

| No. | Name. | Locality. | Name of Publisher. | Circulation. |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| | ENGLISH. | | | |
| | DAILY. | | | |
| 1 | Tribune ... | Lahore ... | Bihari Lal ... | 1,758 copies. |
| | TRI-WEEKLY. | | | |
| 2 | Panjabee ... | Lahore ... | Mul Chand ... | 2,424 copies. |
| | BI-WEEKLY. | | | |
| 3 | Observer ... | Lahore ... | Nizam-ud-din ... | 1,000 copies. |
| 4 | Punjab Times and Frontier News. | Rawalpindi ... | J. R. Thapur ... | 200 „ |
| | WEEKLY. | | | |
| 5 | Arya Patrika ... | Lahore ... | Devi Chand ... | 650 copies. |
| 6 | Harbinger ... | Do. ... | Durga Parshad ... | 300 „ |
| 7 | Khalsa Advocate ... | Amritsar ... | Bahadar Singh ... | 752 „ |
| | MONTHLY. | | | |
| 8 | D. A.-V. College Magazine... | Lahore ... | Saraswati Nath ... | 1,000 copies. |
| 9 | Forman Christian College Notes. | Do. ... | ... | ... |
| 10 | Jijnasu ... | Do. ... | Ishwar Das ... | ... |
| 11 | Practical Medicine ... | Delhi ... | ... | ... |
| 12 | Punjab Educational Journal | Lahore ... | R. B. Mohan Lal ... | 700 copies. |
| 13 | Punjab Mission News ... | Do. ... | Revd. Wigram ... | 250 „ |
| 14 | Ravi ... | Do. ... | Mr. B. M. Jones ... | ... |
| 15 | Review of Religions ... | Qadian (Gurdaspur) ... | Sadr Anjuman Ahmadia, Qadian. | 800 copies. |
| 16 | Science Grounded Religion... | Lahore ... | Dev Rattan ... | 25 „ |
| 17 | Teacher ... | Dinga (Gujrat) ... | Kanhaya Singh ... | 200 „ |
| | URDU. | | | |
| | DAILY. | | | |
| 18 | Akhbar-i-'Am ... | Lahore ... | Govind Sahai ... | 630 copies. |
| 19 | Paisa Akhbar ... | Do. ... | Abdul Aziz ... | 1,011 „ |
| 20 | Watan ... | Do. ... | Muhammad Insha Alla ... | ... |
| 21 | Zamindar ... | Do. ... | Zafar Ali Khan, B.A. ... | ... |
| | BI-WEEKLY. | | | |
| 22 | Vakil ... | Amritsar ... | Abdul Aziz ... | 1,970 copies. |
| | WEEKLY. | | | |
| 23 | Afghan ... | Peshawar ... | Saiyid Muhammad Abdulla | 500 copies. |
| 24 | Ahl-i-Hadis ... | Amritsar ... | Sanaulla ... | 925 „ |
| 25 | Ahluwalia Gazette ... | Do. ... | Lehna Singh ... | 500 „ |
| 26 | Army News ... | Ludhiana ... | Hira Lal & Co. ... | 1,300 „ |
| 27 | Arorbans Gazette ... | Amritsar ... | Labh Singh ... | ... |
| 28 | Arya Gazette ... | Lahore ... | Bhowani Das ... | 550 copies. |
| 29 | Badar ... | Qadian, Gurdaspur district | Muhammad Sadiq ... | 200 „ |

LIST OF NEWSPAPERS AND PERIODICALS EXAMINED BY THE SPECIAL BRANCH AS IT STOOD ON THE 3RD FEBRUARY 1912—CONTINUED.

| No. | Name. | Locality. | Name of Publisher. | Circulation. |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| | URDU—CONTINUED. | | | |
| | WEEKLY—continued. | | | |
| 30 | Bharat ... | Jullundur ... | Thakur Sheoratan Singh | ... |
| 31 | Civil and Military News ... | Ludhiana ... | Saiyid Muhammad ... | 1,325 copies. |
| 32 | Curzon Gazette ... | Delhi ... | Mirza Hairat ... | 111 „ |
| 33 | Delhi Gazette ... | Do. ... | Sajjad Husain ... | 200 „ |
| 34 | Edward Gazette ... | Abbott-abad ... | Muhammad Latif ... | 200 „ |
| 35 | Hakam ... | Qadian, Gurdaspur district | Yakub Ali ... | 900 „ |
| 36 | Haq ... | Delhi ... | Kasim Ali ... | 200 „ |
| 37 | Haq Pasand ... | Amritsar ... | Ram Nath ... | 382 „ |
| 38 | Hindu ... | Lahore ... | Hari Lal Sharma ... | ... |
| 39 | Hindustan ... | Do. ... | Ram Sarn Dutt ... | 8,070 copies. |
| 40 | Indar ... | Do. ... | Dharm Pal, B. A. ... | ... |
| 41 | Islam ... | Do. ... | Abdul Latif ... | 200 copies. |
| 42 | Jhang Sial ... | Jhang ... | Prabh Dyal ... | 2,262 „ |
| 43 | Kapurthala Akhbar ... | Kapurthala ... | Hamid Husain ... | 155 „ |
| 44 | Loyal Gazette ... | Lahore ... | Amar Singh ... | 200 „ |
| 45 | Lytton Gazette ... | Delhi ... | Bulaki Das ... | 1,000 „ |
| 46 | Milap ... | Lyallpur ... | Jawahar Lal ... | ... |
| 47 | Millat ... | Lahore ... | Shuja Ulla ... | 1,500 copies |
| 48 | Mister Gazette ... | Do. ... | Ali Bakhsh ... | 150 „ |
| 49 | Munir ... | Jhang ... | Hafiz Khuda Bakhsh ... | 200 „ |
| 50 | Musalman ... | Amritsar ... | Sana-ulla ... | 400 „ |
| 51 | Nur ... | Qadian, Gurdaspur district | Muhammad Yusaf ... | 200 „ |
| 52 | Nur Afshan ... | Ludhiana ... | Revd. Dr. E. M. Wherry | 500 „ |
| 53 | Paisa Akhbar ... | Lahore ... | Abdul Aziz ... | 8,377 „ |
| 54 | Parkash ... | Do. ... | Krishan ... | 1,723 „ |
| 55 | Punjab Advocate ... | Mianwali ... | Karm Chand, Bahl ... | 1,000 „ |
| 56 | Punjab Samachar ... | Lahore ... | Hira Lal ... | 705 „ |
| 57 | Rajput Gazette ... | Do. ... | Thakur Sukhram Das ... | 650 „ |
| 58 | Municipal Gazette and Sada-i-Hind. | Do. ... | Din Muhammad ... | 500 „ |
| 59 | Sadiq-ul-Akhbar ... | Bahawalpur ... | Maulvi Ata Ullah ... | 392 „ |
| 60 | Ditto ... | Rewari ... | Safdar Hussain ... | 200 „ |
| 61 | Sanatan Dharm Pracharak... | Amritsar ... | Rulia Ram ... | 200 „ |
| 62 | Shanti ... | Rawalpindi ... | Kishan Chand Mohan ... | 300 „ |
| 63 | Sialkot Paper ... | Sialkot ... | Todar Mal ... | 500 „ |
| 64 | Siraj-ul-Akhbar ... | Jhelum ... | Maulvi Fakir Muhammad | 450 „ |
| 65 | Tahzib-ul-Niswan ... | Lahore ... | Mumtaz Ali ... | 240 „ |

LIST OF NEWSPAPERS AND PERIODICALS EXAMINED BY THE SPECIAL BRANCH AS IT STOOD ON THE 3RD FEBRUARY 1912—CONCLUDED.

| No. | Name. | Locality. | Name of Publisher. | Circulation. |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| | URDU—CONCLUDED. | | | |
| | WEEKLY—concluded. | | | |
| 65 | Victoria Paper ... | Sialkot ... | Gian Chand ... | 600 copies. |
| 66 | Wafadar* ... | Lahore ... | Fazal-ud-din ... | 600 „ |
| 67 | Waqt ... | Do. ... | Ali Husain ... | 200 „ |
| 68 | Watan ... | Do. ... | Muhammad Insha Ullah... | 1,800 „ |
| 69 | Zamindar ... | Do. ... | Zafar Ali Khan, B.A. ... | 750 „ |
| | FORTNIGHTLY. | | | |
| 70 | Biwah Samachar ... | Lahore ... | Ram Chand ... | 300 copies. |
| 71 | Kam Dhenu ... | Ludhiana ... | Daulat Ram ... | 100 „ |
| 72 | Mohyal Gazette ... | Kala, Jhelum district ... | Mehta Sham Das ... | 250 „ |
| | MONTHLY. | | | |
| 73 | Arorbans Parkash ... | Lahore ... | Salig Ram ... | 200 copies. |
| 74 | Arya Musafir ... | Jullundur ... | Wazir Chand ... | 1,300 „ |
| 75 | Indar* ... | Lahore ... | Dharampal, B.A. ... | 3,000 „ |
| 76 | Jauhar ... | Amritsar ... | Muhammad Ismail Khan | 200 „ |
| 77 | Kakezai Social Reformer ... | Lahore ... | Fazl Din ... | 200 „ |
| 78 | Makhzan ... | Delhi ... | Abdul Kadir ... | 4,000 „ |
| 79 | Rafiq ... | Lahore ... | Charinji Lal ... | 500 „ |
| 80 | Sadhu ... | Do. ... | Sheobart Lal ... | 500 „ |
| 81 | Martand ... | Do. ... | Kanhya Lal ... | 250 „ |
| 82 | Raghbir Patrika ... | Do. ... | Prab Dial ... | 500 „ |
| 83 | Zaban ... | Delhi ... | Hamid Hasain ... | 500 „ |
| | GURMUKHI. | | | |
| | WEEKLY. | | | |
| 84 | Khalsa Sewak ... | Amritsar ... | Jiwan Singh ... | 1,000 copies. |
| 85 | Punjab Reporter ... | Do. ... | Ganda Singh ... | ... |
| 85 | Punjabi Surma ... | Lahore ... | Gian Chand ... | 1,000 copies. |

* Not received during the week.

I.—Politics.

(a)—Foreign.

The Turco-Italian War.

1. The Zamindar (Lahore), of the 19th January 1912, publishes a poem headed "A scene from the battlefield of Tripoli." The writer, a resident of Moradabad—whose name the paper has not been able to decipher—says that he is going to narrate the martyrdom of Tripolitans, the savage ignorance of Italians, and the heroic defence of the Turks. He characterises the war between the King of Italy and the Sultan as a struggle between infidelity and faith. The Italian block-heads, he adds, proud of their navy, gathered together like "thorns and dust," and, thinking that the coast of Tripoli could not be approached by the Turks, took possession of it. As a consequence, that part of the Sultan's territory was converted into an abode of "crows, kites and owls." An impertinent Italian, he adds, came forward and pulled down the Crescent-bearing flag of Turkey from the ramparts of "the Fort." "Ah! In a fit of rage he destroyed the crescent and caused it to roll in dust and blood. When the banner of Islam was destroyed in this way, the Kaaba came to be inhabited by idols. When, however, the world came to know of this unjustifiable oppression, the Mujahids came in torrents from Arabia, and Sennousis unfurled their banner in the desert. The news then spread that a blood-thirsty army and the warlike Anwar (Bey) had arrived on the battlefield; and that all would now be roused to activity." The Shaikh (Anwar Beg) arrived and delivered a speech in which he said:—"O upholders of Islam! These are the days of trial. Italians have come to practise oppression on Turks and Arabians and they desire to sweep Islam off the face of the earth. They have come to put a spoke in the wheel of Islam, and the time has come when we all should level them (Italians) to the dust." These words filled Muhammadans with excitement—so much so that they were all blinded with enthusiasm. They drowned all their thoughts in their sole desire for Jehad, and every zealous (lit. one who is ready to give his head) Muhammadan carried his life in his hands. The welkin rang with cries of "God is great" and every devoted Muslim was transported beyond all bounds by his anxiety to attain martyrdom. They (Muslims) then came on the battlefield like lions, uttering the Kalima. He (Anwar Bey) then challenged General Caneva and said:—"O Caneva! Come to the arena without loss of time if thou hast any claim to bravery. What art thou and what do we think of thy innumerable hosts? Success has always been on our side and victory follows us everywhere. We have no equals in bravery, and will sweep off thy head as if it were an ear of corn. Muhammadans have pronounced the azan (call for prayers) even in Christian Churches, and, while they will go straight to paradise after attaining martyrdom, thou wilt go to hell (lit. a filthy place)." These words enraged the black-faced (Caneva) who brought his troops to the ramparts of his fort; with the result that a terrible battle ensued between Italians numbering 20,000 on one side, and Turks numbering only 2,000, on the other. The battle raged fiercely and streams of Italian blood began to flow on the battlefield. In the end, the Turks were victorious and regained their lost forts and fortresses.

The Turco-Italian war.

2. The Zamindar (Lahore), of the 18th (received on the 26th) January 1912, publishes some verses entitled "The gist of Islamic feelings" in which mention is made of the Italian defeat at Derna and the rising of the Berbers and Sennousis. In conclusion the poet expresses surprise that the King-Emperor should meet the Czar, Kaiser, the Emperor of Austria and King of Italy; seeing that "there is no occasion for a sober man to join the society of four drunkards."

The Turco-Italian war and the Russian aggression in Persia.

3. The Zamindar (Lahore), of the 27th January 1912, publishes a communication from one Sayad Abd-us-Salam, of Delhi, headed "Russian and Italian oppression in Tabrez and Tripoli (respectively)." After the usual violent denunciations of Russian and Italian aggression the writer says that the English are a noble race; but, unfortunately, the British Foreign Office is at present under a Minister who is following a line of policy that is calculated to injure British prestige in the eyes of the Islamic world. Sir Edward Grey may be afraid of Germany, but this is nothing in comparison with the fear of the Czar that is entertained by Muhammadans, who can, under no circumstances, tolerate the idea of Mughals and Persians being subjugated by Russia. Continuing, the writer says that the present is a critical time both for Muhammadans and their rulers; and it is high time that the British Ministers abandoned their misguided policy. "We should not, however, rest here alone. We should let the world know that, although we are not fit successors of a high-minded and a devout nation, still we are not prepared to yield without fighting with our sword." Next the writer urges Muhammadans to hold meetings in all parts of the country with a view to declaring a boycott against all articles manufactured in Italy and Russia; and concludes by remarking that Muslims should bear in mind that those followers of the Prophet who buy things made in the above-mentioned countries will never attain salvation.

The Englishman and Muhammadans.

4. The Paisa Akhbar (Lahore), of the 20th and 21st January 1912, publishes a leader headed "The Muslim problem." Referring to the Englishman's leading article under the above heading and after publishing extracts from the same, the paper says that the Anglo-Indian daily of Calcutta is wrong in holding the terms "Dar-ul-Harab" and "Islamistan" to be synonymous. "Dar-ul-Harab literally means "Land of War," but in Islamic phraseology it means "the country inhabited by infidels on whom it is lawful to wage war, and also the country in which Muhammadans are not allowed to perform their religious duties without restraint." Russia was at one time a "Dar-ul-Harab", when Muhammadans were persecuted in that country on account of their religion. India, however, cannot be called by that name, seeing that here Muhammadans meet with no interference in the performance of their religious duties. "Islamistan," on the other hand, is a coined word which means "the abode of Muhammadans" or it may mean "The Islamic World." Under these circumstances, the Englishman has made a gross blunder in confounding one with the other. Continuing, the paper also takes the Englishman to task for making veiled attacks on Muhammadan loyalty; and says that for the last century and a half Muhammadans have given ample proof of their loyalty in sacrificing their lives under the British flag.

Capture of Turks on English and French vessels by Italian.

5. The Observer (Lahore), of the 27th January 1912, publishes the following under heading "Italy running amock":—

"Italy had supposed that she would find the task of conquering and subjugating Tripoli a run-over. In this she has been sorely disappointed. Arabian valour has come to the rescue. Though the Turks had shown culpable negligence in manning Tripolitan defences and in sending sufficient troops to Tripoli, yet the sons of the desert have retrieved the situation and are offering a stubborn resistance to the Italian advance. Disappointed in this, Italy appears to be running amock. But her mad freaks on the sea have brought her perilously near war. She has more than once seized neutral ships which have had to be given up. Now Italy has created quite a hornet's nest round her by seizing a number of Turks on a French and an English vessel, carrying them away as prisoners of war. The details of the capture and the tremendous excitement to which it has given rise will be found summarised in another column. The English Parliament is not sitting and it is known not what action the British Government has taken to vindicate the honour of England and to bring the impertinent Italians to their senses. France has, of course, decided on strong steps, and not contenting herself with a formal protest, she is resolved to go to any length to establish the rights of neutrals. Speaking in the Chamber of Deputies, M. Poincare, Prime Minister, made a statement which was enthusiastically applauded by all parties. He emphatically declared that 'neither in international nor in civil law could France surrender the Turks seized on board the French steamer Manouba. Only after Italy had given up the Turks could the necessary investigation be permitted. The French Government have informed Italy that provided the Turks were brought back to a French port identity would not be investigated and the testimony of the Italians would be taken. All other points of the dispute would be submitted to The Hague. French papers declare that France will insist upon compliance, going, if necessary, as far as a diplomatic rupture. Later news says that it is announced that the pourparlers on the subject of the release of the Turks seized on board the Manouba are proceeding favourably. It is officially stated that Italian enquiry corroborates the report that there are several doctors and hospital attendants among the Manouba prisoners. Others are stated to be treasury clerks. The wording of the note preliminary to their liberation is now being discussed.

(b)—Home.

The Governor of Madras.

6. The Tribune (Lahore), of the 30th January 1912, has the following :—

"Speaking at the twenty-second anniversary meeting of the Young Men's Christian Association of Madras on the 24th instant, His Excellency the Governor referred in a pointed manner to his own transfer to Bengal and to the appointment of 'some one else' in his place at Madras. The choice for the Governorship of one Presidency falling upon the Governor of another Presidency during his incumbency of office is in itself unprecedented. That such a choice should have been made for Bengal which is admittedly still in a temper so soon after the arrived of Lord Carmichael at Madras and with a full knowledge of his immense popularity is certainly not without its significance. It does not need a prophet to know that in the policy underlying the series of acts an important change of venue has been intended. It has evidently been decided to take advantage of the tranquil, contented and happy state prevailing in the Southern Presidency. Further the fact that Madras feels keenly disappointed at the apparent neglect in the distribution of the Royal boons should not be lost sight of. Taking all this into consideration the reference made by Lord Carmichael to his own transfer and to the appointment of 'some one else' to Madras conveys its own meaning.

* * * * *

"The disposition of the Liberal press in England to regard the recent changes in India in the same light in which the grant of self-government to South Africa is regarded, and Lord Carmichael's reiteration of 'some one else' to be appointed in the tranquil atmosphere of Madras should be read together to grasp the full import of the changes."

Government and Muhammadans.

7. The Curzon Gazette (Delhi), of the 23rd (received on the 30th) January 1912, publishes a leader headed "What should Muhammadans do." The paper refers to Nawab Vicar-ul-Mulk's article in the Aligarh Institute Gazette on the above subject and the suggestions made therein ; and says that it is true that His Majesty the King Emperor himself has announced the annulment of the Partition of Bengal, but the editor is not prepared to admit that one should invariably approve of whatever is announced by His Majesty, (especially) if the same goes against his conscience. This is against his (the editor's) religion. His religion teaches him that nobody except God is infallible. After remarking that the announcement was made at the suggestion of Lord Crewe and his counsellors, the editor says that it must be admitted that the annulment of the Partition has greatly injured Muhammadans. Before the annulment they were free, but now they have been placed in a position of slavery to those who were formerly their subjects. Continuing, the editor says that Indian Muhammadans naturally sympathise with their co-religionists in other parts of the world, and that they declare that the abject condition of Muhammadans in Tripoli, Persia, and Morocco, and, lastly, the annulment of the Partition of Bengal have deeply wounded their feelings.

The Musalman (Amritsar), of the 23rd January, also discusses the subject in a similarly bitter tone; and says that, hitherto, (in their relations with Government) Muhammadans have behaved like abject sycophants devoid of all sense of self-respect.

Muhammadans and their future policy.

8. The Zamindar (Lahore), of the 19th January 1912, publishes a communication entitled "The future policy of Muhammadans and the Leader of Allahabad." The writer—Mr. Nazir Ahmad of Benares—refers to the recent territorial changes and other matters, and says that there can be no doubt that Indian Muhammadans will never forget the indifferent and inconsiderate manner in which they have been dealt with by Government on two occasions. Some time ago an aggressive attempt was made to deprive Urdu of its exalted position. The attempt succeeded, and Urdu was, for all time to come, made a joint vernacular with Hindi in the greater part of Northern and Eastern India. Now comes the announcement regarding the annulment of the Partition of Bengal. This measure has been carried into effect in total disregard of the future welfare of the Muhammadans of Eastern Bengal, the safeguarding of which being regarded as unworthy of consideration (on the part of Government). "Our" feelings and aspirations have been dismissed with the mocking remarking (lit. "making mouths"), that "we" are loyal and contented. What an excellent reward for "our" loyalty and contentment! After remarking that Muhammadans will still continue to remain as loyal as before, the writer says that they should follow the advice of the Nawab Vicar-ul-Mulk; and, relying on God and the power of their arm with due regard to the altered circumstances of the country, should co-operate with each other in building the castle of their nationality.

Alleged unreasonable demands of the Muhammadans of Bengal.

9. The following is from the Tribune (Lahore), of the 30th January 1912:—

"Our Calcutta contemporaries have published the full text of a letter which has been addressed to the Private Secretary to His Excellency the Viceroy by the Honorary Secretary of the Central National Muhammadan Association, Calcutta, on behalf of the Committee of tha body. The letter is deserving of notice because it contains demands and makes requests tot Government which are absurd and manifestly unreasonable. Let us say at the outset that we hope for the credit and good name of the Muhammadan community of Bengal, that the Central National Muhammadan Association of Calcutta does not voice the feelings of the community and that the representation in question is the work of a number of self-seeking and ambitious men who are anxious to make the most they can of the present opportunity in the personal interest of themselves and of their friends. We should be indeed very sorry to find that the absurd and unreasonable requests made in the representation have even the partial support of the Muhammadan community of Bengal. This would again force us to the conclusion that the Muhammadans are not being well and wisely served by those who profess to be their leaders. These requests, if granted, will divide Hindus and Muhammadans throughout the length and breadth of the entire Province into two hostile camps, a contingency which both Government and the men of sense and reason among the people themselves are anxious to avoid. With the two communities in the Province ranged into hostile camps the task of Government would be made very difficult indeed. In fact such an arrangement would be possible only if the officers of Government accord partial treatment to the Muhammadans. It is true that in some Provinces of India such partiality has been shown to Muhammadans both directly and indirectly but, to the credit of the British officials, it must be said that it has never been so bold and naked as the Committee of the Central National Muhammadan Association would like to have it. The task of Government in such Provinces has indeed become very difficult. The confidence between the rulers and the ruled which is so necessary for successful administration has been reduced to a minimum. Suspicion and mistrust have taken the place of confidence and trust. The Hindus are sullen and morose because they have been and are being treated as if they were, to use the words of the President of the last Indian National Congress, the remnants of a disinherited race. The Muhammadans on the other hand, having got far more than their due, are elated and in their elation have entirely forgotten their obligations and responsibilities, not only towards Government, but also towards their Hindu fellow-countrymen. The grant of special favours to them has emboldened them to carry their propaganda of selfishness to extremes, and they are making claims and demands which no sensible and impartial authority or tribunal can grant without inflicting gross and substantial injury on the Hindus. These demands are based on a policy which is as unreasonable as it is in the long run sure to prove suicidal. The policy in question deserves unqualified condemnation in the best interests of the people. We all must remember that the interests of Government and the people are identical and that these interests are bound to suffer if Hindus and Muhammadans instead of adopting a policy of co-operation and mutual trust, follow one of hostility and mutual jealousy.

"We shall now notice the demands put forward in the letter of the Central National Muhammadan Association. The first demand is that 'half the Indian Members on the Bengal Governor's Legislative Council should, at least, be Muhammadans.' It is suggested that these might be appointed by nomination, by mixed electorates and by separate electorates. It is pointed out further that 'what the Committee are concerned with is the broad point that in view of the Muhammadan population, in United Bengal, equalling, if not appreciably exceeding, the Hindu population, the number of Muhammadan representative, on the Governor's Legislative Council should at least be always equal to that of Hindu representatives.' It has evidently not occurred to the authors of this representation that the demand that the number of members in the Council of the Governor should be determined merely by the numerical strength of the population of the two communities represents the height of absurdity. If the standard of numerical strength alone were taken as the guide in this matter, the Muhammadan communities of the United Provinces, Madras, Bombay, the Central Provinces and the newly constituted Province of Behar and Orissa would get a very inadequate representation indeed in the Legislative Councils of the Provinces. Such a standard whilst giving the Muhammadans in the Punjab and Bengal an undue and altogether undeserved preponderance in the Councils, would practically drive them out of the Councils in such Provinces as Bombay, Madras, the Central Provinces and the United Provinces, and the newly constituted Province of Behar and Orissa. The constitution of the Legislative Councils is based on certain definite objects, the first of which is that all important interests should be adequately represented. It is clear that if the Councils are constituted in accordance with the numerical strength of the population the non-official European communities would be simply nowhere. Again, commercial and landed interests would suffer altogether if they are not properly safeguarded. Again, certain seats have to be offered for election by the people, and the application of the test of population suggested by the Central National Muhammadan Association of Calcutta would entirely defeat the object which Government has in view in offering a certain number of seats for election. This object is to secure a number of members who would represent the people, and it will be impossible to get the right stamp of popular representatives if the discretion of the electors is unduly and even unnecessarily fettered, by providing special electorates with special qualifications based on racial and religious considerations. The demand put forward by the Central National Muhammadan Association of Calcutta that half at least of the members of the Legislative Council of the Governor of Bengal should be Muhammadans is on the face of it absurd. It cannot be granted without defeating the very object to carry out which the Legislative Councils were reorganised two years ago, viz., the initiation of the people in the task of self-Government. It is well-knowm all over the country that the special electorates conceded to the Muhammadans under the rules and regulations of the reconstituted Legislative Councils in the country have done a lot of harm. They have filled the minds of the Muhammadans with expectations which are bound to be disappointed in the long run. British statesmen who take a calm and dispassionate view of things and who do not believe in the policy of divide et impera and who indeed go a little further and maintain that such a policy is in the long run bound to prove very harmful if not fatal to the best interests of British supremacy in this country, are opposed to the constitution of special elaborates for Muhammadans. They regret that Lord Morley did not show enough strength at the time to decline to entertain the demand for special electorates for Muhammadans and for preferential treatment accorded to them under the scheme of administrative reforms which Lord Minto had done so much to encourage. The arrangement then sanctioned has acted greatly against the interests of the Hindus of the Punjab and the United Provinces, where Muhammadans dominate the Councils, and where the Hindu interests have been given but very inadequate representation."

Muhammadans and Hindus.

10. The Parkash (Lahore), of the 16th (received on the 25th) January 1912, publishes a leader headed "Strange unrest in the Islamic world." The paper says that for some time past a wave of unrest has been passing over Indian Muhammadans, and that this is attributable to the Turco-Italian war, Russian aggression in Persia, and Great Britain's refusal to help Muhammadans against the latter's enemies. The Times and other British and Anglo-Indian papers also are giving a bit of their minds to Muhammadans on the subject of the relations which they consider should exist between the latter and England. This must have caused a flutter in the Muslim dovecote. Hitherto they had complacently hugged the belief that Government was at least convinced of their "political importance." The annulment of the Partition of Bengal, however, dispelled all these false hopes; and they now think, although the country does not agree with them, that as Government has failed to duly appreciate their years of loyalty, the time has come when they should follow in the footsteps of Bengalis. Some of them have become so filled with dismay that they are threatening Government with joining Hindus and the India National Congress. But why are they going to adopt this course? Do they think that Government and Hindus are rival powers and that they can join one or the other whenever it suits them? After remarking that Muhammadans apparently do not consider it worth their while to consult Hindus as to whether the latter are prepared to make common cause with them or not, the paper says that it now remains to be seen whether Hindus will accept these overtures. But before they do so Hindus should bear in mind that if they yield to Muhammadans they will lay themselves open to the charge of being rivals of Government. Besides, Muhammadans at the present moment are in a state of temporary excitement, and Hindus should think twice before making common cause with them. The paper then goes on to say that the claim of Muhammadans to political importance is a fruitful source of disunion; and they should, therefore, give this up and join hands with Hindus, bearing in mind that this course alone will secure their advancement.

11. The following appears in the Observer (Lahore), of the 31st January 1912 :—

The Tribune and the Nawab Vikar-ul-Mulk.

"A systematic campaign of misrepresentation is going on in certain quarters with regard to Nawab Vikar-ul-Mulk. In our issue of the 17th instant we gave a summary of the Nawab's article on the Persian situation, as published in the Aligarh Institute Gazette. He is, as we pointed out in our summary, 'against any section of the (Indian Muslim) community launching into a boycott of British goods under any circumstances.' But according to summary of the same article published in the Tribune of the 27th instant, 'he advises his Muhammadan brethren, both Shias and Sunnis, to boycott all foreign articles manufactured in countries other than their own, including great Britain.' Now this is a gross perversion of facts. The Nawab, so far from advocating a boycott of British goods, is against the use of such a weapon not only at the present time, but even if hostilities break out between Persia and England. We fail to understand how our contemporary has managed to get such a distorted view of the Nawab's advice to his co-religionists. It is its duty either to prove its allegations or make the amende honorable."

III.—Native States.

12. The Tribune (Lahore), of the 30th January 1912, publishes the following from the pen of its London correspondent :—

Mr. Keir Hardie and the Gaekwar of Baroda.

"His Highness offered a manly and sufficient apology for whatever mistakes he may have made. That apology was accepted on behalf of His Majesty, and this ought to have silenced both the foes and the friends of the Gaekwar. Mr. Keir Hardie always rushes in where angels fear to tread, and he has only himself to thank if his foolish action excites the condemnation of all reasonable people.

IS THE KING-EMPEROR AN "AUTOMATON"?

"In considering the words of Mr. Keir Hardie—however we may regret them--we cannot ignore the fact that he is a representative member of a large and growing political party in this country. So far as I am aware his extreme views in regard to the Monarchy have never been repudiated by the Labour party, although it may be taken for granted that individual members of it, like Mr. Ramsay MacDonald, for example, profoundly disapprove of such irritating words.

"The London papers are still worrying about the Gaekwar of Baroda incident. They would have passed on to some fresh sensation if an unwise Parliamentarian had not rekindled their stagey indignation. Mr. Keir Hardie has not improved the situation, either for the Gaekwar or anybody else. Not for the first time, he has made on entirely gratuitous attack upon the King when His Majesty had certainly done nothing to deserve his censorious sneers.

"Mr. Keir Hardie has got it into his head that the King took personal umbrage at the manner in which the Gaekwar paid homage on the famous day, and that it was upon His Majesty's own initiative that the Prince was compelled to eat humble pie in public. There is no warrant for this assumption. The persons who felt that Majesty had been outraged were certain officials who have never had a good opinion of the Gaekwar, and two or three Ruling Chiefs who are not pleased at the prominent position which the offending Maharaja holds in the table of precedence.

"Mr. Keir Hardie, however, by his uncalled for intervention, has only made matters worse. The Gaekwar will be the last person in the world to thank him for his eulogy. There is a certain amount of truth in what the irrepressible Labour member says about the artificiality of these State functions, but this was not the occasion for saying it and the utterance of such sentiments—especially when accompanied by derogatory remarks about the King—is not likely to be of much service to the Gaekwar.

"The truth about Mr. Keir Hardie is that he has been soured by a too intense contemplation of the woes of the poor and the oppressed as compared with the opulence of the wealthy and the influence of the mighty. To him wealth is a crime and Thrones are an imbecility. Kings can do no right, or if they do it is only by mechanical compulsion. There is, in fact, no pleasing Mr. Keir Hardie. He would be the first to cry treason if the King acted otherwise than is determined for him by constitutional practice and State ceremonial. It is to the credit of the King that he should be so willing to suppress his own personality in order that the dignity of his exalted position as Head of the State should be enhanced. When Mr. Keir Hardie went to India he was a free man and could do practically as he liked. It is far otherwise with the Sovereign whose constitutional limitations compel him, as a matter of fact, to be the servant of all. That is one of His Majesty's highest credentials to our respect and should protect him from such unthinking gibes as those to which Mr. Keir Hardie has given expression.

"One would like to know what sort of a ruler Mr. Keir Hardie really wants. Would he like to have one of the type of the German Emperor? That monarch is by no means an "automaton," but I have yet to learn that he gets anywhere near the socialist ideal. Even the President of a Republic must be the automatic interpreter of the nation's laws. Any ruler who is not this is necessarily a dictator and a despot.

"Perhaps Mr. Keir Hardie will say that his remarks had reference not to the discharge of the King's constitutional functions but to his formal observance of Court etiquette. Well, there must be decency and order even in these things. The only alternative would be chaos. Every man would simply do what he pleased, and however much that may commend itself to a political extremist it is not the kind of thing that the people of India want to see in the Court of the King Emperor.

"To suggest that King George has acted the part of an automaton in his relation with his Indian subjects throughout his recent tour is to go against all the facts. Nothing could exceed the kindliness and tact which Their Majesties displayed towards all classes and creeds. The interchange of esteem and respect at every point of the Royal progress was anything but mechanical. In short, the King-Emperor had a most difficult task to discharge and he has discharged it to the complete satisfaction of his subjects in India and at home. Mr. Keir Hardie is no doubt sincere in his contempt for Monarchical institutions, but he will have to produce better material than this if he wishes to lower the estimation in which His Majesty is held by his myriad subjects."

13. The Observer (Lahore), of the 31st January 1912, publishes the following :—

The new ruler of Nabha.

"His Highness Maharaja Ripudaman Singh has succeeded his late revered father and held a Darbar on Wednesday last to announce his succession. In the course of his speech on the occasion, the new ruler of Nabha said: 'My people of all creeds and communities may rest assured and rely on my word that I consider their happiness my happiness and their welfare my welfare.' It is our earnest desire that His Highness may fulfil the promise made on such a solemn occasion to his subjects of all creeds and prove as successful a ruler as the late Maharaja Hira Singh. We, however, feel bound to remind the Maharaja that as Additional Member of the Viceregal Council his utterances filled the Musalmans with apprehensions as to the fate of their co-religionists when his Highness would become the ruler of Nabha. If these fears prove groundless, if the Maharaja administers the affairs of his State with absolute impartiality and justice, if he helps the backward classes among his subjects and tries to improve their condition, no one will be more pleased and feel more grateful than the Muhammandans of India."

VII.—General Administration.

(a)—Judicial.

14. The Zamindar (Lahore), of the 24th January 1912, publishes a paragraph headed "Muhammadans and pleadérships." The paper publishes the names of persons who have recently been enrolled as pleaders and mukhtars; and says that, while there is not a single Muhammadan among 1st grade pleaders and mukhtars, there are only 8 Muhammadan 2nd grade pleaders as against 47 Hindus in the same grade. This state of affairs, it adds, although painful to a (thinking) Muhammadan, will surely be regarded as satisfactory by those Islamic papers which view the progress of Muhammadans shoulder to shoulder with Hindus and their anxiety to preserve their national existence with feelings of apprehension, and go to the length of saying that Government does not desire to see Musalmans moving on the road to advancement. After remarking that this accusation against Government is filthy in the extreme and that he is not willing to accept it as true, the Editor refers to the Circular issued by the Chief Court restricting the enrolment of pleaders, and contends that the same is calculated to seriously injure the Muslim community. In conclusion, he urges his co-religionists to shake off their sleep and lethargy, adding that the present is the time for struggle and that Muhammadans should not waste their energies in following a mendicant policy by pestering Government with entreaties and adulation.

The Chief Court's Circular restricting the enrolment of Pleaders and Muhammadans.

(f)—Railways and communications.

15. The following is from the Tribune (Lahore), of 28th January 1912 :—

Entertainment given to the Manager, North-Western Railway, by the Indian staff.

"The entertainment given last week to Sir Henry and Lady Burt by the Indian staff of the North-Western Railway shows the esteem in which they are held. Indians are as a rule pleased with small favours. They feel delighted when they find themselves well treated by their European superiors. Nevertheless it has fallen to the lot of few railway managers in India to be entertained in so spontaneous a manner as Sir Henry Burt has been entertained by his Indian staff. It is not every manager of every railway system in India who can say that he enjoys the confidence of his staff and that his staff love and respect him. But the North-Western Railway is an exception among Indian railways, and its Manager, Sir Henry Burt, is an exception to the general rule of Railway Managers. By tact, sympathy and kindness he has won the confidence of his numerous subordinates, especially among Indians, and as a result he has secured for the system the unswerving loyalty and devotion of the Indian staff. He rightly claims that the present staff of the North-Western Railway is quite as large as that of the East Indian Railway which the Railway Board is never tired of holding up as a model for the rest of the Indian lines. But he might also have said that the staff of the North-Western Railway is quite as efficient as that of the East Indian Railway, though not always as well paid. We, however, recognise that the interests of his Indian subordinates are quite safe in the hands of Sir Henry Burt and that he will do everything that lies in his power to secure the continuance of his admirable policy by his successor. The North-Western Railway has certainly its own defects. It cannot claim as yet to be perfect. Nevertheless in point of recruitment, in the treatment of the staff, in respecting the sentiments of the public, and in numerous other ways it is a model to most other railways. We owe this result almost entirely to the exertions of its capable Manager, Sir Henry Burt. Not the least important feature of his administration is the freedom from the outburst of chronic discontent which has been disgracing some other systems. Sir Henry paid a glowing tribute to the loyalty and good sense of the staff and told them that if ever they had any difficulty or trouble about their position, pay or prospects they should first go to him before going to anybody else. The Indian staff are fully conscious that it is the Government that employs them, that there are no directors and shareholders to earn dividends, and that as employés it is their duty to be loyal to the Government. The so-called 'sympathetic strike' which finds support among the working classes in England and on the Continent, is the result of a collision between capital and labour and is viewed with abhorrence by Indians. By nature and training our people are accustomed to gentler and more rational methods even where their interests collide with those of their employers. But the North-Western Railway is altogether on a different footing. We are glad Sir Henry Burt referred to the manner in which the Indian staff of the Railway should try to obtain a hearing from their officers."

(h)—Miscellaneous.

Complaint against Mr. Zafar Ali, Editor of the Zamindar.

16. The Millat (Lahore), of the 18th January 1912, publishes a leaderette headed "The doings of Mr. Zafar Ali, worthy of the attention of Government and the Muhammadan community." The paper says that it is a pity that a Muhammadan journalist has been conducting his paper (the reference is to the Zamindar) in a manner calculated to injure the Muhammadan community. The journalist named at first appeared in the garb of a religious leader; but, finding that his attempt to explain the various aspects of Islam on the basis of natural laws (the word used is naturi, which is an epithet applied by orthodox Muhammadans to Sir Sayad Ahmad Khan and his followers) had roused the hostility of the Prophet's followers, he went over to the orthodox party and began to recite prayers in mosques. This made some impression on his co-religionists, but he gained no material profit by the same. He then began to abuse Hindus, but this too brought him no success. In order, therefore, to plunder his co-religionists and to impress them with his piety he began to follow the policy of the Editor of the Curzon Gazette; and, mischievous as he is by nature, he considered it proper to follow in the footsteps of Ajit Singh and Amba Pershad, imitating the example of papers like the defunct India and Bharat Mata. He then began to hurl womanish abuse at the leaders of his community, amongst whom he also attempted to introduce dissensions.

After remarking that, so far, he has only succeeded in misleading half-educated and simple-minded Muhammadans, the paper deplores his conduct at a meeting which was held in the office of the Observer for the purpose of putting an end to the existence of the Muslim Press Association and establishing a better understanding between the various Muslim editors of the province. When asked whether he was ready to give up his dangerous policy he replied in the negative, and said that the Comrade (Calcutta) was a more extreme paper than the Zamindar. When told that he should not abuse

Muhammadan leaders or his brother editors, he left the room and, while going, mumbled the following words :—"I never spared even great leaders. Who are these persons that they should interfere with my trade ? I shall follow the lines of my present policy for seven months more and then I shall change my attitude." The paper concludes by remarking that Mr. Zafar Ali's conduct deeply grieved his co-religionists at the meeting, and that it is a pity that the whole community and the Muslim press should be dragged into disgrace by his conduct.

The Edward Gazette newspaper.

17. In its issue, dated the 12th and 19th (received on the 26th) January 1912, the Edward Gazette (Abbotabad), publishes a supplement headed "An appeal to its readers," in which the Editor regrets to announce that he has been directed to furnish a security of Rs. 3,000, and that the time in which he is required to deposit the security money is very short. After expressing his inability to deposit the security and remarking that he has always remained loyal to the British rule, the Editor says that, this being the case, it is difficult to see how he could have incurred the displeasure of the authorities. If he is guilty of any crime it is his anxiety to subordinate all other considerations to his wish to serve his community. His mean-minded enemies, however, who have the upper hand in the province, have at last succeeded in bringing him into difficulties. He therefore urges the readers of his paper to help him with money, and to save the Edward Gazette from ceasing to exist. If a Hindu paper, he adds, had been called upon to furnish security, Hindus would have surely come forward with pecuniary assistance. He concludes by expressing the hope that his appeal to his co-religionists will not go unheard.

In another place the Editor refers to the three articles on account of which security has been demanded from him, and says that these contain nothing calculated to offend Government. He certainly complained against certain Government officials in one of the articles referred to, but he is always ready to prove the charges to the hilt.

C. STEAD,

LAHORE :
The 3rd February 1912. } Assistant to the Deputy Inspector General of Police, Criminal Investigation Department, Punjab.

Punjab Government Press, Lahore—7-2-12—109—107—T. W. L.

[ Confidential. ]

[ Vol. XXV. ] SELECTIONS [ No. 6. ]

FROM THE

NATIVE NEWSPAPERS

PUBLISHED IN THE PUNJAB.

Examined up to 10th February 1912.

---

CONTENTS.

Page.

I.—Politics.

(a) Foreign—

1. Russia and India (Paisa Akhbar) ... ... 83
2. Chinese affairs (Tribune) ... ... ib.
3. Russia and Persia (Zamindar) ... ... ib.
4. Russia, Afghanistan and Persia (Zamindar) ... 84

(b) Home—

5. Government and Sikhs (Khalsa Advocate) ... 84
6. Alleged unreasonable demands of the Muhammadans of Bengal (Tribune) ... ... 86
7. Government and the Muhammadans of Eastern Bengal (Observer) ... ... ... 88
8. Muhammadans and Hindus (Tribune) ... 89
9. Muhammadans and the present situation (Zamindar) ... ... ... ... ib.
10. Muhammadans and their future policy (Vakil) ... 90
11. An open letter to Lord Curzon (Zamindar) ... ib.

II.—Afghanistan and Trans-Frontier.

Nil.

III.—Native States.

12. Kashmir affairs (Vakil) ... ... ... 91

IV.—Kine-killing.

Nil.

V.—Native Societies and Religious Matters.

13. Complaint against the Gurukula (Inder) ... 91
14. Complaint against Lala Munshi Ram (Inder) ... ib.

Page.

VI.—Legislation.

15. The Press Act (Zamindar) ... ... 91
16. Usury in the Punjab (Observer) ... ... 92
17. Ditto (Watan) ... ... ib.
18. Mr. Basu's Bill (Khalsa Advocate) ... ... 93
19. Sikhs and their representatives in the Punjab Legislative Council (Khalsa Advocate) ... ib.

VII.—General Administration.

(a) Judicial—

20. The newly appointed judges of the Calcutta High Court (Tribune) ... ... ... 93

(b) Police—

Nil.

(c) Municipal and Cantonment affairs—

Nil.

(d) Education —

21. A complaint (Tribune) ... ... ... 94
22. Complaint against the Principal and others of the D. A.-V. College (Loyal Gazette) ... ... ib.
23. The Khalsa College, Amritsar (Khalsa Advocate) ib.

(e)—Agriculture and questions affecting the land—

Nil.

(f) Railways and Communications—

Nil.

(g) Postal matters—

Nil.

(h) Miscellaneous—

24. The Zamindar and its enemies (Zamindar) ... 95

LIST OF NEWSPAPERS AND PERIODICALS EXAMINED BY THE SPECIAL BRANCH AS IT STOOD ON THE 10TH FEBRUARY 1912.

| No. | Name. | Locality. | Name of Publisher. | Circulation. |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| | ENGLISH. | | | |
| | DAILY. | | | |
| 1 | Tribune ... | Lahore ... | Bihari Lal ... | 1,758 copies. |
| | TRI-WEEKLY. | | | |
| 2 | Panjabee ... | Lahore ... | Mul Chand ... | 2,424 copies. |
| | BI-WEEKLY. | | | |
| 3 | Observer ... | Lahore ... | Nizam-ud-din ... | 1,000 copies. |
| 4 | Punjab Times and Frontier News. | Rawalpindi ... | J. R. Thapur ... | 200 „ |
| | WEEKLY. | | | |
| 5 | Arya Patrika ... | Lahore ... | Devi Chand ... | 650 copies. |
| 6 | Harbinger ... | Do. ... | Durga Parshad ... | 300 „ |
| 7 | Khalsa Advocate ... | Amritsar ... | Bahadar Singh ... | 752 „ |
| | MONTHLY. | | | |
| 8 | D. A.-V. College Magazine... | Lahore ... | Saraswati Nath ... | 1,000 copies. |
| 9 | Forman Christian College Notes. | Do. ... | ... | ... |
| 10 | Jijnasu ... | Do. ... | Ishwar Das ... | ... |
| 11 | Practical Medicine ... | Delhi ... | ... | ... |
| 12 | Punjab Educational Journal | Lahore ... | R. B. Mohan Lal ... | 700 copies. |
| 13 | Punjab Mission News ... | Do. ... | Revd. Wigram ... | 250 „ |
| 14 | Ravi ... | Do. ... | Mr. B. M. Jones ... | ... |
| 15 | Review of Religions ... | Qadian (Gurdaspur) ... | Sadr Anjuman Ahmadia, Qadian. | 800 copies. |
| 16 | Science Grounded Religion... | Lahore ... | Dev Rattan ... | 25 „ |
| 17 | Teacher ... | Dinga (Gujrat) ... | Kanhaya Singh ... | 200 „ |
| | URDU. | | | |
| | DAILY. | | | |
| 18 | Akhbar-i-Am ... | Lahore ... | Govind Sahai ... | 630 copies. |
| 19 | Paisa Akhbar ... | Do. ... | Abdul Aziz ... | 1,011 „ |
| 20 | Watan ... | Do. ... | Muhammad Insha Alla ... | ... |
| 21 | Zamindar ... | Do. ... | Zafar Ali Khan, B.A. ... | ... |
| | BI-WEEKLY. | | | |
| 22 | Vakil ... | Amritsar ... | Abdul Aziz ... | 1,970 copies. |
| | WEEKLY. | | | |
| 23 | Afghan ... | Peshawar ... | Saiyid Muhammad Abdulla | 500 copies. |
| 24 | Ahl-i-Hadis ... | Amritsar ... | Sanaulla ... | 925 „ |
| 25 | Ahluwalia Gazette ... | Do. ... | Lehna Singh ... | 500 „ |
| 26 | Army News ... | Ludhiana ... | Hira Lal & Co. ... | 1,300 „ |
| 27 | Arorbans Gazette ... | Amritsar ... | Labh Singh ... | ... |
| 28 | Arya Gazette ... | Lahore ... | Bhowani Das ... | 550 copies. |
| 29 | Badar ... | Qadian, Gurdaspur district | Muhammad Sadiq ... | 200 „ |

LIST OF NEWSPAPERS AND PERIODICALS EXAMINED BY THE SPECIAL BRANCH AS IT STOOD ON THE 10TH FEBRUARY 1912—CONTINUED.

| No. | Name. | Locality. | Name of Publisher. | Circulation. |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| | URDU—CONTINUED. | | | |
| | WEEKLY—continued. | | | |
| 30 | Bharat ... | Jullundur ... | Thakur Sheoratan Singh | ... |
| 31 | Civil and Military News ... | Ludhiana ... | Saiyid Muhammad ... | 1,325 copies. |
| 32 | Curzon Gazette ... | Delhi ... | Mirza Hairat .. | 111 „ |
| 33 | Delhi Gazette ... | Do. ... | Sajjad Husain ... | 200 „ |
| 34 | Edward Gazette ... | Abbott-abad ... | Muhammad Latif ... | 200 „ |
| 35 | Hakam ... | Qadian, Gurdaspur district | Yakub Ali .. | 900 „ |
| 36 | Haq .. | Delhi ... | Kasim Ali .. | 200 „ |
| 37 | Haq Pasand ... | Amritsar ... | Ram Nath .. | 382 „ |
| 38 | Hindu ... | Lahore ... | Hari Lal Sharma ... | ... |
| 39 | Hindustan ... | Do. ... | Ram Sarn Dutt .. | 8,070 copies. |
| 40 | Indar ... | Do. ... | Dharm Pal, B. A. ... | ... |
| 41 | Islam ... | Do. ... | Abdul Latif .. | 200 copies. |
| 42 | Jhang Sial .. | Jhang ... | Prabh Dyal .. | 2,262 „ |
| 43 | Kapurthala Akhbar ... | Kapurthala ... | Hamid Husain .. | 155 „ |
| 44 | Loyal Gazette ... | Lahore ... | Amar Singh ... | 200 „ |
| 45 | Lytton Gazette ... | Delhi ... | Bulaki Das .. | 1,000 „ |
| 46 | Milap ... | Lyallpur ... | Jawahar Lal ... | ... |
| 47 | Millat ... | Lahore ... | Shuja Ulla .. | 1,500 copies. |
| 48 | Mister Gazette ... | Do. ... | Ali Bakhsh .. | 150 „ |
| 49 | Munir ... | Jhang ... | Hafiz Khuda Bakhsh ... | 200 „ |
| 50 | Musalman .. | Amritsar ... | Sana-ulla .. | 400 „ |
| 51 | Nur ... | Qadian, Gurdaspur district | Muhammad Yusaf .. | 200 „ |
| 52 | Nur Afshan ... | Ludhiana ... | Revd. Dr. E. M. Wherry | 500 „ |
| 53 | Paisa Akhbar ... | Lahore ... | Abdul Aziz .. | 8,377 „ |
| 54 | Parkash .. | Do. ... | Krishan ... | 1,723 „ |
| 55 | Punjab Advocate ... | Mianwali ... | Karm Chand, Bahl ... | 1,000 „ |
| 56 | Punjab Samachar .. | Lahore ... | Hira Lal .. | 705 „ |
| 57 | Rajput Gazette .. | Do. ... | Thakur Sukhram Das ... | 650 „ |
| 58 | Municipal Gazette and Sada-i-Hind. | Do. ... | Din Muhammad .. | 500 „ |
| 59 | Sadiq-ul-Akhbar ... | Bahawalpur ... | Maulvi Ata Ullah .. | 392 „ |
| 60 | Ditto ... | Rewari ... | Safdar Hussain ... | 200 „ |
| 61 | Sanatan Dharm Pracharak... | Amritsar ... | Rulia Ram .. | 200 „ |
| 62 | Shanti ... | Rawalpindi ... | Kishan Chand Mohan ... | 300 „ |
| 63 | Sialkot Paper ... | Sialkot ... | Todar Mal ... | 500 „ |
| 64 | Siraj-ul-Akhbar ... | Jhelum ... | Maulvi Fakir Muhammad | 450 „ |
| 65 | Tahzib-ul-Niswan ... | Lahore ... | Mumtaz Ali .. | 240 „ |

LIST OF NEWSPAPERS AND PERIODICALS EXAMINED BY THE SPECIAL BRANCH AS IT STOOD ON THE 10TH FEBRUARY 1912—CONCLUDED.

| No. | Name. | Locality. | Name of Publisher. | Circulation. |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| | URDU—CONCLUDED. | | | |
| | WEEKLY—concluded. | | | |
| 65 | Victoria Paper ... | Sialkot ... | Gian Chand ... | 600 copies. |
| 66 | Wafadar* ... | Lahore ... | Fazal-ud-din ... | 600 „ |
| 67 | Waqt ... | Do. ... | Ali Husain ... | 200 „ |
| 68 | Watan ... | Do. ... | Muhammad Insha Ullah.. | 1,800 „ |
| 69 | Zamindar ... | Do. ... | Zafar Ali Khan, B.A. ... | 750 „ |
| | FORTNIGHTLY. | | | |
| 70 | Biwah Samachar* ... | Lahore ... | Ram Chand ... | 300 copies. |
| 71 | Kam Dhenu ... | Ludhiana ... | Daulat Ram ... | 100 „ |
| 72 | Mohyal Gazette ... | Kala, Jhelum district ... | Mehta Sham Das ... | 250 „ |
| | MONTHLY. | | | |
| 73 | Arorbans Parkash ... | Lahore ... | Salig Ram ... | 200 copies. |
| 74 | Arya Musafir ... | Jullundur ... | Wazir Chand ... | 1,300 „ |
| 75 | Indar* ... | Lahore ... | Dharampal, B.A. ... | 3,000 „ |
| 76 | Jauhar ... | Amritsar ... | Muhammad Ismail Khan | 200 „ |
| 77 | Kakezai Social Reformer ... | Lahore ... | Fazl Din ... | 200 „ |
| 78 | Makhzan ... | Delhi ... | Abdul Kadir ... | 4,000 „ |
| 79 | Rafiq ... | Lahore ... | Charinji Lal ... | 500 „ |
| 80 | Sadhu ... | Do. ... | Sheobart Lal ... | 500 „ |
| 81 | Martand ... | Do. ... | Kanhya Lal ... | 250 „ |
| 82 | Raghbir Patrika ... | Do. ... | Prab Dial ... | 500 „ |
| 83 | Zaban ... | Delhi ... | Hamid Hasain ... | 500 „ |
| | GURMUKHI. | | | |
| | WEEKLY. | | | |
| 84 | Khalsa Sewak ... | Amritsar ... | Jiwan Singh ... | 1,000 copies. |
| 85 | Punjab Reporter ... | Do. ... | Ganda Singh ... | ... |
| 85 | Punjabi Surma ... | Lahore ... | Gian Chand ... | 1,000 copies. |

* Not received during the week.

I.—Politics.

(a)—Foreign.

Russia and India.

1. The Paisa Akhbar (Lahore), of the 30th January 1912, publishes from the pen of Ismail Khan, a painter of Bombay, a cartoon in which Russia is represented as a fourteen-handed monster, carrying swords in four hands and wearing a crown over which there is a cross. The monster is shown as sitting over a map of Asia and spreading his hands over Manchuria, Mongolia, Persia and Turkey. The letter-press runs as follows :—

"India :—'Look! the dreadful hands of the Russian Bear are extending towards me. Alas! My guardians are sleeping.'

"We Indians should sincerely pray that God may be pleased to spare us from the oppressive rule of Russia and keep us under the shadow of the British flag of freedom and justice."

Chinese affairs.

2. Under the heading "China," the Tribune (Lahore), of the 9th February 1912, publishes the following :—

"The events that are happening in China, even to spectators near at hand, appear like a dream. It would have been a bold prophet who six months ago could have predicted that the fall of Manchu supremacy was at hand and even dynastic Government was likely to be obliterated. The extent of the Chinese Empire is so wide and there are so many elements of discord that anything like universal peace is impossible and sporadic disturbances are of constant occurrence. But that is very different from such an upheavel as the world is witnessing at present—civil war of the most gigantic proportions with all its attendant horrors. How long is it that the great and terrible Dowager-Empress has been dead, and who could have dared to breathe in her lifetime that the Empire was in danger, or that the reins which she held so tightly would drop from the limp and nerveless fingers of her successors? There was nothing extraordinary in the ascendancy of the Manchus, though they were numerically a handful as compared with the millions of Chinamen. In the past as in the present the few have often ruled the many and even a single man or woman has ruled millions. Monarchism is based upon it, oligarchy and autocracy illustrate it. The Manchus did not seek to pacify or conciliate the Chinese population, and their arrogance was deeply resented by the subject population. Two things are necessary for the termination of this state of things—the decline and decadence of the ruling race and the rise and the growing strength of the subject race. This process is for a certain length of time unconscious and is not observed until the conflict breaks out in a flash and the clash of steel reminds the world of the ultimate arbiter of the destinies of nations. The reason why people are slow to realise an impending change of great magnitude is that the human mind runs in a groove and cannot anticipate the unexpected, although it may be a perfectly logical, event determined by a perfectly natural process.* * * * * * * * *

* * * * * * * *

"The details that have come to light show the potentiality that lies in China of becoming as great and powerful as Japan. Silent and patient preparations were made for the struggle which is now about to come to a successful end. Chinamen in America and Canada engaged in menial service contributed to the funds of the revolutionary movement. There was a widespread organisation throughout the Empire. Stores of arms were collected secretly; men were drilled and disciplined. They went to foreign countries to be trained in arms. Some learned even aviation. The pigtails of the Manchus became hateful to Chinamen, who cut them off as soon as war was declared. The indolent Chinaman addicted to opium-smoking disappeared as if by magic. In Sun Yat Sen and his followers we see men determined, purposeful, daring and with a definite end in view." * * *

* * * * * * * *

Russia and Persia.

3. The Zamindar (Lahore), of 1st February 1912, publishes a communication "The cry of the orphans of Tabrez." The writer—Khwaja Hassan Nizami, of Delhi—pathetically describes the sufferings of innocent children caused by Russian oppression in Persia, and goes on to observe as follows :—

"Take away the (orphan) child from the hands of the tyrannical Czar or bind the Czarevitch with him. My child! we are Indians. Ask from us where your father is. He lies in our minds and in our hearts, which are full of rage and fury, and which are anxious to take revenge and to complain to the British Government. Help! O Prophet! you know how to feel (lit. appreciate) for orphans. See the orphans of men who are devoted to Islam. Look at helpless Persia! Look at broken-hearted Muhammadans. Intercede with God to send some one to support the helpless."

Russia, Afghanistan and Persia.

4. The Zamindar (Lahore), of the 30th January 1912, publishes a communication headed "The present times and the political stage." In continuation of his previous remarks (vide paragraph 1 of Selections No. 4), the writer—one Sheikh Fayyaz Ali of Shahabad, Hardoi district—says that the Anglo-Russian Convention has placed Afghanistan within the sphere of the British influence and Persia within that of Russia. Although the Amir considers the convention nothing better than a vain speculation, still, if Great Britain goes to the length of occupying half of Persia there is every likelihood of Russia demanding half of Afghanistan. Under these circumstances it is desirable that the Amir should engage more skilled workmen in order to increase the output of arms and ammunition. Continuing, the writer refers to the state of affairs in Morocco, and says that Muhammadan rule in that part of the Dark Continent is now at an end. The late Sultans of Morocco passed their days in luxury and debauchery, because they could easily obtain through their new friends (the reference is probably to France and Spain), white fairies with large eyes. This led to internecine feuds in which thousands of persons died. There was, however, no dearth of philanthrophists who, under the name of Triple Alliance, lost no time in scrambling for the possession of the country. It is a pity, he adds, that this Muhammadan kingdom has passed away for ever from the hands of Muslims. Referring to Egypt, the writer says that, when it was announced that Lord Kitchener would be appointed as British Agent at Cairo, his mind was filled with grave apprehensions. His Lordship is a brave and famous British (Military) officer, and his deeds in Soudan are such as can never be forgotten by Muhammadans. The writer then goes on to refer to the progress of nationalism in Egypt, and says that Egyptian nationalists believe that they will, sooner or later, obtain perfect liberty through the good offices of the British people; but, at present, there is a dearth of education in the country. They should, however, lose no time in filling their countrymen with patriotic ideas. Some time ago it was announced that a Conference consisting of (representatives of) all the Muhammadans of the world would be held (? at Cairo), and that, if any speaker liked, he would be allowed to give expression to his thoughts in Urdu. Hearing this he also intended to deliver a speech at the Conference on "Sacrifice." It is, however, a pity that the Conference could not be held. The Egyptians are courageous enough to hold such Conferences, but the circumstances were such that they could not do so. The writer then goes on to refer to the revolution in China and to the present condition of Arabians; and says that it is a pity that Muhammadans have not so far realised the importance of sacrifice and patriotism, which have made Europe victorious and which Europeans have learnt from Arabians. In conclusion, he regrets that Indian Muhammadans are wanting in patriotism.

(b)—Home.

Government and Sikhs.

5. The Khalsa Advocate (Amritsar), of the 26th January 1912, publishes the following:—

"When the Moslems were agitating for a preferential treatment in the Reform Scheme, and in the Government employ, Maharaja Ripudaman Singh Sahib. then a member of Viceroy's Council, remarked in the course of a speech that if the posts and electoral privileges were distributed on the considerations of minority, then the Sikh claims deserved in all respects the first and foremost recognition.

"In the reform scheme, however, the Khalsa was quietly ignored. Not a word was said about the people who were but yesterday the supreme lords of the land of the five rivers, the terror of the Frontier hordes, and the real 'gate-keepers' of modern India. The so-called principle of the safe-guard of minorities is incomprehensible unless the plural makes place for the singular and is applied to Moslems alone. As the rules now stand, it will make no difference if the word 'Minorities' be replaced by the name 'Muhammadan'. They have been given an over-proportionate share in some provinces on the score of their being in the minority, in others on the strength of their majority. The Moslems may well exclaim mutatis mutandis, 'The quality of reforms is not strained, they drop like gentle rain from Heaven ; they are twice blessed.'

"This invidious treatment has considerably increased the overwhelming difficulties of reform among our people, who under the necessity of fighting Indian's battles for the last two hundred years have but recently had breathing time.

"There are faint-hearted men who are weaned from Sikh atmosphere and who have to seek the favour of the great Hindu majority for a seat on any of the elective bodies. If this state of affairs is perpetuated, mischief-mongers will never think that their season of tempting a brave people into the dangerous and steep current of turbed and unhealthy politics is gone (though of course without an iota of success).

Political importance.

"Much has also been said of the political importance of the Muhammadans and the real issues have been sought to be clouded by this cant. Who but a prejudiced mind would doubt, even for a moment, the importance of the Sikhs, who were the rulers of the Punjab at the time of its annexation by the British ? Even now they own a large part of the province and pay the largest amount of land-tax proportionate with their number. They have the greatest stake in the country. The extraneous considerations of Turkey and Persia may have something to do with the index of the power of the Moslem importance, but surely one never believes that even the impartial British mind will be so much swayed by such considerations.

"The question of minority is already a well-threshed one. The Sikhs are in a small number. But with that 75 per cent. are agriculturists and supply the most valiant and the most trusted soldiery that did not fail the Government even during the dark days of the Mutiny.

"In point of devotion to the British crown, in the words of His Majesty King George V, spoken at the Khalsa College in his visit as Prince of Wales in 1905, and according to the recent reply of Lord Hardinge, not only India but the whole civilised world has nothing but an unstinted and full chorus of admiration for the Sikh people.

"The Sikh soldiers have shed their life-blood to maintain the honour of the British flag in all parts of the world—Afghanistan, China, Egypt, the Soudan, the Transvaal—and others have witnessed the might of these sons of the Punjab, while every hillock and stone on the North-West Frontier, in Tirah, Chitral and Waziristan, is a standing monument of the thrilling exploits of the Khalsa.

"Besides, the educated Sikhs have always been staunch friends and well-wishers of the British cause and the most loyal subjects of the crown.

"In short, there is no place of activity related to the Government in which the Sikhs have not stood the test of time and proved themselves amply deserving of special consideration.

"The Sikhs can preserve their national entity only with the help of the Government. They are yet unable to stand on their own legs. In point of wealth, even among the middle class, about eighty per cent. cannot make more than ten or twelve rupees a month. As regards literacy, with the exception of a limited few, the bulk are steeped in ignorance. Again, those who, treading the thorny path of knowledge, acquire higher education are not allowed even their rightful share in the Government employ. This discourages their successors.

"If the Government does not extend its helping hand to the once great but now backward Sikhs the world will record a day when the parting-knell of the Sikh race will have been rung and then the English Government will find it rather hard to escape its share in having been an indifferent spectator to the catastrophe.

"Too much tardiness may eventuate in some similar result :—

"'Until the antidote comes from Iraq the snake-bitten will be dead.'"

"The just-minded and learned Mr. Macauliffe, who has thrown a flood of light on the Sikh religion by his indefatigable labours, gave on more than one occasion the sincere counsel which deserves to be recorded in letters of gold. He requested the Government, with all the emphasis he could command, to render special help to a brave, loyal and devoted race, as the Sikhs are, and to preserve their National existence. The Government, said he, might vouchsafe them official assistance, where they cannot of themselves initiate measures to keep themselves abreast of the other congeries in the Peninsula.

"We are sorry, however, that up till now the Sikhs have not only been accorded no preferential treatment, but, on the other hand, they have not got even their rightful share. Even in the Legislative Council in the Punjab itself there is not a single elective Sikh seat, and while a handful of men owning Jainism have secured one exponent, three millions of the Sikhs, the predecessors of the British in the land, have also the number of unity to their credit! O strange turns of the giddy fortune! It appears as if the Jairs and the Sikhs have the same importance in the country of the "Lion of the Punjab" in the eyes of the powers that be! In the Imperial Council we are almost altogether unrepresented. Only he can be said to be the true representative of a people whose heart keeps time with those of his folk. Record of national service ought to be the only criterion in the selection of such representatives. The Government has other means of making their approval of personages who are taken on such assemblies simply for honorary reasons.

"It is vain to think under the circumstances that Sikh interests should be safe-guarded in the face of the veterans of other races. We cannot compete on equal terms with the more advanced and more numerous communities of the Hindus and Muhammadans without special concessions.

"We should be doing a great wrong to ourselves and the Government if we were to conceal the fact that the sensible Sikhs all over the world are dissatisfied with their present status, and if things do not change the step-motherly treatment may give a shock to the feelings of a supremely loyal section of India to the undoing of the labours of a number of generation who have knit the silken ties of love and sympathy between the Khalsa and English. Far be it from us to hold it out as a threat. We have enunciated but a universal law.

"About Sikhs on the Municipal and District Boards the less said the better. On the Municipal corporation of Lahore, the capital of the province, there is one lonely Sikh member who has had to placate the Hindus to maintain his seat. We have heard that the Lahore Municipality has appointed a sub-committee for elementary education which is made up of three Hindus and an equal number of Moslems but no Sikh. Now the question of the medium of instruction is a burning topic. The advocates of Hindi and Urdu are there, but Punjabi, the real vernacular of the Province, will own no representative. The Sikh claims are being trampled under foot on account of the paucity of their members.

"The Amritsar Municipality has, for example, felt keenly the want of a Health Officer for some six months, but it has vouchsafed not the least attention to the application of an England returned Sikh who possesses high qualifications. The reason is that the list of the city fathers does not include an adequate number of Sikhs and the one or two that happen to be there can effect nothing in the face of the overwhelming non-Sikh majority.

"As the recent issues of the Khalsa Advocate have proved conclusively, the Sikhs are nowhere in the Government offices. Taken on an average, hardly one or two per cent. are entertained on civil posts of the administration. Most of the educated Sikhs are either employed in private institutions or are migrating to other lands for want of a good living on the soil of their birth. Finding that the doors of public service are shut upon them, the Sikh parents do not care much for the education of their sons, which state of affairs is bound inevitably to result in the down grade progress of our people. Where the numbers of other sects on good posts are increasing, that of the Sikhs is diminishing.

"In the end, we appeal to His Excellency Lord Hardinge and to Sir Louis Dane, our wideawake Lieutenant-Governor, to adopt some permanent and far-reaching measures to safeguard the Sikh interests. These resolve into one which the experience has shown to be the most efficacious—special concessions in electoral privileges on the Imperial and Provincial Councils as well as on the Municipal and District Boards, and a standing order for a fair distribution of the posts. This will perpetuate the happy memory of the names of the two great administrators in the hearts of the Sikhs and brace their love of the British crown for all time to come."

Alleged unreasonable demands of the Muhammadans of Bengal.

6. The following is from the Tribune (Lahore), of the 2nd February 1912:—

"The second demand put forward in the representation sent to the Viceroy and Governor-General by the Central National Muhammadan Association is still more absurd than the first. It is that 'the Indian Members on the Bengal Governor's Executive Council should be one a Hindu and one a Muhammadan and that if this be found unfeasible the appointment should go alternately to a Hindu and to a Muhammadan.' If the writer of the representation believes that the request they make can be granted without harm to the best interests of the country they must be living in a fool's paradise. The appointment of even one Indian to the executive councils—whether of the Viceroy or of the Provincial Governors—has been conceded after a great deal of discussion, and we all know that but for the strong and the dominating personality of Lord Morley the people of this country should never have received this concession. The attitude of the Government at present is that it is not always easy for them to fill these posts in the Provinces which are provided with Executive Councils. The Association would have been much more reasonable had they demanded that the number of Indians in the Executive Councils should be two instead of one. Such a demand would have been perfectly in keeping with the desire which all patriotic Indians share to safeguard Indian interests. But put in the form in which it has been in the letter of the Central National Muhammadan Association, viz., that there should be a Hindu and a Muhammadan member, it is indicative of absurdity of a really high order. The suggestion, to say the least, is puerile. The Association forget that the office of the Indian member of a Provincial Executive Council is no mere sinecure and that the member in question has duties of a highly onerous character to discharge. He holds charge of a portfolio and unless he is a man of ability, high intellectual worth, independent judgment and free from racial prejudices, he cannot satisfactorily discharge the duties entrusted to him. It stands to reason that the fittest and the ablest Indian should hold the responsible appointment irrespective of any considerations of caste and creed. To fetter the discretion of Government in selecting the right man by providing that the choice should fall on a Hindu or a Muhammadan will be harmful to the best interests of the country. Such a provision is bound to stand in the way of Government securing the services of the ablest and the best Indian available. The position taken up by the Hindus in this matter is that the best and the fittest Indian should be appointed to the post, no matter what his caste, creed or religion. It will be seen from the reasons we have advanced in this article that equally absurd is the contention of the Committee of the Central National Muhammadan Association that failing the appointment of one Hindu and one Muhammadan member the appointment should go alternately to a Hindu and to a Muhammadan.

"The third claim put forward in the letter of the Muhammadan Association is that 'on District Boards, Local Boards and Municipalities, the numbers of Hindu and Moslem representatives should always be in proportion to the numerical strength of Muhammadan and Hindu populations respectively in each District, Sub-Division and the Municipality.' We have not the least hesitation in stating that this demand cannot be conceded without seriously interfering with the efficiency of local and municipal self-government and without rendering very acute the differences that at present divide Hindus and Muhammadans. The interests of good government require that these differences should disappear. Their accentuation would be a calamity to the country. We trust that in this matter Government will take a firm stand and will not allow itself to be swerved from the path of rectitude which in this case is also the path of justice and fair-play. It should be the endeavour of Government officials of all sorts to hold the balance even between Hindus and Muhammadans and to regard them both as Indians and to ignore in matters administrative their religious differences and racial peculiarities and prejudices.

"The fourth demand set forth in the letter of the Honorary Secretary of the Central National Muhammadan Association is still more open to objection. It is that 'the distribution of State patronage in all departments and offices for the whole Presidency of Bengal should be regulated by the same standard of numerical population, and half of the appointments open to Indians should be alloted to the Muhammadans and half to Hindus.' The Committee of the Association suggest that 'a standard of irreducible minimum qualification should be laid down, and so long as Musalmans satisfy this standard they should be employed in proportion to their numerical strength. The Committee says that they do not desire that inefficient hands should be employed, but they do respectfully desire that so long as the Musalmans satisfy the irreducible minimum standard of qualification, they should be allotted their proper share of the State patronage.' The Committee of the Association have, however, refrained from proposing that the Hindus at present employed in public offices should be dismissed to make room for Muhammadans in case their total number at present falls below the irreducible minimum of half the posts demanded by the Committee of the Central National Muhammadan Association. We need scarcely say that the demand in question is wrong in principle. It can be conceded only by substantially lowering the efficiency of the public service. The best interests of the administration demand that appointments to the public service should be made solely on considerations of efficiency, and that the standard of fitness and merit insisted upon in the case of the candidates seeking to get into service should be the highest possible. To lower the standard in order to suit the convenience of either the Hindus or the Muhammadans is wrong in principle and would seriously lower the efficiency of the public service. It would besides open the door to endless nepotism and favouritism of the worst order.

"The last two demands set forth in the letter of the Honorary Secretary of the Central National Muhammadan Association are such as may rightly be regarded as exceeding even the highest heights of absurdity. The Committee of the Association suggest that 'the allotments of Provincial grants for education in Bengal should be separately made in equal shares for Hindus and Muhammadans respectively.' As regards the District Board and Municipal allotment for education the Committee desire 'that it should be divided amongst Hindus and Muhammadans, according to their respective numerical proportions in each district and under each Municipality.' The letter goes on to point out that 'as matters now stand the bulk of Provincial Educational grant goes year after year towards the education of Hindus by reason of their preponderating influence in public affairs.' The Committee of the Association further 'respectfully submit that as under the modification of the Partition the Muhammadans should equal if not exceed the Hindu population, it would only be a fair act of justice for the Government to lay down that both the communities should equally share in the Provincial allotment.' The Committee of the Association do not say if the suggestion they have made is a practicable one. The schools and colleges of all classes which are maintained with what the Committee call the Provincial allotment for education are open to Hindus and Muhammadans alike, and if the latter do not resort to them in as large numbers as the Hindus the fault lies with themselves. The Association apparently suggest that separate schools for Hindus and Muhammadans should be opened. Such a suggestion has only to be made to be scouted. How then do the Committee of the Association propose to divide the educational grant between Hindus and Muhammadans? The truth is that the bulk of the Muhammadan population of Bengal consist of agriculturists who do not favour secondary and University education in as large numbers as the Hindus who follow the professions and reside for the most part in urban areas. If the Muhammadans of Bengal take to education more kindly and in larger numbers than is the case at present the defects and drawbacks they complain against would themselves be removed. The Muhammadans should devote their energies to acquiring qualifications which will ensure their selection for posts of trust and responsibility under Government. It is in the highest degree unreasonable to expect Government to lower the standard of efficiency of the public service, and Muhammadans of Bengal would be much better occupied in divising means to promote the educational progress of their community than pestering Government with absurd and impossible demands such as those set forth in the letter of the Central National Muhammadan Association addressed to the Private Secretary to His Excellency the Viceroy. By making demands which are based wholly on selfish consideration, which totally ignore all considerations relating to the efficiency of the administration and which seek to convert the public service into a sort of patronage to be equally divided between Hindus and Muhammadans, the Central National Muhammadan Association of Calcutta has put itself out of court as a body which is entitled to advise Government on administrative matters."

Government and the Muhammadans of Eastern Bengal.

7. The following is from the Observer (Lahore), of the 7th February 1912 :—

"The speech of the Viceroy, delivered in joint reply to the four addresses presented to His Excellency at Dacca, including one from the Provincial Muhammadan Association and the Muslim League, was given in our last; and the Press communique summarising the proceedings of Lord Hardinge's 'private interview' with a deputation of 'Muhammadan gentlemen of Eastern Bengal' is published to-day in another column. The latter is of great importance, especially in view of the Muslim situation in Bengal, and we need make no apology for noticing it here prominently. Indeed, the anxiety to which the annulment of the Partition of Bengal had given rise in Muslim circles was both grave and widespread, and it was necessary that the Muhammadan mind should have been authoritatively re-assured. The assurances given by the Viceroy will, we are pleased to note, go a long way to appease Muslim sentiment and to reconcile it to the change announced at Delhi with such dramatic suddenness, though we cannot help remarking that the Viceregal utterance is not altogether satisfactory and the evident reluctance to meet Muslim wishes half-way in the matter of representation on district and local boards and the public service is not calculated to assuage the disappointment of the community. * * * *

* * * * * * *

* * "Speaking in the name of the Muhammadan community, we warmly welcome the announcement of the creation of a University at Dacca and are grateful to the Viceroy for his initiative in the matter. The reform will advance the best interests of the country as a whole and is in keeping with the progressive spirit of the age. Moreover, this means recognition for the first time by the Government that there can be two Universities in one province; and one can predict with positive certainty that after the establishment of the Dacca University, others will naturally follow in Burma, Behar and the Central Provinces, besides the Muslim and Hindu Universities at Aligarh and Benares. * *

* * * * * * *

"It is of interest to note, by way of parenthesis, the heart-burnings which the proposal has caused in certain quarters, as its consummation promises to give the Muslims their due. The Bengalee, for instance, frankly admits that an apprehension has been felt that the cause of Muhammadan education would receive a set-back in East Bengal by reason of the modification of the partition, and it says that such a result the Hindu community would greatly deplore. 'For they feel that the amplest facilities for education should be afforded to their Muhammadan fellow-countrymen and that the advancement of the country depends upon the steady progress of education among Hindus and Muhammadans alike.' * * *

* * * * *

"So far so good. Again, two days after the Bengalee once more stated that the Hindu community would welcome facilities being afforded for the spread of education among their Muhammadan fellow-subjects; for it recognised that 'now even more than before, with a new chapter opening out in the history of the country, the friendliness and solidarity between the two great communities must constitute an indispensable factor in the cause of our national progress.' The paper urged the authorities to give the Muhammadans what is their due and to afford them the amplest opportunities for their education, assuring them that the Hindu community would view with sympathy a policy which embodies these principles. But the paper stultifies itself in a manner at once sudden and discreditable and, curiously enough, it views with grave misgivings any proposal for the creation of a separate University at Dacca. Apart from the question of expense, "the educational life and aspirations of the Province and of a homogeneous population must be one and indivisible. The people of what is now the new Province will not like the idea. To them it will appear in the light of a partition of a very objectionable kind. It will be regarded as a disaster if a cleavage is made in the educational life of the Province by the creation of a separate University at Dacca." The bare-faced audacity of the criticism is too obvious to need emphasising at our hands; while the veneer of public spiritedness is too thin to conceal the grossly selfish and anti-Muslim motive that underlies the opposition to the establishment of a University at Dacca. The Bengalee tries to throw dust into the eyes of the Muhammadans and to convince them of the solicitude of the Hindus for their welfare!"

Muhammadans and Hindus.

8. The following is from the Tribune (Lahore), of the 4th February 1912:—

"Yesterday we quoted an admirable passage from His Excellency the Viceroy's reply to the address presented by the East Bengal Muslim League and the Provincial Muhammadan Association. His Excellency's one great desire is that during his tenure of office there should be some softening of mutual animosities. We do not know if His Excellency has noticed where the animosities exist and how they have come to exist. Take, for instance, Behar or Bombay or Madras among the British Provinces, and Hyderabad, Mysore and Bhopal among the Native States. Hindus and Muhammadans of these places have not much to complain against each other and they live in amity and concord. But the 'mutual animosities' exist and grow in the United Provinces, in the Punjab, and in Eastern Bengal recently. His Excellency doubtless remembers the Irish parallel which only lately was expressively stated by Mr. Birrel. 'While in the South and West of Ireland,' said Mr. Birrel, 'where the Roman Catholics were in an overwhelming majority they were able to live in perfect peace and amity with their Protestant neighbours, in the North and in other places where they were more equally divided it sometimes happened that Orange mobs and Catholic mobs . . . . . came into violent collision with one another.' So do we find this collision illustrated in our own Province, in the United Provinces and in the new Presidency that is to be. The causation is therefore pretty intelligible and it lies with the Government to remedy the evil by removing the cause."

Muhammadans and the present situation.

9. The Zamindar (Lahore), of the 2nd February 1912, publishes a leader headed "Attempts to blindfold Muhammadans." The paper says that the mistake which Government has made in cancelling the Partition of Bengal and in transferring its seat to Delhi, is likely to lead to serious difficulties; seeing that Muhammadans are wholly dissatisfied with these measures and Bengalis and others of the same type are so elated that they have become more and more importunate. Government has admitted in its despatch that it has been obliged to leave Calcutta through the fear of Bengali agitation; and that, as Muhammadans are loyal and contented, no heed need be paid to their wishes. It is on account of this that Muhammadan leaders like the Nawab Vicar-ul-Mulk, were compelled to say that Muslims should, instead of having implicit confidence in the promises of Government, rely on the strength of their own arm. Continuing, the Editor observes that Muhammadans are on the horns of a great dilemma at the present moment; seeing that if they remain quiet they will suffer, because contented men are regarded as fools in these days of education and civilization, while, if they take prompt steps to safeguard their rights, some of their co-religionists are apt to consider their activities as dangerous and to spare no pains to humiliate them in the eyes of Government. Formerly Muhammadan leaders were in the habit of taking steps of their own initiative in matters affecting the well-being of their community; and were wont to represent its united wishes to Government. As a consequence, Government has been misled, while poor Muhammadans are kept in complete ignorance of what is going on around. Recently certain Muhammadan leaders, who are lamentably lacking in wisdom and prudence, have proposed to hold a joint meeting of Hindus and Muhammadans to give expression to the feelings of pleasure and satisfaction with which the country has heard of the safe return of Their Majesties the King Emperor and the Queen Empress. This proposal is assuredly reasonable in the extreme, and is calculated to bring the two communities together; but the Editor would fail in the performance of his religious duties if he took no step to point out that the meeting in question is likely to prove injurious to Muhammadans. Such meetings are indeed calculated to impress Government with the idea that Muhammadans are satisfied with the administrative changes, although the reverse is the case. As a matter of fact, Muhammadans do not now repose that confidence in Government that they formerly entertained. After remarking that the Hon'ble Mian Muhammad Shafi, who considers himself to be admitted leader of Muhammadans, has, in consultation with the Hon'ble Lala Shadi Lal, decided to hold the meeting in question, the Editor enquires whether the former has consented to take part in the meeting with the approval of any Muslim Association. In conclusion, he says that if Hindus and Muhammadans wish to hold a united meeting they can do so on some other occasion.

Muhammadans and their future policy.

10. The Vakil (Amritsar) of the 31st January (received on 8th February) 1912, publishes a communication headed "The future policy of Indian Muhammadans." The writer—one Muhammad Abdul Kadir of Delhi—refers to the Vikar-ul-Mulk's letter contributed to the Aligarh Institute Gazette and says that the entire Muhammadan community is quite at one with the Nawab. He then goes on to say that Muhammadans have no reason to feel sorry at the annulment of the Partition of Bengal, seeing that they never urged the Government to bring about the partition. Indeed, they acquiesce in the recent territorial redistribution, provided that Government gives a definite guarantee and assurance that the interests of Muhammadans will be duly safeguarded, as was the case before the partition. They, however, complain that, since the partition was proclaimed as a "settled fact" and justified on the plea of Muhammadan interests and also because Muhammadans were led by these promises to accord whole-hearted support to Government at a very critical moment, the annulment of the same has placed them in a false position; seeing that it has obliged them to admit that the measure was a blunder. Moreover, as matters at present stand, Muhammadan leaders will find it impossible to induce their co-religionists to side with Government. Continuing, the writer says that it will be best for Muhammadans to continue to keep aloof from the Congress so long as that body does not formulate a modus operandi on the basis of mutual understanding, guaranteeing that the Hindu majority will not be allowed to swamp the Muhammadan minority. In conclusion, the writer says that, if the grievances of Muhammadans are not redressed, it will still be the duty of the latter to remain loyal and faithful to Government, to obey its laws, to safeguard their own interests, to try to rely on themselves in making political and educational progress, to come to a better understanding with Hindus, and to refrain from adopting an unnecessarily aggressive attitude towards the latter.

An open letter to Lord Curzon.

11. The Zamindar (Lahore), of the 4th February 1912, publishes "An open letter to Lord Curzon—I." In this letter the Editor says that, while his Lordship was Viceroy of India, some people thought that he was of a despotic temperament, and that he, unlike some true Englishmen, was opposed to liberty being granted to Indians. It is probable that Indian Muhammadans also shared the above view; but, since his Lordship's departure from India, they have begun to think better of him, and now regard him as the best and truest well-wisher of Muhammadans. His Lordship has admitted that Muhammadans are not only loyal, but also enjoy political importance. After thanking the ex-Viceroy for the Partition of Bengal, the writer says that, when that measure was carried into effect, the Prophet's followers believed that the reprehensible doings and the empty threats of Bengalis would fail to make a mighty Government like the British deviate from its course. Their belief was all the more strengthened by the policy pursued by his Lordship's successors, as also by the announcement of the Secretary of State that the measure in question was a "settled fact."

III.—Native States.

Kashmir affairs.

12. The Vakil (Amritsar), of the 31st January (received on the 7th February) 1912, publishes a communication headed "The wretched condition of Muhammadans in the Jammu and Kashmir State." The writer says that the only way to encourage education among the backward communities, especially among Muhammadans, is by giving scholarships to students in order to induce them to prosecute their studies further. It is with this object in view that the Kashmir Darbar has instituted a number of State scholarships. It is, however, to be greatly regretted that, in distributing these scholarships, the claims of Muhammadans have been so ruthlessly ignored. The writer then goes on to publish statistics showing that, while scholarships of the aggregate value of Rs. 3,200 per annum have been given to the Mian (the ruling) community, a sum of only Rs. 432 per annum has been set apart for Muhammadans. These statistics further show that, while a sum of Rs. 1,296 has been set apart for the benefit of Sanskrit scholars, not a single scholarship has been given for the study of Arabic.

V.—Native Societies and Religious Matters.

Complaint against the Gurukul.

13. The Indar (Lahore), of the 26th January 1912, publishes a leader headed "The preaching of the Vedas and a few serious observations." The paper deplores the failure of the Gurukul and attributes the same to the mischievous policy of those who are at the helm of affairs, and who threaten to sever their connection with the institution if attempts are made to interfere with their doings. In support of its view it publishes correspondence between Lala Nand Lal, the Chief Manager of the Gurukul Kangri, and one Pandit Atma Ram Vedi. It then goes on to invite public attention to the letters referred to, and says that they show that the Gurukul has proved a complete failure. Next it reproduces two letters from Ishwar Das and Kundan Lal to the address of the Manager of the Gurukul, and says that these show that the Manager of the Institution has misappropriated a sum of Rs. 1,500.

Complaint against Lala Munshi Ram.

14. The Indar (Lahore), of the 26th January 1912, publishes an article under the heading "Public anxiety and Lala Munshi Ram's reply." The paper deplores the conduct of Lala Munshi Ram in bringing false charges against others in order to throw a veil over his own defects; and refers to the Lala's letter in the Parcharak, in which he makes unseemly attacks on Lala Hansraj and others. After endeavouring to refute the charges made in the letter under reference, the paper says that the management of the Gurukul is extremely bad and worthless.

VI.—Legislation.

The Press Act.

15. The Zamindar (Lahore), of the 31st January 1912, publishes a paragraph headed "This two-edged sword requires a sheath." In the recent sitting of the National Congress, says the paper, it was moved that, as the new Press Act—which was passed with a view to putting an end to revolutionary and seditious writings—was no longer needed in the country it was desirable that it should now be repealed. This is as it should be; and it is to be hoped that the (All-India) Muslim League also will pass a similar resolution, and thus afford a proof of its readiness to co-operate with Hindus in political affairs. It may be borne in mind that, when the Law in question was passed, the peace of the country was in danger and the authorities thought that the press alone was responsible for this state of affairs. In order, therefore, to gag (Indian) journalists the authorities passed the Act and gave the District Magistrates a free hand in dealing with them. After remarking that such Acts bespeak the misfortune of His Majesty's Indian subjects, the paper says that, when the Bill was presented in the Viceregal Council, Mr. Gokhale and some of his Hindu Colleagues opposed it, but the Muhammadan Members of the Council were so overpowered by feelings of "loyalty" that they strongly supported the same, with the result that it was placed on the Statute Book. In doing this, they were carried away by the notion that the law in question was calculated to injure the Hindu press alone. They should, however, bear in mind that the Press Act is a double-edged sword, which makes no distinction between Hindus and Muhammadans. Indeed, it has caused more hardship to Muslim journalists than to their Hindu confréres.

Continuing its remarks in its issue, dated the 1st February 1912, the paper publishes the names of six Hindu and the same number of Muslim papers that have been so far required to furnish securities; and says that, while among the six Musalman papers the Haq alone has been able to preserve its existence by depositing the security, as many as three Hindu papers, viz., the Musafir of Agra, the Jhang Sial and the newly started Hindu, have been able to furnish the amounts demanded from them. "We" were given to understand that the Press Act was meant to put an end to seditious writings; but the above-mentioned papers were required to furnish securities for publishing articles which were regarded as offensive from religious or communal points of view. The paper then refers to the case of the Edward Gazette (Abbottabad), which, it says, was called upon to furnish security because the paper named reported that a Musalman official had been dismissed because he had failed to Salam an officer during the time when he was engaged in repeating prayers. If the paper named, says the Zamindar, had published the account with honest motives, the local authorities should have made enquiries into the matter; and if they had found the allegations well-founded they should have taken steps to reprimand the officer concerned. In the event, however, of the allegations having turned out to be false, a warning to the Editor would have been sufficient.

16. The Observer (Lahore), of the 7th January 1912, publishes the following:—

Usury in the Punjab.

"In England there has been some attempt to deal with usury by the compulsory registration of money-lenders, and by giving the courts powers to enable them to reduce the rate of interest when it is considered that the rate claimed is exorbitant. Our Indian legislators, writes an Anglo-Indian correspondent, might well follow this example, and even go still further in order to strike at the very root of the evil. Any future registration on this subject should aim at three objects. Firstly, to regulate the trade of usury; secondly, adequately to protect the interests of both parties, the borrower and the lender; thirdly, to place obstacles in the way of borrowers so as to guard them against themselves. This last is most important, as at present the fatal ease with which money can be borrowed leads many into the web of the money-lenders. These three objects can easily be attained by enacting that: (1) All money-lenders must be registered. (2) All advertisements of money-lenders must be accompanied by their full registered names and addresses which should be embodied in the advertisements. (3) All newspapers should be supplied with a list of registered money-lenders. (4) In all cases where money is lent to a Government servant on the security of a promissory note, that promissory note must be attested as a witness by the debtor's immediate superior or by a magistrate or by both. In the absence of such attestation the note should not hold good in a court of law. (5) The courts should be empowered to reduce the rate of interest in any case in which, in the opinion of the court, the rate is exorbitant."

17. The Watan (Lahore), of the 2nd February 1912, publishes a note headed "Usury in the Punjab." The paper refers to the circular letter on the above subject which has recently been issued by the Punjab Government, and says that this shows that Government has now come to realise how poor Europeans and Eurasians are being ill-treated by money-lenders. The paper admits that many debtors fall into difficulties and trouble through their own foolish deeds; but asks whether it is not the duty of the Legislature to protect these foolish persons, and save them from the machinations of native money-lenders. In England money-lenders are required to have their names registered, while the courts in that country are authorised to reduce rates of interest. Indian Courts also should follow in the footsteps of English Courts in the matter; and, as a matter of fact, the circumstances of this country demand even more stringent laws regarding usury than is the case in England.

Usury in the Punjab.

Mr. Basu's Bill.

18. Under the heading "Mr. Basu's Bill and the Sikhs," the Khalsa Advocate (Amritsar), of the 2nd February 1912, observes as follows :—

"The need which is now felt by the supporters of Mr. Basu's Bill has never been felt by the Sikhs, for the Anand Marriage ritual has been in vogue and all such marriages have been performed from the time of our Guru Sahibs with the sanction of the sacred Guru Granth Sahib. As certain doubts were cast in certain quarters as to the legal validity of Anand Marriages, the Hon'ble Tikka Sahib (now His Highness Maharaja Sahib) Ripudaman Singh of Nabha, then a member of the Viceroy's Legislative Council, brought in the Anand Marriage Bill. The Tikka Sahib's place in the Council was subsequently taken by the Hon'ble Sardar Sundar Singh Majithia and the Bill was passed. On the other hand if Mr. Basu's Bill were to be passed, the duplication, involved so far as the Sikhs are concerned, would cause complication and uncertainty. For this reason we must request the Government to carefully consider the case of the Sikhs as a special one and to so arrange that if that Bill is carried the Sikhs may be expressly exempted from its operation. The Anand Marriage is not only legally valid but has a religious sanction, and the Sikhs want no other provision in that behalf. Mr. Basu's Bill can only confer legal and not religious sanction and would thus, so far as Sikhs are concerned, fall far short of what they have already got in the shape of the Anand Marriage Bill."

Sikhs and their representatives in the Punjab Legislative Council.

19. The Khalsa Advocate (Amritsar), of the 26th January 1912, has the following :—

"The Civil and Military Gazette understands that His Honour the Lieutenant-Governor of the Punjab has decided to throw open two seats on the Punjab Legislative Council to representatives of the District Boards.

* * * * * * * *

"At present the Sikhs have only two members in the Legislative Council. If the District Boards return, as might be naturally expected, one Hindu and one Muhammadan to the seats made available, the Sikhs will be nowhere so far as the District Boards are concerned, and the general representation of Sikhs in the Council will be still further weakened, their proportion falling still lower. In the interests of the Sikh Community we would humbly suggest to Government to raise the number of District Board's seats to 3 instead of 2 and to rsserve 1 seat each for representatives of Hindu, Muhammadan and Sikh interests, to be elected by Hindu, Muhammadan and Sikh members of District Boards respectively. Such an arrangement will obviate any difficulties in the constitution of electorates or in the course of election through rivalry between candidates of sister communities but will ensure a calm and undisturbed representation of all the different communities and interests. We respectfully submit this suggestion to His Honour for His Honour's favourable consideration, and hope His Honour will feel his way to graciously accept it. We need hardly say that should it be found possible to accept our humble suggestion it will, we feel sure, result in giving deep and unstinted satisfaction to one and all."

VII.—General Administration.

(a)—Judicial.

The newly-appointed Judges of the Calcutta High Court.

20. The Tribune (Lahore), of the 6th February 1912, has the following :—

"Three, and not four as telegraphed to us, additional Judges have been appointed in the Calcutta High Court for a period of two years. The fourth is Mr. Richardson, but his appointment has been deferred as at present he is in ill-health. We need notice only two appointments, namely, those of Mr. A. Chaudhri and Mr. Hasan Imam. Considerable surprise will be felt at Mr. Chaudhri having accepted a Judgeship for it will mean in his case a very large loss of income. We are left to infer that other considerations of public duty must have prevailed with him. There can be no question however that Mr. Chaudhri will be an accession of strength to the High Court and will help in maintaining its best traditions. Mr. Hasan Imam is a much younger man and was practicing as a Barrister at Bankipore. He joined the Calcutta Bar only last year. He is the younger brother of the Hon'ble Mr. Ali Imam and the nephew of Mr. Justice Sharf-ud-din. It remains to be added that both Mr. Chaudhri and Mr. Hasan Imam are staunch Congressmen and the Government are to be congratulated on reverting to the old practice of appointing Congressmen Judges of High Courts. These appointments also demonstrate that there is no idea at present of creating a separate High Court for Behar."

(d)—Education.

A complaint.

21. The Tribune (Lahore), of the 2nd February 1912, publishes the following :—

"We learn that at a recent meeting, the Syndicate of the Panjab University has decided to discontinue the grant made to the D. A.-V. College and the Islamia College for the support of the Ayurvedic and the Unani classes which are respectively held in connection with them. This decision of the Syndicate is so arbitrary and unconstitutional that it is difficult to speak of it in terms of moderation. The development and promotion of Oriental learning has been one of the avowed objects of the Panjab University and the action of the Syndicate, specially at a moment when these Departments, specially the Ayurvedic department in the D. A.-V. College has begun to expand and show a level of efficiency unknown before, strikes at the very core and conception of what has all along been the distinguishing characteristic of the University. It is true that exponents of Western systems of medicine have never any love lost for the indigenous systems, and that attempts have time and again been made by the representatives of the former to withdraw the support which the University has been giving to the latter. But their attempts have invariably failed, the University authorities have steadily refused to leave out of consideration one of the fundamental objects of its foundation."

Complaint against the Principal and others of the D. A.-V. College.

22. The Loyal Gazette (Lahore), of the 28th January (received on the 7th February) 1912, publishes an article headed "The Lohri festival in D. A.-V. College." The paper says that it has received several communications from Sikh students (of the D. A.-V. College ?) from which it appears that when the recent Lohri festival was celebrated in the Boarding-House attached to the D. A.-V. College, the students grossly ridiculed the Sikh, Muhammadan, and Hindu religions in the presence of the Principal, the Superintendent of the Boarding-House, and others. Bhagat Ishar Das could not tolerate the Sikh religion being insulted in that way, and, therefore, protested ; but the boys cried shame upon him, with the result that the Bhagat left the place, while the boys were encouraged by the Principal to go on with their work of insulting and defaming their (own ?) ancestors, as also those of others. After regretting the conduct of the Aryas in wounding the feelings of the Sikh community, the paper expresses sorrow at the indifference displayed by Government in the matter ; and urges Aryas to mend their ways.

The Khalsa College, Amritsar.

23. Under the heading "The Khalsa College, Amritsar," the Khalsa Advocate (Amritsar), of the 2nd February 1912, observes as follows :—

"Our first movement for the uplift of the Panth is the Khalsa College, Amritsar. Horny-handed sons of the land of the five rivers contributed with open hearts and hands towards the funds of the institution. The Government of the Punjab patronised it very kindly, and Sir Charles Rivaz in one meeting, got us lacs of Rupees for its upkeep.

"Very high hopes were entertained of the future of the college, which rose under such auspices. Not only did it augur the prospects of a first rate College, but the people began to dream of a net-work of its feeder-schools sprinkled all over the province.

"So far, however, supremely unfortunate as it is, our hopes have been justified only in brick and mortar. The building beats the erections of all other colleges in the province. But silent walls of themselves cannot make a college. There should be inmates of whom it cannot boast any respectable number. It does not seem to be justifying in these days much of its raison d'être. It was meant for the education of the Sikh youths, with the object of bringing them up as men of high education together with a sincere love of their own religion. But the facts are that the majority of the rising hopes of the Panth are knocking the gates of non-Sikh colleges, like the Dayal Singh and D. A.-V. Compared with the number of the Sikh students, who are studying in other colleges, the Khalsa College cannot put up a comely appearance.

"The Managing Committee should wake up and look into the state of affairs. They should brood over the conditions making for success and try to bring them about.

"The low scale of fees exacted from Sikh students, which was in force, has also been done away with. The students have always complained, and they are loud in their cries about the grievances even now, that the qualifications of the professors are very common place. This is the main reason why the Sikh students prefer non-Sectarian Colleges to their own.

"The deplorable want of a religious ballast among such youths may be more easily imagined than described.

"It will therefore be necessary to over-haul the whole staff. A capable and experienced European should be appointed to take over the arduous duties of the post of Principal who should throw himself whole-heartedly into work of the institution. All other professors should be recruited from among the best candidates. The scale of salaries should be high enough to attract really capable men. There should be special facilities in the Boarding House, and the sessions should in every way be those of the Lahore Colleges.

"The Managing Committee should attend to the following questions :—

"1. Why has the number of boarders gone down ?

"2. Why have only four students of the Khalsa Collegiate School joined the College in the First Year ?

"3. Who is working in place of the Science Professor for a year ?

"This will emphasise the necessity there is of looking out the whole machinery and hammering down any loose screws that might be detected.

"Riff-raff arrangements, like the appointment of clerks as superintendents on a small pittance, won't do. It is hard for one man to discharge more than one duty satisfactorily.

"Unless the Committee turns its attention to the points, raised in the above lines, we would feel it our painful duty to place more details about the tottering state of the College before the public."

(h) – Miscellaneous.

The Zamindar and its enemies.

24. Writing under the heading "A cry for redress addressed to Muhammadans," the Zamindar (Lahore), of the 1st February 1912, says that these are the days when one must suffer hardship and oppression in silence; and when even the fundamental rights of humanity are trampled upon. Blessed are those people, it adds, who bear the oppression practised on them by their enemies; and unfortunate are those people whose throats are cut and whose hearts are pierced by the knives of friends. Judged by these standards the inhabitants of Tripoli and Persia must be considered as blessed, seeing that they are at least fortunate enough to die at the hands of those who are not believers in the Kalima. "We," on the other hand, are unfortunately being held up by "our" friends and dear ones as seditiously and rebelliously disposed towards Government; although this is admittedly the most offensive charge that can be brought against a Muhammadan in this country. It has already been stated how certain journalists and leaders are doing their level best to discredit him (the editor of the Zamindar) in the eyes of Government simply because he urged his co-religionists to rely on their own strength of arms, to firmly but respectfully demand their rights from Government, and to consider those European powers which are shedding the blood of Muhammadans, as scorpions and bitter enemies of Islam. "Our" traducers are in the habit of seeking interviews with the authorities with a view to misrepresenting "us" as mischief-makers and seditionists. If "we" say that we have nobody to help "us" (the word used is shafi which is also a sarcastic reference to the Hon'ble Mian Muhammad Shafi), they smell sedition in the assertion. Again, if "we" say that "we" regard nothing with as much veneration (the word used is Qibla and is probably a reference to Nawab Fateh Ali Khan who is addressed as such by the Millat) as the Kaaba, they read sedition in it. Continuing, the editor reports that he happened to have an interview with Mr. Ferguson, Additional District Magistrate, Lahore, on the 31st January last, when the officer named asked him whether he was in the habit of advising his readers to put the Bible into the fire. Thereupon he told Mr. Ferguson that Muhammadans consider the Bible as an inspired book, and that, under these circumstances, it was impossible for him to urge his co-religionists to consign the same to the flames. He also asked the officer named whether he ever read the Zamindar; but the latter replied that he had only heard of it and that he would carefully perúse the same (in future). Thereupon the editor told him that if he experienced any difficulty in perusing his paper he should not consult Maulana No. 1 (the reference is to the editor of the Watan) or men of his type to elucidate the knotty points, but should be so kind as to send for the editor of the Zamindar. It is a pity, he adds, that things should have come to such a pass that a couplet which has appeared in the Zamindar and in which the wish is expressed that the cry of "There is but one God" will be heard in Rome has been construed as tantamount to a suggestion to burn the Bible. In the issue of his paper, dated the 26th ultimo, his remark that the Prophet has no peer and that Muhammadans owe allegiance to George V is regarded by the editor of the Watan as seditious, because the latter says that the King Emperor is peerless. After enquiring whether justice has become a thing of the past and whether fair-minded Muhammadans have ceased to exist, the editor urges the British Government and Muhammadans to protect him against the attacks of the editor of the Watan and others.

C. STEAD,

LAHORE:

The 10*th February* 1912.

Assistant to the Deputy Inspector General of Police,
Criminal Investigation Department, Punjab.

Punjab Government Press, Lahore—15-2-12—112—107—T. W. L.

[ Confidential. ]

[ Vol. XXV. ] SELECTIONS [ No. 7. ]

FROM THE

NATIVE NEWSPAPERS

PUBLISHED IN THE PUNJAB.

Examined up to 17th February 1912.

---

CONTENTS.

Page.

I.—Politics.

(a) Foreign—

1. China and Persia (Zamindar) ... ... 103
2. Indentured labour for Colonies (Hindustan) ... ib.
3. The Turco-Italian War (Observer) ... ... ib.

(b) Home—

4. Home rule in India (Akhbar-i-'Am) ... 104
5. A suggestion for raising a crore of Indian Volunteers (Zamindar) ... ... ... ib.
6. The advent of the Mehdi (Zamindar) ... ib.
7. Government and Hindus and Muhammadans (Zamiudar) ... ... ... 105
8. Muhammadans and Government (Millat) ... 106
9. An open letter to Lord Curzon (Zamindar) ... ib.
10. The post of Secretary to the Government of India, in the Home Department (Tribune) ... 107

II.—Afghanistan and Trans-Frontier.

Nil.

III.—Native States.

11. Sardar Gurdit Singh and His Highness the Maharaja of Patiala (Khalsa Advocate) ... 108
12. The powers of an Indian Chief (Tribune) ... ib. and (Observer) ... 109

IV.—Kine-killing.

Nil.

V.—Native Societies and Religious Matters.

13. Sikhs and Aryas (Loyal Gazette) ... ... 109
14. A complaint (Vakil) ... ... ... 110

Page.

VI.—Legislation.

Nil.

VII.—General Administration.

(a) Judicial—

Nil.

(b) Police—

15. Higher appointments in the Police Department (Jhang Sial) ... ... ... 110

(c) Municipal and Cantonment affairs—

Nil.

(d) Education —

16. A highly objectionable Text-Book (Observer) ... 110

(e)—Agriculture and questions affecting the land—

Nil.

(f) Railways and Communications—

Nil.

(g) Postal matters—

17. Punjabi and postal service (Khalsa Advocate) ... 111

(h) Miscellaneous—

18. Delhi Civil Lines (Tribune) ... ... ib.
19. The Foreign office and Frontier officials (Tribune) ib.

LIST OF NEWSPAPERS AND PERIODICALS EXAMINED BY THE SPECIAL BRANCH AS IT STOOD ON THE 17TH FEBRUARY 1912.

| No. | Name. | Locality. | Name of Publisher. | Circulation. |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| | ENGLISH. | | | |
| | DAILY. | | | |
| 1 | Tribune ... | Lahore ... | Bihari Lal ... | 1,758 copies. |
| | TRI-WEEKLY. | | | |
| 2 | Panjabee ... | Lahore ... | Mul Chand ... | 2,424 copies. |
| | BI-WEEKLY. | | | |
| 3 | Observer ... | Lahore ... | Nizam-ud-din ... | 1,000 copies. |
| 4 | Punjab Times and Frontier News. | Rawalpindi ... | J. R. Thapur ... | 200 „ |
| | WEEKLY. | | | |
| 5 | Arya Patrika ... | Lahore ... | Devi Chand ... | 650 copies. |
| 6 | Harbinger ... | Do. ... | Durga Parshad ... | 300 „ |
| 7 | Khalsa Advocate ... | Amritsar ... | Bahadar Singh ... | 752 „ |
| | MONTHLY. | | | |
| 8 | D. A.-V. College Magazine... | Lahore ... | Saraswati Nath ... | 1,000 copies. |
| 9 | Forman Christian College Notes. | Do. ... | ... | ... |
| 10 | Jijnasu ... | Do. ... | Ishwar Das ... | ... |
| 11 | Practical Medicine ... | Delhi ... | ... | ... |
| 12 | Punjab Educational Journal | Lahore ... | R. B. Mohan Lal ... | 700 copies. |
| 13 | Punjab Mission News ... | Do. ... | Revd. Wigram ... | 250 „ |
| 14 | Ravi ... | Do. ... | Mr. B. M. Jones ... | ... |
| 15 | Review of Religions ... | Qadian (Gurdaspur) ... | Sadr Anjuman Ahmadia, Qadian. | 800 copies. |
| 16 | Science Grounded Religion... | Lahore ... | Dev Rattan ... | 25 „ |
| 17 | Teacher ... | Dinga (Gujrat) ... | Kanhaya Singh ... | 200 „ |
| | URDU. | | | |
| | DAILY. | | | |
| 18 | Akhbar-i-'Am ... | Lahore ... | Govind Sahai ... | 630 copies. |
| 19 | Paisa Akhbar ... | Do. ... | Abdul Aziz ... | 1,011 „ |
| 20 | Watan ... | Do. ... | Muhammad Insha Alla ... | ... |
| 21 | Zamindar ... | Do. ... | Zafar Ali Khan, B.A. ... | ... |
| | BI-WEEKLY. | | | |
| 22 | Vakil ... | Amritsar ... | Abdul Aziz ... | 1,970 copies. |
| | WEEKLY. | | | |
| 23 | Afghan ... | Peshawar ... | Saiyid Muhammad Abdulla | 500 copies. |
| 24 | Ahl-i-Hadis ... | Amritsar ... | Sanaulla ... | 925 „ |
| 25 | Ahluwalia Gazette ... | Do. ... | Lehna Singh ... | 500 „ |
| 26 | Army News ... | Ludhiana ... | Hira Lal & Co. ... | 1,300 „ |
| 27 | Arorbans Gazette ... | Amritsar ... | Labh Singh ... | ... |
| 28 | Arya Gazette ... | Lahore ... | Bhowani Das ... | 550 copies. |
| 29 | Badar ... | Qadian, Gurdaspur district | Muhammad Sadiq ... | 200 „ |

LIST OF NEWSPAPERS AND PERIODICALS EXAMINED BY THE SPECIAL BRANCH AS IT STOOD ON THE 17TH FEBRUARY 1912—CONTINUED.

| No. | Name. | Locality. | Name of Publisher. | Circulation. |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| | URDU—CONTINUED. | | | |
| | WEEKLY—continued. | | | |
| 30 | Bharat ... | Jullundur ... | Thakur Sheoratan Singh | ... |
| 31 | Civil and Military News ... | Ludhiana ... | Saiyid Muhammad ... | 1,325 copies. |
| 32 | Curzon Gazette ... | Delhi ... | Mirza Hairat ... | 111 „ |
| 33 | Delhi Gazette ... | Do. ... | Sajjad Husain ... | 200 „ |
| 34 | Edward Gazette ... | Abbott-abad ... | Muhammad Latif ... | 200 „ |
| 35 | Hakam ... | Qadian, Gurdaspur district | Yakub Ali .. | 900 „ |
| 36 | Haq .. | Delhi ... | Kasim Ali .. | 200 „ |
| 37 | Haq Pasand ... | Amritsar .. | Ram Nath ... | 382 „ |
| 38 | Hindu ... | Lahore ... | Hari Lal Sharma ... | ... |
| 39 | Hindustan ... | Do. ... | Ram Sarn Dutt ... | 8,070 copies. |
| 40 | Indar ... | Do. ... | Dharm Pal, B A. ... | ... |
| 41 | Islam ... | Do. ... | Abdul Latif ... | 200 copies. |
| 42 | Jhang Sial ... | Jhang ... | Prabh Dyal ... | 2,262 „ |
| 43 | Kapurthala Akhbar ... | Kapurthala ... | Hamid Husain ... | 155 „ |
| 44 | Loyal Gazette ... | Lahore ... | Amar Singh ... | 200 „ |
| 45 | Lytton Gazette ... | Delhi ... | Bulaki Das ... | 1,000 „ |
| 46 | Milap ... | Lyallpur ... | Jawahar Lal ... | ... |
| 47 | Millat ... | Lahore .. | Shuja Ulla ... | 1,500 copies |
| 48 | Mister Gazette ... | Do. .. | Ali Bakhsh .. | 150 „ |
| 49 | Munir ... | Jhang .. | Hafiz Khuda Bakhsh ... | 200 „ |
| 50 | Musalman .. | Amritsar ... | Sana-ulla .. | 400 „ |
| 51 | Nur ... | Qadian, Gurdaspur district | Muhammad Yusaf .. | 200 „ |
| 52 | Nur Afshan ... | Ludhiana ... | Revd. Dr. E. M. Wherry | 500 „ |
| 53 | Paisa Akhbar ... | Lahore ... | Abdul Aziz ... | 8,377 „ |
| 54 | Parkash .. | Do. .. | Krishan ... | 1,723 „ |
| 55 | Punjab Advocate ... | Mianwali ... | Karm Chand, Bahl ... | 1,000 „ |
| 56 | Punjab Samachar ... | Lahore ... | Hira Lal ... | 705 „ |
| 57 | Rajput Gazette ... | Do. ... | Thakur Sukhram Das ... | 650 „ |
| 58 | Municipal Gazette and Sada-i-Hind. | Do. ... | Din Muhammad ... | 500 „ |
| 59 | Sadiq-ul-Akhbar ... | Bahawalpur ... | Maulvi Ata Ullah .. | 392 „ |
| 60 | Ditto ... | Rewari ... | Safdar Hussain ... | 200 „ |
| 61 | Sanatan Dharm Pracharak... | Amritsar ... | Rulia Ram ... | 200 „ |
| 62 | Shanti ... | Rawalpindi ... | Kishan Chand Mohan ... | 300 „ |
| 63 | Sialkot Paper ... | Sialkot ... | Todar Mal ... | 500 „ |
| 64 | Siraj-ul-Akhbar ... | Jhelum ... | Maulvi Fakir Muhammad | 450 „ |
| 65 | Tahzib-ul-Niswan ... | Lahore ... | Mumtaz Ali .. | 240 „ |

LIST OF NEWSPAPERS AND PERIODICALS EXAMINED BY THE SPECIAL BRANCH AS IT STOOD ON THE 17TH FEBRUARY 1912—CONCLUDED.

| No. | Name. | Locality. | Name of Publisher. | Circulation. |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| | URDU—CONCLUDED. | | | |
| | WEEKLY—concluded. | | | |
| 66 | Victoria Paper ... | Sialkot ... | Gian Chand ... | 600 copies. |
| 67 | Wafadar* ... | Lahore ... | Fazal-ud-din ... | 600 „ |
| 68 | Waqt ... | Do. ... | Ali Husain ... | 200 „ |
| 69 | Watan ... | Do. ... | Muhammad Insha Ullah... | 1,800 „ |
| 70 | Zamindar ... | Do. ... | Zafar Ali Khan, B.A. ... | 750 „ |
| | FORTNIGHTLY. | | | |
| 71 | Biwah Samachar* ... | Lahore ... | Ram Chand ... | 300 copies. |
| 72 | Kam Dhenu ... | Ludhiana ... | Daulat Ram ... | 100 „ |
| 73 | Mohyal Gazette ... | Kala, Jhelum district ... | Mehta Sham Das ... | 250 „ |
| | MONTHLY. | | | |
| 74 | Arorbans* Parkash ... | Lahore ... | Salig Ram ... | 200 copies. |
| 75 | Arya Musafir ... | Jullundur ... | Wazir Chand ... | 1,300 „ |
| 76 | Indar* ... | Lahore ... | Dharampal, B.A. ... | 3,000 „ |
| 77 | Jauhar* ... | Amritsar ... | Muhammad Ismail Khan | 200 „ |
| 78 | Kakezai Social Reformer ... | Lahore ... | Fazl Din ... | 200 „ |
| 79 | Makhzan ... | Delhi ... | Abdul Kadir ... | 4,000 „ |
| 80 | Rafiq ... | Lahore ... | Charinji Lal ... | 500 „ |
| 81 | Sadhu ... | Do. ... | Sheobart Lal ... | 500 „ |
| 82 | Martand ... | Do. ... | Kanhya Lal ... | 250 „ |
| 83 | Raghbir Patrika ... | Do. ... | Prab Dial ... | 500 „ |
| 84 | Zaban ... | Delhi ... | Hamid Hasain ... | 500 „ |
| | GURMUKHI. | | | |
| | WEEKLY. | | | |
| 85 | Khalsa Sewak ... | Amritsar ... | Jiwan Singh ... | 1,000 copies. |
| 85 | Punjab Reporter ... | Do. ... | Ganda Singh ... | ... |
| 87 | Punjabi Surma ... | Lahore ... | Gian Chand ... | 1,000 copies. |

* Not received during the week.

I—Politics.

(a)—Foreign.

China and Persia.

1. Under the heading "Two crippled persons of Asia whose legs have been broken," the Zamindar (Lahore), of the 7th February 1912, publishes a cartoon in which two crippled persons, one a Chinaman and the other a Persian, are standing before a Chinese pagoda and conversing with each other. The letter press is as follows:—

"Persia—'My dear brother! Look at me a little. My legs have been broken and I have not the power to move. I wish to rise with a crutch, but I cannot do so. For God's sake, give me a prescription or refer me to a doctor who can put me on my legs and make me able to walk.'

"China—'Dear brother! I am also a cripple like you, but thank God the doctor under whose treatment I have been placed is my countryman, and not a foreigner who secures fees and at the same time crushes those bones that are left. If you wish to recover, get the help of a Persian physician.'

"Persia—'I see none but Russian doctors. God alone can help me.

'Let my pains remain a secret from interested physicians.

'I wish that some invisible power (lit. treasure) would treat me.'"

Indentured labour for colonies.

2. The Hindustan (Lahore), of the 2nd February 1912, publishes an article headed "Enticing away simple-minded Indians to foreign countries: a sensational case." It is extremely necessary, says the Editor, that Government should take prompt steps to put an end to the existence of those depôts which have been established with a view to decoying simple-minded Indians to serve as coolies in foreign countries. After remarking that the system of indentured labour is no better than slavery, the Editor says that four or five years ago one Bindra Ban published an account of how he was induced to go to Madagascar, where he was grossly ill-treated by his employers. All these show what tactics are employed to make slaves of Indians, and how grossly illegal deeds are committed with a view to entrapping them. Under these circumstances it is necessary for Government to adopt stringent measures with a view to putting an end to these illegalities. The Editor then goes on to publish an account of a case which is pending in the Court of the Joint-Magistrate of Cawnpore, and in which two women, named Subhrani and Jigrani, are alleged to have been deceived into signing a contract for service in British Guiana.

The Turco-Italian War.

3. The following is from the Observer (Lahore), of 14th February 1912:—

"The Turco-Italian War is still dragging along. The Italians have not made any advance inland, and as the weather becomes warmer, their progress in Tripoli will be effectually barred. It need hardly be pointed out that advance or no advance, the cost of maintenance of the army on a war-footing must be telling on the resources of the Italian Government. But though the financial position of Italy is not so bad as that of some other Powers, no one can be so blind as not to see that it must be playing the waiting game for some definite purpose. In the first place, the war is costing much to Turkey, as Ottoman commanders are discharging the expenses of the Arab volunteers. Secondly, the reinforcements of Turkish troops and remittances of money to Tripoli, which were possible during the early stages of the War, have now become most difficult owing to the rigorous vigilance of the French and Egyptian Governments. Thirdly, the revolutionary bands in the Ottoman Empire have already begun their nefarious campaign of bomb-throwing and commission of other outrages, and with the melting of the snows, these bands become very active. Grave apprehensions are entertained that the Bulgars and Greeks of Turkey may make common cause and instead of cutting one another's throats disturb the peace in a more serious fashion. The Albanians are also restless and who knows but the 'humanitarianism' of some European Power or other may incite the other sections of the population also to revolt?

"Once there are disturbances in Turkey, the Powers are sure to intervene and press the Ottoman Government to surrender Tripoli to Italy for a modest indemnity. If Turkey and Italy are left alone, if considerations of the 'peace of Europe' do not induce other Governments to interfere in the eventuality of Italy invading some portion of European Turkey, if the Ottoman Empire remains in a tranquil condition, the Turks are sure to win. But there are so many 'ifs.' The exchange of congratulations between King Emmanuel and other European potentates and the exchange of visits between Western politicians may mean nothing at all, or they may be fraught with the gravest consequences to the international situation. The prolongation of the war may disturb the equanimity of some Power which may persuade the rest to put concerted pressure on the belligerents to cease the war. The internal condition of Turkey may become serious owing to the spring disturbances or the quarrel between the Committee of Union and Progress and the new party of Union and Liberalism. We should not, in short, conclude from Italy's inactivity that the situation is improving. Practically all Muhammadan States are at a crisis which must be exercising the minds of Muhammadan statesmen all over the world. If the crisis is passed and genuine humanity triumphs over earth hunger, all will be well. Otherwise the prospect is gloomy beyond description."

(b)—Home.

Home rule in India.

4. The Akhbar-i-'Am (Lahore), of the 6th February 1912, publishes a leader headed "India and Home rule." The paper refers to the meeting that was recently held in London under the auspices of the East India Association, and in which Mr. Henry Keene read a paper on Home rule for India. It also publishes a summary of the subsequent debate; and says that Mr. Pennington was right when he observed that, so long as the various communities of India gave no practical proof of their union and solidarity and so long as they took no steps to convince the British people of their honesty, ability, and reliability, Home rule or Swaraj in India would remain impossible. The relations between the two great communities of India are at present unsatisfactory; and, besides, there exists a great gulf between the rulers and the ruled. If there is anything calculated to make Indians fit for Swaraj it is their admitted loyalty to British rule; but even in this matter it must be observed that all communities are not regarded as equally loyal. If, however, Indians carry on a struggle with due diligence in order to gain their legitimate ends they are likely to eventually succeed in removing the (at present) insurmountable obstacles in the road to the attainment of Swaraj. When all the communities of India unite to take part in the Indian National Congress, and when they regard each others interests as their own, then there will be some hope for Swaraj. Again when all the communities of India come to regard the British Government as their own; when the British people become convinced that their interests are not in conflict with Indian interests; and when the various Indian communities sink all religious differences in a common effort to promote the well being of their country—then indeed will there be a reasonable prospect of Swaraj being attained.

A suggestion for raising a crore of Indian Volunteers.

5. The Zamindar (Lahore), of the 10th February 1912, publishes a communication from one Maulvi Sayad Ali Haidar, of Hyderabad Deccan, headed "Wanted one crore of Indian Volunteers." The Maulvi argues that the collapse of Persia will be followed by a Russian advance on India, possibly accompanied by a German Naval descent upon the Indian coast. Neither Hindus nor Muhammadans, say the Maulvi, desire the beneficent British Rule to be supplanted by Germany, Russia, or any other power. He accordingly suggests that, in order to avert such a catastrophe, Government should raise a crore of India Volunteers and open military schools in all important towns.

The advent of the Mehdi.

6. The Zamindar (Lahore), of the 3rd February 1912, publishes a communication from one Khawaja Hasan Nizami, Secretary, Halka-i-Nizam-ul-Mashaikh, Delhi, entitled "The need for the appearance of the Mehdi: the despair and sorrow of Muhammadans: a prophecy in the Kalki Puran: the necessity of repentance and becoming true Musalmans." The writer says that Tripoli, Persia, Morocco and other Islamic countries are now encompassed with serious difficulties. While the dawn appears full of light for the (rest of the) world, there is nothing but impenetrable darkness for Muhammadans. The ocean carries every one (else) on its back, but is ready to drown the disheartened Muhammadans. All Muhammadans are victims of plots and conspiracies, and they find no way of escaping from their present difficulties and troubles. In their present predicament, they look forward to the advent of "the invisible being," whose manifestation was predicted more than 1,300 years ago by the Prophet (lit. the pilot of the boat of the faithful). Those who are guided merely by outward appearances may consider him mad, but he firmly believes that, so long as the last of the Imams does not manifest himself, there is no hope of things becoming right. Those people who study the causes of the rise and fall (lit. changes) of nations and countries see no necessity for the appearance of the Mehdi. Indeed, they consider it unwise to sit idle and wait for the advent of a power capable of bringing about a radical change. They also ask whether the coming Mehdi will bring guns from the heavens strong enough to subdue the enemies (? of Islam) ; or whether, like his great ancestor the Prophet, he too will be a human being and will require human instruments to work his will. If the Mehdi brings an army of angels and invisible weapons and employs them in prosecuting the designs he has in view, he may obtain success ; but if he fails to do so it would be absurd to manifest himself at the present moment. Continuing the writer says that some people may have their doubts about the ultimate success of the Mehdi, but it is not difficult to convince them. For instance, it is a well-known fact that when, in the days of the Prophet and after, the Arabs came into conflict with civilized nations which were provided with arms as much superior to those possessed by the former as are modern arms and ammunition to those in the possession of present-day Muslim Powers, they nevertheless succeeded in vanquishing those civilised nations. Did heavenly cannon then come to the help of the savages of Arabia in order to enable them to establish their authority over civilized countries? No, it was religious zeal and sincerity which made them successful. If even now "we" are swayed by true religious zeal and sincerity "we" can do things calculated to surprise the world (lit. you will be able to see the display). No artificial or worldly attempt, however, can help "us" in regaining (religious) fervour, seeing that the Mehdi alone can create such a feeling in "our" minds. The fact that Muhammadans are all astir now-a-days leads to the belief that the advent of the Mehdi is near at hand. It is extremely necessary that this belief should be instilled at the earliest possible opportunity in the minds of Muhammadans belonging to the poor and middle classes ; so that they may emerge from their present depths of despair and take the first step in practical life. The richer and the higher classes never performed (great) deeds in any age. It is the poor people and those of the middle classes who alone perform such feats. All well-wishers of the (Muslim) community, therefore, should try to create a great commotion in the minds of Muhammadans by telling them that the advent of the Mehdi is near at hand. Proceeding, the editor refers to his pamphlet entitled "The Shaikh Sennousi and the advent of the Imam Mehdi," and says that the first edition of the pamphlet was sold immediately after it was printed. He has now published a revised edition of the same. The pamphlet commands a great popularity and sale in the Bombay Presidency, where it has been translated even into Guzerati. The writer goes on to quote extracts from the Kalki Puran with a view to showing that the Hindu scripture named also contains a prophecy about the manifestation of the Mehdi ; and endeavours to show that the Purana predicts the birth of the Mehdi in Arabia. In conclusion, he says that the time has come when the Mehdi will appear ; and that it is, therefore, desirable that all Muhammadans should repent of their sins and become true Musalmans.

Government and Hindus and Muhammadans.

7. The Zamindar (Lahore), of the 10th February 1912, publishes an article under the heading "Phunja Bhai and Qalandar Khan". After publishing an account of the circumstances which led the Chief Presidency

Magistrate, Bombay, to call upon Babu Phunja Bhai, a pleader in Kathiawar, to show cause why he should not furnish security of Rs. 4,000 for disseminating seditious literature, the paper refers to the security which has been demanded from the Panch Bahadur, Bombay, and the Edward Gazette, Abbott-abad. The paper goes on to say that it is really strange that, while the papers named have been punished for indulging in sprightly and vivacious writings which were on no account hostile to Government, Mr. Phunja Bhai continues to practise as a legal practitioner in spite of his having published a highly seditious book. Next the paper says that it is difficult to see why no opportunity has been given to Qalandar Khan (the Editor of the Edward Gazette) to explain his conduct and to prove that the allegations made in the articles, for which security has been demanded, were founded on facts, when the pleader named has been called upon to defend his cause. Those people who are in the habit of ridiculing Muhammadans for being called "the beloved wife" of Government should now say whether Government loves Phunja Bhai or Qalandar Khan (lit. Qalandar Khatun).

Muhammadans and Government.

8. The Millat (Lahore), of the 2nd (received on 10th) February 1912, has an article headed "Agitation." Since the annulment of the Partition of Bengal, says the paper, Muhammadans have been led to think that Government is cowed by agitation; and that, so long as they do not follow in the footsteps of Bengalis, they will never obtain the loaves and fishes of Government employment commensurate with their importance. After remarking that it has received numerous letters from respectable persons which show that the idea above referred to has taken root even in the minds of the general public, the paper says that many Muhammadans are now declaring openly that, so long as they do not join the National Congress and set up an agitation, their rights will continue to be trampled upon. Not long ago they were under the impression that the valuable help which they rendered to Government in the troublous days of unrest which followed the Partition of Bengal was not duly rewarded. Now the annulment of the partition has added fuel to the fire. The suddenness with which the measure has been announced has so bewildered them that they have not yet been able to form a decided opinion on the subject. This has afforded an opportunity for agitators to induce Muhammadans to follow their lead. It is apparent that, if this state of affairs continues any longer, the latter will be obliged to regard agitation as the best means of safeguarding their rights, and will actually resort to the same. If, however, this comes to pass (which God forbid!) both Government and Muhammadans will be put to trouble. To tell the truth Muhammadans are ignorant of how to agitate in a constitutional manner, and if they ever resort to such tactics the result will be tumult and disorder. As a consequence, not only will there be an apprehension of Muhammadans making themselves liable to be dealt with according to law; but the Government also will be involved in difficulties, seeing that it will not find it an easy task to quell the (sort of) agitation which will be carried on by Muhammadans who possess "a dynamic force". Under these circumstances, it should be the duty of the responsible authorities and sympathetic Muhammadan leaders to take such steps as they deem most proper, in order to convince Muhammadans that Government is not cowed by agitation, but is always ready to safeguard the rights and interests of all sections of His Majesty's subjects.

An open letter to Lord Curzon.

9. The Zamindar (Lahore), of the 6th February 1912, publishes "An open letter to Lord Curzon . . . . . II." In continuation of his previous remarks on the subject (vide paragraph 11 of Selections No. 6), the Editor says that Muhammadans have implicit confidence in Government and that, in spite of many allurements, they remained devotedly attached to it during the six troublous years which followed the departure of Lord Curzon from India. Their confidence, however, proved to be stuff out of which dreams only are woven. Subsequently when Lord Hardinge, immediately on landing at Bombay, declared in a speech that special concessions to one community meant corresponding disabilities to the other, they were much disconcerted by a presentiment of evil; but, nevertheless, they were not prepared to witness the somersault of the heavens which took place on the 12th December last, when the measure for the annulment of the Partition of Bengal was announced. The annulment, he adds, has been made without reference to, or consultation with, any body; and it was effected, not because there was a need for the change, but because there was no other way of pleasing Bengalis. Now by one stroke of the pen an Islamic province—which enjoyed a separate administrative entity and where Muhammadans were likely to obtain all influential and important posts and seats on Councils and Municipal Committees, &c.,—has been converted into a province where incense is burnt at the altar of that strange and incomprehensible fetish known by the name of "ability," and where all other considerations of expediency are thrown overboard. Before the annulment of the Partition the Muhammadans of Eastern Bengal were "contented and loyal;" but when these unfortunate people realised that the change was calculated to destroy their claims, they sent a deputation to wait upon His Excellency the Viceroy. His Excellency, however, told them that they should produce able men and that they should forget all about their numerical strength. This is the reward which Muhammadans have received in consideration of their loyalty and devotion to the British Crown! After remarking that those who obtain concessions by force can never be satisfied, the writer refers to Dadabhoy's message to S. N. Bannerji after the announcement of the annulment of the partition. Continuing, he states that the transfer of the seat of the Government to Delhi cannot please Muhammadans; seeing that the change is not likely to benefit them, nor will it make them superior to others. Government has granted Rs. 50,000 for education; but this is calculated to benefit Bengalis and other educated and influential communities alone. Cultivators on the other hand, who deserved special boons, obtained no concession on the occasion of the last Darbar.

Continuing his remarks in the paper's issue dated the 7th February 1912, the writer says that the momentous changes, which are nothing short of a political earthquake, are calculated to smother the desires and aspirations of Muhammadans. It is a pity that an influential statesman like Lord Curzon could not succeed in putting an end to the anti-Muslim policy in India which is only just beginning its existence. The Editor then urges Lord Cnrzon to have some regard for the political importance of Muhammadans which is regarded now-a-days with ridicule, for their numerical strength which cannot be ignored, and, lastly, for the strength of their arm which will prove a source of help to the British Government in its times of trouble. He also urges his Lordship to induce the British Parliament to advise the Secretary of State for India to fulfil the pledges that have repeatedly been made to Indian Muhammadans. Indian Muhammadans do not demand special favour, but what is justly due to them.

10. Under the heading "The Vacant Secretaryship in the Home Department," the Tribune (Lahore), of the 10th February 1912, publishes the following:—

The post of Secretary to the Government of India in the Home Department.

"The appointment of Sir Archdale Earle as the Chief Commissioner designate of Assam and his departure on leave preparatory to assuming charge of his office has created a vacancy in the office of Home Secretary to the Government of India. There has been in the Press a good deal of speculation as to Sir Archdale's successor. * * * * * * * * * * * * * * * * * * * We should like in this connection to point out that the claims of this Province should be taken into consideration when selecting a successor to Sir Archdale Earle. In the Executive Council of the Viceroy not a single member at present belongs to the Punjab Commission. * * * * * * * * * * * * * * * * * * *"

III.—Native States.

Sardar Gurdit Singh and His Highness the Maharaja of Patiala.

11. The following is from the Khalsa Advocate (Amritsar), of 9th February 1912 :—

"Since the premier Prince of the Phulkian States came to his rights, his indefatigable endeavours for the amelioration of his subject are well-known to the public. He has adopted adequate measures for the dissemination of education especially Primary education, and the department of literacy engages his unstinted attention. He is ever ready to further the measures which are calculated to improve the condition of those entrusted to his care. Every branch of the administration is efficiently supervised to see that the officials discharge their duties with proper care. He has issued orders limiting the use of intoxicants, and allowed large sums for the advance of higher education and foreign scholarships.

"An admittedly capable scion of a historic house—Sardar Jugindra Singh—has been selected for the internal administration. The magnitude of the reforms effected in the civil and criminal courts, does not require any mention. They are too well-known for that. The courts have been broadbased upon justice.

"True to the tenets of his faith he has laid the whole Sikh public under a debt by his generosity in many a cause. His princely gift of 1¼ lakhs for a Gurdwara in London will remain a permanent memento in Sikh hearts of the auspicious occasion of the Coronation of King George and of inviolable bonds of the love and devotion of the Sikhs to their Sovereign.

"His Highness is a devoted ally of the King Emperor and a supremely loyal Prince of the Empire. The Government is highly pleased with His Highness and he has but recently been granted the title of G. C. S. I. which he richly deserved.

"He has taken a very lively interest in the Sikh Procession at Delhi and done his best to ameliorate the social condition of the subjects of his State, for which all wishing the advancement of education in the State are thankful to him.

"In the face of such virtues in the potentate of the State, it seems almost unintelligible to us how he prevailed upon himself to oust General Sardar Gurdit Singh, Prime Minister and Sardar Pritam Singh, Commander-in-Chief of the State forces. We cannot understand how he with a kingly sense of justice and a sympathetic disposition could usher the procedure he permitted and sanctioned in the cases of the gentlemen named above.

"If there was anything to be whispered against them they could have been put to a public trial. Doors of justice were not shut even upon Arya Samajists. On the other hand regular courts and judges were appointed and none was allowed a chance of complaint. They were given ample opportunities of proving their innocence, and the public were highly gratified at the procedure adopted under the order of His Highness. Sardar Gurdit Singh who was the old Prime Minister had left no stone unturned in improving the condition of the State. Every individual of the State is conscious of the very life-blood he spent in safeguarding interests of the state and looking after His Highness while he was a minor. His devotion and loyalty both to his State and to the Paramount Power were well-known. The Government knows full well that he was scrupulously honest, hard-working and just.

"In spite of such qualifications, the treatment accorded to the Sardar seems incongruous to say the least.

"Had he been given a fair trial, he might have been able to prove his innocence. We trust that the same spirit as actuated His Highness not to deny justice even to Arya Samajists, will be brought into action in the case of an old and devotedly loyal servant of the State. Under the circumstances, we cannot but believe that the action taken in the case of Sardar Gurdit Singh is based upon wrong information and that somebody had poisoned the ears of the Ruler of the State, otherwise it was impossible for such a prince to issue the orders he did. As a long enough space of time has expired now and His Highness might by this time have arrived at the truth in the matter, we feel confident that the injury done to Sardar will be rectified His Honour Sir Louis Dane, too, may out of his kindliness exert his influence for the old servant of the State."

The powers of an Indian Chief.

12. The following is from the Tribune (Lahore), of 13th February 1912 :—

"We have received certain papers in connection with a case that happened in Mirpur tahsil in Jammu territory. A number of men broke into the house of a man at night and murderously wounded several inmates of the house. One man died within 24 hours and another some days later. Others recovered but they still bear the marks of the injuries they received.

A number of men were arrested and some of them were identified by the injured persons and some neighbours. Four men were sent up for trial. In the Sessions Court one man was discharged and three were sentenced to death. In the High Court the sentence in the case of two prisoners was commuted to imprisonment for life while a fine was added. When the proceedings came up before the Maharaja of Jammu and Kashmir for confirmation His Highness upheld the sentences but ordered the fines to be remitted. So far the proceedings were quite regular. A few days later, however, the following order was issued from the Maharaja's Offices :—'In obedience to the orders passed in the case by His Excellency the Governor-General in Council the prisoners will be released at once, a report to that effect being submitted to His Excellency through the Resident in Kashmir.' Apparently an appeal had been made to Governor-General in Council with the result mentioned above. Apart from the merits of the case an important issue that arises is whether in a case of this kind the Governor-General in Council should interfere. In their own States the most prominent Princes of India exercise sovereign authority and the prerogative of clemency also belongs to them. If in every case or any case there is to be an appeal to the Government of India then the authority of the Princes will be divested of all finality."

The following on the same subject is from the Observer (Lahore), of 14th February 1912 :—

"A story of strange official highhandedness in Jammu was of late going the round of the Muslim Urdu Press, which we omitted to notice out of regard for the prestige of His Highness the Maharaja. But finding that an altogether different version has been published in a local journal and the Viceregal action to rectify a denial of justice to certain Muslim subjects of His Highness has been represented as an infringement of the Maharaja's privileges, we feel bound to give publicity to the first version. Some time ago a number of men broke at night into the house of a Hindu in Mirpur tahsil, Jammu district. Several inmates were murderously assaulted and two of them died of the injuries. Upon this some Muhammadans of note were arrested for the murder. The Sessions Court discharged one and sentenced the remaining three to death. The Jammu High Court confirmed the death sentence on one, commuted those of others to transportation for life and added a fine. The proceedings came up before the Maharaja for confirmation, and the accused also appealed to His Highness stating that they were absolutely innocent. The Maharaja is known to be of a merciful disposition. His Highness, however, upheld the sentences, but remitted the fines. Life is sweet to even convicts. Having been denied justice in Kashmir, the poor men appealed to His Excellency the Viceroy. The Governor-General in Council had a sifting inquiry made into the case, and it established the fact that the three Muhammadans were perfectly guiltless. An order was accordingly sent to the State authorities for the release of the innocent victims of judicial vagaries. But for long the order was not obeyed and the men, though acquitted of all guilt and ordered to be released by the Governor-General in Council, lay rotting in jail. The matter was at last again brought to the notice of the Imperial Government which had the attention of the Maharaja invited to the subject. As a result, an order was lately issued from His Highness' office to the following effect :—'In obedience to the orders passed in the case by His Excellency the Governor-General in Council the prisoners will be released at once, a report to that effect being submitted to His Excellency through the Resident in Kashmir.' No one whose sense of right and wrong is not perverted by prejudice will say that the Governor-General in Council is not entitled to interfere in cases where the innocent subjects of a Ruling Chief have been sentenced to death and transportation for life. And yet the Tribune represents it as an invasion of the privileges of the Maharaja of Kashmir. When the British Government guarantees peace within the borders of the Rulers of Native States, has it no right to prevent innocent men from being hanged? Our contemporary is very fond of making everything a matter of principle when it suits its purpose. But would it have taken the thing in the same light if the victims had been Hindu subjects of a Musalman State and the Judges Muhammadans?

V.—Native Societies and Religious Matters.

Sikhs and Aryas.

13. The Loyal Gazette (Lahore), of the 11th February 1912, publishes a leader headed "The decision of an old case." Some time back, it says, a certain leader of the Arya Samaj published a pamphlet entitled "Are you Hindus ?" in which he not only said that Arya Samajists were not Hindus, but even poured ridicule on the tenets of orthodox Hindus. The Arya Samajists also badly wounded the feelings of Hindus by publishing mischievous pamphlets like the one entitled "Protect yourself against the filthy teachings of the Puranas." Now, however, when it is no longer politic for Aryas to pursue this game, they have begun to call themselves Hindus. After remarking that the Arya Samajists are also endeavouring to prove that Sikhs are Hindus, the paper reports that, some time back, one Lala Kishen Singh—the brother of Ajit Singh—who is the agent of Baba Dhanpat Rai, a pleader, delivered some speeches at Kasur with a view to showing that Sikhs were Hindus, which filled the minds of Aryas with ecstacy. The Sikhs, however, requested the great Sikh scholar, Kartar Singh, to go to Kasur and put an end to the commotion which Lala Kishen Singh's speeches had raised. Kartar Singh accordingly visited Kasur and challenged the Arya Samaj to a discussion. Next the paper publishes an account of the debate and endeavours to show that the Arya Samajists failed to prove that Sikhs were Hindus.

A complaint.

14. The Vakil (Amritsar), of the 7th February 1912, has a paragraph headed "Carrying into execution the commands of the Bible." The paper says that there are a mosque and a tomb near St. John's College, Agra, which interfere with the symmetry of the College compound (wall?). The former Principal of the College, who was a good and just person, allowed the matter to rest there; but the present Principal and the missionary body (in charge of the institution named) brought the mosque and the tomb named within the compound of the College in the course of a night. "In this way the House of God has been brought within the precincts of a Trinity Temple." The Muhammadans of Agra filed a complaint in the court of the Joint Magistrate, but the latter refused to interfere and advised the complainants to file a suit in the Civil Court. After remarking that the mosque and the tomb existed before the College, the paper says that the doings of the Principal and the society named are anything but commendable, and that Muhammadans are wholly justified in taking offence at the same. If the allegation is well-founded it is to be hoped that Government will restore the mosque to Muhammadans and inflict exemplary punishments on the offenders. It then praises Government for following a policy of religious neutrality; but says that it is a pity that it is rumoured that the students of the Church Mission High School, Peshawar, have been ordered to attend the church for prayers every Saturday, with the result that (non-Christian) students have gone on strike.

VII.—General Administration.

(b)—Police.

Higher appointments in the Police Department.

15. The Jhang Sial (Jhang), of the 3rd (received on the 10th) February 1912, publishes a note headed "The Police and higher appointments." For some time past, says the paper, the higher appointments in the Police Department have been filled up by youths of good family who, although unable to perform their duties in a satisfactory manner, supersede subordinate police officials and deprive them of their right to promotion. After remarking that a question on the subject has been asked in the Legislative Council, the paper says that, although the scions of noble families should receive some concessions, still it is not meet and proper that poor subordinate police officials, who anxiously wait for promotion, should be superseded by young men who are totally ignorant of Police work and who must remain under training for many years. It would be better if the young Police cadets named were given promotion in the ordinary manner (i.e., when fitted for promotion).

(d)—Education.

A highly objectionable Text-Book.

16. The following is from the Observer (Lahore), of 10th February 1912:—

"The Muslim Gazette has done well to draw pointed attention to the 'Khwab-o-Khyal,' an Urdu book for the Urdu examinations of civil and military officers. The first portion of the book, 'the memoirs of Sitaram, a Hindu soldier,' is calculated to fill the reader with an intense hatred of the Muhammadans and make him regard them as irreconcilable seditionists and enemies of the British Raj. It is asserted in this part that Muhammadans are always dreaming of expelling the English from India, Government is exhorted to look after its Hindu servants and never rely on Muhammadans, and the Mullahs are represented as fanning the fire of race hatred. If ever there was a grossly libellous story, this is one. Will not Government suppress it? The least that it should do is to remove the book from the list of text-books, unless the objectionable part is replaced by another."

(g)—Postal matters.

Panjabi and the postal service.

17. The following is from the Khalsa Advocate (Amritsar), of 9th February 1912 :—

"We are sorry that after a pretty long spell of pleasurable silence we should to-day again have to invite the attention of the Postmaster-General, Punjab and North-West Frontier Circle, to the unsympathetic and non-chalant treatment which letters and other mail-matter addressed in the vernacular of the Province have lately begun to receive at all stages of their transit through Post. On summarising the contents of the numerous letters we have received during the past several months complaining of various inconveniences we are compelled to draw the inference that, notwithstanding all the sympathy shown and hopes held out by the head of the Department, much progress has not been made in a knowledge of Panjabi (Gurmukhi) characters by Despatch Clerks, Sorters, Delivery Clerks and Postmen. Instances are by no means few and far between in which letters posted, say, somewhere in the Jullundur district and having Amritsar as their destination, have reached the latter after a roundabout journey through several other towns of the Province, including of course the city of Lahore and its inevitable D. L. O., thus taking several days in travelling a distance which ought not under normal and regular conditions to take more than a few hours.* * *

* * * * * * * *

* *The demands of Panjabi are by no means pretentious. It does not claim or even expect to be recognised throughout India. But in the Punjab, of which it is the unquestioned vernacular, it does expect to be compensated for the injury done to it by undue favour to aliens in the past. We fervently hope therefore that the Postmaster-General, Punjab, will be good enough to adopt such measures as will once for all put an end to the sort of irregularities to which we have had to draw his attention in this note.

(h)—Miscellaneous.

Delhi Civil lines.

18. The following is from the Tribune (Lahore), of the 13th February 1912 :—

"The agitation of house-owners against the acquisition of bungalows in the civil lines of Delhi is not unnatural. Nor can the protest of the Chamber of Commerce against such acquisition be considered unjustifiable. Of course, house-owners are not likely to support the Chamber's suggestion that Government should find accommodation for their officials in new Delhi. The interests of property owners and the convenience of permanent residents have both to be consulted in any arrangement the Government may have to make for the temporary accommodation of its officials for one or two seasons. It is unreasonable to contend that officials should not disturb occupants of bungalows in Civil lines and be satisfied with what accommodation they could find in new Delhi. Officials who have hard work to do have as much right to comfortable accommodation as non-officials, but it is not to the interest of the tax-payers that bungalows in Civil lines should be purchased now with no prospect of finding continued use for them. About the best arrangement seems to be to obtain on lease a certain number of bungalows at their present rentals as suggested by the proprietors of houses in their meeting. In any case the Government should take the public into confidence as to its exact requirement and invite the leading house-owners and permanent residents to a conference before settling the matter finally."

The Foreign Office and Frontier officials.

19. The following is from the Tribune (Lahore), of 13th February 1912 :—

"The appointment of Sir Henry McMahon as Foreign Secretary to the Government of India has been most beneficial to the officials of the department in the Frontier Provinces. It will be seen from the lengthy communique issued on Saturday that as many as three such officials have been selected to important charges. Mr. A. H. Grant, C.I.E., Deputy Commissioner of Peshawar, gets the Deputy Secretaryship in the Foreign Office; Major H. B. St. John of Baluchistan gets an Under-Secretaryship in the Foreign Office; Lieutenant-Colonel F. W. P. Macdonald of Baluchistan goes to Malwa as Political Agent. It is inconceivable why these frontier men should be pitchforked into such offices and why they should not be allowed to get on in their own sphere amidst congenial surroundings. Surely a knowledge of Baluchistan cannot be very helpful in Malwa."

LAHORE :
The 17th February 1912.

C. STEAD,
Assistant to the Deputy Inspector General of Police, Criminal Investigation Department, Punjab.

Punjab Government Press, Lahore—21-2-12—116—107—H. L. S.

[V

(a) Fa

1.
2.
3.
4.
5.
6.
7.

(b) Ha

8.
9.
10.
11.
12.

13.

14.
15.
16.
17.

18.

19.

[ Confidential. ]

[Vol. XXV.] [No. 8.]

SELECTIONS

FROM THE

NATIVE NEWSPAPERS

PUBLISHED IN THE PUNJAB.

Examined up to 24th February 1912.

---

CONTENTS.

Page.

I.—Politics.

(a) Foreign—

1. Europe and Asia (Zamindar) ... ... 119
2. Germany and England (Paisa Akhbar) ... ib.
3. Russia and England (Millat) ... ... 120
4. The present condition of Islam (Vakil) ... 121
5. Persia and Indian Muhammadans (Zamindar) ... ib.
6. Italian blockade of Jedda and Yembo (Observer) ib.
7. Indians in South Africa (Panjabee) ... ... 122

(b) Home—

8. Punjab Hindus and their grievances (Panjabee) ... ib.
9. The Frontier Province (Punjab Advocate) ... 123
10. Government and Muhammadans (Jhang Sial) ... 124
11. Muhammadans and the Congress (Zamindar) ... ib.
12. Muhammadans and Hindus (Hindustan) ... ib.

II.—Afghanistan and Trans-Frontier.

Nil.

III.—Native States.

13. Mewar affairs (Paisa Akhbar) ... ... 124

IV.—Kine-killing.

Nil.

V.—Native Societies and Religious Matters.

14. A mixed Marriage (Aryā Patrika) ... ... 125
15. Guru Gobind Singh and Hindus (Arya Gazette) ... ib.
16. The Aryas and the Editor of the Indar (Indar) ... ib.
17. Complaint against Lala Munshi Ram (Indar) ... 126

VI.—Legislation.

18. The Bill to amend the Punjab Land Revenue Act (Tribune) ... ... ... ... 126
19. The Punjab Legislative Council (Tribune) ... 128

Page.

VII.—General Administration.

(a) Judicial—

Nil.

(b) Police—

Nil.

(c) Municipal and Cantonment affairs—

Nil.

(d) Education —

20. The Viceroy on the proposed Dacca University (Tribune) ... ... ... ... 128
21. A contradiction (Arya Gazette) ... ... ib.
22. The Gurukula (Indar and Parkash) ... 129
23. Ditto (Khalsa Advocate) ... ... ib.

(e)—Agriculture and questions affecting the land—

Nil.

(f) Railways and Communications—

24. Accumulation of goods at Jullundur and Sargodha Railway Stations and want of wagons (Tribune) ib.

(g) Postal matters—

Nil.

(h) Miscellaneous—

25. A Sadhu and three European Children (Punjab Advocate) ... ... ... ... 130
26. The Ahmednagar salaam case (Shanti and Vakil) ib.
27. The new coin (Jhang Sial) ... ... ib.
28. Superannuation in Government Service (Tribune) ... 131

LIST OF NEWSPAPERS AND PERIODICALS EXAMINED BY THE SPECIAL BRANCH AS IT STOOD ON THE 24TH FEBRUARY 1912.

| No. | Name. | Locality. | Name of Publisher. | Circulation. |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| | ENGLISH. | | | |
| | DAILY. | | | |
| 1 | Tribune ... | Lahore ... | Bihari Lal ... | 1,758 copies. |
| | TRI-WEEKLY. | | | |
| 2 | Panjabee ... | Lahore ... | Mul Chand ... | 2,424 copies. |
| | BI-WEEKLY. | | | |
| 3 | Observer ... | Lahore ... | Nizam-ud-din ... | 1,000 copies. |
| 4 | Punjab Times and Frontier News. | Rawalpindi ... | J. R. Thapur ... | 200 „ |
| | WEEKLY. | | | |
| 5 | Arya Patrika ... | Lahore ... | Devi Chand ... | 650 copies. |
| 6 | Harbinger ... | Do. ... | Durga Parshad ... | 300 „ |
| 7 | Khalsa Advocate ... | Amritsar ... | Bahadar Singh ... | 752 „ |
| | FORTNIGHTLY. | | | |
| 8 | Jijnasu ... | Lahore ... | Ishwar Das ... | ... |
| | MONTHLY. | | | |
| 9 | D. A.-V. College Magazine... | Lahore ... | Saraswati Nath ... | 1,000 copies. |
| 10 | Forman Christian College Notes.* | Do. ... | ... | ... |
| 11 | Practical Medicine* ... | Delhi ... | ... | ... |
| 12 | Punjab Educational Journal | Lahore ... | R. B. Mohan Lal ... | 700 copies. |
| 13 | Punjab Mission News ... | Do. ... | Revd. Wigram ... | 250 „ |
| 14 | Ravi ... | Do. ... | Mr. B. M. Jones ... | ... |
| 15 | Review of Religions* ... | Qadian (Gurdaspur) ... | Sadr Anjuman Ahmadia, Qadian. | 800 copies. |
| 16 | Science Grounded Religion... | Lahore ... | Dev Rattan ... | 25 „ |
| 17 | Teacher ... | Dinga (Gujrat) ... | Kanhaya Singh ... | 200 „ |
| | URDU. | | | |
| | DAILY. | | | |
| 18 | Akhbar-i-'Am ... | Lahore ... | Govind Sahai ... | 630 copies. |
| 19 | Paisa Akhbar ... | Do. ... | Abdul Aziz ... | 1,011 „ |
| 20 | Watan ... | Do. ... | Muhammad Insha Alla ... | ... |
| 21 | Zamindar ... | Do. ... | Zafar Ali Khan, B.A. ... | ... |
| | BI-WEEKLY. | | | |
| 22 | Vakil ... | Amritsar ... | Abdul Aziz ... | 1,970 copies. |
| | WEEKLY. | | | |
| 23 | Afghan ... | Peshawar ... | Saiyid Muhammad Abdulla | 500 copies. |
| 24 | Ahl-i-Hadis ... | Amritsar ... | Sanaulla ... | 925 „ |
| 25 | Ahluwalia Gazette ... | Do. ... | Lehna Singh ... | 500 „ |
| 26 | Army News ... | Ludhiana ... | Hira Lal & Co. ... | 1,300 „ |
| 27 | Arorbans Gazette ... | Amritsar ... | Labh Singh ... | ... |
| 28 | Arya Gazette ... | Lahore ... | Bhowani Das ... | 550 copies. |
| 29 | Badar ... | Qadian, Gurdaspur district | Muhammad Sadiq ... | 200 „ |

*Not received during the month.

LIST OF NEWSPAPERS AND PERIODICALS EXAMINED BY THE SPECIAL BRANCH AS IT STOOD ON THE 24TH FEBRUARY 1912—CONTINUED.

| No. | Name. | Locality. | Name of Publisher. | Circulation. |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| | URDU—CONTINUED. | | | |
| | WEEKLY—continued. | | | |
| 30 | Bharat ... | Jullundur ... | Thakur Sheoratan Singh | ... |
| 31 | Civil and Military News ... | Ludhiana ... | Saiyid Muhammad ... | 1,325 copies |
| 32 | Curzon Gazette ... | Delhi ... | Mirza Hairat ... | 111 „ |
| 33 | Delhi Gazette ... | Do. ... | Sajjad Husain ... | 200 „ |
| 34 | Edward Gazette ... | Abbott-abad ... | Muhammad Latif ... | 200 „ |
| 35 | Hakam ... | Qadian, Gurdaspur district | Yakub Ali ... | 900 „ |
| 36 | Haq ... | Delhi ... | Kasim Ali ... | 200 „ |
| 37 | Haq Pasand ... | Amritsar ... | Ram Nath ... | 382 „ |
| 38 | Hindu ... | Lahore ... | Hari Lal Sharma ... | ... |
| 39 | Hindustan ... | Do. ... | Ram Sarn Dutt ... | 8,070 copies. |
| 40 | Indar ... | Do. ... | Dharm Pal, B.A. ... | ... |
| 41 | Islam ... | Do. ... | Abdul Latif ... | 200 copies. |
| 42 | Jhang Sial ... | Jhang ... | Prabh Dyal ... | 2,262 „ |
| 43 | Kapurthala Akhbar ... | Kapurthala ... | Hamid Husain ... | 155 „ |
| 44 | Loyal Gazette ... | Lahore ... | Amar Singh ... | 200 „ |
| 45 | Lytton Gazette ... | Delhi ... | Bulaki Das ... | 1,000 „ |
| 46 | Milap* ... | Lyallpur ... | Jawahar Lal ... | ... |
| 47 | Millat ... | Lahore ... | Shuja Ulla ... | 1,500 copies |
| 48 | Mister Gazette* ... | Do. ... | Ali Bakhsh ... | 150 „ |
| 49 | Munir ... | Jhang ... | Hafiz Khuda Bakhsh ... | 200 „ |
| 50 | Musalman ... | Amritsar ... | Sana-ulla ... | 400 „ |
| 51 | Nur ... | Qadian, Gurdaspur district | Muhammad Yusaf ... | 200 „ |
| 52 | Nur Afshan ... | Ludhiana ... | Revd. Dr. E. M. Wherry | 500 „ |
| 53 | Paisa Akhbar ... | Lahore ... | Abdul Aziz ... | 8,377 „ |
| 54 | Parkash ... | Do. ... | Krishan ... | 1,723 „ |
| 55 | Punjab Advocate ... | Mianwali ... | Karm Chand, Bahl ... | 1,000 „ |
| 56 | Punjab Samachar ... | Lahore ... | Hira Lal ... | 705 „ |
| 57 | Rajput Gazette ... | Do. ... | Thakur Sukhram Das ... | 650 „ |
| 58 | Municipal Gazette and Sada-i-Hind. | Do. ... | Din Muhammad ... | 500 „ |
| 59 | Sadiq-ul-Akhbar ... | Bahawalpur ... | Maulvi Ata Ullah ... | 392 „ |
| 60 | Ditto ... | Rewari ... | Safdar Hussain ... | 200 „ |
| 61 | Sanatan Dharm Pracharak... | Amritsar ... | Rulia Ram ... | 200 „ |
| 62 | Shanti ... | Rawalpindi ... | Kishan Chand Mohan ... | 300 „ |
| 63 | Sialkot Paper ... | Sialkot ... | Todar Mal ... | 500 „ |
| 64 | Siraj-ul-Akhbar ... | Jhelum ... | Maulvi Fakir Muhammad | 450 „ |
| 65 | Tahzib-ul-Niswan ... | Lahore ... | Mumtaz Ali ... | 240 „ |

* Not received during the week.

LIST OF NEWSPAPERS AND PERIODICALS EXAMINED BY THE SPECIAL BRANCH AS IT STOOD ON THE 24TH FEBRUARY 1912—CONCLUDED.

| No. | Name. | Locality. | Name of Publisher. | Circulation. |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| | URDU—CONCLUDED. | | | |
| | WEEKLY—concluded. | | | |
| 66 | Victoria Paper ... | Sialkot ... | Gian Chand ... | 600 copies. |
| 67 | Wafadar* ... | Lahore ... | Fazal-ud-din ... | 600 „ |
| 68 | Waqt ... | Do. ... | Ali Husain ... | 200 „ |
| 69 | Watan ... | Do. .. | Muhammad Insha Ullah... | 1,800 „ |
| 70 | Zamindar ... | Do. ... | Zafar Ali Khan, B.A. ... | 750 „ |
| | FORTNIGHTLY. | | | |
| 71 | Biwah Samachar* ... | Lahore ... | Ram Chand ... | 300 copies. |
| 72 | Kam Dhenu ... | Ludhiana ... | Daulat Ram ... | 100 „ |
| 73 | Mohyal Gazette ... | Kala, Jhelum district ... | Mehta Sham Das ... | 250 „ |
| | MONTHLY. | | | |
| 74 | Arorbans* Parkash ... | Lahore ... | Salig Ram ... | 200 copies. |
| 75 | Arya Musafir ... | Jullundur ... | Wazir Chand ... | 1,300 „ |
| 76 | Indar* ... | Lahore ... | Dharampal, B.A. ... | 3,000 „ |
| 77 | Jauhar* ... | Amritsar ... | Muhammad Ismail Khan | 200 „ |
| 78 | Kakezai Social Reformer ... | Lahore ... | Fazl Din ... | 200 „ |
| 79 | Makhzan ... | Delhi ... | Abdul Kadir ... | 4,000 „ |
| 80 | Rafiq ... | Lahore ... | Charinji Lal ... | 500 „ |
| 81 | Sadhu ... | Do. ... | Sheobart Lal ... | 500 „ |
| 82 | Martand ... | Do. ... | Kanhya Lal ... | 250 „ |
| 83 | Raghbir Patrika ... | Do. ... | Prab Dial ... | 500 „ |
| 84 | Zaban* ... | Delhi ... | Hamid Hasain ... | 500 „ |
| | GURMUKHI. | | | |
| | WEEKLY. | | | |
| 85 | Khalsa Sewak ... | Amritsar ... | Jiwan Singh ... | 1,000 copies. |
| 86 | Punjab Reporter* ... | Do. ... | Ganda Singh ... | ... |
| 87 | Punjabi Surma ... | Lahore ... | Gian Chand ... | 1,000 copies. |

* Not received during the week.

I.—Politics.

(a)—Foreign.

Europe and Asia.

1. The Zamindar (Lahore), of the 13th February 1912, publishes a leader headed "The strong beats (the weak) and does not allow him to weep." The paper says that it is extremely shameful and regrettable that the champions of modern civilization are destroying the ancient races of Africa with impunity. Italy invaded Tripoli, but the champions of the peace of the world remained silent! Thousands of Arabs were cruelly murdered, but Europeans remained mute spectators of the scene! The Russians hanged Suqat-ul-Islam and the great Mujtahid during the days of Muharram, but no European had the goodness to call upon Russia for an explanation of her conduct. Continuing, the paper refers to the aggressive conduct of Russia in Persia; and says that it is a pity that Sir Edward Grey should consider it proper under the present circumstances to aid and abet that Power in making all sorts of unjustifiable demands upon Persia. Indeed, Sir Edward Grey's policy has not only perplexed unfortunate Persia, but has deeply wounded the feelings of (? Indian) Muhammadans also. The paper then goes on to deprecate the conduct of the British and Russian Consuls in Persia in advising the Persian Government to grant a pension to the deposed Shah of Persia. Can there be, it asks, anything more aggravating than the fact that the Persian Government should be forced to grant a pension to a person who has ruined and trampled upon a crore of Muhammadans and who has reduced his country to its present condition? Is it proper that the British people should tolerate the policy of Sir Edward Grey who has brought England to the position of playing second fiddle to Russia in Persia? Whatever may be the views of the British people on this subject, Indian Muhammadans think that the time has come when the present Foreign Secretary of State should be relieved of his present post. The British Government is the most righteous Government in the world, and it is desirable that it should regulate its conduct in such a way as to preserve its prestige and its fair name and fame.

Germany and England.

2. The Paisa Akhbar (Lahore), of the 13th February 1912, publishes a cartoon headed "Your turn is over and mine has come." In the cartoon the Kaiser of Germany is represented as standing and pointing out to the other European Powers the map of Asia Minor which is spread before him. In the horizon "the Sun of Islam" is represented as setting behind a small hill, on which there are a few date-palms. Before the representatives of the European Powers are the maps of countries such as the Transvaal, Herzegovina, Tripoli, etc., which have recently come into their possession. The letter press is as follows:—

The Kaiser of Germany—"The time has come. Keep silent! See, I am going to occupy this portion of the country (in Asia Minor) as my share. You have already taken possession of several countries. So you should keep quite."

Great Britain—"Never! Never! So long as there is a single Englishman living not an inch of Asia Minor will be occupied by you."

The Kaiser of Germany—"Look, John Bull, you are in the wrong. You will have to smart for this."

John Bull (laughing)—"If I like I can sweep you off the face of the earth with the help of 450 millions of Muslims drawn from all parts of the world."

In another place the paper publishes a communication in which the writer—one Muhammad Ismail Khan, Painter, Bombay, who has drawn the above cartoon—says that everybody who has a least particle of sense in him can fully realise how dangerous are the moves and policies of European Powers. It is not a new or surprising thing for Italy to declare war against Turkey; seeing that all European Powers have taken possession of countries belonging to others by pure aggression. After justifying the conduct of the British Government in annexing the Transvaal, the writer takes Russia, Austria, Bulgaria, France, Italy and Spain to task for their aggressive attacks on Manchuria and other countries; and says that, of all the nations of Europe, the English only have sacrificed brave blood for the benefit of mankind. Indeed, England wants to befriend Turkey; but she can do nothing in the matter unaided, because of the pressure which other European Powers are bringing to bear on her. Although England is not weak and is in a position to blockade the whole of Europe with her navy, still she must have an ally on the land. It is with this end in view that she has established Universities and Colleges for Muhammadans in order to turn out men capable of helping her in times of difficulty. Muhammadans, however, are so locked in the sleep of negligence that they pay no heed to this matter; but make friends with nations such as the Germans, who are ready to trample them under foot. Can any Muhammadan say, he asks, that any European or American Government, excepting that of England, ever tried to awaken Muslims and acquaint them with the trend of modern times? The writer replies to the question in the negative.

Continuing his remarks, in the paper's issue, dated the 14th February 1912, the writer refers to German influence in Asia Minor, and says that Germany is anxious to take possession of that part of the Turkish Empire. England, however, does not allow her to do this, with the result that the two Powers are now bitterly hostile towards each other. After remarking that Muhammadans should prepare themselves to fight with the enemies of the Emperor of India and "our" Caliph of Islam, the writer says that both Russia and Germany want to take possession of India. Indeed, it is to learn the feelings of Indians towards British rule that the Crown Prince of Germany lately visited India. Muhammadans, however, will sacrifice their lives to save India, and they consider it their duty to crush the enemies of England.

Russia and England.

3. The Millat (Lahore), of the 16th February 1912, publishes an article headed "If war is declared between Russia and England." It is generally believed, says the paper, that, after bringing the North of Persia under his thumb, the Czar will make strenuous efforts to establish his prestige and influence in the Persian gulf. It is this which has led some people to prophesy that the time will soon come when, after the conquest of Persia, the Czar will assuredly make an attempt to invade India. One man, especially, who, of late, has earned considerable notoriety, as much for his scanty knowledge of affairs as for his attempt to make substantial profits by inflaming the minds of his co-religionists (the reference is to the Editor of the Zamindar), is constantly harping on this theme. This man recently observed in a speech before a large gathering that, after conquering Persia, Russia would assuredly invade India and obtain a victory over the English. As a consequence, the latter would be obliged to leave the country bag and baggage, with the result that Indians would greatly suffer. There may be other men who also entertain these alarming views; but the Editor would tell them that, if Russia ever endeavours to invade India, she will be obliged to eat humble pie. After remarking that the British Government will never allow Russia to bring Northern Persia under her thumb, the Editor says that those people, who are in the habit of heaping abuse on the British Foreign Minister and other statesmen, should rest assured that the latter know their own business better than "we" do. In case, however, Russia invades India she will receive such a blow as will render her incapable of carrying on a career of conquest in other parts of the world. It is an admitted fact that England would strain every nerve to protect India from Russia, and there can also be no denying the fact that all sections of the Indian community—even those who may be hostile to British rule—would give every help to the British Government in repelling a Russian invasion.

4. The Vakil (Amritsar), of 14th February 1912, has a paragraph entitled "The present condition of Islam." Is it not instructive, asks the paper, that Islamic rule, which only the other day had spread all over the world, has now shrunk to such an extent as to be confined to a few tracts of land? There was a time when the great rulers of the world considered it a pride to bow themselves in subjection before the might and glory of the Muslim rule. The times, however, have changed; and now Muhammadan rulers are anxious to seek the good-will of non-Muslim powers. For a long time Muhammadans were bound together by a tie of brotherhood; but there is now no end to their shamelessness and mutual antipathy. It is high time for Muhammadans to reflect on their past grandeur and their present abject condition. After publishing an extract from an article which recently appeared in the Pioneer on the subject, the paper says that the Anglo-Indian daily is wrong in asserting that jehad is a holy war waged only against Christians; seeing that it may be waged, subject to certain conditions and limitations, against Jews, Hindus, Parsis, and others. But so long as Muhammadans are under a just Government like the British and their religious affairs are not interfered with, there is no need for "us" to justify jehad or regard it as within the range of possibility. The indifference of Muhammadans at the present moment, however, is deplorable; and until they are roused into activity they are hardly like to make either educational or social progress.

The present condition of Islam.

5. The Zamindar (Lahore), of the 18th February 1912, publishes a leaderette headed "Lord Crewe, the Secretary of State for India, and Persia." The paper refutes the allegation that British statesmen have conspired secretly with other European Powers to destroy Islamic countries; and proceeds to state that Sir Edward Grey's mistakes have been counteracted by the efforts of British statesmen like Lords Curzon and Hardinge, Mr. Keir Hardie, and Sir William Wedderburn. Continuing, the paper refers to the agitation set up in India in favour of Persia; and says that it must be borne in mind that the loud cries of Indian and Persian Mussalmans, the efforts of the Muslim League, and the united voices of Sunnis and Shias have evidently produced the desired effect in Downing Street. Had it not been for this it is difficult to say how long Sir Edward Grey would have continued to follow his pet policy. Now, however, things have come to such a pass that, in a recent speech delivered before the House of Lords, Lord Crewe declared that the British Government was not prepared to interfere with Persian affairs. After expressing his heartfelt thanks to Lord Crewe for the above statement, the Editor goes on to ask: "Where are those nominal Muhammadans and arm-chair critics who advised their co-religionists not to give loud expression to their legitimate grievances. * * * *?" and concludes by declaring that, if Muhammadans had not carried on an agitation in favour of Persia, Sir Edward Grey's policy would have allowed this ancient kingdom to be swept off the face of the earth by the machinations of Russia.

Persia and Indian Muhammadans.

6. The following is from the Observer (Lahore), of 17th February 1912:—

Italian blockade of Jedda and Yembo.

"Mass meetings of the Muhammadans of Lahore, Madras, etc., were held in Jama Masjids or otherwise on the 16th instant to 'protest against' the proposed blockade by Italy of the ports of Jedda and Yembo, which practically form the gates of the holy cites of Mecca and Medina. We, however, fail to understand what useful purpose can be served by holding such meetings. To whom can those 'protests' be addressed? Surely, not to Italy. We hope none of our co-religionists have lost their senses or self-respect to such an extent as to think of appealing to Italy. Nor, we think, can any Musalmans dream of suggesting to the Turks to give up Tripoli and thereby save the Holy Places of Islam. The evident motive of the Italian politicians in spreading rumours of an impending blockade of the two ports is to fill the Muslim world with dismay and to force the Ottomans to cede their Northern African possession to Italy. But Muhammadan Associations in India do not, we believe, mean to play into the hands of Italy. What their object appears to be is to appeal to the European Powers to dissuade Italy from carrying out the blockade. These Powers, however, will refuse to interfere as they have done before. Let the Indian Muhammadans, therefore, do what they lawfully can to help the wounded and the widows and leave the rest to the Turks and to God. Surely God can take care of Mecca and Medina without our 'protest'."

Indians in South Africa.

7. The following is from the Panjabee (Lahore), of 22nd February 1912 :—

"Lord Ampthill, who is well-known for his sympathetic attitude to the people of India, raised a debate in the House of Lords on the 19th instant on the question of Indians in South Africa. He said that Government were supine in the matter and the good effect produced by the King's visit would suffer by the ill-treatment given to Indians elsewhere. Lord Selborne said it was a 'question of the comparative systems of Eastern and Western civilisation.' What he meant by it is very doubtful but is it not equally wonderful that such comparative system did not cause trouble in India where the English officials and tradesmen get all the preference to them (sic) ? Lord Selborne further alluded to the seriousness of Indian competition and said that the European trader in South Africa would disappear if that were allowed. But what about the free competition of English merchants and manufacturers in India ? The hollowness and sophistry of men like Lord Selborne becomes quite apparent. He said 'if the land in India were all passing into the hands of Europeans, surely the Indian Government and the public in India would legislate to prevent it.' This is not true. In India [except in the Punjab] there is absolute freedom of competition irrespective of race, and there is no racial legislation especially on economic matters. Indians in Africa are not getting fair treatment and the English ministers have proved they are not capable of giving fair treatment to them. The whole debate is a mockery of British fairness and justice and it is a pity that such an important subject is treated so lightly by responsible Home authorities."

(b)—Home.

8. The following is from the Panjabee, (Lahore), of 15th February 1912 :—

The Punjab Hindus and their grievances.

"In the parting words which our King Emperor addressed to the people of this country, His Imperial Majesty made a heartfelt appeal for unity and concord among the various classes and creeds of his Indian subjects.

* * * * * * *

"But unfortunately, disruptive forces are also at work. The Muslim ideal of Pan-Islamism, which dominates the thought and action of the Muslim League and its leaders, seeks to foster a sort of extra-territorial patriotism. This has led, as a Muhammadan gentleman prominently connected with the Muslim League admitted in the columns of the Pioneer, to the assumption of airs of superiority and arrogance by a section of Muhammadans and the consequent cleavage from the Hindus. This has been more marked in the Punjab than elsewhere, where the Pan-Islamic cult has made greater headway than in any other Province. It is unnecessary for us to examine here the League's theory of 'political importance,' as its hollowness has been effectively laid bare on several occasions and quite recently by the President of the last Session of the Congress. The regrettable fact is that a Muslim Leaguer thinks he is cast in the heroic mould. He lives in blank verse and conducts himself both in his words and gestures in an unsympathetic and supercilious manner. Here we have one explanation of the absence of peace and goodwill.

"The Hindus in the Punjab could have ignored this theatrical attitude of the Muslim League, had they not been weighted down by many genuine grievances. The forceful words of Pandit Bishen Narain Dar that the Hindus in Upper India have been treated, as though they were the remnants of a disinherited race, are literally true of the Punjab Hindus. Take the representation of the Hindus in the Provincial as well as the Imperial Legislative Councils. There are only three Hindu members as against no less than seven Muhammadan members. As a matter of fact, the disparity in representation is so marked, that a combination of Hindu, Sikh and non-official European members cannot beat the solid phalanx of Muhammadan members. In the Imperial Legislative Council, though there are no less than four non-official representatives from the Punjab, Hindu representation is only conspicuous by its total absence. The intelligence, wealth and the culture of the Province have no representation whatever in the Legislative Council of the Governor-General. We may well ask the Government whether this denial of representation to the Hindus is consistent with the policy of impartiality which has been the golden rule of British administration. Nowhere are the defects of the Council Regulations so glaring as in the Punjab and yet the pity of it is that no attempt has yet been made to redress them and provide a fair representation to the Hindus.

"This neglect of the Punjab Hindus in the new Councils touches, however, a fringe only of their many and serious grievances. They have to run the gauntlet of suffering and troubles in other directions. Just consider the land laws of the Province. Not only are men of brains and capital shut out from the cultivation and ownership of land, but Hindus, whose hereditary calling has for generations been agriculture, are treated as aliens and undesirables in their own ancestral villages. The grim irony of the situation is enhanced by the fact that the legislature, while it places a bar against the Hindu agriculturists, allows fullest scope and freedom for the acquisition of land in British territory to a Frontier Pathan, who, tired of his marauding excursions, may wish to settle therein. Thanks to the Hon'ble Rai Bahadur Hari Chand, the matter was recently discussed in the Provincial Legislative Council, but the Government refused to budge from the unjust position it had taken up. The grievance, therefore, continues. In his able speech on the question at the last Session of the Punjab Hindu Conference, Pandit Kirpa Ram of Amritsar made some significant revelations as to the method underlying the notification of agricultural tribes. Indeed, the Hon'ble Rai Bahadur Lala Shadi Lal was perfectly correct when he said that in the official dictionary the definition of a money-lender runs thus: 'A money-lender is a Hindu who has money.' And, therefore, Hindus, living for generations upon agriculture, have been rigidly excluded, unless they happen to come under the schedule of notified tribes. On the other hand, a Muhammadan, even though he may be a veritable Shylock, even though he may be found by the Chief Court to be in no way conforming to the usages and customs o agriculturists, is under the statute an agriculturist. Thus whatever may have been the object of the framers of the Punjab Land Alienation Act, in practice it has run on racial lines and has operated and is continuing to operate most prejudicially against the Hindus of the Province.

"Nor are the grievances of the Hindus any less acute in the matter of appointments to the public service. Every one in this Province is familiar with the way in which the prior and decidedly superior claims of the late Rai Bahadur Lala Lal Chand to the appointment on the Chief Court Bench were overlooked. It is true that the Government in a way admitted its mistake and the Lieutenant-Governor wrote an appreciative letter to the late Rai Bahadur that no reflection upon his undoubted capacity and ability was intended by the Government. But the injustice to the Hindus remained. Coming to the 'listed' appointments in the Judicial Service, we find that there are no less than three Muhammadan Divisional and Sessions Judges as against one Hindu Judge. Among the Hindu officers who have been superseded is a well-known and a senior Hindu District Judge, who obtained what is regarded as the blue ribbon of the Calcutta University, viz., the Prem Chand Roy Chand Scholarship. Coming to minor appointments, we find an overwhelming preponderance of the Muhammadans, especially in the Police Service of the Province. The Punjab Hindu Sabha made a strong representation to the Government of India on this matter but failed to get any satisfactory assurance. And what is true of the Police Department is true, more or less, of Revenue and other Departments. So long as the aforesaid grievances and inequalities are not removed the Hindus cannot be blamed if they think that they are looked upon as aliens in the land where they were born and where they introduced and developed a deep, noble and humanising culture and civilisation. They desire peace and goodwill with all their heart and soul. The teachings and traditions of their race and religion inculcate messages of love and sympathy to every class and creed. But they are only human if they smart under their many and serious grievances. It is the duty of the authorities to remove those grievances and thereby help the cause of unity and concord between the different classes and communities of His Majesty's subjects."

The Frontier Province.

9. The Panjab Advocate (Mianwali), of the 15th February 1912, publishes a communication from the pen of "A Resident of the Frontier." Lala Karam Chand Bahl, says the writer, has promised to give a prize of £1 to the writer of the best essay on the subject entitled "The Frontier Province should be annexed to the Punjab." The object of the Lala in taking this step is to create an agitation in the Frontier Province with a view to make strenuous efforts for the annexation of the Province named to the Punjab. When the severance of the Frontier of the Punjab, he adds, was proposed, Nawabs and Jagirdars in the Frontier were made to understand through reliable men that the measure would be highly beneficial to them. After referring to the efforts made by the late Khan Bahadur Haq Nawaz Khan, of Dera Ismail Khan, in favour of the separation, the writer says that, when the separation was effected, Muhammadans were led to believe that it was calculated to ensure the setting up of Muslim rule in the Frontier Province; but, far from this hope being realised, they are now afraid of losing even their jagirs. Next he finds fault with the constitution and the doings of jirgas, and says that the people hoped that serious punishments would be inflicted on tribal dacoits after the severance of the Frontier from the Punjab. Their hopes, however, have not yet been realised. Indeed, not only have dacoities not ceased; but the employment of Militia and the Border Police has resulted in increasing lawlessness. After referring to certain dacoities and the kidnapping of certain men in the Frontier Province, the writer says that the Administration Report clearly shows that the expenditure incurred for the Government of the Province far exceeds the income realised. In conclusion, he urges that the Frontier should be annexed to the Punjab, and that Sir George Roos-Keppel should be vested with full political powers.

10. The Jhang Sial (Jhang), of the 10th (received on the 17th) February 1912, publishes over the signature of Mr. S. N. Dar, Maghiana, a cartoon in which a Muhammadan woman representing the Muhammadan community is kneeling with one hand over her face and clutching with the other the coat of her husband, who is an Englishman and apparently represents Government. The letter press is as follows:—

Government and Muhammadans.

"The beloved wife is angry on account of the annulment of the Partition of Bengal and is requesting her husband to give her at least half of everything.

"Husband:—Everything will be given according to merit. Try to be deserving."

11. The Zamindar (Lahore), of the 13th February 1912, publishes a communication headed "The present time and the political stage." In continuation of his previous remarks (vide paragraph 4 of Selections No. 6) the writer—one Sheikh Fayyaz Ali of Shahabad, Hardoi district—says that the policy which the late Sir Syed Ahmad Khan adopted in inducing Muhammadans to keep themselves aloof from the Congress has proved injurious to Muslims, seeing that it has reduced the latter to the condition of an inert body. If Muhammadans continue to remain as ultra-loyal as they are at present, the day will not be far distant when they will not be allowed even to drink water without the permission of Hindus. Continuing, the writer finds fault with Muhammadans for paying no heed to the efforts of Sir Agha Khan and Sir William Wedderburn, who were anxious to effect a union between the two great communities; and concludes by expressing regret that they have been reduced to the condition of slaves to all.

Muhammadans and the Congress.

12. The Hindustan (Lahore), of the 16th February 1912, publishes a communication from the pen of Rai Bahadur Lala Baij Nath, ex-Judge, United Provinces, headed "The question of Hindu-Muhammadan union." After deploring the estrangement existing between the two great communities inhabiting India, and after remarking that the gulf between them is a serious obstacle in the way of the advancement of the country, the writer says that it is desirable that Muhammadans should take the first step to co-operate with Hindus. They should not only join the National Congress and give up their demand for separate electorates, but should also shelve the question of their "political importance." If Muhammadans do not harass Hindus by killing cows and also refrain from creating disturbances by interfering with the latter's religious processions, the Hindus will surely take part in all social and religious affairs of the former. After suggesting that Urdu and Hindi should be made the court languages in the respective districts in which they are spoken, the writer urges the establishment of a conciliatory board consisting of the Maharaja of Darbhanga and other leaders of the Hindu communities, together with the Agha Khan and other Muhammadan representatives. In conclusion, he observes that the Board should make a tour in the country in order to find out the causes of the estrangement between the two communities.

Muhammadans and Hindus.

III.—Native States.

13. The Paisa Akhbar (Lahore), of the 16th February 1912, publishes a communication headed "Life imprisonment for calling the faithful to prayers in a mosque." Last year, in the month of Ramzan, says the writer, the Banias of Mauza Phego (?), District Mandgarh, Mewar State, prevented Muhammadans from pronouncing the Azan (call for prayers); while, on the latter protesting that they had been doing this for 700 years, the Banias prosecuted them before the District Officer. The officer named made no enquiries whatever, but ordered the Muhammadans to furnish securities for good behaviour. Three of them, however, influenced by religious motives, refused to comply with the order. They were, therefore, consigned to the lock-up, where they are still rotting.

Mewar affairs.

Subsequently the above-mentioned District Officer paid a visit to the mosque, where he found a Muhammadan calling the Azan and a congregation of three other Muslims. After prayers were over all four were arrested and are still in the lock-up. The paper urges Muslim members of Council to take the matter up, saying that telegrams requesting the intervention of the Government of India have so far produced no effect.

V.—Native Societies and Religious Matters.

A mixed marriage.

14. The following is from the Arya Patrika (Lahore), of 17th February 1912:—

"A marriage under Act III of 1872 took place at Lahore at the house of the Hon'ble Zulfaquar Ali Khan, the Prime Minister of the Patiala State, when Sirdar Umrao Singh Majithia, was married to Miss A. Gottesmann, a young Austrian lady. Sirdar Umrao Singh is a widower and father of three sons and a daughter, who only recently was married to the son of a Sikh Sirdar of Patiala according to the Anand Marriage rites. This marriage has been noticed by the Press, and called a notable marriage, but we fail to understand, what do they mean when they designate it as a notable marriage. We have said, the Sirdar is a widower and above 48 years old and he has married a young virigin girl of about 22. According to the Vedic ideal of marriage the alliance cannot be commendable. Though, we know, that Sirdar Umrao Singh does no longer believe in the holy Scriptures, yet for a learned man like the Sirdar we expected something higher. Sirdar Umrao Singh is a lover of Sanskrit literature, a Sadhu, and a cultured man in the true sense of the word and as such the religious world cannot rejoice with him in his present rejoicings."

Guru Gobind Singh and Hindus.

15. The Arya Gazette (Lahore), of the 15th February 1912, publishes a communication from the pen of a graduate headed "Did Guru Gobind Singh confer any obligation on us." Hindus, says the writer, believe that Guru Gobind Singh preserved their communal existence, and that both he and his followers were Hindus. They believe that he sacrificed his life and allowed his sons buried alive for their sake, that he took care not to throw a blot on the fair fame of the Hindu religion by embracing Islam, and that he founded no new religion. The Sikhs, however, believe that Guru Gobind Singh underwent sacrifices, not because he himself was a Hindu or loved the Vedic religion, but because Hindus were oppressed during the time of Aurangzeb. They even go to the length of remarking that the Guru had no connection whatsoever with Hindus; inasmuch as his followers do not wear the sacred thread or keep the pig-tail. They eat meat and the Guru himself used to do the same. These assertions, which Sikhs make openly, create suspicion in the minds of Hindus, who, in consequence, find nothing to choose between Guru Gobind Singh and Aurangzeb; both of whom carried on a crusade against the sacred thread. The writer, however, considers that these assertions are not founded on facts, and endeavours to refute the same.

The Aryas and the Editor of the Indar.

16. The Indar (Lahore), of the 16th February 1912, publishes an article headed "A threat to murder us." Certain Arya Samajic organs, as also some non-Arya papers, says the Editor, heap the most obscene abuse on him; but he has so far given no reply, thinking that it would be indiscreet on the part of a gentleman to pay back a badmash in his own coin. In spite of his self-restraint, however, it is surprising that certain Arya Samajists have addressed letters to him in which his life is threatened. Some so-called Aryas have also raised an outcry that he should be turned out of the Samaj; but he finds nobody strong enough to do this. After remarking that he is determined to protect the Samaj and that he will strain every nerve to sweep those men off the face of the earth who have made its institutions dens of serious immorality and crime, the Editor reports that Pandit Bashi Ram writes to inform him that the Governor of the Gurukula broke open the trunk of one, Jai Chandra, and tampered with some of his letters. This conduct on the part of Lala Munshi Ram, he adds, is highly unbecoming, and is wholly unjustifiable from either a religious, moral, or legal point of view. The Lala also put pressure on Pandit Bashi Ram and Jai Chandra to totally deny the existence of the letters in question. On meeting with a refusal they were roughly handled (lit.

strangled) by the Lala. The Editor then goes on to say that the main object of the Lala in denying the existence of the correspondence under reference was to save himself and his son from being suspected by Government. The Lala could, however, have easily apologised for the correspondence by saying that Indar Chandra (the Lala's son?) was a mere boy, and that he wrote in a state of anger. Munshi Ram, however, murdered his conscience by uttering an extraordinary lie. He has also admitted that "The biography of Napoleon Bonaparte" was written by Indar Chandar; although this book is more dangerous than the letters under reference. In this book the English are called "the nation of shopkeepers," "the enemies of freedom," "the bribe-givers," "the base-born," "hungry," "unjust," "those who can be convinced only by kicks and threats," "liars," "addicted to bringing filthy charges," "sinners," "those who seek an excuse," "hypocritical," "plunderers," "foolish," "proud," "oppressors," "irascible," "those who do not care if the world is ruined so long as they fill their pockets," etc. Seeing that the British Government has taken no notice of Indar Chandra's book, in which the English have been grossly abused, it is nothing but sheer cowardice on the part of Lala Munshi Ram to totally deny the existence of Indar Chandra's correspondence.

In another place the paper says that, after reading the above, some people may wonder whether Government will confiscate the book or not. But Government will probably take no notice of "these contemptible things and is waiting to see what action the Arya Samaj is going to take in the matter." Indeed, the Arya Pritinidhi Sabha should not remain silent, since it is the manifest duty of the Sabha and the Samaj to pass resolutions against the book. Seeing that the object of the Arya Samaj is to preach the Vedic religion and to promote peace in the world, they cannot countenance a book which disseminates those thoughts which inspired revolutionaries in the days of the dangerous and sanguinary revolution in France.

Complaint against Lala Munshi Ram.

17. The Indar (Lahore), of the 16th February 1912, publishes a paragraph headed "The dangerous programme of Lala Munshi Ram and the necessity of safeguarding against the same." The attempt of Lala Munshi Ram, says the paper, to trample underfoot the democratic character of the Arya Samaj and to crush freedom of speech in it with a view to enabling him to establish a personal rule in the management (of the Samaj) is quite opposed to the spirit of the teachings of Swami Daya Nand. Having become emboldened by his success in his shameful attempt to crush a few weaklings he now tries, like Napoleon Bonaparte, to have his own way and to bequeath his despotic rule intact to his descendants.

VI.—Legislation.

The Bill to amend the Punjab Land Revenue Act.

18. The Tribune (Lahore), of 18th February 1912, publishes the following under heading "Provincial autonomy and settlement policy":—

"The Punjab Gazette of the 16th instant contains a short Bill to further amend the Punjab Land Revenue Act, 1887. It is proposed to amend section 49 so as to substitute 'the Local Government' for 'the Governor-General in Council;' and the Bill when passed becomes law 'at once.' * * * * * * * * * * * * * * * * * * * *

This at the outset seems an ordinary and inoffensive measure. But its full effect is not likely to be realised at present. It is quite true that the Decentralization Commission recommended a relaxation in the powers of control retained by the Government of India and pointed out that settlements on a scientific basis have been generally completed all over the country and those that the Local Governments have to carry on hereafter will be mere re-settlements. But even as regards re-settlements care must be taken that the financial results expected justify the inception of re-settlements and the cost to be incurred upon them. Who is to exercise the power of control now exercised by the Government of India in this respect if the Act is to be amended in the manner proposed? We think this power should be passed on to the Local Legislative Council. This view of the question was concurred in by Sir Frederick Lely and the late Mr. Dutt. The matter is important and the non-official members of the Punjab Legislative Council should unite to secure this provision in the Bill."

Continuing his remarks in the paper's issue, dated 27th February 1912, the Editor says :—

* * * * * * * *

"* * * * The hardship to which landowners were in the past subjected owing to the over-zealous conduct of settlement officers in the trans-Ravi territory, notably in the tahsils adjacent to Lahore, has not been forgotten. The mistakes of these men and the failure of the Governments of those days to correct them will be found described in the settlement reports and need not be stated here in any detail. The injustice involved in the Murree settlement is obvious and is of too recent a date to need reiteration. Strangely enough the Local Government had to deny itself the pleasure and credit of removing the injustice by any spontaneous act of its own. It was more anxious to support its own officers and to continue its own policy than to right what was palpably wrong. Nevertheless it now wants to free itself from the control of the Government of India. We do not by any means overlook the convenience which freedom of control means, nor do we ignore the advantages which accompany the disadvantages. Still we have to weigh both good and evil. We have to consider the baneful as well as beneficial effects. The instances referred to above show how a love of revenue blunts the sensibilities of settlement officers and how it blinds the Government to the real difficulties of the ryots. It cannot therefore be contended that the freedom of control now sought by the Local Government will be an unmixed blessing to the people. * * *

* * * * * * * * *

* * The necessity for relaxing the control of the Government of India is that the Decentralization Commission has recommended such a relaxation. But there are other and more important recommendations of the Commission relating to the settlement and requiring to be incorporated in the Land Revenue Act. Neither the Local Government nor the Government of India has been pleased to bestow the same consideration on them as on the proposed relaxation of control. 'We consider,' wrote the Commission, 'that the general principles of assessment, such, for instance, as the proportion of the net profits on the land which the Government shall be entitled to take, and the period of settlements should be embodied in provincial legislation instead of being left to executive order, as is now the case outside Bombay.' If anything, this recommendation is the more important of the two and should therefore have carried greater weight with the Government of India. Unfortunately it looks more to its own convenience, to bring about a reduction in its Secretariat work by relaxing control than to the safeguarding of the rights of the people. With a statutory limitation to the proportion of net profits claimable from land and with known fixity as to the duration of settlements there is certainly less ground to object to a relaxation of control. But such a regular and orderly course of legislation seldom commends to our rulers and it is generally the topsy-turvy method that is pursued. The Government of India elects to add to the existing powers of the Local Government without providing for a restraint of the abuse of such powers. If it is contended that that matter also is under consideration and will come to be adopted by and by, even then there is the objection to deal piecemeal in a haphazard fashion with so important a matter. To legislate hastily to meet an emergency is to ignore the permanent effects of such legislation on the tendency of the administration.

It is impossible to confide always in executive benevolence as we do not always have the same set of benevolent officials. The Punjab Government itself suggested to the Decentralization Commission an enhancement of its powers in fixing the duration of settlements and the Chief Secretary of those days argued that this Government should be able to sanction thirty-year settlements. It is permissible to inquire whether any tangible approach has been made to the realization of this reform and whether instructions have been issued to extend the duration from 20 to 30 years in tahsils still condemned to short term settlements. Supposing that the thirty year rule will be uniformly applied to tahsils that are awaiting re-settlement, even then the financial results have to be examined, needless expenditure on unpromising revision of assessment has to be checked and in the words of the Decentralization Commission, 'harassment of the people in cases in which there was no substantial reason for a new settlement' should be prevented. The Decentralization Commission attaches undue value to the continuance of the present practice of submitting settlement calendars to the Government of India. These will be submitted only for the information of the Government of India and intervention is possible only in the event of undue delay in ordering re-settlements. Clearly there is no provision for the Government of India to prevent needless expenditure or avoidable harassment of the people. The only course now open to non-official members is to insist unitedly upon the Legislative Council being permitted to discuss the settlement proposals prior to their confirmation. The adoption of safeguards similar to those provided in the Delegation Bill pending before the Supreme Legislative Council will meet the reasonable requirements of the public. We earnestly hope that His Honour the Lieutenant-Governor will be pleased to attach greater importance to the necessity of obviating future troubles than to the desirability of securing the present convenience of the executive.

The Punjab Legislative Council.

19. The following is from the Tribune (Lahore), of 20th February 1912 :—

"* * * *Usually the meetings of the Legislative Council are fewer in the Punjab than in other Provinces. It has been particularly so this year. But it cannot be that questions of public interest are fewer here. Indeed, the Punjab is still reputed as a non-regulation Province. Our system of Begar does not surely reflect credit on us. Our employment of military men in the judicial service is an anachronism. Our short term settlements and our system of Municipal and District Board administration perpetually remind one of our backwardness. Our Chief Court Circular restricting the admission of Pleaders makes the Punjab only a trifle better than Faridkot which has banished the entire class of Pleaders. These are a few instances which go to justify the application of the opprobrious epithet to the Punjab in spite of its marvellous advancement in other and equally important directions. All the greater therefore is the need for vigilance on the part of non-official members. Not only should they be careful of the insidious influence of retrograde measures but insist on quickening the pace in our onward march. But the activity of the non-official members leaves much to be desired. Nothing has been done to raise a debate on the enhancement of tuition fees in schools and colleges or on the necessity to extend the educational programme. The increasing thefts on railways have greatly unsettled the minds of the commercial classes, particularly Indian ; and the number of typical cases published last year in these columns go to show how deep-rooted is the evil. Even in the capital city the police are deteriorating and cases of theft are increasing. It is very much to be doubted whether any increase has been secured in the efficiency of the police commensurate with the additional cost thrown on the tax-payers during the last few years. We earnestly request the non-official members to raise a debate on or otherwise call the attention of the Government to these and similar questions of general interest. It is clearly not enough to be passively defensive in respect of measures brought before the Council by the Government. Active measures are necessary to influence the policy of the Government by the express effort and express endeavour of the chosen representatives of the people."

VII.—General Administration.

(d)—Education.

The Viceroy on the proposed Dacca University.

20. The following is from the Tribune (Lahore), of 18th February 1912 :—

"It was a happy thought of the leaders of Bengal to wait in deputation on His Excellency the Viceroy and present to him an address setting forth the fears entertained by the public as regards the proposed Dacca University. That the deputation was headed by Dr. Rash Behari Ghosh must be convincing enough to Government that the apprehensions entertained were themselves genuine and were shared by the most sober and thoughtful leaders. * * * * * * * *

* * * * * * * *

The frank, full and straightforward reply now vouchsafed by His Excellency to the present deputation goes a great way to remove those apprehensions. The explanations offered and the hopes raised give a totally different setting to the proposal and it ought now to receive the cordial support of reunited Bengal. There is no longer any fear of the creation of a separate educational cadre for East Bengal or of any artificial restriction on students entering either University. The personal and political considerations to which His Excellency referred should be strictly tabooed in laying down the new policy. With these and similar safeguards it is, as His Excellency rightly claimed, a compliment to the intelligence and educational progress of Bengal that the Government of India should have proposed to create in Bengal the first teaching and residential University of its kind in India. The country is grateful to His Excellency for inaugurating the new policy of establishing teaching and residential Universities. We trust that the policy will be extended to every one of the larger Provinces during His Excellency's tenure of office."

A contradiction.

21. The Arya Gazette (Lahore), of the 15th February 1912, publishes an article entitled "Were the Sikh Gurus insulted in the Daya Nand Anglo-Vedic College?" Referring to the insult which the students of the D. A.-V. College are alleged to have offered to the Sikh Gurus on the occasion of the last Lohri festival (vide paragraph 22 of Selections No. 6), the paper assures the Loyal Gazette and the Khalsa Samachar that nothing of the sort ever occurred in the premises of the College named. There can, however, be no denying the fact that the students played a farce in which they ridiculed those Pandits who commit the texts of their sacred books to memory without understanding them.

22. The Indar (Lahore), of the 16th February 1912, publishes a note headed "Confusion in the accounts of the Gurukula." The paper finds fault with the manner in which the Gurukula accounts are kept, and alleges that, while the sum of Rs. 12,078 meant for the Gurukul was paid to the Treasurer of the institution by instalments, there is nothing on the records to show how a certain sum of Rs 2,463-14-4 was spent. There is, besides, no entry in the office account books regarding gold ornaments weighing 18 tolas, silver ornaments weighing 5 seers and a couple or so of watches and coins which were received by Lala Munshi Ram in aid of the Gurukul. These articles are certainly mentioned in the ledger, but the Lala has sent no detailed information about them to the office.

The Gurukula.

The Parkash (Lahore), of the 20th February 1912, publishes an article headed "Is the Gurukula in danger?" The paper endeavours to refute all the charges brought against the Gurukula, and says that great care is taken in the institution to bring up able Brahmacharias, who will certainly do substantial work when their turn comes.

23. The following is from the Khalsa Advocate (Amritsar), of 16th February 1912 :—

The Gurukula.

"The highest, the noblest and the most intense form of love with which humanity is blessed is that of a father for the children. When a son leaves his parental roof to take up the students' cell, hundreds of miles away, he is allowed to tear his heart away with the glorious hopes that he would come back a wonderful creation, metamorphosed by the strange alchemy of the academy he goes to. However much we may differ from the tenets of the Samajists and however great may be our aversion of the spirit of vituperation and aggression in matters religious, we cannot but be conscious of the very great sacrifices involved in the action of the Samajic parents sending their sons to the twentieth century monastery set up by Lala Munshi Ram on the banks of the Ganges. It must therefore be very pathetic if their darlings should return shattered in mind and body and with their life hopes blasted for ever. Who would not feel a thrill of sympathy running through his heart on the failure of a trial which involved a heavy draft upon the exchequer of the commoner of the Punjab and which had attracted so much energy and attention in the midst of ominous mutterings of the sensible students of the progress of times?

"Yet that is the spectacle presented to us by the circumstantial accounts of the abuses of the Gurukul as given in issue after issue of the Indar of Mahasha Dharmpal. No satisfactory answer has as yet been made by the Governor of the institution. The public must either be too foolish or too wise to send their children to the Ashram if there is even a spark of truth in the charges brought against the management.

"It is high time now that Lala Munshi Ram cleared his position in a straightforward way and not by dodges and abuses as has been done so far, in the columns of the 'Prakash.' A public commission ought to be appointed to probe into the whole affair.

"Inquiry may be directed among other points to the following :—

"(1) Want of proper control in the management.

"(2) Disgrace of gentlemen invited to Gurukul.

"(3) Illicit connection between the teachers and the taught.

"(4) Quarrels among the students and drawings in contravention of the principle of Brahmacharya.

"(5) Illicit connections among the students."

(f)—Railways and Communications.

24. The Tribune (Lahore), of 23rd February 1912, publishes the following under the heading "The collapse of Railway administrations" :—

Accumulation of goods at Jullundur and Sargodha Railway Stations and want of wagons.

"Yesterday we published a brief telegram from Jullundur complaining about the refusal of the railway officials to book goods any more and pointing out that 8,000 bags of cereals, wheat, makki and kapas were lying near the goods shed exposed to the destructive action of white ants. To-day the merchants of Sargodha complain that 200 wagon loads of grain are lying on the platform exposed to the action of the weather and that there are no wagons available to despatch the consignment. We have not heard from other stations on the North-Western Railway system what exactly is the state of congestion, but we are informed by local dealers that the complaint is now common to the Province. In the United Provinces the complaint seems to be even greater. It is common to the East Indian and Oudh and Rohilkhand as to the Bengal and North-Western and Rohilkhand and Kumaon lines. Replying to a question put by the Hon'ble Rai Nathi Mal Bahadur the Government admitted the existence of the block, but said it was in correspondence with the several Railway administrations to have the cause or causes removed. Besides the Lieutenant-Governor also signified his intention to take early steps to represent the difficulty to the Railway Board and ask them 'to do all that is possible to meet the very heavy grain traffic likely to offer from this Province for the next few months.' Here in the Punjab owing to the fewness of the Council meetings it has not been possible to invite the attention of the Government to the inconvenience and loss caused to grain dealers by the collapse of the railway administration to deal with the existing traffic. There is no means of ascertaining the exact cause of the block or the difficulties experienced by the railway to have the cause removed. The mercantile community is very much discouraged by the difference of the best administered system, and in inviting the attention of His Honour the Lieutenant-Governor to this complaint we venture to suggest that an authoritative statement should be made by Government in order to re-assure the public as to the future ability of the railway for coping with the traffic."

(h)—Miscellaneous.

A sadhu and three European children.

25. The Punjab Advocate (Mianwali), of the 7th (received on 17th) February 1912, has a paragraph headed "The barbarous conduct of European children." The paper reproduces from the Hindu (Madras) a communication from a certain Sadhu who complains that, while travelling in a 2nd class railway compartment, he was grossly ill-treated by the son and two daughters of a European member of the Indian Civil Service, who was also travelling in the same compartment with his wife. After remarking that the children named scowled at the Sadhu and that, on being asked not to do so, they spat on his face, the Editor deplores their conduct, and says that no Indian child would ever have behaved so barbarously in the presence of his parents. Indeed, no Indian parent would ever permit his children to commit such base and mean-minded acts; nor would an Indian Officer deal with a boy as severely as Mr. Jackson did in the Chingleput case for the sole offence of salaming him in a loud voice. Do European civilization, morality, and good breeding allow a European child to grossly ill-treat and insult a high-souled sadhu in the presence of his parents? Besides, it adds, what a world of difference there exists between the mild conduct of the Sadhu—who controlled his feelings in spite of his having been spat upon—and that of fierce Mr. Jackson!

The Ahmednagar salaam case.

26. The Shanti (Rawalpindi), of the 17th February 1912, has a paragraph entitled "May this salaam be cursed." After reproducing an account of the dismissal of a clerk by the District Magistrate, Ahmednagar (for not having Salaamed the local Superintendent of the Police) the paper asserts that this was an unjust punishment, seeing that a warning would have fairly met the ends of justice. These are the kind of occurrences, adds the paper, that lower the authorities in the estimation of the people.

The Vakil (Amritsar), of the 17th February 1912, also refers to the above matter, and says that such cases are calculated to create feelings of serious uneasiness and indignation in the minds of the people.

The new coin.

27. The Jhang Sial (Jhang), of the 10th (received on the 17th) February 1912, publishes a paragraph headed "The new coin." After remarking that the Muhammadan community cannot be too thankful to Government for withdrawing from circulation all the new coins against which they protested, the paper urges Government to pay due consideration to the feelings of Hindus—who constitute the majority of the Indian population—by representing the value of the new coin on the same in Hindi, which is the lingua franca of the country.

Superannuation in Government service.

28. The following is from the Tribune (Lahore), of 20th February 1912 :—

"The practice of granting extension to officials who get superannuated on attaining the age of 55 has of late years been subjected to a good deal of abuse. It is complained that it is the easiest thing in the world for superannuated officials to get extensions of service. An officer who attains the age of 55 is liable to be retired from service under the Civil Service Regulations. But he can continue in service for five years more, i.e., up to the age of 60. The extension is given for a period of one year and is repeated year after year. The practice is that when an officer attains the age of 55 his department is asked to say whether it recommends the extension of his service or proposes that he should be retired. The final orders are passed by Government except in the case of the holders of what are known as non-gazetted posts, and in these cases the final authority that decides is the head of the department. In the Public Works Department the rule relating to superannuation on attaining the age of 55 is rigidly enforced, and an extension of service is rarely, if ever, given. In fact the orders of Government provide the compulsory retirement of officers in the Public Works Department at the age of 50 and this enables the authorities to weed out the incompetent and the inefficient. But in the other branches of the public service an extension of service is granted as a matter of course. In the Provincial Civil Service extension after 55 is granted in the large majority of cases. A correspondent writes to a local contemporary and points out that in the Provincial Civil Service of the Punjab the 55 years' rule 'is practically a dead letter for we find all kinds of decrepit, inefficient men getting extensions year after year on various pretexts as a matter of course.' It is quite true that the practice of granting extensions indiscriminately while greatly beneficial to the officers themselves is injurious to the efficiency of the service and blocks the promotion of younger and more energetic men in the service. It is quite true that officers are badgered with requests for extension by unfortunate men and they often have not the courage to refuse such requests. The adoption of the Public Works Department practice in all the other branches of the public service would greatly relieve the heads of departments of the bother they have at present to undergo, and would be an act of justice to many officers whose promotion is at present barred by the retention of some officers in service year after year. It is stated that one officer has had seven extensions and is 62 years of age and that he is still hopeful of getting another year. The official doctrine ought to be that no one is indispensable, and it is only fair and just that extensions should be granted only in cases where the officer in question cannot be easily replaced. And such cases will be very rare.

LAHORE :
The 24th February 1912.

[C. STEAD,
Assistant to the Deputy Inspector-General of Police, Criminal Investigation Department, Punjab.

Punjab Government Press, Lahore—23-2-12—118—107—H. L. S.

[ Confidential. ]

[ Vol. XXV. ] [ No. 9. ]

SELECTIONS

FROM THE

NATIVE NEWSPAPERS

PUBLISHED IN THE PUNJAB.

Examined up to 2nd March 1912.

---

CONTENTS.

Page.

I.—Politics.

(a) Foreign—

1. Christianity and Islam (Vakil) ... ... 139
2. European Powers and Islam (Zamindar) ... ib.
3. Ditto ditto ( Ditto ) ... 140
4. Ditto ditto ( Ditto ) ... ib.
5. The Turco-Italian War and the Muhammadans (Tribune) ... ... ... 141
6. The Turco-Italian War (Zamindar) ... ... ib.
7. Indians in Australia (Tribune) ... ... ib.

(b) Home—

8. Aryas and politics (Indar and Harbinger) ... 142
9. Sikhs and politics (Loyal Gazette) ... ... 143
10. Recent concessions to officials in honour of the King Emperor's visit (Jhang Sial) ... ... 144

II.—Afghanistan and Trans-Frontier.

Nil.

III.—Native States.

11. The success of the Indore State Police in suppressing heinous crime (Panjabee) ... ... 144

IV.—Kine-killing.

Nil.

V.—Native Societies and Religious Matters.

12. Baba Gurbakhsh Singh, Bedi, and Sikhs (Loyal Gazette) ... ... ... ... 144
13. Complaint against Lala Munshi Ram (Indar) ... ib.

VI.—Legislation.

14. Devolution of powers to the Local Governments to carry out settlement of land revenue (Paisa Akhbar) ... ... ... ... 145
15. Mr. Gokhale's resolution on District Councils (Tribune and Panjabee) ... ... ib.
16. The Special Marriage Bill (Tribune) ... ... ib.

Page.

VII.—General Administration.

(a) Judicial—

Nil.

(b) Police—

17. The Thagi and Dacoity Department (Akhbar-i-'Am) ... ... ... ... 145
18. Police confessions (Tribune) ... ... 146
19. The Police in India (Ditto) ... ... 147

(c) Municipal and Cantonment affairs—

Nil.

(d) Education —

20. The proposed Dacca University (Paisa Akhbar) ... 147
21. The Gurukula, Kangri (Arya Patrika) ... ib.
22. Lohri in the D. A.-V. College (Khalsa Advocate) 148
23. Musalmans and Elementary Education (Observer) 149

(e)—Agriculture and questions affecting the land—

Nil.

(f) Railways and Communications—

24. The Inchcape Committee (Tribune) ... 149

(g) Postal matters—

Nil.

(h) Miscellaneous—

Nil.

LIST OF NEWSPAPERS AND PERIODICALS EXAMINED BY THE SPECIAL BRANCH AS IT STOOD ON THE 2ND MARCH 1912.

| No. | Name. | Locality. | Name of Publisher. | Circulation. |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| | ENGLISH. | | | |
| | DAILY. | | | |
| 1 | Tribune ... | Lahore ... | Bihari Lal ... | 1,758 copies. |
| | TRI-WEEKLY. | | | |
| 2 | Panjabee ... | Lahore ... | Mul Chand ... | 2,424 copies. |
| | BI-WEEKLY. | | | |
| 3 | Observer ... | Lahore ... | Nizam-ud-din ... | 1,000 copies. |
| 4 | Punjab Times and Frontier News. ... | Rawalpindi ... | J. R. Thapur ... | 200 „ |
| | WEEKLY. | | | |
| 5 | Arya Patrika ... | Lahore ... | Devi Chand ... | 650 copies. |
| 6 | Harbinger ... | Do. ... | Durga Parshad ... | 300 „ |
| 7 | Khalsa Advocate ... | Amritsar ... | Bahadar Singh ... | 752 „ |
| | FORTNIGHTLY. | | | |
| 8 | Jijnasu ... | Lahore ... | Ishwar Das ... | ... |
| | MONTHLY. | | | |
| 9 | D. A.-V. College Magazine... | Lahore ... | Saraswati Nath ... | 1,000 copies. |
| 10 | Forman Christian College Notes.* | Do. ... | ... | ... |
| 11 | Practical Medicine* ... | Delhi ... | ... | ... |
| 12 | Punjab Educational Journal | Lahore ... | R. B. Mohan Lal ... | 700 copies. |
| 13 | Punjab Mission News ... | Do. ... | Revd. Wigram ... | 250 „ |
| 14 | Ravi ... | Do. ... | Mr. B. M. Jones ... | ... |
| 15 | Review of Religions* ... | Qadian (Gurdaspur) ... | Sadr Anjuman Ahmadia, Qadian. | 800 copies. |
| 16 | Science Grounded Religion... | Lahore ... | Dev Rattan ... | 25 „ |
| 17 | Teacher ... | Dinga (Gujrat) ... | Kanhaya Singh ... | 200 „ |
| | URDU. | | | |
| | DAILY. | | | |
| 18 | Akhbar-i-'Am ... | Lahore ... | Govind Sahai ... | 630 copies. |
| 19 | Paisa Akhbar ... | Do. ... | Abdul Aziz ... | 1,011 „ |
| 20 | Watan ... | Do. ... | Muhammad Insha Alla ... | ... |
| 21 | Zamindar ... | Do. ... | Zafar Ali Khan, B.A. ... | ... |
| | BI-WEEKLY. | | | |
| 22 | Vakil ... | Amritsar ... | Abdul Aziz ... | 1,970 copies. |
| | WEEKLY. | | | |
| 23 | Afghan ... | Peshawar ... | Saiyid Muhammad Abdulla | 500 copies. |
| 24 | Ahl-i-Hadis ... | Amritsar ... | Sanaulla ... | 925 „ |
| 25 | Ahluwalia Gazette ... | Do. ... | Lehna Singh ... | 500 „ |
| 26 | Al-Moin ... | Do. ... | Mehraj-ud-din ... | ... |
| 27 | Army News ... | Ludhiana ... | Hira Lal & Co. ... | 1,300 „ |
| 28 | Arorbans Gazette ... | Amritsar ... | Labh Singh ... | ... |
| 29 | Arya Gazette ... | Lahore ... | Bhowani Das ... | 550 copies. |
| 30 | Badar ... | Qadian, Gurdaspur district | Muhammad Sadiq ... | 200 „ |

* Not received during the month.

LIST OF NEWSPAPERS AND PERIODICALS EXAMINED BY THE SPECIAL BRANCH AS IT STOOD ON THE 2ND MARCH 1912—CONTINUED.

| No. | Name. | Locality. | Name of Publisher. | Circulation. |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| | URDU—CONTINUED. | | | |
| | WEEKLY—continued. | | | |
| 31 | Bharat ... | Jullundur ... | Thakur Sheoratan Singh | ... |
| 32 | Civil and Military News ... | Ludhiana ... | Saiyid Muhammad ... | 1,325 copies. |
| 33 | Curzon Gazette ... | Delhi ... | Mirza Hairat ... | 111 „ |
| 34 | Delhi Gazette ... | Do. ... | Sajjad Husain ... | 200 „ |
| 35 | Edward Gazette ... | Abbott-abad ... | Muhammad Latif ... | 200 „ |
| 36 | Hakam ... | Qadian, Gurdaspur district | Yakub Ali ... | 900 „ |
| 37 | Haq ... | Delhi ... | Kasim Ali ... | 200 „ |
| 38 | Haq Pasand ... | Amritsar ... | Ram Nath ... | 382 „ |
| 39 | Hindu ... | Lahore ... | Hari Lal Sharma ... | ... |
| 40 | Hindustan ... | Do. ... | Ram Sarn Dutt ... | 8,070 copies. |
| 41 | Indar ... | Do. ... | Dharm Pal, B.A. ... | ... |
| 42 | Islam ... | Do. ... | Abdul Latif ... | 200 copies. |
| 43 | Jhang Sial ... | Jhang ... | Prabh Dyal ... | 2,262 „ |
| 44 | Kapurthala Akhbar ... | Kapurthala ... | Hamid Husain ... | 155 „ |
| 45 | Loyal Gazette ... | Lahore ... | Amar Singh ... | 200 „ |
| 46 | Lytton Gazette ... | Delhi ... | Bulaki Das ... | 1,000 „ |
| 47 | Milap* ... | Lyallpur ... | Jawahar Lal ... | ... |
| 48 | Millat ... | Lahore ... | Shuja Ulla ... | 1,500 copies. |
| 49 | Mister Gazette* ... | Do. ... | Ali Bakhsh ... | 150 „ |
| 50 | Munir ... | Jhang ... | Hafiz Khuda Bakhsh ... | 200 „ |
| 51 | Musalman ... | Amritsar ... | Sana-ulla ... | 400 „ |
| 52 | Nur ... | Qadian, Gurdaspur district | Muhammad Yusaf ... | 200 „ |
| 53 | Nur Afshan ... | Ludhiana ... | Revd. Dr. E. M. Wherry | 500 „ |
| 54 | Paisa Akhbar ... | Lahore ... | Abdul Aziz ... | 8,377 „ |
| 55 | Parkash ... | Do. ... | Krishan ... | 1,723 „ |
| 56 | Punjab Advocate ... | Mianwali ... | Karm Chand, Bahl ... | 1,000 „ |
| 57 | Punjab Samachar ... | Lahore ... | Hira Lal ... | 705 „ |
| 58 | Rajput Gazette ... | Do. ... | Thakur Sukhram Das ... | 650 „ |
| 59 | Municipal Gazette and Sada-i-Hind. | Do. ... | Din Muhammad ... | 500 „ |
| 60 | Sadiq-ul-Akhbar ... | Bahawalpur ... | Maulvi Ata Ullah ... | 392 „ |
| 61 | Ditto ... | Rewari ... | Safdar Hussain ... | 200 „ |
| 62 | Sanatan Dharm Pracharak... | Amritsar ... | Rulia Ram ... | 200 „ |
| 63 | Shanti ... | Rawalpindi ... | Kishan Chand Mohan ... | 300 „ |
| 64 | Sialkot Paper ... | Sialkot ... | Todar Mal ... | 500 „ |
| 65 | Siraj-ul-Akhbar ... | Jhelum ... | Maulvi Fakir Muhammad | 450 „ |
| 66 | Tahzib-ul-Niswan ... | Lahore ... | Mumtaz Ali ... | 240 „ |

* Not received during the week.

LIST OF NEWSPAPERS AND PERIODICALS EXAMINED BY THE SPECIAL BRANCH AS IT STOOD ON THE 2ND MARCH 1912—CONCLUDED.

| No. | Name. | Locality. | Name of Publisher. | Circulation. |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| | URDU—CONCLUDED. | | | |
| | WEEKLY—concluded. | | | |
| 67 | Victoria Paper ... | Sialkot ... | Gian Chand ... | 600 copies. |
| 68 | Wafadar* ... | Lahore ... | Fazal-ud-din ... | 600 „ |
| 69 | Waqt ... | Do. ... | Ali Husain ... | 200 „ |
| 70 | Watan ... | Do. ... | Muhammad Insha Ullah... | 1,800 „ |
| 71 | Zamindar ... | Do. ... | Zafar Ali Khan, B.A. ... | 750 „ |
| | FORTNIGHTLY. | | | |
| 72 | Biwah Samachar* ... | Lahore ... | Ram Chand ... | 300 copies. |
| 73 | Kam Dhenu ... | Ludhiana ... | Daulat Ram ... | 100 „ |
| 74 | Mohyal Gazette ... | Kala, Jhelum district ... | Mehta Sham Das ... | 250 „ |
| | MONTHLY. | | | |
| 75 | Arorbans* Parkash ... | Lahore ... | Salig Ram ... | 200 copies. |
| 76 | Arya Musafir ... | Jullundur ... | Wazir Chand ... | 1,300 „ |
| 77 | Indar* ... | Lahore ... | Dharampal, B.A. ... | 3,000 „ |
| 78 | Jauhar* ... | Amritsar ... | Muhammad Ismail Khan | 200 „ |
| 79 | Kakezai Social Reformer ... | Lahore ... | Fazl Din ... | 200 „ |
| 80 | Makhzan ... | Delhi ... | Abdul Kadir ... | 4,000 „ |
| 81 | Rafiq ... | Lahore ... | Charinji Lal ... | 500 „ |
| 82 | Sadhu ... | Do. ... | Sheobart Lal ... | 500 „ |
| 83 | Martand ... | Do. ... | Kanhya Lal ... | 250 „ |
| 84 | Raghbir Patrika ... | Do. ... | Prab Dial ... | 500 „ |
| 85 | Zaban* ... | Delhi ... | Hamid Hasain ... | 500 „ |
| | GURMUKHI. | | | |
| | WEEKLY. | | | |
| 86 | Khalsa Sewak ... | Amritsar ... | Jiwan Singh ... | 1,000 copies. |
| 87 | Punjab Reporter* ... | Do. ... | Ganda Singh ... | ... |
| 88 | Punjabi Surma ... | Lahore ... | Gian Chand ... | 1,000 copies. |

* Not received during the week.

I—Politics.

(a)—Foreign.

Christianity and Islam.

1. The Vakil (Amritsar), of the 21st February 1912, has an article headed "A universal danger for the Islamic world." The Christian Powers, says the paper, individually and collectively, are vigorously pursuing a policy that aims at defeating Islam. Indeed, they are doing as much as they can to induce Muhammadans to bid goodbye to their holy and great religion. The Christian world is unanimously of opinion that the well-being of the World can only be ensured if steps are taken to sweep the very name of Islam from off the face of the earth. It is not a wish, but an established article of faith among Christians that (the worship of) one God should be suppressed by (the worship of) the Trinity, and that the brilliant rays of Crescent should have their lustre dimmed before the bloody Cross. It is under the influence of this feeling that Christians have been led to conjure up the bugbear of Pan-Islamism, which is causing them considerable anxiety and disquietude. This has also given rise to a Pan-Christian movement, under the garb of which Christians are terrorising 30 crores of Muhammadans. For a thousand years the destinies of the world were committed to "our" charge. The times have, however, changed; and this trust has been transferred to the children of the Cross. Even the few Muhammadan kingdoms which remain are now falling a victim to the machinations of Europeans. After remarking that it is a well-known fact that Christian missionaries took a most prominent part in the deposition of Sultan Abdul Hamid, thus destroying the talisman of Muhammadan influence and prestige in Turkey, the paper refers to the efforts which they are making to convert Muhammadans to Christianity; and says that the Pan-Christian movement has come into being with a view to terminating the existence of Islam. Now-a-days Muhammadans are mostly in subjection to the "children of the Cross" and Muslim kingdoms are being destroyed. Attempts are also being made to destroy the little power which Muhammadan rulers still possess. Even highly-placed Christians admit that a crusade is going on, and that materials have been collected (sic) for the destruction of the Crescent. The paper concludes by saying that Christian missionaries are trying to win over Muhammadans to their side by establishing hospitals, etc.

European Powers and Islam.

2. The Zamindar (Lahore), of the 23rd February 1912, publishes a translation of an article contributed to the columns of the Muayyad, of Cairo, under the heading "The Osmanli Emperors." In the article under reference the writer says that European statesmen are of opinion that, if disunion had not existed among European Powers, the Turkish Empire would have long been swept off the face of the earth. This is true, seeing that it is in the nature of things that disunion should creep among stronger men in order that the weak may be saved from their oppression aud highhandedness. If internecine feuds had not existed among Arabs the entire West would have been under their sway by this time. After referring to various alliances made between Turkey and European Powers, the writer deplores the conduct of modern Turkey in not trying to secure the friendship of England'; and says that, although Germany boasted of her friendship with Turkey, she has remained indifferent to the latter's difficulties. The writer goes on to remark that when the war broke out Turkey was unprepared. England also gave her no help and even refused passage through Egypt to Turkish troops. After regretting the dearth of Turkish statesmen capable of securing the co-operation of European Powers in times of difficulties, the writer says that the tactics employed by the English and the French in respect of Morocco, the attitude of France and the connivance of the English in the Turco-Italian war, and the Anglo-Russian convention clearly show that European Powers are anxious to partition Asia. Events in Morocco and Tripoli also show that no value can be attached to promises and agreements made by the European Powers, especially when the other party is an Asiatic kingdom. The sword alone can be trusted to force them to act up to their promises and to discharge their obligations. Under these circumstances it is desirable that Turkey should strengthen her ports, provide arms for her subjects as well as for her army, and should raise a force capable of repelling any attempt to occupy any part of her dominions. The writer then concludes as follows:—"O Osmanlis! If you wish to lead an honourable life and to govern your country like your forefathers, you should consider it your duty to sacrifice your lives. O Asiatics! you should also bear in mind that if (God forbid!) the Turkish Empire ceases to exist, there will remain no empire in Asia capable of standing face to face with European Powers, and you will suffer extreme humiliation. O Muhammadans of the entire world! Islam lies in the agonies of death, and there is nothing in the present critical period of its existence except the sword to defend it. It is, therefore, your duty to be ready to sacrifice your lives (for the sake of Islam)."

European Powers and Islam.

3. Writing under the heading "(We) write this letter to you with the blood of our heart," the Zamindar (Lahore), of the 23rd February 1912, reports that the few Muhammadans residing in Germany have despatched a printed appeal in Arabic all over the Islamic world, calling upon every Muhammadan—man and woman—to take part in averting the danger which is overhanging Tripoli. Indeed, no better opportunity than the present could have been offered to Muhammadans to sacrifice their lives and property. After remarking that the Turco-Italian war is a struggle of life and death for Islam, the paper refers to the similar struggle in which Japan was engaged with Russia, and says that if the former had been defeated by the Czar she would have ceased to exist by this time; but she preserved her existence by sacrificing the blood of her children, and now Europe is green with jealousy at her advancement. It must, however, be borne in mind that Japan has gained her present eminence and prestige simply through her "mailed fist"; and if Muhammadans desire to gain the same position and to win the respect and esteem of the world, they should try to convert Tripoli, Benghazi and Darna into Port Arthur, Yalu, and Nanshen, bearing in mind that if they fail to do this they must be prepared to see themselves either swept off the face of the earth or degraded to the condition of the Jews.

Further on the editor urges his co-religionists to liberally subscribe towards the funds started by various Muslim journalists for the relief of Muhammadan sufferers from the war in Tripoli, and reproduces the appeal referred to above, which is signed by "Ismail," "Muharrum Ali," "Nuri" and "Hilmi."

European Powers and Islam.

4. The Zamindar (Lahore), of the 23rd February 1912, publishes a communication from one Maulvi Agha Rafiq, of Bulandshahr, headed "The International Law and European Powers." The European Powers says the writer, observe neutrality in the Turco-Italian war simply because there exists a secret treaty between some of them and Italy. Although they appear to have no connection with the Turco-Italian war, still a careful observer will not find it difficult to detect that not a few of them are, like Italy, anxious to see the Turkish Empire weakened and Islamic kingdoms destroyed. After remarking that European Powers are probably anxious to establish Italian rule in Tripoli under the suzerainty of Turkey, the writer deplores their attitude in the matter, and says that the Turco-Italian war has shown what value and significance should be attached to treaty obligations, agreements, and international laws. Justice nowadays has become a thing of the past, and the rights of States are no longer protected. The Powers of Europe are assuredly responsible for the general massacre in, and the Italian occupation of, Tripoli; seeing that they could have, if they had so wished, prevented Italy from committing acts in gross violation of the treaties and provisions of International Law.

The Turco-Italian War and the Muhammadans.

5. The following is from the Tribune (Lahore), of 29th February 1912 :—

"According to an Associated Press message the Aligarh Institute Gazette publishes an article from the pen of Nawab Vicar-ul-Mulk, who, commenting upon the London Times article, writes that if the Turks do not conclude peace with Italy the latter will, by means of its airships, bombard the Kaba Prophet's tomb, and that there is no more need of requesting the British Government to interfere. * * * We hope for the reputation and good name of Nawab Vicar-ul-Mulk that he has not been correctly reported. His article on the Darbar boons, published when His Imperial Majesty the King Emperor was still in India, caused a good deal of sensation and had afterwards to be explained away. The present article is still more indiscreet. To give the Muhammadan masses in this country an idea that there is danger of the holy places of Islam being desecrated is to give an opportunity for the rousing of the worst passions of a fanatical population. A gentleman of the intelligence and education of Nawab Vicar-ul-Mulk must know that the action that he says Italy has under contemplation is impossible. A bombardment from aeroplanes is not feasible. They can only help in locating cities or people who cannot be easily approached by a journey by land. We have repeatedly made it clear in these columns that the act of aggression committed by Italy in Tripoli has nothing whatever to do with religion. In fact, to describe the Turco-Italian hostilities as war between Islam and Christianity is opposed to the truth. It is, moreover, calculated to excite ignorant people in favour of a Jehad. In our opinion it is doing the British Government great disservice. Does not the Nawab Vicar-ul-Mulk know that in Great Britain public opinion has expressed itself strongly against Italian aggression, and that there are many Englishmen who sympathise with Turkey in the predicament in which she appears to have been placed by the ineptitude, and want of wisdom and foresight shown by the Young Turks party? Whilst the Muhammadans of India are free to sympathise with Turkey and to help her with money, they must recognise the great danger that there is in exciting the passions of a fanatical people by raising the cry of Islam in danger."

The Turco-Italian War.

6. The Zamindar (Lahore), of the 25th February 1912, publishes a paragraph headed "Mad depravity." Reuter, says the paper, announces news which is calculated to fill the minds of Muhammadans with tumultuous feelings of sorrow, anger, hatred, contempt and fear. After referring to the announcement that Signor Galiotti has introduced a Bill in the Italian Parliament for the annexation of Tripoli, the paper says that the world wonders how chicken-hearted and cowardly Italians—who are rotting in ditches on the coast of Tripoli, who are receiving defeat after defeat, and who cannot proceed an inch inland, notwithstanding the fact that they have spent money like water and have used the most deadly scientific weapons for the destruction of Turks—can have the temerity to announce the annexation of Tripoli amidst a scene of great excitement and enthusiasm. Indeed, this announcement has no parallel, unless an exception is made in favour of the London Times which recently expressed most loathsome, dangerous, and blasphemous remarks about the Italian invasion of the Kaaba that drew a retort from the eminent leader of Muhammadans, namely, Nawab Vicar-ul-Mulk. The London Times, which is a bosom friend of Italy, publishes the threat that if Turks and Arabs do not quietly make over Tripoli to Italy, the latter will demolish Mecca and Medina with the help of their Dreadnoughts and Aeroplanes. So things have come to such a pass that such thoughts regarding sacred places find public expression! The London Times, the Italian Prime Minister, and others or their following should, however, bear in mind that, in the words of Nawab Vicar-ul-Mulk, their spiritual ancestor (lit. great-grand-father), Abraha (sic.) also made an attempt like this, and the world knows what the end of all his efforts was. It is no joke to destroy Mecca and Medina. Those who try to do this will find themselves swept off the face of the earth before they succeed in destroying even a particle of a single brick in the sacred buildings.

Indians in Australia.

7. The Tribune (Lahore), of 27th February 1912, publishes the following letter by a person signing him "Sunder Singh, an Indian hunted out of Australia" under the heading "How Indians are treated in their own Emperor's dominions":—

"Sir,—On the 4th January 1911 I sailed from Colombo to Melbourne by the French Mail Steamer Australia. At the beginning I had much trouble in getting the steamer pass, though I had a passport granted by the Punjab Government, as the companies are find £100 whenever they take any Indian passenger who has not a passport from either Government.

"On the morning of the 14th the steamer reached Fremantle (West Australia). All the passengers were pleased since the steamer would stop there for about half a day and they would see the town and buy some fruits, &c. Naturally I also was getting ready to go on shore. As soon as the steamer came up to the jetty the Customs Officer with the Doctor came on board. The list of passengers was given to them by the Captain, and all the passengers were examined by the Doctor. Within 15 minutes the whole steamer was cleared of the passengers, some of them had to land there and some of them went to see the town and buy fruits. I was led into a cabin and was told that I could not go anywhere and the door was guarded. After three quarters of an hour I was called by the Customs Officer and I saw that my passport was in his hand. The Customs Officer asked me whether that was my passport and I said it was. Then the following dialogue ensued :—

"'C. O.—Why have you come here ?

"'I want to visit Australia and to see my brother who has been 14 years in this country.

"'C. O.—What is your brother doing here ?

"'I.—He is a farmer in the State of New South Wales, near Wagga Wagga town.

"'C. O.—Will you do any work there ?

"'I—What kind of work do you mean, Sir ?

"'C. O.—(After looking at me for a few minutes). As a labourer or petty trader as your countrymen are working here.

"'I.—No, Sir, I do not intend doing that sort of work.

"'C. O.—Why not ? You will get a good income and I don't think that you will do anything within a year after getting permission.

"'I.—I think so.

"'C. O.—Sign on this paper.'

"I signed and the Customs Officer then left. I again wanted to go on shore when I was prevented again by the first man who had taken me to a cabin and who was only a passenger like me. I of course refused to obey him and passed to the gangway where the passengers were getting out. The policeman standing below asked me to take the Captain's permission to go on land. I went to the Captain and told him I wanted to go ashore as I wanted rations and fruits badly because I had nearly run out of my supply. The Captain said the Customs authorities did not want me to land and desired that I should proceed direct to Melbourne, However, the Captain said afterwards that I could go on land for two hours.

"On the 20th January 1912, I reached Melbourne and was treated by the Customs Officer in the same way as at Fremantle and I was ordered to report in the office when I would leave the Commonwealth. I travelled about a good deal, but before 6 months had passed I got three letters from the Customs Office and the Ministry. The last letter was published in the Tribune on the 13th October 1911.

"I wanted to do some trading business between Australia and India. According to the Restriction Act passed in 1901 a man can settle there who passed the dictation test of writing not less than 50 words in any European language. I put in an application that I was a British subject and could read and write English and wanted to appear at the test examination, but I was told in reply that I would not be examined in English. People coming from other countries in Europe are examined in their own language. That is how I was hunted out of Australia."

(b)—Home.

Aryas and politics.

8. The Indar (Lahore), of the 16th (received on the 27th) February 1912, says that there was a time when the sky of the Arya Samaj was overcast with dark clouds of suspicion and fear; but, thanks to the kind offices of His Honour the present head of the Punjab Government, the clouds have been dispersed, and bright rays of hope have reassured the Aryas. After referring to the services rendered by Master Durga Parshad in this connection, the paper says that when that individual found that all suspicion regarding the Arya Samaj had been removed, he urged the propriety of all Aryas taking a pledge to avoid politics. Unfortunately, however, it was felt that if the pledge were taken it might be thought that Aryas had been frightened into taking this step. The suggestion therefore was not acted upon. At the present moment, however, peace reigns supreme ; and the Samaj is singularly free from all outside pressure. Therefore—especially in view of the fact that daily attempts are now being made by shortsighted persons to convert the Samaj into a political body, while Arya newspapers have become political journals and the responsible authorities of the Samaj are actively disseminating political literature—it is high time to carry out the Master's suggestion. There are some people who think that the pledge-form should merely contain a vow not to take part, by speaking or writing, in any political movement, but to remain steadfastly loyal to the existing Government of the country. The Editor, however, thinks that this is insufficient. It is desirable, he adds, that it should also be announced in the pledge-form that the Arya Samaj does not desire to remain at loggerheads with other religions; and that, instead of finding fault with, and indulging in captious criticism, of other creeds, it will adopt measures for the dissemination of the Vedic religion.

Continuing the subject the paper in its issue of the 23rd February 1912, takes exception to the conduct of those Aryas who take part in politics; and says that, although Lala Munshi Ram declares that the Arya Samaj is not a political body, he himself takes part in the National Congress and thereby goes against his professions. In order to put these double-faced leaders on the right path it is desirable to induce them to sign a pledge promising to take no part in politics.

The following on the same subject is from the Harbinger (Lahore) of 28th February 1912:—

"An impartial man will be amazed at the work of the A. S. on Inder's exposure of it. Its seventh number tells things which cannot be thought of religious men. It is exposing Lala Munshi Ram. But as he is enshrined in the esteem of the men of the A. S., who follow him as their religious leader, the exposure is of the work of the A. S. as conducted by him. Leaving out the talk of the mismanagement of charities, no sincere preacher of Vedic faith will ever consent to permit the printing of Napoleon's life at the press of its institutions; because the book deals with the politics of Napoleon, who was an enemy of the English. To revive his thoughts among the men of the A. S. whose following the National Congress leaders lately brought on trouble and the distrust of the ruling authorities, is to rake up old evils, which make it shameful for good people to join a body whose men apparently profess to teach a religion, but who are brewing nasty political schemes. * *

* * * * * * * * * "

Sikhs and politics.

9. The Loyal Gazette (Lahore), of the 18th February 1912, publishes a leader headed "It is not advisable that one should entirely eschew politics." No religion, says the paper, can be disseminated without (the help of) politics. There are, however, some people who are apt to regard the union of politics and religion with disfavour; because this inharmonious blending naturally deprives religion of many of its virtues and excellences. This is true, because many things are done in politics that are not sanctioned by religion. After remarking that politics should always be subordinated to religion, the paper says that the Muhammadan Emperors of India, who always subordinated religion to politics, made the history of India so terrible in aspect as to cause some simple-minded Indians to tremble at the very mention of the word "Politics." Next the paper takes Bengali anarchists to task for their seditious doings; and observes that, while not a few of them brought ruination on their own precious lives, they also managed to seriously retard the advancement of the country. It is their doings that have deprived Indians of the liberty of speech and writing. In saying this the Editor does not mean that everybody should plunge himself into the vortex of present-day politics. What he desires is that educated Indians should carefully study European politics, with a view to enabling their fellow-countrymen to profit by them. Educated Indians, he adds, have hitherto had no opportunity of taking a practical part in politics, nor is there any likelihood of their being allowed to do so for some time to come. As matters at present stand, wealth is the only criterion of learning and capability in the country; and this enables the authorities to have their own way in legislative matters, inasmuch as wealthy persons are necessarily in the habit of resorting to undue sycophancy in order to obtain titles and to preserve their jagirs intact. Continuing, the Editor finds fault with the Punjab nominated members of the Vicéregal Council, who strongly supported a measure like the Press Act. After remarking that these persons take no part in politics, and that some of them do not even know English, he says that the time is coming when educated and able men will be elected to serve on councils, and therefore it behoves all educated people to get a thorough insight into the science of Politics, bearing in mind that the underlying principle of all political services which they are called upon to render for the good of the country is their steadfast loyalty to the British Government. Proceeding, the paper deplores the backwardness of Sikhs in education, and says that it is a pity that there are no capable Sikhs belonging to the middle classes. There are Sikh Maharajas and Rajas, but they neglect the claims of their community. This attitude has not only caused serious injury to the Sikh community, but has also created misunderstanding about it. After remarking that he will endeavour to show on some future occasion how the Sikh community has been seriously injured because it has not been granted the right of separate electorates, the Editor says that it is high time that Sikhs demanded their legitimate rights from that Government for the maintenance of which they have shed rivers of blood. The present state of affairs is calculated to cause serious injury to the Sikh community; and it is, therefore, necessary that Sikhs should acquaint Government with their dangerously degraded condition.

Recent concession to officials in honour of the King Emperor's visit.

10. The Jhang Sial (Jhang), of the 17th February 1912, publishes a paragraph headed "A black stain on a white forehead." Referring to the bonus of half month's pay granted in honour of His Majesty's visit to India to all officials receiving salaries not exceeding Rs. 50 a month, the paper says that it is to be regretted that no such concession has been given to officials who are holding temporary appointments. Nor is this all. In some offices several appointments have been brought under reduction in order to make up the extra expense involved in paying the concession to permanent hands.

III.—Native States.

The success of the Indore State police in suppressing heinous crime.

11. The following is from the Panjabee (Lahore), of the 29th February 1912:—

"It would appear from the last administration report of the Indore State that the police have been remarkably lucky in bringing down heinous offences in the State from several hundreds ten years ago to less than twenty in 1910 and this by rapid grades * * * * * * This extraordinary reduction both in dacoities and robberies in the State during the past ten years is attributed to the police efficiency. Is there any other fortunate country in the world whose police have achieved a similar wonder? It would appear that each Indore policeman must be carrying with him some rare talisman that strikes terror into the heart of dacoits and robbers in the State. Or could it be that they have over-powered some good genii who are assisting them in this gigantic work? Can the British police get an inkling of the mysteries of this wonderful efficiency."

V.—Native Societies and Religious Matters.

Baba Gurbakhsh Singh, Bedi, and Sikhs.

12. The Loyal Gazette (Lahore), of the 18th February 1912, publishes a paragraph headed "Who will be instrumental in bringing about the ruination of Sikhs?" The paper says that Saint Nihal Singh is quite right when he says that, in collusion with the descendants of Guru Nanak, Hindus will assuredly succeed in bringing about the extinction of the Sikh community. After remarking that Baba Gurbakhsh Singh openly calls himself a Sikh and is nevertheless inoculating Sikhs with Hindu feelings, the paper says that it is a pity that he and men like him are striking at the very root of the tree of Sikhism, which his illustrious ancestor took so much pains to plant.

Complaint against Lala Munshi Ram.

13. The Indar (Lahore), of the 23rd February 1912, has a paragraph headed "The value of the honour paid to Lala Munshi Ram." After remarking that in a recent defamation case the Editor was made to pay a sum of Rs. 500 to the complainant, the paper says that, as Lala Munshi Ram also threatens to sue the Editor for defamation, it remains to be seen what price the court of justice will fix on Lala Munshi Ram's honour. If it is less than Rs. 500, the Lala will not benefit; seeing that nowadays a mule costs Rs. 500, and that the Maharaja of Patiala once paid 1,000 rupees for a couple of dogs.

In another paragraph the Editor wonders whether any Magistrate in the service of His Majesty is fool enough to show favour to a person whose son has written the life of Napoleon Bonaparte. He then challenges Lala Munshi Ram to prosecute him and have him punished with imprisonment.

VI.—Legislation.

Devolution of powers to the Local Governments to carry out settlements of land revenue.

14. The Paisa Akhbar (Lahore), of the 20th February 1912, has a note entitled "The power of Provincial Governments to carry on settlement of land revenue," in which it conveys its approval of the draft Bill on the subject that was recently published in the Punjab Gazette.

Mr. Gokhale's resolution on District Councils.

15. In discussing Mr. Gokhale's resolution on District Councils the Tribune (Lahore) of 29th February 1912, remarks:—

* * * * * * * *

"The motion was rejected by 32 to 14, and thus the impracticability of real reforms was further illustrated. It is a strong commentary on the spirit and tendency of the Government when it rejects a recommendation to make the district administration less alien and more popular."

The following on the same subject is from the Panjabee (Lahore), of the 29th February 1912:—

"* * * The Government seem to fear that the position—and perhaps the prestige—of the District officer will suffer if the Advisory Councils are established. The proposal was lost. It shows that Government are not prepared to make District Administration popular in the truer sense of the word. It must continue to be one-man rule."

The Special Marriage Bill.

16. The following is from the Tribune (Lahore), of 29th February 1912:—

"The summary rejection of the Hon'ble Mr. Bhupendra Nath Basu's Special Marriage Bill will cause no surprise, because it was fully expected. In social legislation the Government have steadily followed the line of least resistance, though there are instances of courageous legislation in the teeth of the bitterest opposition. The last instance was the Age of Consent Act. That measure did not originate with the Government at all. It was conceived by one or two Indian reformers and even the draft Bill was prepared by them. They were not members of any Legislative Council, but they quietly convinced and obtained the support of the Government and, having made over the Bill to the Government, stood quietly aside letting the Government fight their battle. The Bill was opposed tooth and nail, the cry of religion in danger was raised, but the measure was passed. No measure of social reform has ever been passed without opposition. Mr. Basu's measure was a small one and was a proper amendment of the Act of 1872. As he showed, it had had a much better reception than previous measures of social reform and had been approved in many quarters. But Government did not care to incur odium or opposition in connection with a measure which they had not initiated, and so the Bill was thrown overboard without ceremony."

VII.—General Administration.

(b)—Police.

The Thagi and Dacoity Department.

17. The Akhbar-i-'Am (Lahore), of the 21st February 1912, publishes a paragraph headed "The need for the Thagi and Dacoity Department." The fact cannot be denied, says the paper, that the re-establishment of the Thagi and Dacoity Department, which was abolished sometime ago and was supplanted by the Secret Police Service, has of late become a matter of supreme urgency. It is true that the Secret Police Department was needed at one time when sedition was rampant in the country; but now that agitation has become a thing of the past and dacoity cases are on the increase, it is desirable that this Department should be abolished and replaced by a resuscitated Thagi and Dacoity Department. After referring to the increase in the number of the dacoity cases in the North-West Frontier Province, the United Provinces, the Punjab and Sind, the paper alleges that the Police have totally failed to cope with the situation.

Police confessions.

18. The following is from the Tribune (Lahore), of 25th February 1912:—

"A peculiar form of dishonesty, which might be termed rather an unlimited capacity of deluding oneself into a semi-belief that a given state of affairs does or does not exist, in order the more easily to be able to persuade others that it does or does not exist, as the case may be, would seem to be essential to success in politics. No one who has followed the controversy between Mr. Mackarness on the one hand in the name of justice and Mr. Montagu on the other in the name of Government over the much vexed question of Police confessions and who at the same time is acquainted with the actual facts of the cases which may have come to his notice can fail to admit and deplore the truth of this axiom. On the one hand, we listen to Mr. Montagu's 'high flown rhetoric' as he 'bestows his encomiums' on the Indian Police, though none believes for a moment that Mr. Montagu really believes that the police are quite as saintly as he pictures them; on the other, we peruse the reply of Mr. Mackarness 'sober and instinct with high purpose' as he fulminates against the system which allows a policeman to say that an accused person admitted his guilt to him. Mr. Mackarness has the easier rôle to play, but few will admit that the acceptance of the trivial amendment of procedure proposed by him—and by others before him—will set at rest for ever the bogey of police malpractices; moreover, it is difficult to suppose that a mere amendment in procedure rendering confessions made to the police inadmissible in evidence will in any way increase the 'efficiency and detective ability of the police force.' The problem is more fundamental and its solution will not affect the police alone but the whole official class—nay the whole population of the country. We are told that in the old days justice in this country was primitive and straightforward, that those who wrought wrong appeared of their own accord before the judge and received their punishment without demur. Modern historians will have to record for posterity a different state of affairs; they will relate the tortuous ways of the law, the delays and intrigues ever attendant upon and hindering the administration of justice. The cause of the change is too complicated to discuss at the present juncture, but it is probably to be sought in the indiscriminate extension of European ideals to a country which had more suitable ideals of its own based on the experience of thousands of years. Europe has forced its creations on the East but has failed to create one essential thing without which its creations are of little value. It has failed to create a new public opinion to replace the old and finds to its cost that its rule without the active support of that public opinion is at all times and in all matters most difficult.

"That this is so is most strikingly demonstrated by the history of criminal administration. It is notorious that the magistrate conducting a case is often the only person in his court who does not know the true facts thereof. More wonderful still is the fact that even if he does know the real state of affairs, he is powerless to make use of his personal knowledge, unless he can get it corroborated by the witnesses who appear before him.

"Mr. Mackarness appears to be labouring under the impression that a statement by a police officer to the effect that the accused has confessed is in some degree binding upon the court, and does not seem to realise that the withdrawal of the confession by the accused replaces the magistrate in the quandary in which he began, nor does he allow sufficiently for the fact that except in very rare cases an accused person always retracts his confession—even if, as is sometimes the case, he originally made it to the police officer conducting the investigation without being subjected to any kind of pressure—well knowing that he saves himself endless trouble and possible ill-treatment at the time without in any way prejudicing his case when it comes to trial.

"Mr. Mackarness is doubtless actuated by the noblest motives but he has failed to realise that in India the accused, as a rule, so far from being at a disadvantage, is actually in a favourable position owing to the scarcity of unimpeachable witnesses. Such at any rate would seem to be the most reasonable conclusion to draw from the long rôle of cases of murder and violence, which end in acquittal or discharge because eye-witnesses are generally too much interested to give impartial evidence.

"It is not for the purpose of extracting confessions for production in court—though there are some exceptions which have gained notoriety no doubt—that the police resort to violence and torture but for their purpose of maintaining or acquiring a reputation for efficiency and detective ability. Mr. Mackarness would be surprised to hear that the detective ability of the police force in India has at least reached the stage at which its members realise that it is often useful to begin at the wrong end or, in other words, to find their criminal by intuition and work back from him—who can say whether by the use of torture or kindly treatment?—to the facts of the cause.

"It is only the clumsy inexperienced policeman who is content with a confession to produce in court, but the more efficient members of the force extract the confession for their own use only and come to court with a marvellous story of clever detective work which wins the admiration of all concerned. What boots if the criminal then to say he was beaten, for has not the police officer substantiated history by a vivid relation of every detail which led him to the final capture of the guilty person? Mr. Mackarness has not grasped the crux of the situation. It is not to the law he should go but to the people. He should initiate a propaganda which should reach the teeming millions that reside in villages removed from the busy world, which should teach them the value of honesty and truth above all things. No legislation, no official action, can build up public opinion, for the people regard the law and the official world as something outside their own sphere, to be tolerated when useful and outwitted when troublesome. It can scarcely be denied that the people do not give that assistance to the police and to the courts which it is in their power to give and which, if they claim justice as their due, it is their duty to give. Public opinion, so far as it can be said to exist at all to-day, approves of the screening of an offender by his relatives and no less of the institution of false cases against innocent persons by their rivals and enemies. It is shortsighted policy, even from a selfish point of view, and is fast speeding towards the inevitable result of making the administration of justice impossible. It is the duty of Mr. Mackarness and his friends in India to set about the reform of public opinion, for not until the people realise that it is best in the long run to tell the simple truth, not till then can it be reasonably hoped that the police will refrain from their present methods of enquiry. It is easy to blame the police for irregular practices in the course of investigation and it is easy to blame them for failure to throw light on the facts of a case, but it is not so easy for the police to satisfy their critics in both matters. The police are recruited from the people, are of the people and know the people's weakness and take advantage of it. No amount of tinkering with the law will make the people understand their duty and not till they have acquired and deserve a reputation for truthfulness will the necessity for primitive methods of investigation be removed. The remedy is in the power of the people."

The Police in India.

19. The following is from the Tribune, dated 2nd March 1912 :—

"Although the Hon'ble Mr. Bhupendra Nath Basu had to withdraw his resolution recommending the appointment of a Commission to inquire into the working of the police in India the object was partially gained by the sympathetic reception given to it by the Government. Sir Reginald Craddock's speech was particularly friendly, though he opposed the resolution. The Delhi Darbar has conclusively proved that if steps are taken the police in India can become as efficient and as well behaved as anywhere. The traffic that had to be controlled at Delhi was the heaviest ever seen in any city in India, and yet there were scarcely any complaints of ill-treatment or corruption. The same policemen who are ill-behaved elsewhere were on their good behaviour in Delhi. They were carefully disciplined and trained for their duties, which they discharged satisfactorily. But as a body the police are capable of very considerable improvement still. In the Punjab cases are continually cropping up in which policemen have been guilty of all kinds of offences, and it is only by constant supervision and the employment of a better class of men that the police force in India can be really improved."

(d)—Education.

The proposed Dacca University.

20. Writing under the heading "His Excellency the Viceroy's views with regard to the proposed Dacca University," the Paisa Akhbar (Lahore), of the 20th February 1912, says that the views expressed by His Excellency the Viceroy before the Bengali deputation not only return a crushing reply to the objections raised against the establishment of the proposed University by the entire Bengali community and some Anglo-Indian gentlemen, but also explain the future policy of Government in respect of education. Next the paper endorses and reproduces the Viceroy's views under reference ; and remarks that the scheme of the Dacca University is assuredly satisfactory in all respects, and that those who oppose it are narrow-minded and selfish.

The Gurukula, Kangri.

21. The following is from the Arya Patrika (Lahore), of 24th February 1912 :—

"We have repeatedly said that the seminary of Gurukula at Kangri (near Hardwar) is a unique eductional institution of its kind not only in India but in the world. To be such is to be misunderstood. Great men and great things have been misunderstood in all climes and in all ages. Pythagoras was misunderstood, and Socrates, and Jesus, and Luther, and Copernicus, and Galileo, and Newton and every pure and wise spirit that ever took flesh in the West, and Dayanand could not be exception to it. In fact to be great is to be misunderstood has been the law in the nature of things. Being conscious of the above law, we have always refrained from entering into the controversies which some of the papers and specially the vernacular papers enter into, of course, we believe that it is well to remove misunderstandings; and we may hope to succeed in this mission of doing so, when those who raise questions against an institution or a principle are men of sincere impulse and desirous of knowing a thing aright or arriving at conclusions, which may serve some useful purpose. Now to come from higher things to low ones; the nefarious propaganda set up by the notorious Urdu-writer against the Gurukula at Kangri, in whose favour very high opinions have been expressed from time to time by men of various colour and creeds, by men who are the best judges in matters educational and discipline. Need we tell our Hindu, Moslem, Sikh and Christian contemporaries that Dharm Pal, the Editor of the Indra, has ever since his conversion to the Vedic-dharma, engaged himself in the dirty work of producing an unhealthy literature. If he was then writing against the Deva Samaj, he was seen next writing against a man, whom he once exalted to the highest heaven, in short he is the man, on whose face you find the words nil-admirari stamped. It is at the writing of this man, that a responsible and sane organ like the Khalsa Advocate has in a recent issue asked the Governor of the Gurukula to explain the situation. We assure our contemporary that there is nothing such in the Gurukula as Dharmpal has been writing in the Indra or as some of his evil geniuses have supplied him with wrong and damaging statements about the Kula. We are pained to see that when the Khalsa Advocate and other critics of the Arya Samaj know full well, that Dharm Pal is an out and out enemy of the institution and is by his very nature capable of any mis-statements, lies and innovations, it is no wonder that his allegations against the Kula are mere inventions of his perverted intellect."

* * * * * * *

Lohri in the D.-A. V. College, Lahore.

22. The following is from the Khalsa Advocate (Amritsar), of 23rd February 1912;—

"The ignoramuses who prune their feathers with the supreme sense of the consciousness of their own wisdom, while declaring themselves as Hindu-Sikhs may well chew the end over the treatment meted out to the Sikhs by Arya Samajists. There are a few among them who are generally looked upon as men of great respectability. But it appears as if the predilection of maligning other faiths has become so vital a trait of their constitution that even the Principal of the D.-A. V. College can not shake off the indurated habit.

"We understand that the religious observances of the Hindus, Sikhs and Muhammadans were travestied and ridiculed before the students and the staff under the eye of the Superintendent of the Boarding House and the Principal.

"It is reported that Bhagat Ishar Dass could not bear to see these faiths being thus flouted. So he cried out loudly that he was against the progress of such discipline, culture and instruction among the students. The hopes of the rising generation of the Samajists hooted him down with the shouts of 'Shame'! 'Shame'!

"Bhagat Sahib must have been sadly disappointed on beholding such a fruit growing on the tree whose nourishment has taken so much of his time, energy and resources. He must have, in his heart of hearts asked himself whether these were the students of an institution of whose Managing body he had so long been President.

"As we said in one of our last issues, we cannot in the face of such facts believe that the Samajic papers like the 'Hindustan' and 'Jhang Sial' are sincere in their oft-repeated wishes of a rapprochement between the Hindus and the Sikhs. They complain that the Sikhs do not place confidence in the Hindus, but it is incidents like the one mentioned above that compel us to try to discriminate between Jacob's voice and Esau's hands. No occasion of hurting the religious susceptibilities of the Sikhs is let slip by. Whether it is the anniversary of the cultured Party and a man like Misar Jaggat Singh with the externality of a Sikh stands up to pervert the reading and sense of the Scriptures or whether it is a festival like Lohri, the golden chance of traducing the Sikh Gurus and ridiculing the sublimity of their faith should not be missed. Is there any other example of an educational institution dramatizing and ridiculing Nayog or Havan?

"When lecturing in the public, Lala Hans Raj's elocution rises to the empyrean and his sense of communal and social virtues soars very high, but it is a wonder that he could not realize the necessity of discipline in the case of those who are given into his charge to be turned out with the perfections of Vedic Rishis. Alas that men could see the vital difference between practice and preaching.

"This is another reason why the Sikhs should always be on the alert for a wolf in lamb's clothing."

23. In the course of an article discussing the proceedings of a meeting of Muhammadans of Lahore in support of Mr. Gokhale's Elementary Education Bill the Observer (Lahore), of 24th February 1912, remarks :—

Musalmans and Elementary Education.

"* * * * If the Bill is passed, it will compel the Muslims to be benefited equally with the Hindu, Sikh and Christian communities of the Punjab. But if it is not passed—and there is little likelihood of its being passed this year—and the grants for popular education continue to be made on a generous scale, of which we are assured, then self-interest would imperatively demand that energetic measures should be adopted by the Mnsalmans themselves to avail fully of the grants and the new institutions which will be started in all parts of the Punjab. It is the duty of men of light and leading to rouse the large Muslim population in the Province to the necessity of sending their children to school and of not lagging behind in the race for popular education on which India is entering in the same way as it is obligatory on parents to educate their children and to help in the diffusion of popular education on so extensive a scale that not a single child, male or female, of school-going age, may remain illiterate.

This, we are persuaded to think, can be achieved in one of two ways. Either the Musalmans may organise an Elementary Education League, as the Hindus of the Punjab have already done, for themselves, and entrust it with the duty of starting primary schools, for both boys and girls, all over the Punjab and of spreading popular instruction among Muslim children, or the Anjuman-i-Himayat-i-Islam, in co-operation with other existing local Muslim institutions, may be called upon to undertake the duty. * * * *

* * * * * * * *"

(f)—Railways and Communications.

24. The Tribune (Lahore), of the 28th February 1912, makes the following remarks in the course of an article on Mr. Gokhale's resolution in the Legislative Council on the Inchcape Committee :—

The Inchcape Committee.

* * * * * * * *

"As explained by Mr. Gokhale in his lucid speech there are two points involved in this business. One is the interests of the tax-payers and the misapprehensions created among the public for want of authentic information. The other is the position of the Government of India which has been made to yield precedence to a private person, however eminent he may be. As regards the first, in the absence of authentic information it is hardly just to blame either the Government of India or the Secretary of State. But the presence at the conference of both Sir James Meston and Mr. Clark establishes the gravity of the questions discussed, and it is not possible for the Government to deny their bearing on railway economics. The tax-payers have a most legitimate grievance in this respect and we do not think that the Hon'ble Mr. Mudholkar in any way exaggerated public feeling when he said that 'he was giving voice to the extreme disappointment, indignation and alarm felt by all classes in this country.'

"As regards the position of the Government this is the first time in the history of the Government of India when we hear that in the adjudication of differences between itself and certain private companies a reference to a miniature Hague Tribunal has been found indispensable by the Secretary of State. To-day it is the railway companies that refuse to abide by the decision of the Government and seek the mediation of a private personage. To-morrow it will be the mining companies, then the jute companies, then the oil companies and finally the tea and rubber planters. Where will the acceptance of this outrageous principle of settling 'differences' lead the Government to? Surely Mr. Gokhale should be considered to have done a service as much to the Government as to the tax-payers. But Mr. Clark did not think so and speaking for the Government he coolly accepted the position assigned to it by the companies working the State railways. Although the resolution was lost, although nothing was said by the Government to confirm or contradict the reports in circulation, yet the acceptance by the Government of the position assigned to it by the railway magnates opens up wide issues which, we expect should engage the earnest consideration of both the Government and the Secretary of State."

C. STRAD,

Assistant to the Deputy Inspector-General of Police, Criminal Investigation Department, Punjab.

LAHORE :
The 2nd March 1912.

Punjab Government Press, Lahore—7-3-12—122—107—H. L. S.

[illegible]

[ Confidential. ]

[ Vol. XXV. ] SELECTIONS [ No. 10. ]

FROM THE

NATIVE NEWSPAPERS

PUBLISHED IN THE PUNJAB.

Examined up to 9th March 1912.

---

CONTENTS.

Page.

I.—Politics.

(a) Foreign—

1. England and Turkey (Zamindar) ... ... 157
2. The Turco-Italian War (Zamindar) ... ... 159
3. Ditto (Watan) ... ... ib.
4. Ditto (Ditto) ... ... ib.
5. Cretan affairs (Civil and Military News) ... ib.
6. Indians in South Africa (Akhbar-i-'Am) ... ib.
7. Indentured labour (Tribune and Punjabee) ... 160

(b) Home—

8. The Debate in the Lords on the Administrative changes (Paisa Akhbar and Akhbar-i-'Am) ... 161
9. Sikhs and politics (Loyal Gazette) ... ... ib.
10. The financial statement (Tribune) ... ... 162

II.—Afghanistan and Trans-Frontier.

11. Crime in the North-West Frontier Province (Tribune) ... ... ... ... 162

III.—Native States.

12. Kashmir affairs (Rajput Gazette) ... ... 163
13. The Gaekwar (Tribune) ... ... ... ib.

IV.—Kine-killing.

Nil.

V.—Native Societies and Religious Matters.

14. The Arya Samaj (Indar) ... ... ... 164
15. Dharampal and the Arya Samaj (Sanatan Dharm Parcharak)... ... ... ... ib.
16. His Highness the Aga Khan and the presidentship of All-India Muslim League (Observer) ... ib.

Page.

VI.—Legislation.

17. The Legislative Sessions (Tribune) ... ... 165
18. The Right of Representation (Tribune) ... ib.
19. The Life Assurance Bill (Tribune)... ... ib.
20. The new Cantonment Code (Ditto) ... ... 166

VII.—General Administration.

(a) Judicial—

21. The Punjab Chief Court and Hindus (Tribune) ... 166

(b) Police—

Nil.

(c) Municipal and Cantonment affairs—

Nil.

(d) Education —

22. Complaint against the Gurukula (Indar) ... 166
23. Indians and the Educational services (Tribune) ... 168

(e)—Agriculture and questions affecting the land—

Nil.

(f) Railways and Communications —

(g) Postal matters—

Nil.

(h) Miscellaneous—

24. The security from the Khalsa Sewak (Hindustan) 168
25. Corruption in the Public Service (Tribune) ... ib.
26. The Viceroy's coming visit to Peshawar (Tribune) 169

LIST OF NEWSPAPERS AND PERIODICALS EXAMINED BY THE SPECIAL BRANCH AS IT STOOD ON THE 9TH MARCH 1912.

| No. | Name. | Locality. | Name of Publisher. | Circulation. |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| | ENGLISH. | | | |
| | DAILY. | | | |
| 1 | Tribune ... | Lahore ... | Bihari Lal ... | 1,758 copies. |
| | TRI-WEEKLY. | | | |
| 2 | Panjabee ... | Lahore ... | Mul Chand ... | 2,424 copies. |
| | BI-WEEKLY. | | | |
| 3 | Observer ... | Lahore ... | Nizam-ud-din ... | 1,000 copies. |
| 4 | Punjab Times and Frontier News. | Rawalpindi ... | J. R. Thapur ... | 200 „ |
| | WEEKLY. | | | |
| 5 | Arya Patrika ... | Lahore ... | Devi Chand ... | 650 copies. |
| 6 | Harbinger ... | Do. ... | Durga Parshad ... | 300 „ |
| 7 | Khalsa Advocate ... | Amritsar ... | Bahadar Singh ... | 752 „ |
| | FORTNIGHTLY. | | | |
| 8 | Jijnasu ... | Lahore ... | Ishwar Das ... | ... |
| | MONTHLY. | | | |
| 9 | D. A.-V. College Magazine... | Lahore ... | Saraswati Nath ... | 1,000 copies. |
| 10 | Forman Christian College Notes.* | Do. ... | ... | ... |
| 11 | Practical Medicine* ... | Delhi ... | ... | ... |
| 12 | Punjab Educational Journal | Lahore ... | R. B. Mohan Lal ... | 700 copies. |
| 13 | Punjab Mission News ... | Do. ... | Revd. Wigram ... | 250 „ |
| 14 | Ravi ... | Do. ... | Mr. B. M. Jones ... | ... |
| 15 | Review of Religions* ... | Qadian (Gurdaspur) ... | Sadr Anjuman Ahmadia, Qadian. | 800 copies. |
| 16 | Science Grounded Religion... | Lahore ... | Dev Rattan ... | 25 „ |
| 17 | Teacher ... | Dinga (Gujrat) ... | Kanhaya Singh ... | 200 „ |
| | URDU. | | | |
| | DAILY. | | | |
| 18 | Akhbar-i-'Am ... | Lahore ... | Govind Sahai ... | 630 copies. |
| 19 | Paisa Akhbar ... | Do. ... | Abdul Aziz ... | 1,011 „ |
| 20 | Watan ... | Do. ... | Muhammad Insha Alla ... | ... |
| 21 | Zamindar ... | Do. ... | Zafar Ali Khan, B.A. ... | ... |
| | BI-WEEKLY. | | | |
| 22 | Vakil ... | Amritsar ... | Abdul Aziz ... | 1,970 copies. |
| | WEEKLY. | | | |
| 23 | Afghan ... | Peshawar ... | Saiyid Muhammad Abdulla | 500 copies. |
| 24 | Ahl-i-Hadis ... | Amritsar ... | Sanaulla ... | 925 „ |
| 25 | Ahluwalia Gazette ... | Do. ... | Lehna Singh ... | 500 „ |
| 26 | Al-Moin ... | Do. ... | Mehraj-ud-din ... | ... |
| 27 | Army News ... | Ludhiana. ... | Hira Lal & Co. ... | 1,300 copies. |
| 28 | Arorbans Gazette ... | Amritsar ... | Labh Singh ... | ... |
| 29 | Arya Gazette ... | Lahore ... | Bhowani Das ... | 550 copies. |
| 30 | Badar ... | Qadian, Gurdaspur district | Muhammad Sadiq ... | 200 „ |

* Not received during the month.

LIST OF NEWSPAPERS AND PERIODICALS EXAMINED BY THE SPECIAL BRANCH AS IT STOOD ON THE 9TH MARCH 1912—CONTINUED.

| No. | Name. | Locality. | Name of Publisher. | Circulation. |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| | URDU—CONTINUED. | | | |
| | WEEKLY—continued. | | | |
| 31 | Bharat ... | Jullundur ... | Thakur Sheoratan Singh | ... |
| 32 | Civil and Military News ... | Ludhiana ... | Saiyid Muhammad ... | 1,325 copies. |
| 33 | Curzon Gazette ... | Delhi ... | Mirza Hairat ... | 111 „ |
| 34 | Delhi Gazette* ... | Do. ... | Sajjad Husain ... | 200 „ |
| 35 | Edward Gazette* ... | Abbott-abad ... | Muhammad Latif ... | 200 „ |
| 36 | Hakam ... | Qadian, Gurdaspur district | Yakub Ali ... | 900 „ |
| 37 | Haq ... | Delhi ... | Kasim Ali ... | 200 „ |
| 38 | Haq Pasand ... | Amritsar ... | Ram Nath ... | 382 „ |
| 39 | Hindu ... | Lahore ... | Hari Lal Sharma ... | ... |
| 40 | Hindustan ... | Do. ... | Ram Sarn Dutt ... | 8,070 copies. |
| 41 | Indar ... | Do. ... | Dharm Pal, B.A. ... | ... |
| 42 | Islam ... | Do. ... | Abdul Latif ... | 200 copies. |
| 43 | Jhang Sial ... | Jhang ... | Prabh Dyal ... | 2,262 „ |
| 44 | Kapurthala Akhbar ... | Kapurthala ... | Hamid Husain ... | 155 „ |
| 45 | Loyal Gazette ... | Lahore ... | Amar Singh ... | 200 „ |
| 46 | Lytton Gazette ... | Delhi ... | Bulaki Das ... | 1,000 „ |
| 47 | Milap* ... | Lyallpur ... | Jawahar Lal ... | ... |
| 48 | Millat ... | Lahore ... | Shuja Ulla ... | 1,500 copies. |
| 49 | Mister Gazette ... | Do. ... | Ali Bakhsh ... | 150 „ |
| 50 | Munir ... | Jhang ... | Hafiz Khuda Bakhsh ... | 200 „ |
| 51 | Musalman ... | Amritsar ... | Sana-ulla ... | 400 „ |
| 52 | Nur ... | Qadian, Gurdaspur district | Muhammad Yusaf ... | 200 „ |
| 53 | Nur Afshan ... | Ludhiana ... | Revd. Dr. E. M. Wherry | 500 „ |
| 54 | Paisa Akhbar ... | Lahore ... | Abdul Aziz ... | 8,377 „ |
| 55 | Parkash ... | Do. ... | Krishan ... | 1,723 „ |
| 56 | Punjab Advocate ... | Mianwali ... | Karm Chand, Bahl ... | 1,000 „ |
| 57 | Punjab Samachar ... | Lahore ... | Hira Lal ... | 705 „ |
| 58 | Rajput Gazette ... | Do. ... | Thakur Sukhram Das ... | 650 „ |
| 59 | Municipal Gazette and Sada-i-Hind. | Do. ... | Din Muhammad ... | 500 „ |
| 60 | Sadiq-ul-Akhbar ... | Bahawalpur ... | Maulvi Ata Ullah ... | 392 „ |
| 61 | Ditto ... | Rewari ... | Safdar Hussain ... | 200 „ |
| 62 | Sanatan Dharm Pracharak... | Amritsar ... | Rulia Ram ... | 200 „ |
| 63 | Shanti ... | Rawalpindi ... | Kishan Chand Mohan ... | 300 „ |
| 64 | Sialkot Paper ... | Sialkot ... | Todar Mal ... | 500 „ |
| 65 | Siraj-ul-Akhbar ... | Jhelum ... | Maulvi Fakir Muhammad | 450 „ |
| 66 | Tahzib-ul-Niswan ... | Lahore ... | Mumtaz Ali .. | 240 „ |

* Not received during the week.

LIST OF NEWSPAPERS AND PERIODICALS EXAMINED BY THE SPECIAL BRANCH AS IT STOOD ON THE 9TH MARCH 1912—CONCLUDED.

| No. | Name. | Locality. | Name of Publisher. | Circulation. |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| | URDU—CONCLUDED. | | | |
| | WEEKLY—concluded. | | | |
| 67 | Victoria Paper ... | Sialkot ... | Gian Chand ... | 600 copies. |
| 68 | Wafadar* ... | Lahore ... | Fazal-ud-din ... | 600 „ |
| 69 | Waqt ... | Do. ... | Ali Husain ... | 200 „ |
| 70 | Watan ... | Do. ... | Muhammad Insha Ullah ... | 1,800 „ |
| 71 | Zamindar ... | Do. ... | Zafar Ali Khan, B.A. ... | 750 „ |
| | FORTNIGHTLY. | | | |
| 72 | Biwah Samachar* ... | Lahore ... | Ram Chand ... | 300 copies. |
| 73 | Kam Dhenu ... | Ludhiana ... | Daulat Ram ... | 100 „ |
| 74 | Mohyal Gazette ... | Kala, Jhelum district ... | Mehta Sham Das ... | 250 „ |
| | MONTHLY. | | | |
| 75 | Arorbans Parkash* ... | Lahore ... | Salig Ram ... | 200 copies. |
| 76 | Arya Musafir ... | Jullundur ... | Wazir Chand ... | 1,300 „ |
| 77 | Indar* ... | Lahore ... | Dharampal, B.A. ... | 3,000 „ |
| 78 | Jauhar ... | Amritsar ... | Muhammad Ismail Khan | 200 „ |
| 79 | Kakezai Social Reformer ... | Lahore ... | Fazl Din ... | 200 „ |
| 80 | Makhzan ... | Delhi ... | Abdul Kadir ... | 4,000 „ |
| 81 | Rafiq ... | Lahore ... | Charinji Lal ... | 500 „ |
| 82 | Sadhu ... | Do. ... | Sheobart Lal ... | 500 „ |
| 83 | Martand ... | Do. ... | Kanhya Lal ... | 250 „ |
| 84 | Raghbir Patrika ... | Do. ... | Prab Dial ... | 500 „ |
| 85 | Zaban* ... | Delhi ... | Hamid Hasain ... | 500 „ |
| | GURMUKHI. | | | |
| | WEEKLY. | | | |
| 86 | Khalsa Sewak ... | Amritsar ... | Jiwan Singh ... | 1,000 copies. |
| 87 | Punjab Reporter* ... | Do. ... | Ganda Singh ... | ... |
| 88 | Punjabi Surma ... | Lahore ... | Gian Chand ... | 1,000 copies. |

* Not received during the week.

I—Politics.

(a)—Foreign.

England and Turkey.

1. The Zamindar (Lahore), of the 6th March 1912, publishes an article headed "An animating voice from Constantinople." The Turco-Italian War, says this paper, has convinced all non-Muslims of the reality of their brotherhood and of the staggering fact that, if a Muhammadan is put to trouble in any part of the world, his co-religionists everywhere feel as if they themselves were the party affected. Continuing, it says that Government cannot be sufficiently thanked for having permitted Indian Muhammadans to render (pecuniary) help to Muslim sufferers in Tripoli, as also for the matchless freedom of speech enjoyed by them under its rule. They have also the King Emperor's and his Government's assurance that they form a distinguished part of "The British democracy"; and that they have the right to express their views in regard to the Empire's foreign affairs, especially on questions affecting their position as members of the worldwide Muslim brotherhood. After remarking that the blessings enjoyed by them under the Union Jack have been deepening their love for Great Britain, the Editor says that his feelings of loyalty prompted him to devote his best efforts to establishing friendly relations between the British Government and the Islamic world. Constantinople, being the centre of Muhammadan greatness and glory, an improvement in the relations between it and London is likely, not only to ensure the peace of the world, but also to secure peace for the Muhammadans of India. In November last an opportunity for the accomplishment of the great object he has at heart presented itself. A friend of his wrote to him from Bombay that Maulana Abdul Wahab bin Qirtas, who represents Bussorah in the Turkish Parliament and was on the point of returning to Constantinople after having stayed in Bombay for some time, had expressed a wish to read the Zamindar. The Editor was very glad to send his paper to the Maulana at his Constantinople address; and also wrote a lengthy letter to him, in which he revealed the heartfelt desire of Indian Muhammadans for a true friendship between the British and Turkish Governments. The Maulana was also requested to use his influence with members of Parliament, newspaper Editors, and (other) public men with a view to bringing about the desired result. He has now vouchsafed a reply, which was not, however, received till the 3rd instant, although it is dated the 16th January last. After asking whether the Director-General of Post Offices will throw light on this matter, the Editor publishes the reply, in which the writer expresses great interest in the Zamindar and intimates that he has directed his Bombay agent, named Muhammad-ul-Faizan, to pay the subscription. As to his interest in Indian affairs, he states that 65 years ago Sheikh Isa, his uncle and the head of the Qirtas family, migrated to Calcutta, where he entered into trade, made a great name for himself, and was highly respected by the authorities and the leading residents of the Metropolis. Some time after he left Calcutta, and went to Bombay to live with his brother Sheikh Abdul Razzaq. Here, also, he enjoyed such respect from Government that he received the title of Khan Bahadur and a sword of honour. This is how the writer got a chance to travel in some parts of India. He stayed at Calcutta for some five years, and there acquired some knowledge of Urdu and English. On his return to Bussorah he was elected a member of the Bussorah Council, on which he served for four years, and rendered several services to his country. Then came the revolution of 1908, and, as he now had greater opportunities than before, he became a member of the committee of Union and Progress. He and some other person (lit. we) established a club at Bussorah, of which he was several times elected president. It occurred to him last year that he had better leave his country for two or three years, "so that everything might be settled according to his wishes." Accordingly, he went to Bombay and thence to Egypt. While in the latter country he came to know that he had been elected as member for Bussorah, contrary to his wishes. He kept silent for some time; but, at the repeated requests of his friends, finally yielded to the wishes of his countrymen and left for Constantinople. He furnished several pieces of information to the Turkish Parliament last year; and if his suggestion had been accepted much benefit would have accrued to Turkey. Continuing the writer craves leave, in his capacity as a member of the Turkish Parliament, to thank all those Indian and Afghan co-religionists, especially His Majesty the Amir, for the sympathy which they have displayed with "us" in connection with the Turco-Italian War. It has highly pleased the Osmanlis and all (other) Muhammadans of the world to see that their Afghan and Indian brethren participate in their sorrows and joys, and have rendered (Turkey) all possible help against the savage and bloodthirsty Government of Italy. The writer further reports that the Turkish Parliament has unanimously adopted a resolution tendering thanks to the Muhammadans of India. He adds that this is not the first time that "we" have seen or heard of their sincere sympathy with the Turkish Caliphate: they have several times afforded proof of their heartfelt love for the Sultan, and this is writ large in the history of Muhammadans. Next the writer thanks the British Government for not interfering with the feelings of sympathy the Musalmans of this country entertain towards the Turkish Government. He also considers it his duty to pray for long life to the King Emperor George V and His Majesty's consort. Proceeding he takes exception to the British Government's treatment of his poor Persian co-religionists; and says that Great Britain should not interfere in Persian affairs to such an extent as to raise the suspicion among Muhammadans that she wishes to convert Persia into a second Egypt. She undoubtedly has the power to take possession of the small independent Muslim Kingdoms; but she may rest assured that, by doing so, she would forfeit the heartfelt love of 30 crores of Muhammadans. The writer further remarks that, ever since his arrival in Constantinople, he has missed no opportunity of proving to his Parliamentary friends and members of the Cabinet that it is to the interests of the Turks to establish friendly relations with the British Government in all matters. After remarking that some statesmen connected with the British Government have created misunderstanding between it and the Turkish Government, he states that the reports so far submitted by him to the Turkish Parliament are of two kinds—those that deal with the reforms called for in Irak, Mosul, Najad and the Turkish ilakas on the Persian Gulf, and those that speak of the duties the Turkish Government owes to Indian Muhammadans. In the latter reports he has, among other things, made the following requests to (his) Government :—

(1) That it should abolish the tax imposed on Indian pilgrims (to the Hedjaz).

(2) That it should post Urdu-knowing officials to Jeddah and Mecca, so that they may prove of help to Indian pilgrims and end the ill-treatment which the latter have to suffer at the hands of coolies, camel-drivers, &c.

(3) That new consulates should be established at Lahore, Calcutta, Delhi, Madras, Karachi and Allahabad; care being taken that the consuls posted to these places and to all other Islamic countries (sic!) should be able men and strict followers of their religion.

(4) That a mosque should be erected in Bombay in the name of the Turkish Caliphate.

(5) That medals and (other) marks of distinction should be conferred upon those (? Indian Muhammadans) who have given money in aid of the Turkish navy and the Red Crescent Society.

(6) That an Urdu newspaper, supported by Indian Muhammadans, should be started at Constantinople or at Bombay under the editorship of the Turkish Consul and with the object of supplying correct information about the Turkish Kingdom.

As to the Editor's query about the Turkish press, the writer is of opinion that the Tanin and the Sahab are the best papers as regards "journalistic objects." The writer promises to inform the Directors of these papers of the Zamindar's address, and to ask them to exchange their journals. As regards the Editor's inquiry about the address of some agency which could daily send him news about the (Turco-Italian) war, he promises to speak with the Directors of such agencies. In conclusion he again expresses good wishes (lit. sympathy) for the British Government, and says that it is his heartfelt desire that friendly relations may be established between Turkey and England.

The Turco-Italian War.

2. The Zamindar (Lahore), of the 2nd March 1912, says that France has expressed her willingness to act in concert with other powers to bring the Turco-Italian War to an end. After remarking that the cablegram has filled his heart with feelings of indignation, the Editor reports that, according to an Arabic newspaper, the Czar is of opinion that the war should be terminated, Tripoli and Derna being made over to the Italians. All this, he adds, would show that civilised Europe means to exert pressure on the Turks (to end hostilities). The whites can never bear to see savage and Asiatic races like the Arabs and Turks vanquishing a white power. With the exception of England, all the powers (of Europe) are chips of the same block.

The Turco-Italian war.

3. The Watan (Lahore), of the 26th February 1912, reproduces the Nawab Vicar-ul-Mulk's recent letter in the Aligarh Institute Gazette on the subject of the alleged announcement by the London Times of Italy's intention to bombard the Kaaba and the Prophet's tomb. Commenting on the same, it says that, to the best of its knowledge, the statement has appeared neither in the Times nor in any other English paper. Indeed when Italy herself has not indulged in the threat, how could the Times have had the foolishness to make the assertion imputed to it ?

The Turco-Italian War.

4. Writing under the heading "Italian brigandage," the Watan (Lahore), of the 2nd March 1912, refers to the proposals which have, according to Reuter, been put forward by Russia on the subject of mediation between Turkey and Italy. Some time back also, it adds, Russia asked the powers to mediate between the combatants ; but her suggestion was rejected by the Turks with the contempt that it deserved. Continuing, it observes that if Germany, Austria, France and England also were to join Russia, the Turkish Government would be confronted with a most difficult problem. There would, however, be no fear of these powers resorting to force in the event of the Turks not yielding to them ; otherwise the Turks would probably refer the matter to the arbitrament of the sword. In the latter case (which God forbid !) the war in Tripoli would prove the fore-runner of the day of judgment.

Cretan affairs.

5. The Civil and Military News (Ludhiana), of the 4th March 1912, publishes a note headed "Oppression on Muhammadans in Crete." The paper condemns the ill-treatment to which the Christians of Crete have been subjecting their Muhammadan neighbours. It also praises the protecting powers—France, England, Russia, and Italy—for not countenancing the annexation of Crete to Greece.

Indians in South Africa.

6. The Akhbar-i-'Am (Lahore), of the 27th February 1912, publishes an article headed "The Indian population in South Africa." Adverting to the recent discussion in the Upper Chamber, the paper says that there is no Indian who can fail to appreciate the "stirring objections" put forward by Lord Ampthill. Experience has, however, shown that it is inadvisable to foment excitement in connection with questions like the one referred to; while, at the same time, the native adage concerning the witness who shows more activity than the complainant appears to apply to Lord Ampthill's championship (of the cause of Indian immigrants in South Africa). His Lordship's remark that the benefits of the Darbar are being neutralized by indifference to the discontent prevalent among the aforesaid immigrants must also be characterised as ill-timed. The paper then goes on to say that the efforts of Indian leaders in South Africa have proved effective; and that these gentlemen are satisfied with the (Immigration) Bill which has been prepared by the local authorities. Next it refers to the speeches made by Lords Selborne and Crewe in reply to Lord Ampthill's remarks, and says that the Secretary of State for India has shown himself mindful of the interests of the people of this country. When, it adds, Indians are subjected to the same restrictions in Canada and Australia, why should South Africa (alone) be pilloried? After observing that Lord Ampthill had to keep his peace (in the end), it remarks that the interests of Indians are undoubtedly in the best hands.

Indentured labour.

7. The following is from the Tribune (Lahore), of the 6th March 1912 :—

"The rejection of Mr. Gokhale's resolution on the prohibition of indentured labour by 33 votes to 22 places the Government of India wholly in the wrong. Every Indian non-official member spoke and voted for the resolution. There was no difference between Hindus and Muhammadans, between independent and other members. Even the Hon'ble Captain Umar Hyat Khan Tiwana emphatically supported the resolution. Mr. Shafi rightly said that the entire Muhammadan community was in favour of the resolution. The All-India Muslim League meeting passed a resolution to that effect. The Congress has repeatedly done so. And yet the Government would not accept the resolution. Under what conditions is the unanimous and emphatic desire of the whole country to be accepted? As Mr. Gokhale said, non-official members would bring the question forward again and again until this iniquitous form of labour is done away with altogether. Let Hindus and Muhammadans do it by turns and let the whole country be awakened on this subject, and the Government will have no alternative but to remove this grave evil which is a humiliation to the national self-respect of India."

The same paper, publishes the following in the course of a leading article in its issue of 8th March 1912 :—

"The debate on the Hon'ble Mr. Gokhale's resolution for the prohibition of indentured labour will live long in history. By reason of its rejection it will live longer than it would have done by its acceptance, and the manner of rejection is in itself no small incentive to us to put forth all our efforts in order to remove a national stain. * * * The explanations and arguments of the Hon'ble Mr. Clark themselves prove how untenable is the position of the Government and how arbitrary the rejection of the recommendations, in spite of the remarkable unanamity which prevails among every section of the Indian community in the Council Chamber and outside. The indentured system, as Mr. Gokhale describes it, is a monstrous system, 'iniquitous in itself, based upon fraud and maintained by force.' It is, as Sir Vithaldas Thakersey says, 'an outrage on humanity'; it is a system which, as Mr. Shafi says, transforms the very protectors of immigrants into protectors of their tyrannous employers.

"But nothing has induced the Government to consider the popular view of the question. We do not mean to say that Government has declined to examine the question. It has examined it not however from India's point of view and in the permanent interest of India, but from the point of view of British capitalists and in the interests of the colonies. In fact Mr. Clark by his explanation seems to confess that this is the attitude of the Government towards this question. Mr. Clark tried to fasten on Mr. Gokhale the charge of not having approached the question with an 'unbiased mind.' But we vainly scan his lengthy speech for a model of 'unbiased' exposition on behalf of a Government which is the trustee of a nation in the School of British Liberalism. Towards the close of his speech he said he held no brief for the 'indentured labourer'—meaning probably the system of indentured labour. 'Yet he maintained that in the opinion of the Government of India the moral effect of the system on its victims was not reason enough 'to harm and put an end to it.' Without any offence may we inquire whether European nations will permit recruitment under the indentured system for the benefit of South Africa, Australia, Canada or any of the South American Republics. If the indentured system is no more than a 'free contract' why should not the great body of the unemployed and unemployable Englishmen and Scotchmen be sent to the several colonies to acquire freehold property at the termination of the period of indenture? It may be that the symbol of slavery is force with the knout of the slaveholder playing freely upon the bare-backs of the wretched men and women, but the symbol of the so-called 'free contract' under the indentured system is the legalizing of forms of force described as illegal in civilized countries. In spite of the unreasoning attitude of the Government we have the views of Englishmen to the contrary. Some of them like Mr. Bateson have been Magistrates in the Colonies, and condemn the system as 'civilized' slavery. Mr. Bateson is now a Judge in Egypt, but was a Magistrate in Mauritius. He is reported to have stated that the planters of that Colony had converted him into a machine for sending Indian labourers to jail for mere civil torts such as absence from work, refusal to go to hospital when ill, non-completion of tasks, to be handcuffed as criminals and kept in jail with criminals."

* * * * * * * *

The following on the same subject has been published by the Panjabee (Lahore), of 7th March 1912, under the heading "Indentured labour or slavery" :—

"* * * For the last seventy-five years this system has been in force and now the people of India have come to know all the degradation it involves. There is not a single patriotic, humane and just citizen in this country who does not wish to end this revolting system of 'benefiting Indian labourers by obtaining for them wages which they could not earn in this country.' After all, a man does not live for wages alone. At any rate, the Indian does not, whatever the other nations may think. If a man cannot work with self-respect, with ordinary relaxations, and human comforts and fairness of treatment, he certainly must not be led to become a semi-slave in a foreign country, for the sake of wages, enterprise, new surroundings, &c. Every Indian non-official member of the Council spoke strongly against the system and supported Mr. Gokhale's resolution. That shows how strongly the people of India feel the cruelties and indignities heaped upon their poor and humble brethren recruited in the manner described. Mr. Muhammad Shafi observed that the Muhammadan community was unanimously in favour of the resolution. Even Malik Umar Hyat Khan supported the resolution and observed 'when cent per cent. of the population are agreed the Government should be on our side or else you won't be our Government.' Although this remark produced some laughter, it is nevertheless prompted by a strong desire to obtain the sympathy and prompt action of the Government for the good of the people. If the unanimous opinion of a nation so large as Indians, even though hopelessly divided on many matters, does count it ought to impress the Government of India of the temper and tendencies of the people. It is impolitic to ignore a plea so strongly made."

(b)—Home.

Debate in the Lords on the administrative changes.

8. The Paisa Akhbar (Lahore), of the 27th February 1912, publishes an article headed "Debate in the House of Lords on the new administrative changes." Writing on the above subject, the paper says that it is only natural that loyal Indians should regard Lord Curzon's protest as going wholly against their traditions of loyalty, and that they should consider it inadvisable and unstatesmanlike to oppose the changes which the King Emperor considers as calculated to promote the welfare of India and her children. The general Indian public cannot understand the niceties of the British constitution, and looks upon its sovereign as the fountain-head of all authority. If, therefore, the protest from Lord Curzon and his party leads to the rejection of the Parliamentary Bill concerning the changes referred to (which God forbid !), there will be a fear of the King-Emperor's prestige in India being greatly damaged.

The Akhbar-i-'Am (Lahore), of the 28th February 1912, deprecates Lord Curzon's conduct in having looked at the changes from a personal standpoint. It also characterises his anger at the annulment of the Partition of Bengal as misplaced ; while it says that, in his attempt to throw a veil over his mistake in having divided Bengal, His Lordship had to indulge in deplorable mis-statements and to make strenuous efforts to cause disunion between Hindus and Muhammadans.

Sikhs and politics.

9. The Loyal Gazette (Lahore), of the 3rd March 1912, publishes a communication headed "Keeping aloof from politics or suicide." The writer, Bhai Gyan Singh, a former Editor of the Khalsa Advocate (Amritsar), contends that religion and politics are synonymous. Those Sikh (lit. our) leaders, he adds, who have been eschewing politics from personal considerations are engaged in sweeping their community off the earth's surface. It is wholly absurd to think that it is a great sin to meddle with politics which cannot be confounded with sedition and rebellion. Has there been any religious sect in the world which held itself aloof from politics and still managed to maintain a lengthy existence ? Every page of the history of Christianity is redolent of politics, and this is why the followers of Christ are rich in blessings of all descriptions ; while Indians—especially Sikhs, who have for some time past regarded politics as a bogey—are being involved in degradation. The writer then enquires whether religion has never been abused ; and by way of reply asks what great sin is there that was not committed in the name of Islam under the Muhammadan rule. This did not lessen the worth of religion ; and, similarly, the responsibility for the excesses committed by those who take part in political movements does not rest with politics. Continuing, he says that if Sikhs (lit. you) desire to preserve their community, they should remember that they cannot achieve this result by eschewing politics. They should employ lawful means to safeguard their legitimate rights, and should educate their children to take part in political matters.

The financial statement.

10. In commenting upon the financial statement for 1912-13 the Tribune (Lahore), of 3rd March 1912, makes the following remarks in the course of a leading article :—

"Few persons can read the Hon'ble Financial Member's speech delivered on the 1st instant on the occasion of presenting the Financial Statement for 1912-13, without being struck with its remarkable features. The partial failure of the monsoon, the extraordinary expenditure of the year consequent on the Royal visit, the speeches in Parliament and the Chinese revolution had all prepared the mind of the tax-payer for a cheerless if not dismal account with the prospect of additional taxation. Even so great an authority as Mr. Montagu, the Under-Secretary, was impressed with the need for caution and circumspection, and Lord Crewe, without being unduly pessimistic, had declined to accept Lord Curzon's dictum of unalloyed prosperity. Of course, as regards particular heads of revenue and expenditure, there were differences of opinion this time last year, and the Finance Member was criticised for his nervousness and needless caution in preparing estimates. Even when the effects of unfavourable seasons were more or less definite there were seers whose financial vision was unclouded and who were therefore able to see far beyond these and similar troubles visible to all. In the result, however, the adjustment of the financial conditions has been more or less dramatic and is full of happy auguries for the future. Whatever be its significance to the few who are critically disposed, it is certainly attractive and pleasant, and in perfect keeping with the momentous changes announced at Delhi. For the happy ending of the financial year the tax-payer should be thankful to opium, to the Royal visit and to the general elasticity of trade. Reserving an examination of the details we cannot help repeating our protest against the familiar method of underestimating revenue and overestimating expenditure. Last year we made a firm though respectful protest and stated that the low estimates under opium, railways and customs were not justified. Our predictions have been fulfilled to the letter. The hesitancy of Sir Fleetwood Wilson has served to produce results almost dramatic in the realms of finance, but we venture to think that the method is wanting in soundness and therefore wanting in justice to the tax-payer. However, in wishing him good fortune for the ensuing year we offer to him and to the Government of Lord Hardinge our respectful congratulations on the beginnings of an era of financial reform. The masterly retrospect appended to the speech affords ample evidence of the scrutiny and judgment of the Finance Minister, and we have pleasure in commanding the financial statement to the careful study of every one interested in good government."

II.—Afghanistan and Trans-Frontier.

Crime in the North-West Frontier Province.

11. The following is from the Tribune (Lahore), of 5th March 1912 :—

"Sir Henry McMahon's answer to the Hon'ble Mr. S. Sinha's question on this subject is unconvincing and unsatisfactory. He admits the increase of crime and regrets it also. But in the same breath he speaks of 'the growth of civilization across the border' and says on the strength of Sir George Roos-Keppel's opinion, that the Police are 'much more efficient than formerly.' Civilization may give rise to a civilized form of crime. Strangely enough we find the Government stating that it predisposes people to outlawry. 'Outlawry,' it seems 'is beginning to lose its most terrifying features, and there is consequently an increased tendency for the people to take the law into their own hands, trusting either to outlawry or to the belief that the fear of reprisal will render not forthcoming the amount of proof which the law requires.' This then is the measure of the growth of civilization across the border. It is however doubtful whether the Government of India is satisfied with this palpably absurd explanation of the Chief Commissioner. Affairs in the Frontier Province are, on the Government's own showing, becoming desperate, and the Local Government practically confesses defeat at the hands of the outlaws. Sir George Roos-Keppel has the coolness to say that the fault appears to be not with the Police. . . . . but with the system which compels the Police to interfere in many cases in which the State is not really concerned. But he stops short of mentioning the cases with which the State is not concerned, and yet allows its agents to interfere and court reprisals from the 'civilized' outlaws. It is impossible to reconcile these conflicting statements. They only indicate the perplexities of the Local Government. The outlaws have transmitted their influence far into the interior. Even Peshawar the headquarters of the Government is repeatedly menaced by the bandits. These depredations of the trans-frontier outlaws were unknown in Peshawar when it was subject to the Punjab Government. Certainly thirty years ago crime in that part of the Province was almost negligible, and it is a cruel mockery to attribute 'recrudescence' to growth of civilization. A correspondent, whose letter we publish to-day, quotes chapter and verse to disprove the ridiculous contention of the Chief Commissioner. Last week the Peshawar correspondent of the Pioneer complained bitterly of the appalling increase of crime in the cantonment. There is no longer any doubt that Sir George Roos-Keppel has failed in his efforts to combat the evil, and not a little of the existing trouble is due to the Frontier Police itself. Of course the jirgas have their own share of blame, but the main fault lies in the system of recruitment to the Police, with its sympathies and antipathies. Unless the Government recognises this and alters the system, mere tinkering with the law will not by itself be enough to deal effectively with the growing evil. The longer the reform of the Police is delayed, the more emboldened will the lawless classes become and the more difficult will it be to deal with their 'civilized' ways of defying both law and the limbs of the law. In the meantime it should be recognised the sufferers are mainly the law-abiding Hindus who promote trade and spread British influence."

III.—Native States.

Kashmir affairs.

12. The Rajput Gazette (Lahore), of the 2nd March 1912, has an article headed "A detailed account of a past painful dacoity in the Jammu State: worthy of the attention of the Government of India." Adverting to the Jammu dacoity case (vide paragraph 12 of Selections No. 7) the paper complains that the Paisa Akhbar has charged the State Courts, nay, the Maharaja himself, with religious bigotry. After remarking that the Islamic Kashmiri Darpan has supported the Paisa Akhbar, it says that the Government of India should vindicate the world-famed British sense of justice by reconsidering its order. This would also render it impossible for any subject of the Kashmir State to display in future such "dreadful courage." The order of the Government of India has caused feelings of deep uneasiness and disappointment in several parts of the State. Muhammadans greatly out-number Hindus in Jammu and Kashmir; and if the above order is upheld there will be a great fear of more serious occurrences than even the dacoity in question. Next the paper publishes a detailed account of the dacoity, from which it would appear that Hayat Ali Khan, a jagirdar of Mouza Kasmagh, in the Mirpur district, forcibly converted a Hindu goldsmith's wife, of whom he had become enamoured, to Islam. The case was taken into court and the woman's father was summoned to give evidence on behalf of the prosecution. Before, however, he could do so his house was visited by dacoits, who wounded him and three other persons. His son, who was removed to the hospital at Jhelum, stated in his dying deposition to Mir Ibadulla, a first class Magistrate, that he had identified the accused as being the dacoits. His statement was corroborated by several other persons; while Sheikh Imam-ud-din, Superintendent of Police, who conducted the investigation, recorded the opinion that Hayat Ali Khan had killed Jagat Singh owing to the fact that the latter had to give evidence in his daughter's case. The paper further states that nearly eight Muhammadans gave evidence against Hayat Ali Khan, while the assessors consisted of one Hindu and one Parsee gentleman. After expressing surprise that the Paisa Akhbar should still have made a Hindu-Muhammadan question of the case, it says that His Excellency the Viceroy has perhaps been misled, for otherwise all the accused would not have been acquitted in face of the existence of very strong evidence against them.

The Gaekwar.

13. The following is from the Tribune (Lahore) of 5th March 1912:—

"From the day of that unfortunate incident at the Imperial Darbar at Delhi the Gaekwar of Baroda has been discussed everywhere and from every point of view. It should have terminated with the publication of his letter of apology to the Viceroy, but the whole trouble really began with it, and there seems to be no prospect of its coming to an end. So far as the Press in India is concerned it treated the whole affair very well and suggested that it should be forgotten. But the savage attack in the Times embellished with the grossest insinuations against the Maharaja's loyalty and accusing him of having personal relations with a man like Krishnavarma, gave a new and wholly unexpected impetus to the campaign of calumny. All fair-minded people recognised that His Highness was being undeservedly maligned, but there was no abatement of the bitterness manifested against him. An Anglo-Indian lady, the wife of a doctor, was heard to say that the Gaekwar should have been shot on the spot. Very recently at a club which shall be nameless the portrait of the Maharaja was taken down from the wall and trampled under foot. The Rajput, a monthly journal, edited by an Indian in London, says the Gaekwar has disgraced himself for ever. The character sketch in the February number of the Review of Reviews is of the Gaekwar of Baroda, and the sketch is on the whole sympathetic. There is hardly any doubt that the evil star of the Maharaja is just now in the ascendant, and three things have contributed to it. The first is the Darbar incident itself, the second is his being a co-respondent in a divorce case, intelligence of which was received in Delhi on the afternoon of the day on which the Darbar was held, and the third is the proposed marriage between his only daughter and the Maharaja Scindhia, whose first wife is living. As regards the Darbar incident it is a matter that rests between the Maharaja and the Government of India, and it was practically closed by the publication of the Maharaja's letter to the Viceroy. The proposed marriage of Princess Indiraraja with the Maharaja Scindhia has been broken off. The divorce case is most unfortunate, but nothing can be done to wipe out the scandal of it. The Maharaja will live down his present difficulties, but he will not regain what he has lost in public esteem and admiration."

V.—Native Societies and Religious Matters.

The Arya Samaj.

14. The Indar (Lahore), of the 1st March 1912, publishes a paragraph headed "The auspicious beginning of the new movement in Lahore." It has gratified the Editor to see that the pledge form (vide paragraph 8 of Selections No. 9) designed by him for Aryas are already being signed at Lahore. The idea, he adds, has been welcomed by sensible and religious people; while there are three Lahore Editors among those who have so far signed the pledge. Next he suggests that a series of lectures should be delivered at Lahore on the subjects mentioned in the pledge-form, religious men (among Aryas) being requested to undertake the task. Efforts should (also) be made to secure the signatures of all the members of existing Arya Samajes. Should, however, these Samajes be unwilling to sign the pledge, new Samajes should be established without delay.

Dharampal and the Arya Samaj.

15. The Sanatan Dharm Parcharak (Amritsar), of the 1st March 1912, publishes a cartoon in which the Editors of the Hindustan, the Jhang Sial, the Musafir (Agra) and the Parkash are depicted to be in great distress at Dharampal's attacks on the Arya Samaj. The last-named person, who holds the Indar in one hand and a bludgeon in the other, tells them that they should reply to him with sobriety, bearing in mind that otherwise blows from the bludgeon will rain down on them. His advice is emphasised by the Editor of the Loyal Gazette, while the Parcharak remarks as follows :—" Indeed, no one—be he Mahatma Munshi Ram, Mahashai Dina Nath, Mr. Banke Dyal, Mahashai Radha Kishen, Mr. Musafir, or anyone else— has any reply to make to Dharampal's objections. All they can do is to try to have him involved in trouble under the new (Press) Act."

His Highness the Aga Khan and the Presidentship of the All-India Muslim League.

16. The following is from the Observer (Lahore), of 6th March 1912 :—

"The news had created quite a dismay in Muslim circles throughout India that His Highness the Aga Khan had resigned the presidentship of the All-India Muslim League, and all sorts of conjectures were being put forward to explain the step. The Aga Khan, by virtue of his position and influence, his talents and services to the national cause, is a valuable asset which the Indian Muslims possess, and they can ill-afford to lose his lead. Moreover, the stirring times through which we are passing and the great changes which the country is about to witness in the administration and many other directions make it imperatively necessary that a statesman of the capacity and grit of His Highness the Aga Khan should continue to pilot the affairs of his people in these delicate times. The news of his resignation had therefore come as a bolt from the blue and threatened to weaken the prestige of the League and to affect its capacity for usefulness. The loss would have been all the greater following as it would have done on the death of the Honorary Secretary of the League, Maulvi Aziz Mirza. The Muslim public will be, however, pleased to hear that His Highness has reconsidered his decision and will remain in office on condition that one or more joint-presidents are also elected. It is also believed that he will not press for the election of joint-presidents and will acquiesce in the desire of the whole community that the Aga Khan should continue as head of their all-India political organization. On the 3rd March, the first day of the 5th session of the League—detailed proceedings of which have been unfortunately to-day crowded out of our columns—His Highness the Aga Khan was unanimously elected President of the League for another term; and this is a decision on which we congratulate both the League and its President, as well as the whole community."

VI.—Legislation.

The legislative session.

17. The following is from the Tribune (Lahore), of 7th March 1912:—

"The legislative session of the Imperial Legislative Council is drawing to a close and the attitude of the Government towards the resolutions brought forward by non-official members has produced a most unfortunate impression upon the country. A measure like Mr. Bhupendra Nath Basu's Special Marriage Bill may be rejected without creating much feeling, since there was considerable divergence of opinion about it, and Government may well decline responsibility for a contentious measure. But a resolution does not commit the Government to any action, neither does legislation necessarily follow a resolution. But the Government have uniformly resisted and rejected every resolution, no matter whether the country or the non-official members were unanimous in supporting it. With the exception of the resolution on the police which was withdrawn because the Home Member while opposing it was sympathetic, every other resolution was opposed and defeated. Mr. Gokhale's resolution on district councils, Sir Vithaldas Thackersay's resolution on railway tariffs, and finally Mr. Gokhale's resolution on indentured labour, against which there is not a single dissentient voice in the country, have all been rejected, not by the weight of argument, but by the sheer preponderance of numbers. There is no approximation to co-operation or compromise."

The right of representation.

18. The following is from the Tribune (Lahore), of 8th March 1912:—

"All the bodies representing the non-official Europeans of Bengal wanted ten seats on the reconstituted Bengal Legislative Council. The Government has told them that 'it is impossible to deal with it in consideration of one element only even when that element is of the importance and standing representing by your (Anglo-Indian and Defence Association) Council.' There are at present only twenty-six seats for non-official members. Out of these the Europeans want not less than ten. The Muhammadan claim has yet to be considered, and they want their interests to be specially protected. Less than ten seats will not satisfy them. The artificial barrier that has been set up between Bengali Hindus and Bengali Muhammadans may be removed by the Muhammadans claiming to represent the Hindus as well, and the remaining six seats may be divided between them and the Europeans. That would be the ideal of class representation."

The Life Assurance Bill.

19. The following is from the Tribune (Lahore), of 7th March 1912:—

"It may be freely acknowledged that the Life Assurance Bill has emerged from the Select Committee in a greatly improved form. But it is to be greatly regretted that the attempt at differentiation between Indian and non-Indian companies has been persisted in. What is worse a new clause has been added extending the power of exemption granted with respect to companies established in the United Kingdom to foreign and Colonial companies; also Messrs. R. N. Mudholkar, N. Subba Rao and Bhupendranath Basu have recorded a minute of dissent against the exemptions retained and provided in the amended Bill as regards these companies. They rightly state that there is no valid reason for exempting British and Colonial companies from the provisions about deposit and point out that there is the same necessity for a portion of their funds being in the hands of the Government of India as in the case of foreign companies not coming under the new clause 34. They are clearly of opinion that it would be neither desirable nor safe to extend to foreign or colonial companies the privileged position which is proposed to be accorded to companies established in the United Kingdom. There is also a second minute of dissent signed by the three Indian Councillors named above and by two Europeans, Mr. C. L. Fyffe and Sir Cecil Graham, as regards investment of funds. They consider it necessary that the law should expressly lay down that the greater portion of the Insurance fund should be invested in one or more of the securities specified in section 20 of the Indian Trusts Act. Unless the Government of India is prepared to extend this restriction to all companies alike, Indian, British, Colonial or foreign, the provision will act most prejudicially against Indian enterprise. What is wanted most is a provision to compel British, Colonial and foreign companies in our midst to invest in India the premium incomes derived here, but this was not suggested even by Indian members. In the absence of that provision a restriction merely on Indian companies is not only useless but also hurtful. We do not think that the Indian members were well advised in giving their assent to the proposal of the two European members."

The new Cantonment Code.

20. The Tribune (Lahore), of 7th March 1912, publishes the following comments :—

"The new Cantonment Code has been published. It will take effect from the 1st proximo, but it differs in no way from the old code now rescinded as regards the rights of Indian residents. The one sore point in the administration of the cantonment funds is that those who contribute largely have no voice in it, at all events no effective voice. This has not been remedied. Section 4 of the Code merely provides for the appointment by the Officer Commanding the Division 'any residents of the cantonment, whether officials or non-officials, to be additional members of the cantonment committee for such period as may be stated in the order.' The Officer Commanding has also been vested with powers to revoke any appointment so made, and therefore it is impossible for any member selected by him to give expression to his honest opinions on administrative matters."

VII.—General Administration.

(a)—Judicial.

The Punjab Chief Court and the Hindus.

21. The following is from the Tribune (Lahore) of 6th March 1912 :—

"It is nearly one week that we brought to public notice that in selecting eight names for inclusion in the list of accepted candidates for Munsifship, not a single Hindu had been selected. In our comments on the news we stated that the Hon'ble Judges of the Chief Court owed an explanation for this omission to the Hindu community. So far the explanation in question has not been forthcoming. The paragraph must have attracted the attention of the Government also, but we all know that as the Chief Court is quite independent of the Government in matters of this kind we cannot expect His Honour the Lieutenant-Governor to call upon the Hon'ble Judges for an explanation. But we hope that the Hon'ble Judges will not take advantage of this circumstance, and that they will, on the other hand, be disposed to take the public into their confidence and explain the reasons, if any, which have led to the selection of six Muhammadans, one Sikh and one Indian Christian, and not a single Hindu. As the highest judicial tribunal the Punjab Chief Court is entitled to respect, but it must be remembered that the respect in question is likely very seriously to be impaired by acts such as the arbitrary limitation of the number of practising lawyers, and the exclusion of the leading and the most important community in the Province from its due share of judicial appointments. The Chief Court should be the last institution to do or sanction what looks like an act of partiality, and the Hon'ble Judges in their corporate capacity the last persons to tolerate, much less to do, anything savouring of favouritism and partiality. The fact that this year the choice of the Hon'ble Judges did not fall upon a single Hindu has created widespread disappointment among the Hindus. We anticipated this result. The Hindus as a community feel that in several departments of the public service Muhammadans and other non-Hindus have been and are being favoured at their expense, and they are very sore about the matter. The action of the Chief Court in excluding them this year from the list of accepted candidates for Munsifships has enhanced the injury very considerably. In our opinion the Judges would be well advised to publish the list of accepted candidates together with the detailed qualifications of the various candidates. The public would then be in a position to see for itself on what principles the list in question is framed and what are the considerations which led the Judges in the past to frame the list in question. If, however, the Judges do not move in the matter and decide to ignore public opinion, we hope the matter will not be allowed to rest where it does at present. The matter should be made the subject of an interpellation in the Legislative Council, and if no satisfaction can be had here, we shall not fail to go up to Parliament. We have every respect for the Judges of the Chief Court, but for obvious reasons we cannot accept action of this kind without protest or challenge. The Hindus are the loyal subjects of His Imperial Majesty the King. In wealth, in culture and enlightenment, in public spirit, in loyalty and devotion to the throne, the Hindus are inferior to none. As the subjects of the King-Emperor they are entitled to their due share of preferment in the public service, and even the Judges of the Chief Court have no right to deprive them of their due and to treat them as if they were 'the remnant of a disinherited race.'"

(d)—Education.

Complaint against the Gurukula.

22. The Indar (Lahore), of the 1st March 1912, publishes an article headed "The dissemination of the Vedas." In continuation of its previous remarks on the subject, the paper refers to the disunion and quarrels in the Arya Samaj consequent upon the mismanagement of the Gurukula; and says that, although from its very inception the Arya Samaj has proclaimed that it is not a political society, still there have been meteors at the Gurukula which have kept that institution in a state of incandescence. Nevertheless, the authorities of the Gurukula are not prepared to mend their ways. Indeed, it is surprising that, while they complain that Government is prejudiced against them, they not only take no steps to remove these prejudices but actually do things calculated to create them. As a consequence it is the Samaj, responsible as it is for the manangement of the Gurukula, that suffers. The paper then refers to a letter which one Mr. Phelps, of America, has contributed to the Pioneer, and in which he says that all good-hearted persons cannot but approve of the aims and objects which the Gurukula has in view. Internal evidence. however, it adds, is against such presumptions; and in making the above assertion Mr. Phelps has also in a way attacked Government by making the insinuation that it looks upon the Gurukula with suspicion, simply because the aims and objects of that institution are liked by all good-hearted persons. The Aryas accuse Muhammadans and Christian Missionaries of having prejudiced the mind of Government against them; but the fact is quite the reverse, seeing that it is not the insinuations of Muhammadans and Christian missionaries, but the conduct of the authorities of the Gurukula themselves which is responsible for prejudicing the mind of Government. For instance, some time ago, a Mahratta youth, against whom the Bombay Government had issued a warrant and who had absconded before his arrest, obtained an asylum in the Gurukula. Although the governor of the institution knew of the fact, he kept the matter secret until the Police surrounded the Gurukula buildings and arrested the culprit, who was concealed in the room ordinarily occupied by the governor himself. Further on Mr. Phelps takes exception to the allegation of a District Magistrate to the effect that the education imparted in the Gurukula is only nominal, and that much time is employed in teaching military drill to the boys. This allegation, however, is largely true, seeing that much of the time of the students is occupied in reading revolutionary literature. After referring to the "Life of Bonaparte" written by the first graduate of the Gurukula (vide paragraph 16 of Selections No. 8), the paper says that, under these circumstances, it is anything but just to accuse Government of regarding the institution with suspicion. Proceeding, it refers to a letter in which it is remarked that a boy was wounded in the Gurukula by the explosion of potash which was meant to be used in manufacturing crackers. Now it is apparent from the above letter, says the Indar, that crackers are manufactured in the Gurukula, and that when they furnish an untimely explosion attempts are made to throw a veil over the affair by telling lies. The question, however, arises as to why the students in the Gurukula not only read revolutionary literature but also resort to the manufacture of fire-works. How are these "explosives" obtained in the institution without a license? If these questions are satisfactorily answered it will not be difficult to see why Government is prejudiced against the Gurukula. Next the Editor says that, some time ago, the responsible authorities of the Gurukula kicked up a great row, alleging that the European soldiers at Dharmsala accorded bad treatment to some students of that institution. Probably Government instituted enquiries into the matter, but the public are so far quite ignorant as to the result. The Editor, however, can recall an incident which occurred at Kasauli, and in which the students of the Gurukula were guilty of a flagrant act of rude behaviour towards British soldiers. While walking with two students of the Gurukula at Kasauli some time ago, the Editor met a British soldier, between whose legs one of the students named inserted his stick. The latter, however, departed after merely exclaiming "stupid!", and the students heartily enjoyed the fun. Shortly after this, the Editor was surprised to read in the Sat Dharam Parcharak, dated the 6th September 1911, that British soldiers were in the habit of inciting their dogs to attack Indian travellers in the hills; and that, therefore, the latter should invariably carry cudgels with them. This was published in a communication signed by one of the abovementioned students; and the allegations made therein were not only false, but were merely a ruse to conceal the writer's own rude behaviour towards the European soldier referred to above. It is this conduct on the part of the authorities and the students of the Gurukula that has prejudiced the mind of Government against it.

23. The following is from the Tribune (Lahore) of 3rd March 1912 :—

Indians and the education service.

"We have already shown in these columns that the figures given by Sir Harcourt Butler in reply to a question asked in the Supreme Legislative Council regarding the recruitment of the Indian Education Service are very disappointing. Out of the total number of 211 appointments in the Indian Educational Service in the various parts of India only three are held by Indians. It is clear that the colour bar is in no department more strong than in the Education Department. The Department of Public Instruction is just the department in which the utmost possible liberality should be shown in the matter of appointing Indians to the higher ranks, but unfortunately it is the department where the case is just the reverse. A large number of Indians have distinguished themselves in the British Universities, but their birth and nationality have stood in the way of their appointment to the Indian Educational Service." * * * * * *

"The Leader says that the United Provinces in this respect have fared worse than the Punjab. We do not, however, agree with him. Things in this Province are quite as bad as they are in the United Provinces."

(h)—Miscellaneous.

Security from the Khalsa Sewak.

24. The Hindustan (Lahore), of the 1st March 1912, publishes a note headed "Security of Rs. 1,000 from the Khalsa Sewak." The article, it says, in respect of which action has been taken against the Khalsa Sewak, is obscene in the extreme and makes use of niyog to pour gross abuse on Arya Samajists. For some time past, it adds, certain people have been labouring under the wholly unfounded impression that Government does not extend its protection to Arya Samajists. This was what misled the Hidayat and the Haq of Delhi, the Shara-i-Hind of Meerut, the Bombay Punch, and the Sultan-ul-Akhbar, of Bombay; with the result that these papers had to be called upon to furnish security. The same has been the case with the Khalsa Sewak; and it is to be hoped that in future this paper will ever bear in mind that Aryas also are subjects of Government and are as much entitled to official protection as Sikhs and other communities.

Corruption in the public service.

25. The following is from the Tribune, dated 7th March 1912 :—

"The prevailing corruption in the public service of the province is one of the most distressful and disquieting features of the administration. We do not mean to say that corruption is anything like a monopoly of this province or that honesty in public servants is a virtue seldom to be met with in this province. What we are concerned with here is that corruption exists to an alarming extent in many departments of the public service of the province, and no right-thinking man can look upon this sorry spectacle with equanimity. There are several departments in which corruption is as rife as though it were a regular appanage of the public service. Public servants employed in those departments take to dishonesty and corruption as if to the manner born. The process seems so easy and natural that they feel no qualms of conscience nor are troubled with any uneasy feelings of conpunction. Of these the Police Department is usually regarded as perhaps the most notorious. There will be very few, if indeed any, who will deny that this reputation is well earned. Indeed, our principal witness on the point is the Report of the Police Commission presided over by Sir Andrew Fraser. It is therefore not without very adequate grounds that its name has become a by-word for dishonesty and corruption. * * *

"But why single out the Police Department for blame? No doubt the rank and file of the department, including not a few Deputy Inspectors and even Inspectors, are corrupt, and supervision by the higher officers is in many cases very lax. But the Police Department does by no means make up the sum total of the delinquencies of public servants. Corruption, as Major Douglas, lately Deputy Commissioner of Lyallpur, observed, is rife in many other departments, viz., in the ministerial ranks of the judicial and executive departments, and in the revenue and canal departments. In the law-courts the complaint, for instance, is usual that parties cannot have a date fixed for the hearing of their case or even the payment of the talabana made without first greasing the palms of the ministerial officials. The question may be asked why the parties do pay at all, for after all the court officials are bound to fix a date or to receive a talabana. The reason is not far to seek. The parties are generally ignorant people and they prefer paying a small sum to the court officials to have their business promptly done, to the vexation and the delay that may otherwise ensue. There are of course some exceptions, but it is these exceptions that prove the rule regarding the general corruption. Under a wide-awake presiding officer like Mr. (afterwards Mr. Justice) Harris, the opportunities for such corrupt practices are greatly eliminated. Mr. Justice Harris, while a Divisional Judge, used to fix the date and receive talbanas in his own presence. But there are other presiding officers who, by reason of their ignorance or good nature, are not so vigilant. No wonder ministerial officers sometimes become so bold and brazen-faced as to receive bribes under the very eyes of the presiding officer. The Amritsar District Court Reader's case is a typical instance, but the unduly lenient treatment meted out to him is not likely to act as a deterrent. In the canal and revenue departments the evil if anything is more rife. There are not a few Naib-Tahsildars and Tahsildars who live on a scale much above their pay, and still have amassed what may be regarded more or less as a fortune. Corruption is also extremely rife among the patwaris, kanungos, zaildars of the revenue department as well as among the canal patwaris and zaildars. Not only is the Government cheated of its dues, but the, harassment of the public is very largely augmented. Indeed, the prevalence of corruption is a canker which not only saps the efficiency of the public service, but adds to the distress of the ignorant public. Heroic measures are necessary to root out this evil.

"* * * The causes of prevailing corruption are, roughly speaking, two-fold. First is the ignorance and the helplessness of the masses. Here the remedy lies with the Government as well as with the people. Once the area of literacy is extended to every nook and corner, once the ray of knowledge illumines the land, dishonesty and corruption will automatically abate. At present, it is the sheer helplessness and abject prostration of the masses that aggravates the situation and puts a premium on corruption. The efforts of the Government as well as of the leaders of the public should therefore be directed to the dissemination of universal education. * * * The other cause of corruption is the protection, which is seemingly enjoyed by delinquent public servants. As the Government recognises, it is very hard to bring home a charge of corruption against a public servant. The Chief Court circular, referred to by the Deputy Commissioner of Lyallpur, confers an additional immunity. That can be easily amended or withdrawn, and we have no doubt that it will be done. But that is not the core of the evil. Cases are not uncommon where public servants, whose honesty has not been above suspicion, have obtained their full, sometimes more than full, share of departmental preferment. No doubt this happens because the superior officers are ignorant of the reputation their subordinates have among the public. It cannot be supposed that superior officers knowingly recommend an unscrupulous subordinate for promotion, even if he is useful. But the ignorant people think that the erring subordinate is in the good books of his superiors and the ægis of supposed official protection helps to confer on the former an immunity.

"What we propose is that facilities should be given for bringing the delinquencies of public servants to the full glare of publicity. We want that provision should be made for the proper correction of every delinquent public officer. This can be done by the appointment of a permanent Committee of officials under the presidency of such energetic and wideawake officers as Mr. Maynard, Major Douglas or Major O'Brien, for enquiry into every case of alleged delinquency of public servants. The Committee should be of a peripatetic character and make full and open enquiry on the spot. The very existence of such a Committee will act as a great corrective upon unscrupulous subordinates and help them to mend their ways. The check which the Committee will exercise upon wrong-doers will be most valuable. In our opinion the Committee will be a potent instrument for good and will at once raise the purity and efficiency of the public service. We make this suggestion in all seriousness and hope that the Government will give it due weight and consideration."

The Viceroy's coming visit to Peshawar.

26. The following is from the Tribune (Lahore), dated 9th March 1912:—

"So far as the Punjabi residents of Peshawar and its environs are concerned, the principal event should be the presentation of a thoughtful and considered address of welcome. It should mention briefly but firmly the injustice that has been done to them by severing all their ties with the Punjab and by subjecting them to conditions which prevailed in the country half a century ago. The Punjabis of the Peshawar district, Muhammadans as well as Hindus, have a genuine grievance in this respect, and they should unite in approaching His Excellency with a prayer for the restoration of Peshawar to the Punjab. It is not merely their future advancement that has been hindered by their separation. But life and property have been rendered insecure and the population compelled to devote much of their time and attention to secure these first conditions. Trade and industry have suffered and the natural development of the district forcibly restrained. The severance of Delhi from the Province affords a fitting opportunity to Government to right a grave injustice to Peshawaris, and it lies with the people themselves to take the initiative in the matter."

C. STEAD,

Assistant to the Deputy Inspector General of Police, Criminal Investigation Department, Punjab.

LAHORE:

The 9th March 1912.

Punjab Government Press, Lahore—13-3-12—107—121—C. D.

[ Confidential ]

[ Vol. XXV. ] [ No. 11. ]

SELECTIONS

FROM THE

NATIVE NEWSPAPERS

PUBLISHED IN THE PUNJAB.

Examined up to 16th March 1912.

---

CONTENTS.

Page.

I.—Politics.

(a) Foreign—

1. Preaching of Islam in Japan (Bharat) ... 177
2. The Islamic World (Zamindar) ... ... ib.
3. The Times and the Islamic World (Zamindar) ... ib.
4. Persian and Tripolitan affairs (Zamindar) ... ib.
5. The Turco-Italian War (Zamindar) ... ... 178
6. Ditto ( Ditto ) ... ... ib.
7. Ditto (Observer and Zamindar) ib.

(b) Home—

8. The Military expenditure of India (Akhbar-i-'Am) 179
9. Effects of the Royal visit (Tribune) ... ... ib.
10. Arya Samaj and politics (Harbinger) ... ib.

II.—Afghanistan and Trans-Frontier.

Nil.

III.—Native States.

11. Hyderabad affairs (Paisa Akhbar) ... ... 180
12. Bahawalpur affairs (Mister Gazette)... ... 181

IV.—Kine-killing.

13. Muhammadans and the cow question (Panjabee) 181
14. Prohibition to kill cows in Ajodhya (Afghan) ... ib.

V.—Native Societies and Religious Matters.

15. The All-India Muslim League (Observer) ... 182
16. Complaint against European Soldiers (Paisa Akkbar) ... ... ... ... 183
17. A complaint (Municipal Gazette and Sada-i-Hind) ... ... ... ib.
18. The Hon'ble Mian Muhammad Shafi and the Muhammadan community (Zamindar) ... ib.
19. Dharampal (Indar) ... ... ... ib.
20. An alleged objectionable picture of Guru Nanak (Loyal Gazette) ... ... ... 184
21. The Sikhs and the Tat Khalsa party (Khalsa Advocate) ... ... ... ... ib.

VI.—Legislation.

22. The Medical Registration Bill (Panjabee) ... 185
23. The Punjab Panchayat Bill (Panjabee) ... 186
24. The Delegation Bill (Tribune) ... ... ib.
25. The operations of the Press Act (Tribune) ... ib.

Page.

VII.—General Administration.

(a) Judicial—

26. Sikhs and Munsifships (Loyal Gazette) ... 187
27. The case against the Khan of Hoti (Tribune) ... ib.

(b) Police—

28. Dacoities in the Punjab (Tribune) ... ... 189

(c) Municipal and Cantonment affairs—

Nil.

(d) Education —

29. The Sikh Educational Conference and Native Army (Khalsa Advocate) ... ... ... 189
30. The President of the next Sikh Educational Conference (Khalsa Advocate) ... ... 190
31. The Royal educational grant (Vakil) ... ib.
32. Recent educational grants (Tribune and Paisa Akhbar) ... ... ... ... ib.

(e)—Agriculture and questions affecting the land—

33. The educational grant and the agricultural community (Zamindar) ... ... ... 191

(f) Railways and Communications—

Nil.

(g) Postal matters—

Nil.

(h) Miscellaneous—

34. Budget for 1912-13 (Tribune) ... ... 191
35. The Frontier Province (Punjab Advocate) ... ib.
36. Alleged ill-treatment of some Indian students by some Europeans at Lahore (Jhang Sial) ... ib.
37. The Watan and the Zamindar (Zamindar) ... ib.
38. Security from the Khalsa Sewak (Khalsa Sewak) ib.
39. Ditto ditto (Munir) ... ib.
40. Indians and the Indian Subordinate Medical Service (Panjabee) ... ... ... 193

LIST OF NEWSPAPERS AND PERIODICALS EXAMINED BY THE SPECIAL BRANCH AS IT STOOD ON THE 16TH MARCH 1912.

| No. | Name. | Locality. | Name of Publisher. | Circulation. |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| | ENGLISH. | | | |
| | DAILY. | | | |
| 1 | Tribune ... | Lahore ... | Bihari Lal ... | 1,758 copies. |
| | TRI-WEEKLY. | | | |
| 2 | Panjabee ... | Lahore ... | Mul Chand ... | 2,424 copies. |
| | BI-WEEKLY. | | | |
| 3 | Observer ... | Lahore ... | Nizam-ud-din ... | 1,000 copies. |
| 4 | Punjab Times and Frontier News. | Rawalpindi ... | J. B. Thapur ... | 200 „ |
| | WEEKLY. | | | |
| 5 | Arya Patrika ... | Lahore ... | Devi Chand ... | 650 copies. |
| 6 | Harbinger ... | Do. ... | Durga Parshad ... | 300 „ |
| 7 | Khalsa Advocate ... | Amritsar ... | Bahadar Singh ... | 752 „ |
| | FORTNIGHTLY. | | | |
| 8 | Jijnasu ... | Lahore ... | Ishwar Das ... | ... |
| | MONTHLY. | | | |
| 9 | D. A.-V. College Magazine... | Lahore ... | Saraswati Nath ... | 1,000 copies. |
| 10 | Forman Christian College Notes.* | Do. ... | ... | ... |
| 11 | Practical Medicine* ... | Delhi ... | ... | ... |
| 12 | Punjab Educational Journal | Lahore ... | R. B. Mohan Lal ... | 700 copies. |
| 13 | Punjab Mission News ... | Do. ... | Revd. Wigram ... | 250 „ |
| 14 | Ravi ... | Do. ... | Mr. B. M. Jones ... | ... |
| 15 | Review of Religions ... | Qadian (Gurdaspur) ... | Sadr Anjuman Ahmadia, Qadian. | 800 copies. |
| 16 | Science Grounded Religion... | Lahore ... | Dev Rattan ... | 25 „ |
| 17 | Teacher ... | Dinga (Gujrat) ... | Kanhaya Singh ... | 200 „ |
| | URDU. | | | |
| | DAILY. | | | |
| 18 | Akhbar-i-'Am ... | Lahore ... | Govind Sahai ... | 630 copies. |
| 19 | Paisa Akhbar ... | Do. ... | Abdul Aziz ... | 1,011 „ |
| 20 | Watan ... | Do. ... | Muhammad Insha Alla ... | ... |
| 21 | Zamindar ... | Do. ... | Zafar Ali Khan, B.A. ... | ... |
| | BI-WEEKLY. | | | |
| 22 | Vakil ... | Amritsar ... | Abdul Aziz ... | 1,970 copies. |
| | WEEKLY. | | | |
| 23 | Afghan ... | Peshawar ... | Saiyid Muhammad Abdulla | 500 copies. |
| 24 | Ahl-i-Hadis ... | Amritsar ... | Sanaulla ... | 925 „ |
| 25 | Ahluwalia Gazette ... | Do. ... | Lehna Singh ... | 500 „ |
| 26 | Al-Moin ... | Do. ... | Mehraj-ud-din ... | ... |
| 27 | Army News ... | Ludhiana ... | Hira Lal & Co. ... | 1,300 copies. |
| 28 | Arorbans Gazette ... | Amritsar ... | Labh Singh ... | ... |
| 29 | Arya Gazette ... | Lahore ... | Bhowani Das ... | 550 copies. |
| 30 | Badar ... | Qadian, Gurdaspur District | Muhammad Sadiq ... | 200 „ |

* Not received during the month.

LIST OF NEWSPAPERS AND PERIODICALS EXAMINED BY THE SPECIAL BRANCH AS IT STOOD ON THE 16TH MARCH 1912—CONTINUED.

| No. | Name. | Locality. | Name of Publisher. | Circulation. |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| | URDU—CONTINUED. | | | |
| | WEEKLY—continued. | | | |
| 31 | Bharat ... | Jullundur ... | Thakur Sheoratan Singh | ... |
| 32 | Civil and Military News ... | Ludhiana ... | Saiyid Muhammad ... | 1,325 copies. |
| 33 | Curzon Gazette ... | Delhi ... | Mirza Hairat ... | 111 „ |
| 34 | Delhi Gazette* ... | Do. ... | Sajjad Husain ... | 200 „ |
| 35 | Edward Gazette* ... | Abbott-abad ... | Muhammad Latif ... | 200 „ |
| 36 | Hakam ... | Qadian, Gurdaspur District | Yakub Ali ... | 900 „ |
| 37 | Haq ... | Delhi ... | Kasim Ali ... | 200 „ |
| 38 | Haq Pasand ... | Amritsar ... | Ram Nath ... | 382 „ |
| 39 | Hindu ... | Lahore ... | Hari Lal Sharma ... | ... |
| 40 | Hindustan ... | Do. ... | Ram Sarn Dutt ... | 8,070 copies. |
| 41 | Indar ... | Do. ... | Dharm Pal, B.A. ... | ... |
| 42 | Islam ... | Do. ... | Abdul Latif ... | 200 copies. |
| 43 | Jhang Sial ... | Jhang ... | Prabh Dyal ... | 2,262 „ |
| 44 | Kapurthala Akhbar ... | Kapurthala ... | Hamid Husain ... | 155 „ |
| 45 | Loyal Gazette ... | Lahore ... | Amar Singh ... | 200 „ |
| 46 | Lytton Gazette ... | Delhi ... | Bulaki Das ... | 1,000 „ |
| 47 | Milap* ... | Lyallpur ... | Jawahar Lal ... | ... |
| 48 | Millat ... | Lahore ... | Shuja Ulla ... | 1,500 copies. |
| 49 | Mister Gazette ... | Do. ... | Ali Bakhsh ... | 150 „ |
| 50 | Munir ... | Jhang ... | Hafiz Khuda Bakhsh ... | 200 „ |
| 51 | Musalman ... | Amritsar ... | Sana-ulla ... | 400 „ |
| 52 | Nur ... | Qadian, Gurdaspur District | Muhammad Yusaf ... | 200 „ |
| 53 | Nur Afshan ... | Ludhiana ... | Revd. Dr. E. M. Wherry | 500 „ |
| 54 | Paisa Akhbar ... | Lahore ... | Abdul Aziz ... | 8,377 „ |
| 55 | Parkash ... | Do. ... | Krishan ... | 1,723 „ |
| 56 | Punjab Advocate ... | Mianwali ... | Karm Chand, Bahl ... | 1,000 „ |
| 57 | Punjab Samachar ... | Lahore ... | Hira Lal ... | 705 „ |
| 58 | Rajput Gazette ... | Do. ... | Thakur Sukhram Das ... | 650 „ |
| 59 | Municipal Gazette and Sada-i-Hind. | Do. ... | Din Muhammad ... | 500 „ |
| 60 | Sadiq-ul-Akhbar ... | Bahawalpur ... | Maulvi Ata Ullah ... | 392 „ |
| 61 | Ditto ... | Rewari ... | Safdar Hussain ... | 200 „ |
| 62 | Sanatan Dharm Pracharak... | Amritsar ... | Rulia Ram ... | 200 „ |
| 63 | Shanti ... | Rawalpindi ... | Kishan Chand Mohan ... | 300 „ |
| 64 | Sialkot Paper ... | Sialkot ... | Todar Mal ... | 500 „ |
| 65 | Siraj-ul-Akhbar ... | Jhelum ... | Maulvi Fakir Muhammad | 450 „ |
| 66 | Tahzib-ul-Niswan ... | Lahore ... | Mumtaz Ali ... | 240 „ |

* Not received during the week.

LIST OF NEWSPAPERS AND PERIODICALS EXAMINED BY THE SPECIAL BRANCH AS IT STOOD ON THE 16TH MARCH 1912—CONCLUDED.

| No. | Name. | Locality. | Name of Publisher. | Circulation. |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| | URDU—CONCLUDED. | | | |
| | WEEKLY—concluded. | | | |
| 67 | Victoria Paper ... | Sialkot ... | Gian Chand ... | 600 copies. |
| 68 | Wafadar* ... | Lahore ... | Fazal-ud-din ... | 600 „ |
| 69 | Waqt ... | Do. ... | Ali Husain ... | 200 „ |
| 70 | Watan ... | Do. ... | Muhammad Insha Ullah... | 1,800 „ |
| 71 | Zamindar ... | Do. ... | Zafar Ali Khan, B.A. ... | 750 „ |
| | FORTNIGHTLY. | | | |
| 72 | Biwah Samachar* ... | Lahore ... | Ram Chand ... | 300 copies. |
| 73 | Kam Dhenu ... | Ludhiana ... | Daulat Ram ... | 100 „ |
| 74 | Mohyal Gazette ... | Kala, Jhelum District ... | Mehta Sham Das ... | 250 „ |
| | PERSIAN. | | | |
| | FORTNIGHTLY. | | | |
| 75 | Siraj-ul-Akhbar ... | Kabul ... | Abdul Khalik ... | 3,000 copies. |
| | URDU. | | | |
| | MONTHLY. | | | |
| 76 | Arorbans Parkash* ... | Lahore ... | Salig Ram ... | 200 copies. |
| 77 | Arya Musafir ... | Jullundur ... | Wazir Chand ... | 1,300 „ |
| 78 | Jauhar ... | Amritsar ... | Muhammad Ismail Khan | 200 „ |
| 79 | Kakezai Social Reformer ... | Lahore ... | Fazl Din ... | 200 „ |
| 80 | Makhzan ... | Delhi ... | Abdul Kadir ... | 4,000 „ |
| 81 | Rafiq ... | Lahore ... | Charinji Lal ... | 500 „ |
| 82 | Sadhu ... | Do. ... | Sheobart Lal ... | 500 „ |
| 83 | Martand ... | Do. ... | Kanhya Lal ... | 250 „ |
| 84 | Raghbir Patrika ... | Do. ... | Prab Dial ... | 500 „ |
| 85 | Zaban* ... | Delhi ... | Hamid Hasain ... | 500 „ |
| | GURMUKHI. | | | |
| | WEEKLY. | | | |
| 86 | Khalsa Sewak ... | Amritsar ... | Jiwan Singh ... | 1,000 copies. |
| 87 | Punjab Reporter* ... | Do. ... | Ganda Singh ... | ... |
| 88 | Punjabi Surma ... | Lahore ... | Gian Chand ... | 1,000 copies. |

* Not received during the week.

I.—Politics.

(a)—Foreign.

Preaching of Islam in Japan.

1. The Bharat (Jullundur), of the 8th March 1912, publishes a paragraph headed "Musalmans in Japan." Adverting to the proposal to send a deputation of Punjabi Muhammadans to preach Islam in Japan, it remarks that, at present, Aryas can easily win over the Japanese to the Vedic fold. The task would, however, become very difficult if the Mikado's subjects came under the influence of the false and bigoted tenets of Islam.

The Islamic world.

2. The Zamindar (Lahore), of the 7th March 1912, publishes a communication from one Amir Hasan of Mianapura, Sialkot, headed "The cry of one intoxicated." The writer deplores the present helpless condition of Muhammadans and apostrophises the Prophet to shake off his sleep, place his consoling hand over the wounded hearts of his followers, and raise a loving guide for them.

The Times and the Islamic World.

3. The Zamindar (Lahore), of the 7th March 1912, publishes an article headed "The Times' henchman who has attained his majority (the reference is to the Editor of the Watan)". The Times, it says, cannot bear to see Asiatic races enjoy freedom and prosperity, while it is in the habit of insulting, ridiculing, and humiliating orientals. Again, it has natural antipathy towards Muhammadans and Islamic countries, and all its writings on the subject of the latter breathe a spirit of malice and enmity. It is ever ready to oppose Turkey; while, fearless of God, it pens inimical nonsense regarding the Shah's dominions. Nor does it display any hesitation in bringing its religious bigotry into play to wound the most sacred feelings of Muhammadans. Not long ago it published the "poisonous" assertion that one drop of the blood of a white soldier was more valuable than the independence of Persia. It has now made even a filthier statement, viz., that if Turkey does not quietly make over Tripoli to Italy the last named will raze the Kaaba and the Prophet's tomb to the ground. Although the Editor has not himself read the words, he believes, on the authority of the Nawab Vicar-ul-Mulk, that they must have appeared in the Times. Next he takes the Editor of the Watan to task for having disbelieved the Nawab (vide paragraph 3 of Selections No. 10).

Persian and Tripolitan affairs.

4. The Zamindar (Lahore), of the 7th March 1912, publishes a communication from Muhammad-ul-Wahidi, Editor of the Nizam-ul-Mashaikh (Delhi), headed "Exhibition of dream-thoughts: funeral portraits of Turkey and Persia: a picture of the daily thoughts of Indian Muhammadans." The writer states that, in a recent dream, he saw a deputation of Indian Muhammadans wait upon His Majesty the King Emperor. The spokesman referred to the loyalty of his co-religionists to the British throne and went on to say:—"We have been destroyed. We have been ruined. Thy associates, thy kith and kin (God knows why their disposition is so different from thine) are bent upon injuring us. We are allowed to know no rest . . . we are uneasy in Turkey. We (are) in distress in Persia. Thanks to thee, there is peace in India, still where (can we find) true happiness?

"'When the times cause pain to one limb (of the body)

"'The remaining limbs cannot be at peace!'

"Save us! Take care of us! God has placed thee in a position to do so. Italian aggression has lacerated the hearts of crores of thy (Muhammadan) subjects. The excesses of Russia (in Persia) have been causing them extreme pain; while we cannot describe how we have been affected by the news about (Italy's) advance towards Mecca and Medina. We will weep. We will cry. (We) will fill thy palace with noise. And we have claims on thee. Thou wilt have to do justice to us. All the Muhammadans of the world are not cowards. The Arab's sword, when once drawn, does not return to the scabbard. The Turks are always ready to fight. Back them and see the fun. Or restrain their enemies, and prevent the earth and sky from being filled with smoke, and the river and the sea from being reddened . . . Save the world from a great (and) approaching calamity." The King Emperor replies:—"My dear ones, children (and) friends, the strength of my arm (and) the ornament of my crown! . . . Your demand breathes a spirit of loyalty and love. I, my nation, and my raj love you and appreciate your love. Do not ask what is in my mind and what I am about to do. But rest assured that your hopes will be realised."

The Turco-Italian War.

5. The Zamindar (Lahore), of the 8th March 1912, publishes a note headed "Muhammadans are forced to eat pig's flesh." It says that the Tanin (Constantinople) has published a letter from a Muhammadan prisoner in Italy and that the communication contains a piece of news—a perusal of which makes (one's) eye flash with anger—namely, that the vile Italians are so devilish as to give pork to their helpless Muslim prisoners for food both morning and evening; and that if the latter refuse to eat it they are beaten with bludgeons. After quoting an extract from the letter, the paper remarks that the Turkish Government's cries are not heeded by Europe; while it cannot be expected to force Italians residing in its dominions to eat night-soil. The only thing, then, "we" can do is to respectfully request the British Government to direct Italy, through its ambassador, to treat "our friendless brothers" as human beings. "O God, how long will Thy sense of justice (lit. self-respect) stand these things?"

The Turco-Italian War.

6. The Zamindar (Lahore), of the 13th March 1912, publishes a communication headed "Honour Islam so that God may honour you." The writer, who has withheld his name, urges all classes of Muhammadans to obey the injunctions contained in the Quran. Only those persons, he adds, were invited to the recent Darbar at Delhi who have, in the opinion of the authorities, always served their sovereign well. Continuing, he asks:—"Do you fear God and the Prophet as much as the secular authorities? Do you respect them as you do your worldly masters? No, by no means. It is then evident how you will fare in this and the next world . . . . . Those who are mad after worldly honours can have no claims to honour in the court of the true Emperor." Continuing, the writer states how the students of the Aligarh College abjured toothsome dishes in order to render pecuniary help to Muhammadan sufferers in Tripoli. Next he urges his co-religionists to love and revere God, and to wage jehad in His name—than which there can be no higher worship. Their engaging themselves in this jehad means that they should establish Anjumans in every city to collect funds in aid of the sufferers referred to.

The Turco-Italian War.

7. Writing on the subject of the recent Press Communiqué regarding rumours of the intention of the Italians to blockade Jeddah and Yambu, the Observer (Lahore), of the 12th instant, declares that England has at last amply justified the confidence of the Muslim races in her love of fair play and determination to respect the feelings of her Muhammadan subjects. "Read between the lines", says the "Observer" "the words of the Communiqué demonstrate that England has not only given a broad hint to Italy, but has set her foot down and warned Italy against the attempt to blockade the ports of the holy places of Islam."

The Zamindar (Lahore), of the 12th March 1912, has a note headed "Government Communiqué about the blockade of Jeddah and Yembu." After publishing a translation of the above document, the paper remarks that this is perhaps the first occasion on which the British Government has used its influence with a Foreign Government out of regard for the feelings of Muhammadans, who cannot, therefore, feel too thankful. As to those Musalmans who branded the Editor's conduct in connection with the blockade as seditious, he can only pray that they may become true followers of the Prophet, and may be enabled to profit by those blessings of British Rule which every Muhammadan can secure.

(b)—Home.

The Military expenditure of India.

8. Writing under the heading "India's Military expenditure," the Akhbar-i-'Am (Lahore), of the 13th March 1912, says that, although the expenditure is undoubtedly very excessive, still it must be put up with. The bulk of it, adds the paper, is spent on the British garrison in India; but this is highly necessary. It also advises the leaders of the National Congress to abstain from criticising the Military Department in order to promote confidence (? between Government and the people). Next it contends that the present strength of the white army is as nothing in comparison with the requirements of the Indian Empire.

Effects of the Royal Visit.

9. The Tribune (Lahore), of 13th March 1912, publishes the following letter under the heading "A most salutary effect of the Royal visit":—

"Sir,—A most salutary effect of the Royal Visit to this country has been the greater unification of the Princes and People of India. This has not been very largely noticed so far, but three most prominent instances of it have been witnessed since the departure of their Imperial Majesties from Indian shores.

"The first was when H. H. the Maharaja of Bikaner presided at a meeting connected with the Hindu University at Calcutta, and by his noble action and speech proved that the cause of Indian States was at one with that of the whole of India and that it was in the fitness of things that the great feudatories and subjects of a common sovereign should give united support to movements calculated to promote national well-being.

"The second manifestation of the effect was evidenced when the leading ruling Princes of the country, irrespective of caste or creed, joined with the non-official members of the Viceroy's Council, who represent the interests of British India in the Supreme Legislature, in sending a message of cordial 'goodwill and fellowship' to the British nation, and an expression of their profound loyalty and devotion to the Person and Throne of His Imperial Majesty.

"A third instance of this effect is to be found in an order, dated the 27th ultimo, of H. H. the Gaekwar's Government, against sedition, in which the Maharaja very rightly says that the interests of Native States are inseparably bound with those of British India. Let us hope that many more instances of this unity of feeling between the Princes and people of India will be forthcoming in the near future, and that it will not be in vain to look forward to a repetition of the great event which was fraught with so much wisdom and foresight and was responsible for considerable happiness and tranquillity to the people of this land.

SHIVACHARAN LAL,

Moradabad."

Arya Samaj and politics.

10. The following is from the Harbinger (Lahore), of 14th March 1912:—

"Lala Dharm Pal has broached the question of the Arya Samaj members' declaration of loyalty to the Government, which was proposed originally by the Multan Arya Samaj and seconded by me. The Arya Gazette, the Prakash, the Hindustan, and the Karam Jogin howled at it. A retired Extra Assistant Commissioner wrote a fearful letter against me in the Panjabee. One of the clerks of Postmaster-General's office stood up in the Antarang Sabha to move a resolution of censure against me for writing a letter to His Honour to save the Antarang Sabha. But in place of that another, of the same office, moved a resolution against me, which was passed by majority, I alone dissenting. As a great many Arya Samajes follow suit, the question is not likely to get a majority on its side. But Lala Dharam Pal has brought out some facts to light, which implicate all concerned in politics under the umbrage of religion. Hence he expects to gain a majority of those who wish to side with religion.

"The administrative report of 1910 classes Messrs. Munshi Ram and Ram Deo's book, called the Arya Samaj and its detractors, with political books. It is made of reports of the Patiala case of sedition printed in the Civil and Military Gazette and other papers which are political papers. Consequently it cannot be a religious book. It is not understood why the Arya Samajes have purchased and sold it. It is also not known what effect Lala Munshi Ram, Governor of Gurukul, wants to produce from publishing Napoleon's life, which is decidedly against the English.

"No Arya Samaj teaches my Vedic Readers to any of its school. I forced them upon its girls' school here as I had to teach. But they were excluded on my severance from the school. Lala Dharm Pal, therefore, is not wide of the mark when he says that the Arya Samaj has failed under its present leaders to preach the religion of the Vedas. It is probably on this account that several proposals have been made to me to start another religious society or Samaj. But as it is sure to take up my time of translating the Vedas, which is already very little from some causes, I cannot make up my mind to vindicate the religion of the Vedas in this way. The pleasant politics have overcome the stern morals of the Vedas. God save the mark!"

III.—Native States.

Hyderabad affairs.

11. The Paisa Akhbar (Lahore), of the 5th March 1912, publishes an article headed "Cry of the subjects of Hyderabad—No. 1." In the course of his remarks the writer refers to the circumstances which led to the Government of India lending the services of some European officers for the improvement of the administration of Hyderabad. The plan, he adds, was that departments closely connected with the people's well-being should be put under European supervision until they were reformed, and until the State itself could supply competent men. Accordingly, the Resident plainly told the Prime Minister that the aforesaid Europeans had been selected from the best officers of Government; that their high administrative ability would enable them to reform the various State departments in a very short time; and that it would not take them long to train State youths to take their place. After remarking that this is why their services were borrowed for five years only, the writer says that to "our" misfortune Mr. Walker was the only officer who belonged to the Indian Civil Service; most of the rest being members of that class which is considered to be the scum of European society.

Continuing his remarks in the paper's issue dated the 9th March 1912, the writer says that this new policy on the part of Government naturally caused deep suspicion and anxiety among the State subjects. Every one, he adds, felt alarmed at the State being placed under alien officers; and it will appear on reflection that this feeling was not unjustifiable. When Government is dissatisfied with the management of a State and considers the Indian officers concerned incapable of mending matters, it appoints Europeans to all higher posts of responsibility, and, in a manner, takes the administration directly in its own hands. The subjects of Hyderabad began then to enquire whether their State also had been placed under the supervision of Government. As to considerations of race, they form a law of nature. The confidence a people can repose in, and the sympathy it can expect from persons belonging to its own ranks cannot be looked for from aliens. The British Government is very generous and broadminded; but at the same time confers all posts of trust and responsibility under it on men of its own nationality. It is, therefore, the constant endeavour of Indians that higher posts (in the country) should be conferred, not upon Europeans, but on the children of the soil. The writer then goes on to say that, with the spread of education in Hyderabad and the increase of able men, the State subjects began to feel dissatisfied with the policy of Government referred to. Those of them who had worked hard and had spent their parents' hard-earned money in England with the sole object of fitting themselves for service in the State could not gain their ends, and were led to raise an outcry. They said:—"The sway of Europeans extends from the East to West, (and) they can earn their bread every where. Our sole refuge, however, is in this State, and if all its appointments go to Europeans, where should we betake ourselves?" To cap all, the principle on which Europeans were said to have been appointed in the State also came to be lost sight of. Every post given to a European became his for life. The period of his service in the State was extended again and again; while he was also given an increase of pay (witness the case of Mr. Walker). But this is not all. In the event of his going away he was succeeded by another European; while in some cases Indians who had rendered eminent services were replaced by Europeans for no reason. For instance, Mr. Muhammad Sadiq, who did very good work in the Post Office, was replaced by Mr. Knox Homan. All this rendered the people uneasy, and they began to say: "(The services of) Europeans were borrowed only temporarily for the training of State subjects. What sort of a training is this, however, that it cannot be completed even in two generations? The police have been under a European officer for full thirty years; while the Finance Department has been supervised by a European for nearly a quarter of a century. But even in this period State subjects have not become efficient enough to be placed in charge of these departments." They were naturally led to conclude that, just as Government keeps the police in British India under the supervision of Europeans from political considerations, it had taken the police administration of Hyderabad also into its own hands.

Bahawalpur affairs.

12. The Mister Gazette (Lahore), of the 29th February (received on the 14th March) 1912, has a note entitled: "Irregularities in the Bahawalpur State." Connections of the President of the (Regency) Council, it says, continue securing employment simultaneously with their arrivals in the State. The claims even of able State subjects, however, are passed over, and there is no one to redress their grievances. After asking Government to have the matter enquired into through the Resident, the paper alleges that, should any State subject chance to enter the public service, plans are devised to turn him out; and he is sent about his business in the end.

IV.—Kine-killing.

Muhammadans and the cow question.

13. The following is from the Panjabee (Lahore), of 9th March 1912:—

"At the next meeting of the Punjab Legislative Council to be held on the 13th instant, the Hon'ble Khan Sahib Sayad Mahdi Shah will ask what the Government is doing to help the agriculturists to breed plough cattle for their own requirements. The number of cattle, plough or milch, in the Province is rapidly decreasing, and scarcity and famine are becoming more numerous as a consequence. The Hindus who feel most keenly in the matter are handicapped in the way of achieving anything solid by the indifference amounting sometimes to positive opposition shown by the Muhammadan community. It is, however, encouraging to find a ray of light in the Muslim attitude. One of them has found it necessary to ask for Government aid in breeding cattle. It shows the people have come, after all, to realise that the protection of cattle and the improving of the breed is not a religious question or a thing that concerns the Hindus alone, but the economic prosperity of the Muhammadan agriculturists as well depends to a large extent on it. We, therefore, welcome this new spirit but we fail to understand the appeal for State aid. To some extent the remedy lies in the hands of the Muhammadans themselves and if the reckless slaughter of cows is stopped the matter will have been greatly solved. In addition to this other efforts may be put forth, but where is the virtue of asking for cattle breeding and protection on one side and continuing cow-killing, even in prime life, on the other? Will Muhammadans consider their attitude without prejudice?"

Prohibition to kill cows in Ajudhya.

14. The Afghan (Peshawar), of the 1st (received on the 13th) March 1912, has an article headed "Practical working (lit. picture) of Hindu Swaraj in British territory." It begins by quoting a long extract from the Kaisar-i-Hind, of Fyzabad (United Provinces), which complains that the Muhammadans of Ajudhya are prevented from killing, nay, even from sacrificing, cows in their town. Commenting on the same, the paper remarks that the complaint leaves no doubt as to the nature of the intentions of Hindus, who, after making efforts to banish Urdu and Persian from the country with a view to having the doors of Government service closed in the face of the Prophet's followers, have now become so emboldened as to zealously take in hand the work of preventing Muhammadans from eating what is lawful food for them. After asking why Government does not cry a halt to the improper wishes of Hindus, the paper enquires what right the latter have to prevent Musalmans from taking a lawful article of food, especially when the latter are (like their co-religionists of Ajudhya) willing to restrict its sale to their own Mohallas. In conclusion it hopes that Government will do what is required in the matter; adding that the very existence of Muhammadans is a thorn in the side of Hindus.

V.—Native Societies and Religious Matters.

The All-India Muslim League.

15. The following is from the Observer (Lahore), of 13th March 1912:—

"The last session of the All-India Muslim League held in Calcutta has been a remarkable one from many standpoints. The number of visitors which it drew was perhaps unprecedented in the annals of the League, and bore eloquent testimony to the increasing interest which the community is taking in the affairs of the country at large and of the Musalmans in particular. The independence of tone displayed by most of the speakers, as free from flattery or timorousness as from sedition or attribution of sinister motives to Government, was also worthy of notice. True loyalty, as was pointed out in the course of the proceedings, consists in interpreting the genuine feelings of the people to the Government, in apportioning praise where praise is due and fearlessly bringing forward grievances where complaints are real. That the League discharged this duty faithfully at its Calcutta session even its opponents will admit. What, however, should be welcomed by all lovers of India is the fact that the League, unlike some of the newly started communal political associations, did not content itself with voicing the grievances of the Musalman community only or looking at everything through merely denominational spectacles. The resolutions on the status of Indians in South and East Africa, on indentured Indian labour, on the age limit for the Civil Service examination, on religious endowments, on the employment of Indians in the public service and in the army, and on elementary education, should strengthen the hands of all patriots who have the welfare of the country at heart, convincing the antagonists of the League that the Indian Muhammadans, though occupying a different political platform and having an 'extra-territorial' patriotism, are not unmindful of the precept of their Prophet, that the love of his country is part of a Musalman's creed, an article of his faith. A further remarkable feature of the session was the mature deliberation which was brought to bear on most of the questions before the League. The resolutions had been discussed in the subjects-committee not in such a way as to stifle public discussion. The pros and cons of Mr. Gokhale's Bill, the question of religious endowments, the Wakf-alal-Aulad Bill and communal representation on Local and Municipal Boards were considered impartially and every opportunity was given to those opposed to the resolutions to state their views at their ease. Thus though the speeches did not display very high oratorical effort, though they were not marked by striking phrases, yet they were, on the whole remarkable for pithiness and pregnant with convincing arguments.

"The one speech perhaps which was looked forward to with the keenest interest was the presidential address of the Nawab Bahadur of Dacca. In view of Lord Curzon's allusion to the new honour conferred on the premier nobleman of Eastern Bengal and his remarks in connection with the Partition, it was expected that some dramatic disclosures might be made. The Nawab's address showed clearly that, like his co-religionists in other parts of India, he felt deeply on the subject of the reversal of the Partition and that Lord Crewe's remarks had not deterred him from publicly avowing his sentiments. The President of the last session of the League is a gentleman of deeply religious inclinations. His speeches and his share in the proceedings, both at the Bengal Muhammadan Presidency Association meeting and the League, impressed one as coming from a sincere Muslim, a bold man and a lovable personality, and gave the secret of his well-deserved popularity with all with whom he comes into contact. The Nawab does not know how to beat about the bush. Some of his remarks have no doubt given offence to certain non-Muslims, but it would be mere hypocrisy to say that they do not represent the views of the majority of his co-religionists. Though at places somewhat strongly-worded, his address was at once thougtful, comprehensive and manly. He was carrying all his audience with him in his condemnation of the annulment of the Partition and its effects on the popular mind. But what the monopolists of official loaves and fishes will perhaps dislike most in their heart of hearts is his demolition of the fiction that Muhammadans were being favoured in Eastern Bengal at the expense of the Hindus. The Nawab showed that more unqualified Hindus held Government posts than Musalmans, and that the termagant had managed to extort more benefits than the avowedly favourite wife. As for the Dacca University, it was made quite clear, both by the Nawab and other speakers, that the Indian Musalmans welcome it, not as Muslims but as Indians, that they do not regard it as fully redeeming the pledges of safeguarding the educational interests of the Muhammadans which have been threatened by the reversal of the Partition, but they approve of the proposal as being in the best interests of the country and as likely to help in the educational advance of the backward classes in Eastern Bengal. The unanimity and enthusiasm that marked the carrying of the resolutions about Tripoli and Persia are further proof, if further proof were necessary, that the Indian Muhammadans have only one voice in these international matters; while the discussions on the Elementary Education Bill and Mr. Jinnah's Bill show decisively that the measures have the support of an overwhelming majority of the thinking portion of the community. As for the separate representation of Muhammadans on Local and District Boards, the most striking contribution to the subject was from a Congressman. Maulvi Abdul Qasim showed how the Hindu-dominated Municipality of Burdwan had lately put serious obstacles in the way of Musalmans eating meat, how the repeated requests of recognised Bengalee leaders, and even the threats of the Provincial Government had proved in vain and how the Municipal Committee had alone surrendered to force majeure. These facts, coming as they do from a Congressman, deserve to be noticed carefully by our friends who are so fond of prating about the identity of Hindu and Muslim interests in the Local and Municipal boards."

Complaint against European soldiers.

16. The Paisa Akhbar (Lahore), of the 7th March 1912, pnblishes a communication from one Muhammad Shahbir Hussain, of Marharah in the Etah district. The writer says that some time back he paid a visit to the Taj, and that it made his hair stand on end to see some European soldiers going about the compound of the attached mosque with their shoes on. He has also heard that Goras behave in the same manner even in the mosques in the forts at Agra and Delhi. He would, therefore, most respectfully request Government to reassure Muhammadans by attending to the matter.

A complaint.

17. The Municipal Gazette and Sada-i-Hind (Lahore), of the 5th March 1912, has a note entitled "Worthy of the attention of Government." The paper understands that the site of the new capital includes a tract of land which contains (a number of) mosques, shrines, tombs and "other historical buildings", the existence of which is a source of great consolation to Muhammadans. It is no exaggeration to say, it adds, that the Prophet's followers will feel highly disappointed at the effacement of the above monuments. It, therefore, expresses the hope that Government will not demolish any building in which Musalmans take special interest.

The Hon'ble Mian Muhammad Shafi and the Muhammadan community.

18. The Zamindar (Lahore), of the 8th March 1912, has an article headed "The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur Mian Muhammad Shafi as interpreter of Islam." The paper has frequently requested the Mian to voice the real feelings of his community in Government Councils and to avoid bringing forward (lit. depending on) his personal opinions on every occasion. He recently promised that he would be more careful in future, and would not run counter to the unanimous voice of Muhammadans in any matter. After regretting that he should not have stuck to his word, the paper takes exception to his conduct in having opposed, in defiance of the unanimous wishes of his co-religionists, the Elementary Education Bill at the meeting of the All-India Muslim League recently held at Calcutta.

Dharampal.

19. The Indar (Lahore), of the 8th March 1912, quotes an extract from the Sat Dharm Parcharak, dated the 28th ultimo, about the removal of the Editor's name from the list of the members of the Karnal Arya Samaj. Commenting on the same he remarks that this does not matter much; seeing that he is a member of half-a-dozen other Arya Samajes, and that, so long as he believes in the ten principles of the Samaj, no one can expel him from the Arya community. As regards the statement that he cannot be called an Arya because he writes against the Gurukula and its Governor, he wishes to point out that it is not essential for an Arya to "believe in" either of the two. Continuing, he says that, finding themselves unable to reply to his writings, his opponents have begun to appeal to Government to take notice of the same. It, however, constitutes no legal offence to acquaint the public with the commission of self-abuse, sodomy, theft, fraud, &c., at an educational institution with a view to having it reformed or preventing people from sending their children to it. The real object of those who are making the above appeal is to prevent the Editor from exposing what is being done at the Gurukula to revive "Kshatriya practices." He is, however, of opinion that if the Gurukula turns out Kshatriyas like the biographer of Napoleon Bonaparte, the ideas associated with the French Revolution will be more likely to be disseminated in the country than a knowledge of the Vedas. It is, moreover, possible that, having been fed on such revolutionary literature, the country may become a seething sea of unrest at some future time. It is, therefore, desirable that, in order to promote friendly relations between the Arya Samaj and Government, there should be raised a voice against all things like those referred to. Those who oppose the Editor are in favour of the dissemination of revolutionary literature from the Gurukula, i.e., they consider the dissemination of revolutionary ideas beneficial for the country, especially the Arya Samaj. In conclusion, the Editor says that in all probability, Government must have noted why he has been expelled from the Karnal Arya Samaj, why the office-bearers of that Samaj evade signing the pledge-sheet designed by him, and why the Governor of the Gurukula has turned against him.

An alleged objectionable picture of Guru Nanak.

20. The Loyal Gazette (Lahore), of the 10th March 1912, publishes a paragraph headed "An innovation by (our Hindu) fellow-countrymen." It reports that the Mahratta (Poona) has published a portrait of Guru Nanak in its issue of the 3rd instant. The picture is objectionable in the extreme; seeing that the Guru is shown to be without long hair and wearing a cap like those used by common Babus in the Punjab. After remarking that it must have been supplied to the Mahratta by some mischievous person, the paper urges the Chief Khalsa Diwan to move in the matter.

The Sikhs and the Tat Khalsa party.

21. The following is from the Khalsa Advocate (Amritsar), dated 1st March 1912:—

"We feel that just a word of protest is called for against the way our Arya Samajist neighbours have lately got into the habit of ironically designating the Singh Sabha movement and the progressive section of the community as Tat Khalsas. The words Tat Khalsa were used at the time when Baba Banda wanted to raise a class of followers, who, against the practices observed by the Sikhs, were led to respect certain ceremonies of the Beragies. The protestants against such things were called Tat Khalsas and those who followed Baba Banda in his teachings were called Bandai Khalsa. This distinction has disappeared from among the Sikhs long time since there is now no party called Tat Khalsa among the Sikhs. But our good neighbours have gone farther and attempted to insinuate that this imaginary party which, as we have pointed out, has long ceased to exist in any capacity and never existed in that imputed by them, is led by the Hon'ble Sardar Sundar Singh, Majithia. This, at any rate, serves to throw light on what the Aryas mean by the anachronism of Tat Khalsas, for it is the Chief Khalsa Diwan with which the Hon'ble Sirdar Sundar Singh, Majithia, is intimately connected as its Secretary. Now this Diwan is nothing more than a society for preaching Sikh tenets, for defending the interests of the Sikhs in general. There are several instances in which the Chief Khalsa Diwan has defended the cause of the community at large without regard to the particular section of the Sikhs whose interests were at stake The preachers of the Chief Khalsa Diwan are at full liberty to give out what they understand of Sikhism. The schools affiliated with the Educational Committee of the Chief Khalsa Diwan are at full liberty to employ any class of Sikh religious teachers. Its orphanages are open to all sorts of Sikh and Hindu boys and its efforts to serve the Sikh Gurdwaras are made with a view to advancing the interests of such Gurdwaras, irrespective of whether they belong to Udasis, Nirmalas, Nihangs, Sahibzadas or any other section of the Sikhs. The members of the Chief Khalsa Diwan are fully aware that difference of opinion in matters of religious ceremonies and practices do take place in every community. The only means of cementing all members of the community is love and toleration. Hence the Chief Khalsa Diwan has never entered into the details of religious ceremonies, rituals, etc. Whenever any representation of the Sikhs was made to the Government the Chief Khalsa Diwan has always invited distinguished Sikh personages to join the deputations regardless of the fact whether such gentlemen had ever been members of the Society. Under the circumstances no effort has been made to create any particular party among the Sikhs. The task of reformation, however, is an uphill one, hence the gentlemen, whose personal interests are compromised by such reformation, have been trying from time to time to impute motives to the honest work of the Chief Khalsa Diwan. The fancying of a certain party among the Sikhs and sarcastically naming it Tat Khalsas is the latest and crowning effort of their imagination. Those who understand matters can easily see, however, that the work of reformation as undertaken by the Chief Khalsa Diwan consists in making the Sikh public know what their religious and social rules demand of them. These ordinances are clearly set forth in the Guru Granth Sahib and the Rahat Namas in simple Panjabi words which the Sikhs can understand without difficulty. They are left to form their own opinions and if they follow the teachings of the Gurus they cannot be considered to belong to a particular party. Let us hope that the gentlemen who, for reasons best known to them, have habituated themselves to calling the Sikhs Tat Khalsas will now understand that their effort in this respect is grossly misleading for every one concerned and that they had better revise the motives which have impelled them to take this perverted view of the Chief Khalsa Diwan."

VI.—Legislation.

The Medical Registration Bill.

22. The following is from the Panjabee (Lahore), of 12th March 1912 :—

"* * * * We have no hesitation in saying that the Bill, if passed into law, will supply a long-felt want and serve a great purpose. There is hardly any civilized country in the world without some sort of legislation like this, which is intended to protect the interests of the profession as well as save the public at large from the unchecked depredations of quacks and mountebanks. It is, in fact, a great wonder why something of the kind has not been done so far in the country. The need for such a restrictive and protective measure was not so great in Europe because there is not such a variety of conflicting systems, and yet there is hardly any country in that continent without some provision for the registration of medical practitioners. In India, where three great systems of treatment prevail and where the teaching of Oriental systems of medicine has never been regulated by the State, the need for such a measure is much more pressing. The existing state of affairs, in fact, is not only dangerous for public health, but is simply disgraceful and scandalous. Every street is full of quacks who trade upon the names of their ancestors, and, finding no scope, for the exercise of their skill and the sale of their nostrums, they readily resort to advertisement, which is the last ready refuge of mountebanks and swindlers. * * * * *

"The proposal has, however, another side, and if carried out without any amendments will cause a great mischief. It will, with one blow, destroy all that is left of the Ayurvedic and Unani systems of medicine. There is no doubt that a vast majority of those who follow these systems are quacks, but so are the majority of Sanyasis who roam about in ochre robes and infest all places of pilgrimage. No one will, however, suggest that the system of Sanyas is an evil and must be altogether abolished. In spite of the fact that there are very few men who really understand the ancient systems of medicine, and that those systems are not recognised by the Government, no one who has any knowledge or experience of the systems can be so bold as to maintain seriously that the systems are not worth preserving. The national sentiment, the peculiarities of the Indian temperament, the marvellous cheapness of indigenous drugs as well as the recognised efficacy of many of them are some of the grounds on which one can reasonably plead for the continuance of these systems. Most allopaths no doubt deny them the very name of a system, but experts are not wanting who, knowing both the Western and the Eastern systems, have pronounced high eulogies on the latter and have recognised their great intrinsic worth. It is, therefore, only necessary to reform—not abolish them altogether. Absence of State patronage, want of training and the hypocrisy and fraud of many of its professors have brought a great blot on the fair name of the healing art of the ancient Hindus and Greeks. All efforts should be made to remove this blot, but, as an Indian poet puts it, do not wash it so hard that you may destroy the cloth as well as the stain.

"The Bill should, therefore, be so modified as to avoid its working with indiscriminate hardship on really able men who possess genuine knowledge of the theory and practice of the ancient systems. For the charlatan who puts up his signboard after buying a copy of the Dar-ul-Shifa, we have as little sympathy as for a man who may claim to be a lawyer after going through a catalogue of law-books, but both among the Unanis and the Vaidyas there are men possessed of sound learning, vast experience and great skill, whom it would be cruel and suicidal to destroy. The law should therefore be so modified as to exempt from its evil effects such men, as well as to leave some scope for future genuine additions to their number. The first object can be achieved by introducing some such provision as, for example, would entitle practitioners of ten years' standing to go on the Register or by providing that practitioners of a certain standing would be registered at the recommendation of a University or District Magistrate or Civil Surgeon or two Professors in a Government Medical College.

"The other object, that of letting in new element, can be gained by recognising the diploma-holders of certain well-known Medical Schools as duly qualified men who may be registered either at once or after a few years' apprenticeship under some registered practitioners. There are many such schools in India, e.g., the classes in the D. A.-V. College and Islamia College, Lahore, the Medical Schools of Delhi and Lucknow, the Ayurveda Colleges at Jaipur, Madras and Calcutta, and so on. Even half a dozen such schools in the country would be sufficient. The Medical Colleges in India teaching Allopathy are not more than five in number. In this way the object of the legislation, viz., the weeding of the Medical profession, will be fully accomplished without causing any real harm to the ancient systems of the Hindus and Muhammadans. It will, moreover, give a strong impetus to the growth of the indigenous system and the development of the schools whose efficiency and prosperity will be sure to increase with the increasing number of the scholars who must flock to them from all parts of India to qualify themselves for the profession. For it must be understood that, howsoever unpalatable such legislation may be to the Vaidyas and Hakims, it is a necessity and is sure to come, and sooner or later other provincial Governments are bound to follow the example set by Bombay."

23. In the course of a leading article in its issue of 14th March 1912 the Panjabee (Lahore), remarks that :—

The Punjab Panchayat Bill.

"The attitude of the Punjab Government towards the recommendations of the Decentralization Commission has certainly not been marked by any bias of partiality or immoderate enthusiasm. Such recommendations as involve delegation of power to itself have been taken up with avidity, while others involving extension of local self-government have been quietly ignored. During the final passage of the Punjab Municipal Act, the Lieutenant-Governor made some explanatory observations as to why it had not been possible to incorporate some of the recommendations of the Decentralization Commission in the Act. His Honour said that the Bill (now passed into Act) was framed before the recommendations of the Commission were available and that it was not possible to recast the Bill and give it a new shape and form. The assurance that there is no finality in legislation was given, but it is certainly not a very comforting assurance, specially when a measure containing some retrograde provisions has been forced down our throats. The avidity with which the Amending Bill to the Punjab Land Revenue Act has been introduced into the Punjab Legislative Council is another instance of the eagerness of the Executive to adopt measures for the enhancement of its powers.

"The Punjab Panchayat Bill is, however, a notable exception. It is a move in the right direction, though its scope is extremely limited. It is an attempt, though on very modest lines, to introduce the beginnings or to revive the relics (as we should prefer to say) of the Panchayat trial system. It is true that the original Bill was not free from defects. Some of them we had occasion to point out when the Bill was introduced into the Council last year. It is a matter of regret that the Bill is confined to mere assistance in the administration of civil justice. It is a pity that the Bill is not as extensive in its scope as its sister measure introduced in the Bombay Legislative Council. We are aware of the objections brought forward by Mr. Fenton against enlarging the scope of the Bill. But they are neither formidable nor insuperable. We find that it is a good measure, though its twin sister, the Punjab Village Criminal Benches Bill is not so on account of its many retrograde features."

After discussing changes in the original Bill, which have been made by the Select Committee, the article concludes with the following remarks : —

"There are, however, certain matters in which the provisions are, to our view, susceptible of further improvement. We shall indicate them in our next article. Meanwhile, we must express our sense of appreciation of the sympathetic and liberal manner in which official members left every modification to the discretion and judgment of non-officials. The latter had a majority in the Select Committee and they have fully justified, as we trust the official members will admit, the confidence placed on them."

24. The following is from the Tribune (Lahore), of 13th March 1912 :—

The Delegation Bill.

"The welcome news of the abandonment of the General Delegation Bill in its present form shows that even the ingenious interpretation put upon the 'safeguards' by the Government was unconvincing to the Select Committee. Every one appreciated the desire of the Government of India to free itself from a mass of correspondence with Local Governments, but nobody, and presumably not even the officials, could support the view of the Government, that the object of the legislature in creating a distinction between the sanctioning authority and the executing authority should be defeated. The obliteration of this distinction was the weakest point in the Bill now wisely decided to be abandoned, and persistence on the part of the Government in its course would have stirred popular opposition to an extent unknown to Government at present. The sense of security felt by the commonest people lies in this : that if the man on the spot errs, there is a higher authority to be appealed to. Surely the Government is not unaware of the satisfaction derived by the people from the provision of a right of appeal from one to another to the highest authority, whether or not that right is exercised in every case. This being so, in the estimation of the people it would be little short of a calamity to issue, as proposed, a blank cheque to Local Governments, when they are not subject to an effective control of the chosen representatives of the people. It is to be fervently hop d that the fresh Bill to be brought forward by the Government of India will provide for the transfer of its power to the Local Legislative Councils."

25. Commenting on the return showing the cases in which action had been taken by the different Local Governments under the Press Act of 1910, supplied by the

The operation of the Press Act.

Government of India in answer to Mr. Gokhale's question in the Legislative Council, the Tribune (Lahore), of 14th March 1912, remarks :—

" * * * It is possibly pertinent to inquire what purpose the action of the Administration served in proscribing in the North-West Frontier Province the Tamil newspapers called India and Suryodaya, the Gujarati book called Hind Swarajya, the Marathi speeches of Messrs. Tilak and Paranjpe, and a number of Bengali publications We can understand the smuggling of foreign leaflets and papers vid the Persian Gulf by the North-West Frontier Province; but publications written in Tamil and Telugu, in Marathi and Gujarati are certainly not likely to find their way to the Frontier Province. It is by the indiscriminate inclusion of such publications that the list has been eked out and an appearance of an organised revolution given to the misdeeds of a few mad men in some parts of the country. The bare statement that the speeches of Mr. Tilak have been brought under the Press Act in the Frontier Province and in the Punjab conveys to outsiders the erroneous impression that there are people in these two provinces who read and understand Marathi.

"Although these mistakes are less numerous in Bombay, Bengal, the Punjab and the United Provinces, the guiding principle in proscribing publications is most incomprehensible. The publication called Bande Mataram of Geneva (10th September and 10th October 1909) was proscribed by all Governments except by those of Bombay, Bengal, United Provinces and the Punjab. Mustafa Kamil Pasha's speech (a book) was not proscribed by the United Provinces, the Punjab and the Eastern Bengal and Assam where it must have been read with great interest. The Indian Sociologist (newspaper) has not been proscribed by the United Provinces, so also the Gaelic American (a newspaper). Madras includes the Indian Sociologist in its index expurgatorius, but excludes the Gaelic American, as also the Swaraj (magazine). Har Dayal's 'Social Conquest of Hindu Race' is forfeit in all the Provinces except in the United Provinces and the Punjab, the home of the author. The Indian Sociologist for March 1910 is bad enough to be brought under the Act by all Governments except Madras, Bombay, Bengal and the Punjab. Indian Home Rule (a book in English by Mr. M. K. Gandhi) has been condemned by all Governments except Madras, Bengal, the United Provinces and the Punjab. Methods of the Indian Police in the 20th Century (a pamphlet by Mr. Mackarness) has been exempted by Madras, the Punjab and the North-West Frontier Province. It is no use lengthening this list by a multiplication of instances, but enough has been said to show the varying and often puzzling standard by which Local Governments distinguish the permissible from the forbidden. There is also the question whether the Government has been able to seize anywhere any of the proscribed publications or whether in spite of the proscription they are being read in secret. However that may be it is scandalous that the names of men like Mr. Mackarness and Mr. M. K. Gandhi should be included in the black list of certain Governments while other Governments have apparently seen nothing so dangerous in their writings as to call for proscription."

VII. – General Administration.

(a)—Judicial.

Sikhs and Munsifships.

26. The Loyal Gazette (Lahore), of the 10th March 1912, remarks that there is not a single Hindu among the eight persons recently selected by the Chief Court, Punjab, as candidates for the post of Munsif. Apparently, it adds, there are more Hindu than Muhammadan Munsifs in this province, and the Hon'ble Judges are desirous of equalising their numbers. The paper then asserts that the numerical strength of Sikhs in the Punjab gives them a claim to at least twenty appointments; whereas, as a matter of fact, there an only four or five Sikh Munsifs. The article concludes with an expression of hope that the Hon'ble Judges of the Chief Court will rectify matters.

The case against the Khan of Hoti.

27. The following is from the Tribune (Lahore), of 13th March 1912 :—

"To-day we publish the two orders of the District Magistrate of Peshawar in this case. It must be clearly borne in mind that the proceedings in the North-West Frontier Province are quite distinct from the proceedings in Bombay and the proceedings at Peshawar must not be treated as part of the proceedings of the whole case. * * * * The communications between the Bombay Government and the North-West Frontier Province Administration are not easy to understand. It should have been entirely a matter between the police of Bombay and the police of the Frontier Province, or a warrant from Bombay sent for execution to Mardan. However, we need not pause to enquire into the nature of the correspondence that passed. The Commissioner of Police, Bombay, took action against King and his wife. That action, we may take it, must have been the issue of warrants by the Chief Presidency Magistrate. In point of fact those warrants were not executed by the Frontier Police but the Punjab Police, the Kings as well as the girls living at that time at Rawalpindi. The Commissioner of Police forwarded at the same time a statement made by one of the girls—not both, it should be noted—probably to himself. This statement must have been forwarded to the Bombay Government who sent it to the N.-W. F. P. Administration.

"These papers were sent to the District Magistrate, Peshawar, for necessary action, if any. What action could that Magistrate take? In the first paragraph of his order he says Khan Bahadur Khwaja Muhammad Khan, commonly known as the Khan of Hoti, is accused of an offence under sections 366, 366-109, that is to say, of abduction and abatement of abduction. Were these alleged offences committed at Mardan or Peshawar, and, if not, what action could the Magistrate have taken? The so-called abduction had been committed in Bombay and only a Bombay court could issue process. What offence had been committed at Hoti Mardan? One of the girls whose statement had been forwarded said that the Khan had attempted to take liberties with her though she did not deny that he had seen the girls only three times and each time for a few minutes only. Supposing however that the alleged act, trivial as it has been designated by the learned Judge of the High Court, amounted to a criminal assault or an attempt to outrage a woman's modesty, the District Magistrate of Peshawar, or rather the Sub-Divisional Officer of Mardan, could have taken action, but not on the strength of a statement made by the complainant before the Police Commissioner of Bombay. It would have been necessary for the girl to have complained to the police, if necessary, and afterwards to appear before the Magistrate and make a statement on oath. Failing this neither the District nor the Sub-Divisional Magistrate could take any action whatsoever. But the phrases 'ultra vires' and 'without jurisdiction' are unknown and meaningless to Magistrates in the Frontier Province.

"If the Magistrate had any regard for law and procedure he would have, through the Chief Commissioner, referred the matter back to Bombay inquiring what action was to be taken. As a matter of fact no action whatever was taken in Bombay until the arrival of the Khan when a charge was preferred against him. Is there any parallel to or precedent for such an extraordinary procedure? Can the Bombay Police ask the Calcutta Police to arrest A and charge him with abduction in view of a similar charge to be subsequently brought against him in Bombay? Then the word 'jurisdiction' should be deleted from all laws in this country. What would afford greater pleasure to the authorities in the Frontier Province than to get hold of their critics and calumniators in any part of India and haul them up before a Magistrate in their own Province? Whether he had a right to take any action or not, whether the law gave him any jurisdiction or not, the Magistrate of Peshawar did not hesitate to take action and a warrant was issued for the Khan's arrest. Proceeding with the Magistrate's order we note that he finds 'no present reason to doubt the veracity of Miss Swannell's statement, which incriminated Khan Bahadur Khwaja Muhammad Khan not only as an abettor of but probably also as a principal in the alleged offence. The ground for refusing bail was that 'still further evidence had come to light corroborating Miss Swannell's statement.' This further evidence was that the girls had been brought to Mardan by the Kings and had been met at the station by the Khan. But this statement was made by the girl herself and there was no additional evidence to that effect. The Magistrate wanted to make out that this further evidence barred his discretion to admit the Khan to bail. According to section 497 of the Criminal Procedure Code any person accused of any non-bailable offence may be released on bail, 'but he shall not be so released if there appear reasonable grounds for believing that he has been guilty of the offence of which he is accused.' Applying the latter part of this section the Magistrate refused bail, though so far the Khan had been accused of no offence, bailable or non-bailable, and no process had been issued by the Chief Presidency Magistrate, Bombay.

"Further on we read:—'Khwaja Muhammad Khan has accordingly remained in the lock-up while further police enquiry is proceeding and pending settlement of the question in what Court the offence is to be tried. This matter forms the subject of correspondence between the N.-W. F. P. Administration and the Bombay Government at the present juncture.' This is also a novel information. Is the jurisdiction of a court of justice determined by law or by correspondence between two executive Governments? Since the alleged abduction took place in Bombay the Bombay courts alone had jurisdiction and the fact of the girls having been brought to Mardan gave the courts in the Frontier Province no jurisdiction.

"Equally astonishing is the admission of the Magistrate that though the Khan had been eight days in the jail he had not once been brought before the Magistrate though he had been brought to his court on the first day. And this mistake the District Magistrate proceeds to rectify by directing that the Khan should be produced before the Sub-Divisional Magistrate the next day. At every step and all throughout the Magistrate acted without jurisdiction and in utter contravention of the clear provisions of the law. His warrant was illegal, the arrest of the Khan was illegal, the detention in jail was illegal. That is how the law is administered in the Frontier Province. What would have been the fate of the Khan had he been tried at Peshawar instead of in Bombay?"

(b)—Police.

Dacoities in the Punjab.

28. The following is from the Tribune (Lahore), of 16th March 1912:—

"The Hon'ble Mr. Tollinton's reply to the Hon'ble Rai Bahadur Hari Chand's question on the recrudescence of dacoities in this Province was as satisfactory as it was frank. That the matter is engaging the serious attention of the Government will considerably allay the fears entertained by the public. But this announcement by itself is not enough to restore public confidence in the adequacy of the measures contemplated by the Government to ensure protection of life and property. The punitive police posts now established will produce irritation which may give rise to retaliation in unprotected or ill-protected quarters. The range of operation by the dacoits, as described in our article which was the subject of the question, shows that the cause of the evil is more deep-seated than the Government seems to imagine when it presumes that it can be removed by quartering punitive police. There is great difference between the dacoities of the present and past time, and not the least important factor is that which is stated in the frontier administration report and to which the Hon'ble Sir Henry McMahon referred in the Supreme Legislative Council in answer to the Hon'ble Mr. S. Sinha. Outlawry is beginning to lose its most terrifying features, and the outlaws trust to the belief that 'the fear of reprisal will render not forthcoming the amount of proof which the law requires.' The invasion of the Punjab by an undesirable class of Pathans from across the border and the dissemination of these ideas among local accomplices are causes with which the Government should endeavour to deal firmly and systematically. The posting of a gazetted officer on special duty in the exposed areas is good, but it is better to associate with him a number of non-officials. But the best and most efficacious method of dealing with this organised crime is to take the sufferers into confidence, train them in the use of fire-arms and supply them with arms so that they may be able to assist the police effectively and at the same time acquire a degree of self-confidence that will operate as a powerful and permanent check on the evil designs of the dacoits. At present it is the helplessness of the Hindu sufferers which puts a premium on this species of crime."

(d)—Education.

The Sikh Educational Conference and Native Army.

29. The Khalsa Advocate (Amritsar), of 8th March 1912, has the following under the heading "An excellent example":—

"In a recent issue we made an urgent appeal to His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief and the Sikh soldiers of His Imperial Majesty's Indian forces to throw in their weight and influence on the side of strengthening the Sikh Educational Conference. We urged that as a lever of uplift for the Sikh community the Conference has done good work in the past, but that in the future with the august personality of His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief interested in the cause of Sikh welfare and progress and with the loyal and devoted Sikh soldiers of all ranks taking their proper share in the cause of the educational and social progress of the community, the Conference is bound to take a big leap forward. The cause of the Conference is so noble and beneficial and withal so unexceptionable in every way that we can look the sympathy and support of all well-wishers of the Sikh community. Sir O'Moore Creagh has earned the reputation of being a true and generous friend of all who have the privilege to serve under him. And we respectfully trust that the cause of the Sikh Educational Conference will not fail to commend itself to His Excellency's sympathetic and generous consideration. As it is we feel that a beginning has already been made in the direction suggested. We have learnt with the greatest pleasure that two troops of Sikh cavalry stationed at Sialkot have set the ball rolling. All officers and men have contributed one day's pay and Rs. 100 in each case from the Regimental funds. This is an excellent beginning. The officers and men at Sialkot have set an example that deserves to be richly followed by all Sikh ranks in the Indian Army. The officers in particular deserve to be heartily congratulated on their ready and willing co-operation and support and have not only earned the thanks of the men under command but of the whole Sikh community. Our grateful thanks are due in a special manner to His Excellency Sir O'Moore Creagh under whose sympathetic regimé the Sikh officers and men are permitted to take interest in and join the Conference. To His Excellency in the name of the community we beg to offer our heartfelt gratitude and trust His Excellency will be able to see his way to permit all Sikh officers and men as may desire to attend the Conference sessions to do so. We deeply appreciate the action of the Sikh cavalry troops at Sialkot, and trust their example will be followed and without loss of time by all Sikh units in the army."

The President of the next Sikh Educational Conference.

30. The following is from the Khalsa Advocate (Amritsar), of 8th March 1912 :—

"The news will be hailed with unstinted delight and heartfelt gratification by the whole Panth that His Highness the Maharaja Sahib Bahadur of Patiala has been offered and has kindly accepted the Presidentship of the Fifth Sikh Educational Conference to be held at Sialkot. There is ample reason for rejoicing in this announcement. Many and varied are the roasons which doubtlessly suggested and which go to make His Highness' selection as eminently in the fitness of things. "My House is thy House" was said by the 7th Guru Sahib, Sri Guru Har Rai Sahib ji, of the house of which His Highness is the honoured and august representative. The oneness of which the Guru Sahib spoke makes the Patiala house dear to every Sikh heart and the Guru Sahib's blessing rests on the House and its representative. During the short time which has elapsed since the Maharaja Sahib was installed on the guddee of his forefathers, His Highness has shown by abundant acts that he has the best interests of the Panth at heart. He introduced Gurmukhi as the language of courts and offices in his State and thus showed not only his love for the mother-tongue of the Province but also his appreciation of the fact that the education of the masses can only and best be undertaken in their own tongue. Such is the verdict of educational authorities all over the world and His Highness deserves to be congratulated on his realization in practice of that great educational truth. By his handsome and princely donation of one lakh and twenty thousand rupees for the erection of the London Gurdwara the Maharaja Sahib has stamped his name in modern Sikh annals as one who feels for the Sikh religion and is anxious to provide the required facilities to those who, living in a distant land, are still anxious to conform to the traditions of their community and to learn and teach the truths that are to be found in their sacred scriptures. The Gurdwara at London will stand out in the European world as the centre and fountain spring of Sikh teaching and to His Highness the Maharaja Sahib of Patiala will belong the undying credit of having provided it. It is hardly necessary for us to mention other acts of His Highness' sympathy with and solicitude for the welfare and progress of the community which is proud to count as its own. As an administrator the Maharaja Sahib has already won golden opinions from all classes of his subjects and we have no doubt but that with increasing opportunities His Highness will continue to win their affections in an ever-increasing degree. It is sufficient to say that the Panth has come to know His Highness well and to highly respect him for his many qualities of the head and the heart. The opinion is universal from one end of the Province to the other, that no better choice could have been made, nor could any other selection have given the Panth such deep and heartfelt gratification as in the present case. The Conference is proud to possess the genuine and abiding sympathy of able and high-minded administrators like His Honour Sir Louis Dane to whom the Sikh community can never be too grateful for their kind interest. And the personal co-operation and guidance of thoughtful and enlightened rulers like His Highness the Maharaja Sahib of Patiala will be a further guarantee on the one hand of the success of the Conference will steer its way clear of all shoals and quicksands."

The Royal educational grant.

31. The Vakil (Amritsar), of the 6th (received on the 14th) March 1912, has a note entitled "Distribution of fifty lakhs of rupees." Adverting to the manner in which the Royal educational grant is proposed to be distributed, the paper expresses its inability to see through the policy underlying the division. The Europeans in India, it adds, whose number does not exceed 10 lakhs, have received Rs. 3,00,000 as against 42 lakhs granted to over 20 crores of Indian British subjects. After remarking that their numerical strength entitles them to only Rs. 21,000, it observes that, in view of the present curricula of primary and girls' schools, it is wholly absurd to spend as much as 35 lakhs on elementary and female education. It also complains of the extreme inadequacy of the grant (two lakhs) for industrial education, which represents the greatest need of the country. Further, it takes exception to agricultural education having been wholly lost sight of; although India is an agricultural country and the bulk of Government revenue comes out of the pockets of zamindars. It is a matter of surprise to the paper that agriculturists, who were given no share of the royal boons, should have had their claims ignored. It then goes on to say that Muhammadans, especially in Eastern Bengal, have their special educational requirements, and that they should make constitutional efforts to get their proportionate share of the grant.

Recent educational grant.

32. The following is from the Tribune (Lahore), of 10th March 1912 :—

"On the occasion of introducing the Financial Statement Sir Fleetwood Wilson said that a decrease of expenditure amounting to £225,000 was shown in the Revised Budget on account of the 'inability of the Local Governments to spend in full their grants for education and sanitation.' This 'inability' to spend is the besetting sin of Local Governments as regards the grant for protective irrigation also. But, confining our remarks for the present to education, we find that the budget for 1911-12 provided for education a sum of nearly 48 lakhs out of the non-recurring Imperial assignment. But Sir James Meston now explains in his memorandum that a sum of Rs. 18·88 lakhs is all that the Civil Department has found it possible to spend in the year. Of course, another sum of Rs. 17·69 lakhs is 'expected to be spent' in the Public Works Department, but it is just as likely that the bulk of this amount will appear as 'savings' in the final accounts of the year along with Rs. 11·34 lakhs now seized by Government as a lapsed amount. This method of budget provision and appropriation is bound to create a rather unfortunate impression in the minds of the public. The Government cannot very well escape the charge of laying its hands rudely on the Education Department whenever and by whatever causes the financial equilibrium may be threatened. It was, we believe, the Hon'ble Mr. Shadi Lal who said in the Punjab Legislative Council that the Government had a convenient, though not consistent, way of meeting the public demands by pleading a want of funds for popular schemes submitted to it, and a dearth of ready-made schemes for funds that are made available by a generous dispenser of bounties. The probabilities are that under pressure from the predominant partner every one of the Local Governments has learnt to cultivate this elastic frame of mind to adjust its needs to imperial exigencies. But how long this should be allowed to continue is a matter entirely between Local Governments and the representatives of the people in the Local Legislative Councils. Unless special efforts are put forth by the non-official members to fully utilize in the ensuing year both the new grant of Rs. 70·24 lakhs and the lapsed amount of the current year, we shall be unconsciously helping the Government of India to make grants which ultimately fail to reach the public."

Writing about the recent educational grants, the Paisa Akhbar (Lahore), of the 12th March 1912, observes that all well-wishers of the country should feel grateful for the liberality displayed by Government. The paper cannot, however, refrain from pointing out that the Government of India spends very little on public instruction as compared with the educational expenditure of Europe, America, and Japan.

(e)—Agriculture and questions affecting the land.

The educational grant and the agricultural community.

33. The Zamindar (Lahore), of the 12th March 1912, publishes an article headed "A respectful request to His Honour Sir Louis Dane, Lieutenant-Governor of the Punjab." After praising the present ruler of this province for his sense of justice and his solicitude for the welfare of the people committed to his charge, the paper says that Punjab agriculturists are extremely backward in education; and that it is highly necessary to civilize them. Next it urges His Honour to reserve out of the Royal educational grant at least two lakhs of rupees for the education of the agricultural community.

(h)—Miscellaneous.

Budget for 1912-13.

34. The Panjabee (Lahore), of the 12th March 1912, publishes the following under the heading "The fiction of prosperity :"—

"There is one important observation made by Sir Guy Fleetwood Wilson in his budget speech which throws into shade the glowing picture of prosperity and windfalls dealt with in the revenue accounts. After describing how a great famine was threatened last year and how timely and copious rainfall changed the whole situation, the Finance Member observed: 'The change was dramatic; it was also a striking lesson of how narrow is the line in India between plenty and want, and how incessant is the need for caution in our forecasts and for economy in our expenditure.' This extremely narrow line between the so-called prosperity and real poverty of the Indian people must offer ample material for reflection. It is possible to swell the revenue by frequent and harsh land assessments, by raising the price of liquor and rents and other ways. But such surpluses do not show the prosperity of the people, and it is wrong to imagine that a prosperity budget indicates also a prosperous people. The reverse is often the case, and we know that the high prices have made the people so poor that they are suffering from serious disabilities. And the Finance Member, who is so busy in doling out grants to this and that benefit, has not a word to say of the general economies of the average people and how the effects of the high prices and extra pressure of the taxation are sought to be counteracted. In fact, what is there in the 'prosperity' budget statement that will cheer the heart of the average man in India?"

35. The Punjab Advocate (Mianwali), of the 7th March 1912, publishes a letter from "A Muhammadan" headed "Should the Frontier Province be amalgamated with the Punjab?" The inhabitants of Chitral, Dir, Swat, Buner, Kurram, etc., says the writer, which form part of the above Province, consist almost exclusively of Muhammadans, who are given to intriguing, plundering, and fighting, and are so many puppets in the hands of bigoted Mullahs. The inclusion, he adds, of the people of Peshawar, Bannu, Kohat and Dera Ismail Khan, the vast majority of whom are Hindus, has been like placing a lamb in the midst of lions. After remarking that, amidst the Muhammadans named, they are leading a life worse than death, he suggests that a Chief Commissionership of Chitral, Dir, Swat, the Mohmand country, Waziristan, and Afridi-land should be created; and that the present five frontier districts should be again included in the Punjab.

The Frontier Province.

36. The Jhang Sial (Jhang), of the 9th March 1912, publishes a note headed "European haughtiness." Although, it says, the King Emperor desired Indians to be treated with love and sympathy (by Europeans), still some of the last-named continue to behave in a haughty manner. Next it refers to the story in which three Indian students at Lahore cycling on the Mall are said to have been ill-treated by some European gentlemen and a lady. Proceeding, it deeply regrets that such incidents should take place at a time when peace reigns in all parts of the country. It knows and concedes that Europeans are members of the ruling race, and also deserve respect apart even from this fact. It does not, however, follow from this that they should practise undue severities on their (Indian) subjects.

Alleged ill-treatment of some Indian students by some Europeans at Lahore.

37. The Zamindar (Lahore), of the 15th March 1912, reprints from the Kashmiri Magazine for March a poem from the pen of that journal's Editor and entitled "Discussion between the Watan and the Zamindar." The former paper is made to charge the Editor of the latter with favouring fiery speeches and writings; with having been turned out of Hyderabad on account of plots hatched by him there; with having treated his "King" (the Nizam) and his father in an objectionable manner; with having caused strife between the Hindu and Muslim residents of Wazirabad; and with having so severely attacked Hindus on his removal to Lahore as to prejudice them against every follower of the Prophet. It also charges him with setting Musalmans against Government, adding that he makes professions of loyalty only through fear of the law. Zafar Ali defends himself against these accusations; justifies his attitude towards the present leaders of Muhammadans; and says that he voices the real feelings of his co-religionists whom flattery has undone. The Editor of the Kashmiri Magazine advises the two to shake hands; to leave personalities alone; and to write only what will benefit their whole community.

The Watan and the Zamindar.

38. The Khalsa Sewak (Amritsar), of the 21st February (received on the 8th March) 1912, publishes a note headed "Security of Rs. 1,000 from the Khalsa Sewak." Writing on the above subject, the Editor says that it does not know which expressions in the article objected to have been regarded by Government as overstepping the bounds of law. He has, however, perused the writing over and over again; and finds that it contains only things that have already appeared in books. After remarking that, thanks to his Arya friends, this is the second attack on Sikh newspapers, he refers to the unsatisfactory financial condition of the Khalsa Sewak; and appeals to its subscribers to render him pecuniary help to enable him to continue the publication of the paper.

Security from the Khalsa Sewak.

39. Writing under the heading "The Khalsa Sewak has deposited the security," the Munir (Jhang), of the 8th March 1912, says that the paper named has been required to furnish security for publishing articles offensive to Arya Samajists. After remarking that similar action has had to be taken against several other papers for the same offence, it asks why Government should not do away with the source of the mischief. The easiest way to achieve this object, it adds, is to have those chapters expunged from the Satyarth Parkash which attack the ancestors of Muhammadans and Sikhs, and a perusal of which provokes followers of Muhammad and the Gurus to indulge in objectionable language.

Security from the Khalsa Sewak.

Indians and the Indian Subordinate Medical Service.

40. The following is from the Panjabee (Lahore), dated 16th March 1912 :—

"The Hon'ble Mr. S. Sinha asked a question about a Punjab Examination for which applications are being invited only from the European and Eurasian communities. We noticed this matter in our issue of 11th November 1911 (vide Selections No. 46, paragraph 23), and pointed out the injustice of the exclusion of Indians from competing for posts of Assistant Surgeons in Cantonments. But the Government seemed to be intolerant of our criticism because the practice of excluding Indians was not new but a well-established one! In reply to the question by the Hon'ble Mr. S. Sinha, His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief said the same thing and observed that Military Assistant Surgeons have to attend on British soldiers in European hospitals—'a duty upon which it is not customary to employ His Majesty's Indian subjects.' For this reason only Europeans and Eurasians are permitted. We do not think the public can be satisfied with this reply. If Indians are good enough to be on the Secretary of State's Council, Viceroy's Council and Governors' Councils, and also hold other high and responsible posts in other departments, why are they not fit to become Assistant Surgeons in Military Hospitals ? This policy of exclusion is inconsistent with the reform scheme and we hope that this antiquated official 'custom' will be modernised."

C. STEAD,

LAHORE :

The 16th March 1912.

Assistant to the Deputy Inspector General of Police,
Criminal Investigation Department, Punjab.

Panjab Government Press, Lahore—21-3-12—127—107—H. L. S.

[ Confidential. ]

[ Vol. XXV. ] [ No. 12. ]

SELECTIONS

FROM THE

NATIVE NEWSPAPERS

PUBLISHED IN THE PUNJAB.

Examined up to 23rd March 1912.

---

CONTENTS.

Page.

I.—Politics.

(a) Foreign—

1. Christianity and the Islamic World (Ahl-i-Hadis) ... ... ... 201
2. Cretan affairs (Observer) ... ... ib.
3. Persian and Tripolitan affairs (Paisa Akhbar) ... ib.

(b) Home—

4. Government and Muhammadans and the Muslim League (Curzon Gazette) ... ... ib.

II.—Afghanistan and Trans-Frontier.

Nil.

III.—Native States.

5. Hyderabad affairs (Paisa Akhbar) ... ... 202

IV.—Kine-killing.

6. Muhammadans and cow-killing (Observer) ... 203

V.—Native Societies and Religious Matters.

7. The Jhatka question (Khalsa Advocate and Munir) ... ... ... ... 203
8. Muhammadans and the Quran (Zamindar) ... 205
9. The promised Mehdi (Hakam) ... ... ib.
10. A complaint (Hindu) ... ... ... 206

VI.—Legislation.

11. The Punjab Council (Panjabee) ... ... 206
12. The rejection of the Elementary Education Bill (Panjabee) ... ... ... 207

Page.

VII.—General Administration.

(a) Judicial—

13. The case against the Khan of Hoti (Tribune) ... 208
14. Ditto ditto (Akhbar-i-Am) 209

(b) Police—

Nil.

(c) Municipal and Cantonment affairs—

Nil.

(d) Education —

15. A complaint (Hindustan)... ... ... ... 210
16. The proposed Dacca University (Afghan and Observer) ... ... ... ... ib.
17. The Gurukula (Indar) ... ... ... 211

(e)—Agriculture and questions affecting the land—

Nil.

(f) Railways and Communications—

Nil.

(g) Postal matters—

Nil.

(h) Miscellaneous—

18. Punjab Finances (Tribune) ... ... 212
19. Pension for Shams-ul-Ulemas and Mahamahopadhyas (Paisa Akhbar) ... ... ... 213
20. The Frontier Province (Punjab Advocate) ... ib.
21. The Zamindar newspaper (Zamindar) ... 214
22. Security from the Zamindar (Zamindar) ... 217
23. The supersession of Dewan Narendra Nath (Tribune) ... ... ... ... 218
24. Decadence of public Life (Tribune) ... ... ib.

LIST OF NEWSPAPERS AND PERIODICALS EXAMINED BY THE SPECIAL BRANCH AS IT STOOD ON THE 23RD MARCH 1912.

| No. | Name. | Locality. | Name of Publisher. | Circulation. |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| | ENGLISH. | | | |
| | DAILY. | | | |
| 1 | Tribune ... | Lahore ... | Bihari Lal ... | 1,758 copies. |
| | TRI-WEEKLY. | | | |
| 2 | Panjabee ... | Lahore ... | Mul Chand ... | 2,424 copies. |
| | BI-WEEKLY. | | | |
| 3 | Observer ... | Lahore ... | Nizam-ud-din ... | 1,000 copies. |
| 4 | Punjab Times and Frontier News. | Rawalpindi ... | J. B. Thapur ... | 200 „ |
| | WEEKLY. | | | |
| 5 | Arya Patrika ... | Lahore ... | Devi Chand ... | 650 copies. |
| 6 | Harbinger ... | Do. ... | Durga Parshad ... | 300 „ |
| 7 | Khalsa Advocate ... | Amritsar ... | Bahadar Singh ... | 752 „ |
| | FORTNIGHTLY. | | | |
| 8 | Jijnasu ... | Lahore ... | Ishwar Das ... | ... |
| | MONTHLY. | | | |
| 9 | D. A.-V. College Magazine... | Lahore ... | Saraswati Nath ... | 1,000 copies. |
| 10 | Forman Christian College Notes.* | Do. ... | ... | ... |
| 11 | Practical Medicine* ... | Delhi ... | ... | ... |
| 12 | Punjab Educational Journal | Lahore ... | R. B. Mohan Lal ... | 700 copies. |
| 13 | Punjab Mission News ... | Do. ... | Revd. Wigram ... | 250 „ |
| 14 | Ravi ... | Do. ... | Mr. B. M. Jones ... | ... |
| 15 | Review of Religions ... | Qadian (Gurdaspur) ... | Sadr Anjuman Ahmadia, Qadian. | 860 copies. |
| 16 | Science Grounded Religion... | Lahore ... | Dev Rattan ... | 25 „ |
| 17 | Teacher ... | Dinga (Gujrat) ... | Kanhaya Singh ... | 200 „ |
| | URDU. | | | |
| | DAILY. | | | |
| 18 | Akhbar-i-'Am ... | Lahore ... | Govind Sahai ... | 630 copies. |
| 19 | Paisa Akhbar ... | Do. ... | Abdul Aziz ... | 1,011 „ |
| 20 | Watan ... | Do. ... | Muhammad Insha Alla ... | ... |
| 21 | Zamindar ... | Do. ... | Zafar Ali Khan, B.A. ... | ... |
| | BI-WEEKLY. | | | |
| 22 | Vakil ... | Amritsar ... | Abdul Aziz ... | 1,970 copies. |
| | WEEKLY. | | | |
| 23 | Afghan ... | Peshawar ... | Saiyid Muhammad Abdulla | 500 copies. |
| 24 | Ahl-i-Hadis ... | Amritsar ... | Sanaulla ... | 925 „ |
| 25 | Ahluwalia Gazette ... | Do. ... | Lehna Singh ... | 500 „ |
| 26 | Al-Moin ... | Do. ... | Mehraj-ud-din ... | ... |
| 27 | Army News ... | Ludhiana ... | Hira Lal & Co. ... | 1,300 copies. |
| 28 | Arorbans Gazette ... | Amritsar ... | Labh Singh ... | ... |
| 29 | Arya Gazette ... | Lahore ... | Bhowani Das ... | 550 copies. |
| 30 | Badar ... | Qadian, Gurdaspur District | Muhammad Sadiq ... | 200 „ |

* Not received during the month.

LIST OF NEWSPAPERS AND PERIODICALS EXAMINED BY THE SPECIAL BRANCH AS IT STOOD ON THE 23RD MARCH 1912—CONTINUED.

| No. | Name. | Locality. | Name of Publisher. | Circulation. |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| | URDU—CONTINUED. | | | |
| | WEEKLY—continued. | | | |
| 31 | Bharat ... | Jullundur ... | Thakur Sheoratan Singh | ... |
| 32 | Civil and Military News ... | Ludhiana ... | Saiyid Muhammad ... | 1,325 copies. |
| 33 | Curzon Gazette ... | Delhi ... | Mirza Hairat ... | 111 „ |
| 34 | Delhi Gazette* ... | Do. ... | Sajjad Husain ... | 200 „ |
| 35 | Edward Gazette* ... | Abbott-abad ... | Muhammad Latif ... | 200 „ |
| 36 | Hakam ... | Qadian, Gurdaspur District | Yakub Ali ... | 900 „ |
| 37 | Haq ... | Delhi ... | Kasim Ali ... | 200 „ |
| 38 | Haq Pasand ... | Amritsar ... | Ram Nath ... | 382 „ |
| 39 | Hindu ... | Lahore ... | Hari Lal Sharma ... | ... |
| 40 | Hindustan ... | Do. ... | Ram Sarn Dutt ... | 8,070 copies. |
| 41 | Indar ... | Do. ... | Dharm Pal, B.A. ... | ... |
| 42 | Islam ... | Do. ... | Abdul Latif ... | 200 copies. |
| 43 | Jhang Sial ... | Jhang ... | Prabh Dyal ... | 2,262 „ |
| 44 | Kapurthala Akhbar ... | Kapurthala ... | Hamid Husain ... | 155 „ |
| 45 | Loyal Gazette ... | Lahore ... | Amar Singh ... | 200 „ |
| 46 | Lytton Gazette ... | Delhi ... | Bulaki Das ... | 1,000 „ |
| 47 | Milap* ... | Lyallpur ... | Jawahar Lal ... | ... |
| 48 | Millat ... | Lahore ... | Shuja Ulla ... | 1,500 copies. |
| 49 | Mister Gazette ... | Do. ... | Ali Bakhsh ... | 150 „ |
| 50 | Munir ... | Jhang ... | Hafiz Khuda Bakhsh ... | 200 „ |
| 51 | Musalman ... | Amritsar ... | Sana-ulla ... | 400 „ |
| 52 | Nur ... | Qadian, Gurdaspur District | Muhammad Yusaf ... | 200 „ |
| 53 | Nur Afshan ... | Ludhiana ... | Revd. Dr. E. M. Wherry | 500 „ |
| 54 | Paisa Akhbar ... | Lahore ... | Abdul Aziz ... | 8,377 „ |
| 55 | Parkash ... | Do. ... | Krishan ... | 1,723 „ |
| 56 | Punjab Advocate ... | Mianwali ... | Karm Chand, Bahl ... | 1,000 „ |
| 57 | Punjab Samachar ... | Lahore ... | Hira Lal ... | 705 „ |
| 58 | Rajput Gazette ... | Do. ... | Thakur Sukhram Das ... | 650 „ |
| 59 | Municipal Gazette and Sada-i-Hind. | Do. ... | Din Muhammad ... | 500 „ |
| 60 | Sadiq-ul-Akhbar ... | Bahawalpur ... | Maulvi Ata Ullah ... | 392 „ |
| 61 | Ditto ... | Rewari ... | Safdar Hussain ... | 200 „ |
| 62 | Sanatan Dharm Pracharak... | Amritsar ... | Rulia Ram ... | 200 „ |
| 63 | Shanti ... | Rawalpindi ... | Kishan Chand Mohan ... | 300 „ |
| 64 | Sialkot Paper ... | Sialkot ... | Todar Mal ... | 500 „ |
| 65 | Siraj-ul-Akhbar ... | Jhelum ... | Maulvi Fakir Muhammad | 450 „ |
| 66 | Tahzib-ul-Niswan ... | Lahore ... | Mumtaz Ali ... | 240 „ |

* Not received during the week.

LIST OF NEWSPAPERS AND PERIODICALS EXAMINED BY THE SPECIAL BRANCH AS IT STOOD ON THE 23RD MARCH 1912—CONCLUDED.

| No. | Name. | Locality. | Name of Publisher. | Circulation. |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| | URDU—CONCLUDED. | | | |
| | WEEKLY—concluded. | | | |
| 67 | Victoria Paper ... | Sialkot ... | Gian Chand ... | 600 copies. |
| 68 | Wafadar* ... | Lahore ... | Fazal-ud-din ... | 600 „ |
| 69 | Waqt ... | Do. ... | Ali Husain ... | 200 „ |
| 70 | Watan ... | Do. ... | Muhammad Insha Ullah... | 1,800 „ |
| 71 | Zamindar ... | Do. ... | Zafar Ali Khan, B.A. ... | 750 „ |
| | FORTNIGHTLY. | | | |
| 72 | Biwah Samachar ... | Lahore ... | Ram Chand ... | 300 copies. |
| 73 | Kam Dhenu ... | Ludhiana ... | Daulat Ram ... | 100 „ |
| 74 | Mobyal Gazette ... | Kala, Jhelum District ... | Mehta Sham Das ... | 250 „ |
| | PERSIAN. | | | |
| | FORTNIGHTLY. | | | |
| 75 | Siraj-ul-Akhbar ... | Kabul ... | Abdul Khalik ... | ... |
| | URDU. | | | |
| | MONTHLY. | | | |
| 76 | Arorbans Parkash ... | Lahore ... | Salig Ram ... | 200 copies. |
| 77 | Arya Musafir ... | Jullundur ... | Wazir Chand ... | 1,300 „ |
| 78 | Jauhar ... | Amritsar ... | Muhammad Ismail Khan | 200 „ |
| 79 | Kakezai Social Reformer ... | Lahore ... | Fazl Din ... | 200 „ |
| 80 | Makhzan ... | Delhi ... | Abdul Kadir ... | 4,000 „ |
| 81 | Rafiq ... | Lahore ... | Charinji Lal ... | 500 „ |
| 82 | Sadhu ... | Do. ... | Sheobart Lal ... | 500 „ |
| 83 | Martand ... | Do. ... | Kanhya Lal ... | 250 „ |
| 84 | Raghbir Patrika ... | Do. ... | Prab Dial ... | 500 „ |
| 85 | Zaban* ... | Delhi ... | Hamid Hasain ... | 500 „ |
| | GURMUKHI. | | | |
| | WEEKLY. | | | |
| 86 | Khalsa Sewak ... | Amritsar ... | Jiwan Singh ... | 1,000 copies. |
| 87 | Punjab Reporter* ... | Do. ... | Ganda Singh ... | ... |
| 88 | Punjabi Surma ... | Lahore ... | Gian Chand ... | 1,000 copies. |

* Not received during the week.

I.—Politics.

(a)—Foreign.

1. The Ahl-i-Hadis (Amritsar), of the 8th (received on the 16th) March 1912, publishes a communication headed "The efforts of Christians in favour of the Cross." The writer—one Abdul Salam, of Mubarikpur, now staying at Sadiqpur, Patna—quotes an extract from a book called the Islamic World (page 140) to show what strenuous efforts Christian missionaries have been making in Muslim countries to lead the Prophet's followers to embrace Christianity. Commenting on the same, he remarks that Christianity has been proved to be a false religion, and that there are thousands of interpolations (? in its scriptures). After taking exception to the fundamental tenets of that faith, he calls on Muhammadans to rise and spread true unitarianism (to all parts of the world). He also tells them that the appearance of Christian missionaries in the Arabian Peninsula is the forerunner of Doomsday. The Prophet has said that the anti-Christ will become supreme in (lit. will reach all) places in Arabia, with the exception of Mecca and Medina, about the time of the end of the world. If, therefore, Christian missionaries were to reach Arabia, it might be taken for granted that the judgment day was near at hand and that a great revolution was about to take place. Muhammadans should shake off their lethargy and ponder (over the matter). It would be a great shame if the worshippers of Christ gained the upper hand of Muhammadans.

Christianity and the Islamic world.

2. Writing on Cretan affairs in its issue of 20th instant, the Observer (Lahore), remarks that the present situation threatens an acute crisis. The strongly-worded note of the protecting powers, and the strengthening of the squadrons of Great Britain and France in Cretan waters, indicate that preparations for the re-occupation of the island have been made. This paper is further of opinion that outrages perpetrated by Cretan Christians on the Muslim population may result in the Porte coming to the conclusion that it has sufficient justification for military operations against Greece.

Cretan affairs.

3. The Paisa Akhbar (Lahore), of the 19th March 1912, publishes a communication headed "Saint Shah Ne'mat Ulla's second prophecy." The writer—one Sayad Ghulam Shah, Qadiri Naqashbandi, of Murid, Chakwal tahsil, Jhelum district—says that Muhammadans have been alarmed at the dreadful doings in Tripoli and Persia, and that they are looking for help from the Almighty. Next he reproduces some verses in which the abovementioned Saint predicts fighting in Khorasan, Egypt, Syria and Irak; adding that the Turks, Tajaks and Arabs will become one; that the Mehdi will then make his appearance, being first preceded by his Naib; that he will restore peace in the world; that he will be called Muhammad and will again wield the sword; and that his rule will be just and will extend over 40 years.

Persian and Tripolitan affairs and prophecy.

(b)—Home.

4. The Curzon Gazette (Delhi), of the 8th (received on the 16th) March 1912, publishes a leader headed "Our sufferings." The misery of Indian Muhammadans, it says, has come to assume such proportions that no ordinary concessions can help to reassure them. It is not easy to understand why Government wishes to treat them and Hindus alike, and why it hesitates to show them greater favours. If a father should feed a hungry child would this expose him to the charge of having no love for his other children? So long as Muhammadans are granted political rights according to their population and do not share equally with Hindus, it will be impossible for them to preserve their existence. Just now they want education; but they cannot supply this need without whole-hearted help from Government. They do not, however, wish to throw the entire cost of their education on Government: their sole request is that it should again place all wakf properties under its own management and spend all the income from them on educating the Prophet's followers. They have a serious complaint against Government, viz., that, although their condition is indescribable, it cares absolutely nothing for them. The Curzon Gazette goes on to say that all the troubles of Muhammadans are solely due to their poverty, and that the remedy rests more with Government than with the former. As ill-luck would have it, adds the paper, their "national reformers" are rich men, who know nothing of the condition of their middle-class and poor co-religionists. Indeed, these nominal Muhammadans have no sympathy with the followers of Islam (and) hate the very sight of the latter, while they are ever ready to trample on the whole community, if necessary, in their desire to obtain posts and titles. Next the paper suggests that Government should take the administration of wakf properties into its own hands, devoting their net income to sending Muslim youths to England to learn engineering, medicine, &c., and to imparting education in India to the children of the poorer Muhammadans. This would reassure the community and recompense it for the annulment of the Partition of Bengal. They should place no dependence on the Muslim League, for the reason that the society named exists to serve the selfish purposes of one or two strong-headed Musalmans. It is no national association of Muhammadans, and is another name for His Highness the Agha Khan. It is "a white monster" engaged in sucking the life-blood of unfortunate and unwary Musalmans, and in lulling them to sleep by shedding crocodile tears over Tripoli and Persia. In short, it is a machine for the manufacture of titles and posts.

Government and Muhammadans and the Muslim League.

III.—Native States.

Hyderabad affairs.

5. The Paisa Akhbar (Lahore), of the 15th March 1912, publishes a communication headed "Cry of the subjects of Hyderabad—No. III." In continuation of his previous remarks on the subject (vide paragraph 11 of Selections No. 11), the writer says that the European officers posted to the State, being members of the ruling race, could not be kept in hand by the Darbar; nay, the latter had to humour them owing to their being supported by the Residency. The members of the Darbar deplore this state of affairs at their homes; but they lack moral courage and "say ditto to the 'Sahib Bahadur' through fear of the Residency." As to the European officers in question, they have been importing their "kith and kin" (into the State), while "the Residency officials" encourage them to do so. For instance, Mr. Hankin was the first (European officer) to be deputed to the Police Department; but now there are about six Europeans in that branch of the State service. Mr. Hankin began by temporarily borrowing the services of Mr. Gayer, whose period of service in the State has been extended from time to time on one pretext or another. Next Mr. Hugh Gough (?) was appointed Superintendent of the Department which deals with cattle-breeding, and Mr. Goad was employed in the post vacated by him. It may be mentioned here that the Department named had long been abolished by the Darbar as being of no use; but that it was brought back to life in order to provide for a European. It was in the same way that posts were created for all the Europeans imported into Hyderabad. A Mr. Chitwood (?) was sent for on a handsome salary, but when no post could be found for him he was appointed Superintendent of the Nizam's Supply House; although there exists no such institution in the State. After remarking that this gentleman has absolutely no work to do, he alleges that new and highly-paid posts were also created for Mr. Munn (?), Mr. Mayhew, Mr. Green, Mr. Young, and scores of other Europeans. He also takes exception to the appointment of Mr. Egerton as Private Secretary to His Highness the Nizam.

Continuing his remarks in the paper's issue, dated the 19th March 1912, the writer says that certain selfish Residents undoubtedly held the view that Indians were a wholly worthless lot, and, therefore, filled the State with their own fellow countrymen. It would, however, be wholly wrong to think, he adds, that they or Government compelled the State to add to the number of European officials. Proceeding, he remarks that the Chief Minister is assuredly a most able and wide-awake officer, but that, unfortunately, he is an utter stranger to moral courage. He knows better than any one else what deep discontent has been caused among the State subjects through (the doings of) Europeans; but, according to the popular impression, he cares only to maintain his izzat. Again, he is said to be a mere puppet in the hands of his Private Secretary, who devotes all his energies to pleasing European officers, because he is fully aware that he can secure the support of the Residency in this way alone, and that so long as he has this support the Chief Minister and the State are his. A local paper voiced grievances for a long time, but in the end it was muzzled; while the voice of the Mukhbir-i-Deccan, which continues doing its duty in the matter, does not reach very far. As regards other (Muslim) journals in India, they shed tears of blood over Persia, Tripoli and Morocco, but are not affected by the evils prevalent in Hyderabad (lit. home). An ardent lover of the (Muhammadan) community, who once deplored the ruin of the State in the columns of the Paisa Akhbar, had to relinquish his post and to leave Hyderabad for ever. No one has since had the courage to open his lips; any one doing so would at once be "butchered with the knife of sedition."

IV.—Kine-killing.

Muhammadans and cow-killing.

6. The following is from the Observer (Lahore), of 16th October 1912:—

"The Hon. Syed Mehdi Shah's interpellations re the Government help to agriculturists to breed cattle has led the local organ of the Punjab Hindu Sabha to launch into an attack against the cow-killing propensities of the Musalmans. K. B. Allah Bakhsh, of Lahore, in the course of a letter, states that a Hindu of Lahore told him that there could not be harmony between Hindus and Muslims unless and until the latter gave up cow-killing. A perusal of other Hindu papers also makes it quite clear that the passions of the community are being inflamed against Muhammadans owing to this matter. A most curious act about this agitation is that the cow-killing question has never before been urged as a cause of Hindu-Muslim disunion. And it is still more remarkable that the Hindus are not prepared to make any sacrifice on their side if the Musalmans concede their demand. As we have already stated, if the Hindu masses will give up the chhut (refraining from touching the Muslims out of fear of 'pollution'), the Musalmans may be asked to give up cow-killing. But where Hindus persist in regarding the chhut as a religious duty, founded on scientific and philosophical grounds, it is absolutely unreasonable for them to hope that Muslims will abandon cow-killing and throw a heavy burden on their daily expenditure simply to please the Hindus. What Mr. Jassawala and our Hindu friends seem to perversely ignore is the fact that Muhammadans eat beef, not with a view to wound the religious feelings of the Hindus, but from economic grounds, beef being far cheaper than mutton. Thus cow's meat is consumed in much larger quantities in the United Provinces than in the Punjab, because in our Province the masses are less poor, the need for cows, buffaloes and plough cattle greater and beef dearer than in the adjoining Provinces. As for the prime cows, it is perfectly untrue to assert that they are slaughtered for the Musalmans."

V.—Native Societies and Religious Matters.

The Jhatka question.

7. The following is from the Khalsa Advocate (Amritsar), dated 15th March 1912:—

"Not through any fault of ours, rather much against our wishes the Jhatka question is again and again forced upon us. Time and again demands are made on our time and attention which we would steadily and steadfastly better employ otherwise. But the persistent misrepresentation to which our views are exposed and our actions subjected by interested and mischiefmaking individuals ready to make most use of any opportunity that may fall to their hands, leaves us no course but to put them in a clear light. If we could, we would leave such individuals aside and treat their efforts with the contempt they deserve. But the danger that innocent and well-meaning friends of our community may be unconsciously led to form incorrect notions and to take hasty or ill-advised steps, sometimes against our community or in detriment of its interests, cannot be ignored. We are compelled to explain matters in sheer defence.

"Take this question of cooking or using Jhatka meat. Every now and then the question crops up, sometimes here, sometimes there, and the rulers of the land are invited to put a stop to it. The form in which it is brought up is always the same more or less. It is said that the Sikhs and the Hindus indulge in Jhatka merely or mainly to spite their Muhammadan neighbours or to wound their religious susceptibilities. Some designing and mischievous busy-bodies go so far as to suggest that those whose feelings are injured may not, or will not, be able to control themselves and that a breach of the public peace would be imminent or likely. And lastly mad comparisons are instituted between Jhatka and flesh of certain animals prohibited to Sikhs and Hindus and Muhammadans respectively.

"So much dust is kicked up by men who are conjurers and, in not a few instances the creators of trouble, that perhaps the easiest and safest way for men in authority to deal with the matter would be to tackle with them with decision and firmness. The moment such a one comes and conjures up vistas of trouble and visions of disturbance, the sooner that man is clapped up in jail, or bound down to peace, the better for all classes of the community and the peace and amity of the residents. The least an executive officer can do is to give him a sharp wigging and to tell him to mind his business, as the Sirkar is all powerful to deal with wrong-doers whoever they might be.

"The second important point to remember in this connection is that that the allegation in such cases that Sikhs or Hindus want to injure the feelings of Muhammdaans or any class of the community for the matter of that is not only a figment of the imagination but a wanton and gratuitous libel on an innocent, inoffensive and peace-loving community. Such an insinuation is a lie of the deepest dye and its object ought to be transparent to those who have to hold the balance between the several sections of the community.

"The third point which is equally necessary to bear in mind is that mention of the flesh of animals respectively prohibited to Hindus and Sikhs and Muhammadans made by interested individuals may be calculated to confound the issues, but is wholly irrelevant and foreign to the solution of the point under discussion. Be it remembered that Jhatka meat has no necessary connection with the flesh of prohibited animals. The authorities demand that in the matter of the slaughter of such animals rules of law must be enforced and obeyed, and that any deviation from them must be taken notice of and punished. The object of these rules is that every precaution should be taken to safeguard against any the slightest offence being given to any party. Such rules are necessary in the best interests and it is the duty of all to abide by them. The Sikhs and Hindus are most anxious to support the authorities in this matter and the latter can always count upon their full and unstinted support.

"Turn we now to the terms Jhatka and Halal. Jhatka is the process by which an animal or bird is despatched at a single stroke as by a sword. This is the Sikh and Hindu form, viz., adopted by those amongst Sikhs and Hindus who partake of meat. Halal is the process of despatching an animal or bird by which the sword or knife is passing and repassing on the neck of the victim while the Takbir is being read over it to make it halal or lawful. The Takbir is an Arabic text meaning 'In the name of God.' The belief is that if an animal or bird dies without the Takbir being read its flesh is unlawful to a Muhammadan. It must be clear then that not only is a Hindu or Sikh not bound to partake of halal but that he cannot in the very nature of things be expected to read the Takbir over an animal, fowl or bird that he himself despatches. And the Sikhs and most Hindus have religious and conscientous objections to partaking of halal over which the Takbir has been read, and which they regard as prohibited by their religion. The question is of principle. Take the case of a European gentleman. He shoots a pigeon. When cocking his gun, pulling his trigger, on firing the shot he did not read the Takbir. The bird shot has fallen on the ground and is dead. To the Muhammadan its flesh is not lawful halal, because the name of God was not pronouuced over it before life fled out of it. Quite so, but can the European who shot it be prevented from cooking and using it? Add to this further that the Sikhs and Hindus, every one of the former and the vast bulk of the latter, have religious and conscientious scruples against using such flesh. The only exceptions to the rule will be found in some of the Muhammadan states or in places where there has been a domineering Muhammadan majority.

"The question then is simple enough. Are Sikhs and Hindus who have a religious and conscientious objection to halal flesh at liberty to use Jhatka or not? The latter alternative means that they must give up meat altogether, for they cannot conform to the usages and practices of another religion. The former implies that in the exercise of a legal right the Government will protect them. And be it said to the credit of the Government it has protected them. In cities like Amritsar, Rawalpindi, may be found premises shops licensed to prepare and sell Jhatka meat respectively. And the highest court of the Province has held that to keep a Jhatka shop is not an occupation intended to give offence. And yet to our great surprise the question is not permitted to remain where it is, and ought to be, but is raised time and again by interested busy-bodies with the result that needless excitement is created in a certain centre, and an undesirable controversy sprung up. The only way to deal with such light-hearted attempts to fan the embers of trouble is to rigorously apply the extinguisher at the earliest possible opportunity. The easiest and safest way to stop trouble gaining ahead is to nip it in the bud and to steadily discountenance all attempts to revive it."

The Munir (Jhang), of the 16th March 1912, in a note entitled "The hatka question: the Loyal Gazette must read (this)" says that this question stands in the way of Sikhs and Muhammadans embracing each other. Sikhism, it adds, does not insist on the use of jhatka meat only; seeing that thousands of them eat the flesh of animals not killed by decapitation. Muhammadans, on the contrary, cannot eat any but halal meat, and consequently they demand that jhatka meat should not be openly sold in bazars. Those Sikhs, therefore, who insist on eating jhatka meat, should use that flesh and decapitate goats out of the sight of Muhammadans, just as the latter slaughter kine in out-of-the-way places. It is, however, possible that in this case the Prophet's followers may cease buying from Sikhs or eating things prepared by the latter.

Muhammadans and the Quran.

8. The Zamindar (Lahore), of the 19th March 1912, has an article headed "The holy Quran," in which the writer deplores the present helpless condition of Muhammadans, and remarks that the same is due to their not acting up to the teachings of the Quran. The thorough faith, he adds, the (Arabian) shepherds reposed in the above scripture, made them rulers of the world; although they could not boast of either knowledge, wealth, or armies. The Muhammadans of to-day, however, who number thirty crores, cannot even defend themselves. After remarking that this is ascribable to their having discarded the Quran, the correspondent says that Indian Musalmans in particular have degraded Islam. Next he observes that a (true) follower of that faith lets no fear cross his mind, however low his position may be. Continuing, he refers to the behaviour of Pathans in India in support of his assertion; and goes on to deprecate the conduct of Ulemas in having done nothing to promote the love of Islam among its followers in this country. After urging them to rise and guide their co-religionists, the writer observes that it is high time that the Quran were so taught in every mosque and school as to convert Muhammadans into true followers of the Prophet, and make them believe that, if they took their stand on the scripture in question, they could not be injured even by the united denizens of the earth and the upper regions.

The promised Mehdi.

9. Writing under the heading "The advent of Mehdi," the Hakam (Qadian), of the 7th (received on the 16th, March 1912, says that the troubles and misfortunes which have of late befallen Muhammadans in different countries have created the impression among the Prophet's followers (in India) that the present is the time when the promised Mehdi should make his appearance. The paper, however, feels pity for these poor Musalmans who are filled with imaginary hopes; seeing that it was never ordained that the Mehdi of their conception should appear. Worldly troubles have made them think of the advent of Mehdi, but they were in no way affected by the misfortunes of a religious character that befell them thirty years ago. It is to be wished that the awakening now visible among them had manifested itself then; and that they had realised the mischief wrought to Islam by Christians, Aryas, Brahmans, atheists, and philosophers. Now when Italy threatens to march against Mecca and Medina, and Islamic kingdoms are involved in difficulties, the Musalmans in question should call upon the promised Mehdi and Messiah to manifest themselves. If it were really ordained that these personages should appear they would have done so long ago; seeing that the troubles of Islam have passed all bounds. In conclusion, the paper contends that the late Mirza Ghulam Ahmad was the promised Mehdi.

10. The Hindu (Lahore), of the 14th March 1912, publishes a note headed "Shoes in places of worship." After remarking that all such places ought to be respected by every person, it complains that some "Westerners" have become so enamoured of (lit. so apply their mouths to) shoes that they enter every place wearing the same. The paper recently complained of some goras having entered a Jain temple at Abu with their shoes on. A correspondent of a Muhammadan journal now makes a similar complaint in regard to the mosque attached to the Taj at Agra. Such complaints appear trivial, but they have the most pernicious effect of injuring the religious feelings of the people. Next it suggests that "cloth shoes" should be provided at all places of worship for the use of European visitors; and that in the event of these persons refusing to put them on they should not be allowed to enter.

A complaint.

VI.—Legislation.

11. A correspondent, Lala Gulshan Rai, Pleader, Lahore, contributes the following to the Panjabee (Lahore), of 14th March 1912 :—

The Punjab Council.

"According to the present constitution the Punjab Council consists of ten officials, nine semi-officials and five non-officials. I use the term semi-official in a special sense, as will be shown presently. There are three kinds of ordinary members in the Council, as is shown above. Now let us examine each of these classes. Officials have undoubtedly to protect and defend the policy of the Government. It is clear the Executive will not tolerate the official members to oppose any Government measure in the Council. They are in the Council for the simple object of ensuring the successful passage of Government measures, and to oppose those measures which are either against or beyond the present policy of the Executive. They are responsible to the Executive alone, since they hold their places by the favour of the Government. The elected members on the other hand hold their places by the favour of the people. They represent the people's point of view in the Council. If they neglect their duties, or in other words they do not, by their conduct in the Council, satisfy those who elected them, there is a doubt attached in the probability of their being elected next time. They are, therefore, responsible to the people for their conduct in the Council. The position, however, of the nominated non-officials is very peculiar and strange. They hold their places no doubt by the favour of the Government, but they are not expected to defend and justify always the policy of the Executive. They need not look at questions always from the Government's point of view. On the other hand, they are not responsible to the people either. They are not bound to place before the Council the people's point of view. In other words they represent their own individual opinion. But, naturally, this individual independent view of the member must be modified by the fact of his being nominated by the Government. Hence nominated non-officials of the Council are not at all responsible to the people but partially to the Government. They can, therefore, be rightly called semi-officials. Since this class of members are in a way irresponsible people, it ought to be the interest of the people as well as of the Government to reduce their number. In the management of a nation's affairs irresponsible individual opinions do not count for much. In national questions collective interests of the masses should engross the predominant consideration. The advisers of the Government should either be responsible to the people or to the Government. There is no other way. However able and distinguished a man may be, it is dangerous to entrust to him the affairs of a people without making him responsible to somebody. But since in practice the ideal cannot always be advantageously followed, the evil cannot altogether be removed. So is the case here. Though in the constitution of the Council the ideal should be to eliminate the nominated non-official element altogether, yet practically it is not possible. In the present state of circumstances all the multifarious interests in the province cannot be represented by election alone. At the same time it is not convenient for the official members to represent those interests satisfactorily. In this connection I may mention as an example the agricultural interests of the province. At the present stage there is no institution in the Province which can safely be said to represent agricultural interests. At the same time it is inconvenient for Government officials to find out all the needs of the agriculturists. Hence land-holders can well be represented by nominated Zamindars. However, this is a digression. What the aim of the people should be is to keep as near the ideal as possible. The constitution of the Punjab Council shows that the popular element therein is in a hopeless minority, i.e., 20 per cent., or nearly half of the nominated non-officials. It may be said that the nominated non-official members also represent the people. Yes, they may represent the popular side, but they are, as said above, not bound to do so. Take the case of other provinces in India. There the percentage of elected members to the total strength of the Councils is as follows :—Bengal 53, Bombay 46, East Bengal 44, United Provinces 42, Madras 41 and the Punjab 20. Now these figures require no comment. The elected element in the Punjab Council is not even half of that possessed by the adjoining sister provinces of Agra and Oudh. It would be interesting for the people of this province to know the considerations which led the Government to curtail the popular lement in the Punjab Council to so great an extent.

"At present the province is divided into three electoral groups for the purpose of election by the Municipal and Cantonment Committees, viz., the Cis-Sutlej, the Central and the Western groups. The 1st group contains the whole of the Delhi division plus half of Jullundur division. The other half of this latter division, together with the Lahore division, forms the Central group, while the two divisions of Multan and Rawalpindi go to form the Western group. According to the present regulations the Municipal and Cantonment Committees of each of these groups elect one member for the Council. Now if each group be allowed to elect two members, there would be less chance of either of the two great sister communities of this province being defeated altogether. Take for instance the last election. All the three electoral groups returned a Muhammadan member. Had it been allowed to each of these groups to send two members, the result would have probably been three Hindus and three Muhammadans. That would have been a fair representation of the people. But as ill-luck would have it no Hindu could be elected by these groups. This time it is quite possible fortune may be adverse to the other community and no Muhammadan be returned. Now surely this is not a happy arrangement. Hence in order to ensure the election of Hindus and Muhammadans both in a fair proportion, it is essential for every group to elect two members for the Council.

"So much for the middle class educated people. Now as regards other interests, the Hindus and the Sikhs are in a minority in this province. Their interests need special protection. At present in the Council there are seven Muhammadans, three Hindus and two Sikhs. The percentage of Muhammadan members to the total strength of Indian members of the Council is more than 58 per cent. while their population in the province does not exceed 54 per cent. The Hindus and the Sikhs on the other hand have a combined percentage of 41 in the Council, while their population in the province is more than 46 per cent. Now take into consideration the fact that the Hindus are far more advanced in education, wealth, commerce as well as industry than their Muhammadan brethren. The Sikhs also are a very important minority in the province. In fact their political importance is much greater than that of the Muhammadans, since immediately preceding the British rule they were the rulers in the province, and even under the present regime they are truly the gate-keepers of India. The flower of the British army in India is in fact formed of the Sikh regiments. So at any rate the combined strength of Hindus and the Sikhs in the Council should in no case be less than 6. To ensure this number it is necessary that the election of Hindus and the Sikhs should be specially arranged for. I propose that special electorates be constituted for Hindus and Sikhs. There should be one separate electorate for the Hindus and one for the Sikhs. The Punjab Hindu Sabha and the Chief Khalsa Diwan should each be authorised to elect one member for the Council. The interests of education and commerce may continue to be represented as before. In this way the number of elected members in the Council would become ten, viz., six for the Municipalities, one for University, one for Commerce, one for the Hindus and one for the Sikhs. The remaining four may be nominated as before, by the Government. If the result of elections by the Municipalities be fair to both the communities of the province the nominated members would mostly be Muhammadans. If, on the other hand, the result of elections prove disadvantageous to the Hindus the Lieutenant-Governor will have an opporunity to intervene by means of nominating Hindu Members, as was done last time. In this way the proportion of Hindus and Muhammadans in the Council would be kept constant.

"From the Government point of view also, the Executive need not fear this increase of elective element in the Council; for a perusal of the constitution of Councils in other provinces shows that the percentage of nominated members, officials as well as non-officials, is highest in Madras (59) and the lowest in Bengal (47). The average percentage of these members, in all the provinces, excluding the Punjab and Burma, is however, 55. If the above arrangement be adopted in this province the percentage of nominated members in the Punjab Council would still be 56. The Government will, in a way, be still able to command the majority. This arrangement would increase the popular element in the Council, and at the same time will keep the Government majority. It would satisfy the people to a great extent without any harm to the Government. Under this arrangement the Muhammadans will have no cause of complaint and the Hindus and the Sikhs will also be satisfied. Can the people expect their representatives in the Council to take up this question in right earnest and thus cause the removal of a wrong which the Punjabis at present are suffering under?"

The rejection of the Elementary Education Bill.

12. The following is from the Panjabee (Lahore), of 21st March 1912:—

"The fate of the famous Bill brought by the Hon'ble Mr. Gokhale was settled on Tuesday, and it was, as feared, thrown out by the will of the Government majority. It was quite a foregone conclusion that the Government would oppose it and would not even allow it to be considered by the Select Committee, and this decision of the Government further induced a number of wavering members to support the formidable side. The Maharaja of Burdwan for one made a frank and open confession that if he had not known the unfavourable attitude of the Government he might have supported Mr. Gokhale's motion. We dare say that the attitude of several other members who voted against Mr. Gokhale was of a similar nature. And we see that Mr. Gokhale has chastised some members for their swift change of front. This brings the weakness of our Council constitution into greater prominence and the anomalous position of the nominated members who represent neither themselves, nor the interests which they are supposed to have at heart, but the official body who have merely nominated them. In the Punjab, where the force of the nominated Honorables is very strong this species of helplessness is all the more glaring and we see that the Bombay Council members made a formal complaint of this anomaly. Mr. Gokhale's Bill was thrown out, not on its merits, but because the official body would not have it and as Mr. Gokhale himself said, this defeat will not discourage him or the country."

VII.—General Administration.

(a)—Judicial.

The case against the Khan of Hoti.

13. The Tribune (Lahore), of 15th March 1912, publishes the following under the heading "Behind the scenes in the case against the Chief of Hoti":—

"So far we have dealt with the proceedings in the Court of the District Magistrate of Peshawar, and we have seen the kind of law and procedure that is to be found in the Frontier Province. But the interest displayed in the case by the Administration was quite exceptional. The Khan was admitted to bail by the Judicial Commissioner of the Frontier Province and he proceeded to Bombay to meet the charge which was not prepared until after his arrival there. As soon, however, as the case came up before the Chief Presidency Magistrate of Bombay the Khan came under the jurisdiction of that Court and all connection between him and the Frontier Province Administration ceased. The warrant issued by the District Magistrate of Peshawar became inoperative and mere waste paper and the Khan ceased to be answerable to the Courts of the Frontier Province. Instead of realising this and letting the Khan alone the Administration sent down three police officers, one Assistant Superintendent and two Inspectors, to Bombay to help the prosecution. It is impossible to conjecture what help these officers could have given. The charge was abduction and abetment of abduction and the offence was alleged to have been committed in Bombay. It was not denied that the girls had gone to Mardan. What evidence could these Frontier police officers give and how would their evidence be relevant? It was sheer waste of public money and displayed quite an extraordinary and unaccountable zeal in a case with which that Administration had no concern. At Peshawar no lawyer would take up the Khan's case and he had to take counsel from Lahore. The Khan was rightly anxious that the case should be tried at Bombay. When the case did come up in Bombay the Frontier police had nothing further to do with the case. In the Frontier Province there is not such an array of police force even in cases of murder which are quite common, but in a case of abduction which had taken place at Bombay and with which the Bombay police were quite competent to deal no less than three police officers including a European officer, were sent down to watch and help the proceedings.

"We have referred to the zeal displayed in this case as extraordinary and unaccountable Extraordinary it certainly was but not unaccountable, for it seems that the authorities of the Frontier Province had not a good opinion of the Khan. On the 17th February the Indian Daily News wrote:—'The Muhammadan community all over India has been watching the Hoti Mardan case with intense anxiety because it was pretty generally known to them that it was a false charge and the failure of the Khan to subscribe to the Islamia College, Peshawar, had a good deal to do with it.' It should be mentioned here that the Khan had been acquitted by the Bombay High Court on the 15th February. What are the facts about this Islamia College business? It is a known fact that Sir George Roos-Keppel, the Chief Commissioner of the Frontier Province, is very keen about the establishment of this College and his object is very laudable. For reasons into which we need not inquire the Khan of Hoti holds a different view on this subject and he has not subscribed to the funds of the College. In April 1911 the Khan received a letter inviting him subscribe to the College. The letter bears no date but the postal marks on the cover are April 5th, Peshawar, and April 6, Hoti. It is signed by Mir Alam Khan, Extra Assistant Commissioner and Revenue Officer, Peshawar, and Maulvi Ghulam Hasan Khan, Sub-Registrar and Honorary Magistrate, Peshawar. The letter is in Urdu and a rough translation will be found in another place. In this letter it is distinctly hinted that the Khan is under a cloud and that this cloud will be removed if he subscribes to the College. Of course there is no suggestion that there is any connection between this matter and the case, but the Khan knew and others knew that he was not in favour with the authorities.

"It must be remembered that so far as we are concerned it is quite immaterial whether the Khan is a rich or a poor man. All men are equal in the eyes of the law and the grievances of every man are entitled to ventilation, if they are of the nature of a public grievance. If therefore, we mention the social or personal position of the Khan it is not with the intention of investing him with an undue importance. But we think that every humane person will be disposed to sympathise with an old man of seventy, almost infirm and suffering from an incurable disease, who is thus harassed without cause and put to heavy expense to defend himself. A man of seventy is nearly at the end of his life and it is not unreasonable to inquire what kind of character he has borne throughout his career. The Khan was never accused of any offence in his life, he belongs to one of the highest families in his district, he has taken measures to ensure the safety of his numerous tenants, Hindu and Muhammadan, and he holds the highest testimonials from numerous officials. He got a certificate from the Viceroy on the 1st January 1877, in recognition of his valuable services in political matters connected with the people of Swat. Sir Lewis Pelley acknowledged his assistanee when he was conferring with the Envoy from Kabul in the same year. Every Commissioner and Assistant Commissioner gave him high credentials. Lieutenant A. H. MacMahon, now Sir Henry McMahon, Foreign Secretary to the Government of India, wrote in the highest terms of the Khan. He said:—'I look upon Khwaja Muhammad as a personal friend, and hope to hear nothing but good of him.' He was made a Khan Bahadur and an Honorary Magistrate. He received complimentary and congratulatory letters from Sir Mackworth Young, Sir Louis Dane (then Chief Secretary to the Punjab Government), and officials of the Frontier Province. He presented a number of horses to Lumsden's Horse when the troop went to South Africa for the Boer War.

"How does it then happen that he lost all this favour? To this only one answer can be found, though it is a most startling answer. In 1901 Major G. Roos-Keppel, Political Officer, Khyber Pass, brought out a book called A Manual of Pushtu. Major Roos-Keppel is now Sir George Roos-Keppel. In this book there are lessons on colloquial Pushtu with English translations, enabling the learner to sustain a conversation in Pushtu. To give a local colour local subjects are introduced. And one of the persons mentioned in the course of the different conversations is unmistakably the Khan of Hoti. A little introductory explanation is necessary. The Khan of Hoti is not on good terms with Khan Bahadur Ibrahim Khan, another landholder in Mardan. This was known even to Sir Henry McMahon who in the course of the letter already quoted, wrote:—'The unfortunate faction between him and Ibrahim Khan, Khan Bahadur, still exists, but I am happy to say I was not troubled by it in any way during my time at Mardan, and factional feelings, owing to the admirable self-control of Khwaja Muhammad Khan have not been allowed to work up again.' Now in this Pushtu Manual (pp. 202 and 203) there is high praise of Ibrahim Khan in the fragmentary colloquial sentenees. Immediately below then comes the following:—'That fat man is the Khan's enemy. He has bribed all the Police and Tahsil officials, who make up cases against the Khan.' The Khan of Hoti is a stout man and the reference here is to him. But there are other sentences which do not admit of any doubt or equivocation. On page 213 is the following:—'Whose house is that? It is Khwaja's house, where his father fed guests. He would never give a piece of bread to any one. All the people dislike him very much. He is stout and a miser.' Only one man in the Frontier Province is known as Khwaja and that is Khwaja Muhammad Khan of Hoti. But the identity becomes clear and more unmistakable as we proceed to other passages. On page 217 occur the following passages:—'Who is that fat man? He is the Khan of Hoti. He is owner of ten thousand jaribs of irrigated and fifteen thousand of unirrigated land .... His village is situated on the left bank of the stream. He has two water-mills, two mosques, and three guest-houses. But no one gets any food out of him.' Finally, on page 231:—'Who is that stout Khan? He comes from the Mardan Tahsil. His cultivators call him a great tyrant.' The Khan himself knew nothing of these passages until the book was put in his hands by a European in Bombay while the trial was going on.

"Here again of course there is no connection between the book and the case, but it is not difficult to imagine what an amount of prejudice the foregoing passages must have created against the Khan. Every officer in the Province has to read this book and every officer must be believing what is set down against the Khan of Hoti. Sir George Roos-Keppel did not even know the Khan when the book was written. And of course he is safe from the law of libel in his own Province. But the effect that these passages have produced is that the Khan has advertised his property for sale and has decided to leave the home of his ancestors and pass the few years of life left to him in peace somewhere in the Punjab."

The case against the Khan of Hoti.

14. The Akhbar-i-'Am (Lahore), of the 16th March 1912, publishes an article headed "The misfortune of the Nawab of Hoti." The paper deeply regrets that a highly-placed man like the Khan should be disgraced in a heartless manner, and that no member of the "National" Islamic press should have the courage to protest against this. Does the business of these papers, it enquires, consist only in making a Hindu-Muhammadan question of "everything"? They consider it lawful to express annoyance with Government in support of the Turks and Persians, but had the Khan no claims upon them? The Editor then goes on to say that if the rigour with which the Khan of Hoti has been treated is not noticed betimes, and if the entire press does not exert itself to prevent its repetition, the existence of (Indian) papers must be held as serving no useful purpose. The question affects Government and its administration; while it is on no account the desire of the latter that any of its subjects should suffer undeserved hardships. It is, besides, impossible to wink at the manner in which, according to the Bombay High Court, the case against the Khan was got up. That person fell a prey to gross high-handedness. If this is lawful, God alone can protect the izzat of the ruled. In the other event, however, the matter ought to be looked into, and an explanation called for from those who have, in spite of the fact that they are Government officers, been guilty of the above high-handedness. It does not matter whether the officer concerned is a District Magistrate, a Chief Commissioner, or a Lieutenant-Governor. It is permissible to raise an objection if the Viceroy himself does anything improper or unlawful. "This is the basal principle underlying the blessings of the British Government." The Frontier Province is undoubtedly non-regulation, but this does not necessarily mean that no respectable subject can be free from care there. The case is a very serious one and the paper will endeavour to discharge its duty (in connection with the same). It will show that the troubles of the Khan of Hoti were not accidental but the result of premeditation.

(d)—Education.

A complaint.

15. The Hindustan (Lahore), of the 15th March 1912, publishes a communication headed "Attack on ancient Hindu civilisation in the Government History of India." The writer, one Har Parshad Bhatnagar, of Ferozepore, regrets that Thomson's History of India, which is used as a text-book in public schools, should contain highly unfair attacks on the religious tenets of Hindus. Continuing, he states that the following occurs on page 13 of the book :—"The ancient Aryas used to eat flesh, that of the ox being specially eaten at sacrificial feasts." After remarking that the statements constitute a gross insult to Hindu susceptibilities, he quotes an extract from page 14 of the same publication. The quotation refers to the contents of the Atharva Veda and the Yajur Veda; and says that extremely dark ideas were entertained during the ancient Hindu times. Commenting on the same the writer complains that Hindu children are told in Government publications that their forefathers used to eat beef. The Punjab Hindu Sabha, he adds, should submit a representation to Government against the book in question, and should know no rest till the aforesaid shameful statements have been expunged.

The proposed Dacca University.

16. The Afghan (Peshawar), of the 12th (received on the 20th) March 1912, publishes a communication from "A contented and loyal Muhammadan." The writer says that all his thoughtful co-religionists should seriously ponder over the speech made by the Viceroy "behind a pardah" on the 31st January last before a deputation of Eastern Bengal Musalmans. It would appear, he adds, that Lord Hardinge wishes to permanently introduce the element of secrecy into the Indian administration; while the success achieved by him in having the Partition of Bengal annulled is naturally calculated to encourage him in the matter. Besides, His Excellency has spent the larger part of his life in the Foreign Office, in which the fates of countries and nations are decided in a secret manner. The correspondent further remarks that the Muhammadans of East Bengal requested the Viceroy to take note of the serious injury inflicted on them by the annulment of the Partition. The only reply, however, that Lord Hardinge could return to their various grievances was that a Government University would be established at Dacca. It was also undoubtedly remarked by him that Government fully abided by its promises to the Muslim community; but it would have been better not to have referred to these pledges, seeing that he has most heartlessly broken the word of Lord Minto's Government to the Prophet's followers in respect of their rights and the Partition of Bengal. Did the loyal and contented Muhammadans of Bengal deserve that all the promises made to them in the past should be scattered to the winds? There would be nothing surprising in their exclaiming with the poet:—

"If any one had made false promises to you after your (own) manner,

"Say honestly yourself, whether you would have reposed trust (in him)."

The writer then contends that the proposed Dacca University, which, like other similar Universities, will be conducted on non-sectarian (lit. impartial) lines, can confer no benefit on the Muhammadans of East Bengal.

Discussing the Viceroy's recent speech at the Convocation of the Calcutta University, the Observer (Lahore), of the 20th instant, remarks that it is evident that, in matters educational, India is standing on the threshold of a new era. The establishment of the Dacca University and of the Hindu and Muslim Universities on Oxford and Cambridge lines is, says this paper, likely to "exert the profoundest influence on the educational ideals of the people and the general advance of the country."

The Gurukula.

17. The Indar (Lahore), of the 8th March 1912, publishes an article headed "Preaching of the Vedas and sober reflection—X." The paper says that an American lawyer named Phelps writes that Muhammadan and Christian missionaries have prejudiced Government against the Gurukula. His words, however, not only reflect upon Government, but are also likely to strain the relations between Aryas and their Muslim and Christian neighbours. No follower of Islam could have advised the Governor of the Gurukula to publish an account of the bloody French Revolution. Again, it could not have been at the instance of any Christian Missionary that a life of Napeolon was issued from the above institution. Nor was it essential for Government to have enjoyed the services of Muhammadan Maulvis and Christian missionaries in order to obtain reports about political offenders having been sheltered at the Gurukula, or about the authorities and students of that seminary having fought with the Police at different places. It is, therefore, nothing short of murdering justice to charge the Maulvis and missionaries referred to with having prejudiced Government against the Gurukula. The Indar then goes on to say that the end of the Patiala sedition case was that the Aryas implicated filed an apology, and were turned out of the State. As was said at the time, adds the paper, it is not known why Lala Munshi Ram made the accused tender an apology instead of letting it be definitely decided whether the charge against them was false or true. It was, besides, a gross mistake on his part, in the absence of such a decision, to appoint several of them to offices of responsibility in the Gurukula. After stating that they are still there, the paper remarks that it is absurd to afford an asylum to such men and still to complain of Government being suspicious of the Gurukula. The authorities of the Gurukula themselves commit mistakes calculated to strain the relations between that institution and the powers that be. Mr. Phelps states that it had been falsely reported to a certain magistrate that military drill was maintained in the Gurukula, and that it is such unfounded reports that have prejudiced Government against the academy in question. If, however, it has been reported that military drill is taught at the Gurukula this report is not unsupported by facts; while Lala Munshi Ram himself has admitted its truth. The supplement of ten pages circulated by him last year with the Parkash, of Lahore, contained a letter from a Kasauli Arya to the effect that a certain person possessed two photographs of (some) students of the Gurukula riding horses with naked swords in their hands. The Lala explained that two years previously eight students used to learn riding; that they had been provided with Jodhpur breeches and small coats; that this was an open secret; and that he had never seen any student ride a horse with a sword in his hand. He added, however, that, in addition to a gun and a revolver, he kept a sword under a license; that these weapons generally remained in the custody of—; and that this man might have placed the sword in the hands of (some) students and then photographed them. In other words, he admits that the students of the Gurukula were provided with military uniforms, and that they were also taught riding. As to the photographs referred to, which have been seen by the Editor also, one of them displays several students in military uniform and with naked swords. It also contains their drill instructor, Arjan Singh, who is said to have been a dismissed sepoy. He was a dead shot and an expert swordsman, and taught the students how to perform different sword and shooting feats. One of the pictures displays him in the act of teaching a certain feat of swordsmanship to his pupils. Lala Munshi Ram considered his services highly necessary and was unwilling to part with him. Arjan Singh left the Gurukula of his own accord. As to the Lala's explanation that the students might have had a sword placed in their hands, it is absurd in the extreme. The photograph represents no "ordinary position," but shows a dense jungle in which the students are seen working under Arjan Singh on horses and in military uniforms. Again, if the Editor remembers aright, it displays not one but four swords. From whom and where were the extra swords borrowed, and where was the license for them? If the Governor and other authorities of the Gurukula wish that no misunderstanding about them should be caused in the mind of Government "their account should be quite clear." It is not only short-sighted, but palpably hypocritical on their part to lay their own wrongdoings at the door of others, and to represent the latter as the enemies of the Gurukula with a view to inflaming the (Arya) public against them. Their conduct in having military drill taught to the students is tantamount to supplying material for Government to regard the Gurukula with suspicion. The Indar then goes on to say that Mr. Phelps has been told that, as Muhammadans and Christians form the bulk of the Secret Police and are bitter enemies of the Arya Samaj, they make false reports to Government about the Gurukula. It is not, however, unlikely that reports received by Government about the Gurukula are made by the Secret Police maintained by that institution itself. Lala Munshi Ram states in his book "The Arya Samaj and its Detractors" (page 111, volume II), that, on one occasion, a Deputy Collector visited the Gurukula, representing himself as a lawyer; and that he had come to know of this beforehand through "our own Secret Police," who are not less clever and wide-awake than the force employed by Government.

(h)—Miscellaneous.

Punjab Finances.

18. The following is from the Tribune (Lahore), of 17th March 1912:—

* * * * * * *

"We venture to offer a few remarks on the principles underlying the budget. Sir Fleetwood Wilson called his budget the other day a 'no change' budget. The Hon'ble Mr. Mant calls his budget a prosperity budget. The result is astonishing and even puzzling. At any rate it is puzzling to those who are uninitiated into the mysteries of budget manipulation. Sir Fleetwood Wilson called his budget a 'no change' budget because he estimated revenue and expenditure to balance almost exactly at £79½ millons, although in the purely Imperial section he provided for an approximate surplus of £1½ millions, while this surplus, as explained by the Hon'ble Mr. Gokhale, should have been shown at four millions sterling. In the Punjab, however, the Hon'ble Mr. Mant estimates for a revenue of Rs. 420·13 lakhs and for an expenditure of Rs. 449·37 lakhs, showing a deficit of Rs. 29·24 lakhs, and yet calls his budget a prosperity budget. Not that we question the correctness of budgeting for a normal year and presuming that the finances would be prosperous. But it seems to us that to budget for a deficit and say that the finances are prosperous is a contradiction in terms. The Hon'ble Finance Secretary is careful enough to explain in his printed memorandum his estimate of the financial position. In his estimates of revenue and expenditure he distinguishes the normal and recurring from the abnormal and non-recurring. In the latter category he includes under revenue high collections of land revenue arrears amounting to Rs. 5·50 lakhs and receipts from sales of Government lands amounting to Rs. 16·40 lakhs (i.e., the Provincial share of the year's estimate). Under expenditure he combines the special grant of 34 lakhs, the allotments for the Veterinary College buildings, the proposed Secretariat buildings, the new bridges, the wheat elevator and some other works which are not of a pressing nature and deducts in all a round sum of Rs. 50 lakhs. After making these deductions he tells us that we obtain a normal revenue of Rs. 398·23 lakhs and a normal expenditure of Rs. 399·37 lakhs and that the small deficit of Rs. 1·14 lakhs is a fleabite and may be regarded with equanimity 'in view of the large receipts from land sales that are practically certain to accrue in the next few years.' This is a somewhat strange position for a Finance authority to assume. We have it from him in one and the same breath that the sales of Government estates should not enter into calculation in counting revenue, but that the sale proceeds should be drawn upon in order to wipe out the deficit. However, this is the first time we hear that when the Government suspends the collection of revenue in a bad year it does so in the belief that it should not take the collection of arrears into account in the next year. Surely the Finance Member cannot regard the collection of arrears in the nature of an opium windfall.

"As regards expenditure we do not blame the Punjab Government for imitating the imperial method of employing its surplus in a year of plenty for non-recurring purposes. The Government finds itself rich beyond its needs and desires and spends its money like a prodigal on schemes which appeal to its fancy. It does not occur to it that with the same money can be created a provincial reserve ultimately to be better and more usefully employed on schemes requiring recurring expenditure spread over a number of years. While favouring the inception of huge schemes by fits and starts whenever it finds itself burdened with an inconveniently large surplus, we find that it sets its face firmly against incurring recurring liabilities. 'The financial problem confronting the province is not,' says the Hon'ble Mr. Mant, 'how to make both ends meet in the near future, but how to prevent the growth of recurring expenditure from receipts which should be treated as capital. If heavy recurring liabilities are undertaken on the strength of these receipts, the province will find difficulty in meeting its annual charges a few years hence. It is desirable that the abnormal and transient revenue from land sales should be devoted to non-recurring, and, if possible, remunerative expenditure. The purchase or construction of residences for Government officials affords one avenue for expenditure of this kind as it will be recouped by receipts from rent or by the avoidance of house-rent allowances. Another and wider avenue may be opened out by the plantation of new forests in irrigated State lands. The experience derived from the Changa Manga forest has shown that a considerable revenue can be obtained from such plantations, and any measure that will supplement the diminishing supply of firewood will be of material benefit to the people. The possibilities of expenditure in these two directions are under investigation.' These schemes may have their uses, but they are altogether of a class which should be included in the ordinary programmes of the two departments concerned. When schemes of greater utility are languishing for funds, it is astonishing to find the Government overlooking the primary object of making the people more efficient and better able to earn so as to contribute more largely to the public funds. Apparently it is the provision of palatial residences for officials and the saving of rent-bills that appeals to its imagination. The creation of new forests is doubtless a better scheme and has its advantages, although it is best left to the department to be dealt with in the ordinary course. Both these schemes are commercial in their aspect, and notwithstanding their productivity cannot be regarded as ideal forms of investment. The soundness or otherwise of these investments should be tested by raising the question whether the Government would raise a loan either for erecting official residences thereby to earn house-rent, or for creating new forests to add to the fuel reserve."

Pension for Shamas-ul-Ulemas and Mahamahopadhyas.

19. Writing under the heading "Pecuniary grants with literary titles," the Paisa Akhbar (Lahore), of the 19th March 1911, remarks that one of the boons announced at the Delhi Darbar was that a pecuniary grant would be made to Shamas-ul-Ulemas and Mahamahopadhyas. The announcement was enthusiastically welcomed by educated Indians, but it has caused them great disappointment to learn that the grant has been fixed at the exceedingly small sum of Rs. 100 a year. The niggardliness displayed by Government has defeated the object of the Royal announcement referred to, while it is likely to lower the value of the titles of Shamas-ul-Ulema and Mahamahopadhyas in the estimation of the public.

The Frontier Province.

20. The Punjab Advocate (Mianwali), of the 14th March 1912, publishes a leader headed "A memorial from the Frontier people to the Viceroy of India." The paper has been gratified to learn that some leading and patriotic residents of Dera

Ismail Khan have prepared a memorial to pray Lord Hardinge to reunite the Frontier Province with the Punjab. There has also been issued a leaflet to the effect that the Frontier Province should be amalgamated with the Punjab and that the Hon'ble Sir George Roos-Keppel should be appointed Governor of the whole. The latter suggestion, however, which is dictated by motives of flattery, is a ridiculous one. The paper then goes on to say that the memorial will be certain to offend the people of Peshawar, who have now a most enjoyable time. They are not likely to submit a similar representation; but it should be the duty of other districts to hold meetings to try to have themselves reunited with the Punjab.

The Zamindar newspaper.

21. The following is from the Zamindar (Lahore), of the 14th March 1912 :—

"Open letter from the Editor of the 'Zamindar' to His Honour the Lieutenant-Governor of the Punjab.

"Sir,

"Permit me, in justice to myself and to the views of the innumerable readers of the Zamindar whose united sentiments it has the honour of expressing, to approach Your Honour on a subject which just now is deeply exercising me, affecting as it does the existence of the Zamindar as the voice of Muslim India.

"For some time past the rumour had been gaining ground that the authorities contemplated taking repressive measures against the Zamindar. These rumours emanated from persons who had reasons to be dissatisfied with the Zamindar as the exponent of the views they did not relish, not because those views were derogatory to the true interests of the State, but because they were instrumental in putting them down from the high pedestals to which they had very little title. These persons were either journalists, whose professional jealousy could ill-brook the phenomenal progress of a rival paper or certain so-called leaders of the community whose doings had been fully criticised in its columns. I accordingly considered myself justified in ascribing these rumours to the personal wish of my detractors who have been plotting for some time past against the Zamindar by misrepresenting its aims and objects to some of the Government officials; and as my faith in Your Honour as the impartial judge of my conduct as a publicist, should such rumours prove to be true, was firm and unshaken, I treated them with silent contempt. The other day, however, in the course of a conversation with one of Your Honour's officers, I was painfully surprised to learn that the Zamindar was looked upon, at least by that officer, as 'objectionable in every way.' When I asked him in what way the paper was open to objection he did not, and I presume he could not, explain why it was objectionable. Instead of enlightening me on this head the officer gave me to understand that I should hear about it 'in a day or two.' Now these are words of ominous import, and the only construction that I can put upon them is that those who wish ill to the Zamindar have at last succeeded in poisoning the minds of the authorities against it and the veritable sword of Damocles is going shortly to descend upon its devoted head.

"Your Honour will be pleased to remember that a few days before the Coronation Durbar I had the honour of waiting upon Your Honour at Delhi. In the personal interview granted to me, Your Honour was pleased to express your entire satisfaction with the Zamindar and you were also pleased to graciously mark your appreciation of the services which it had been doing to the community. Since then barely three months have elapsed, and if the paper is regarded by Your Honour's officials as 'in every way objectionable' the change in its attitude must have occurred during this period. Now I respectfully submit that nothing in this period has appeared in the columns of the Zamindar which even by dint of distorted translations and gross misinterpretations might be construed into a violation of the laws that govern His Imperial Majesty's Indian subjects. It is true that some of Your Honour's officials so far forget the obligations that have been imposed upon them as the guardians of the peoples' rights, as to believe in any cock-and-bull story that an admittedly interested party tells them, without verifying it for themselves. One of such officials for instance horrified me by declaring that I had published the blasphemy that the Holy Bible should be consigned to the flames. But I refuse to believe that Your Honour's just and enlightened Government which derives its moral sanctions from the glorious traditions of British equity and liberty will take a person to task for an offence which he never even dreamt of committing, especially when that individual has dedicated the whole of his life to the one great object of upholding British supremacy in India and bringing about a rapproachment between Great Britain and the Islamic world. In this connection I beg leave to refer Your Honour to the correspondence which has lately passed between me and a Turkish member of Parliament and translation of which I had the honour of submitting to Your Honour the other day.

"Passing in review the back numbers of the Zamindar since the appearance of its daily edition I find that the topics discussed resolve themselves into four main heads :—

(1) Italian and Russian atrocities in Tripoli and northern Persia;

(2) Muslim revival in India as a factor of British Imperialism;

(3) Criticism of the so-called leaders of the Muslim community;

(4) Hindu-Muslim union.

"My misfortune is that I deal with these subjects in a language the niceties of which only a scholar of Your Honour's calibre can properly appreciate. It is very easy, therefore, for tale-bearers to poison the minds of English Magistrates and other powerful officials by mischievous interpretations of detached extracts from the Zamindar with utter disregard of context. Papers conducted in English do not run the risk of being blackguarded in this infamous manner by interested sycophants. It is Urdu journals alone that have to suffer for giving expression to sentiments which would be an acquisition to literature of a most healthy and invigorating character if only their garb had been English.

"But I am digressing.

"I must confess that I have inveighed in very strong language indeed against the Italian brigandage and Muscovite cruelty, and in doing so I have simply given vent to the universal feeling of indignant resentment pervading the entire Muslim community of India; but I leave it for Your Honour to judge whether the Urdu language in spite of its progressive elasticity and rich phraseology can possibly approach in its denunciation of Italy and Russia anything so transcendently eloquent as has been and is being written by noble-minded Englishmen against those two 'civilized' powers. Those who are in the habit of adversely criticising my treatment of Italy's conduct in Tripoli and Russia's behaviour in northern Persia do not remember that I owe my allegiance to His Most Gracious Majesty Emperor George V (May he live long!) and not to the potentates of Italy and Russia. It is moreover pointed out by these critics, who are constantly bearing tales against the Zamindar to Magistrates and officers of the C. I. D., that my writings are creating dangerous unrest among the Musalman population. This allegation is as base as it is unreal. I challenge anybody to prove that a single Musalman has in consequence of reading the Zamindar wavered in his allegiance to our beloved Emperor. Hundreds of unsolicited letters that I have received from time to time from my readers declare in emphatic and unmistakeable language that the Zamindar has brought home to them the ideas of true loyalty and devotion as they had never known them before. Fear of prolixity prevents me from incorporating in this representation extracts from these letters, in order to prove my statement; and I am therefore sending all this correspondence in original to the Inspector-General, C. I D., to see for himself what effect the Zamindar is producing upon the mind of its readers in all parts of India.

II.—"It is my firm conviction, and I have received it as a heritage from my alma mater the great M. A.-O. College at Aligarh, that British rule is indispensable to the healthy growth of India as a factor in the assemblage of nations. It is also my belief that although it is essential to the progress of India that Musalmans should keep pace with Hindus in the onward march, it is none the less essential to the existence of Musalmans as an independent community that they should preserve all their communal characteristics intact so as to obviate the risk of being merged in an overwhelming majority, and accordingly it is necessary that while reposing implicit confidence in Providence and their independent exertions for self-improvement, they should trust the Government to do the rest for them. Keeping these broad principles constantly in view I am devoting my life to the accomplishment of this great object, viz., the moral, social and industrial regeneration of my co-religionists; and if I, and with me the majority of my Indian brethren in faith advert to ultra-Indian Islamic politics, our object is no more than this that in the never-to-be-forgotten words of Lord Curzon, England, the proverbial protector of the weak and oppressed, should hold out an occasional umbrella against the hailstones of ultimatums that rain upon the Muslim States at forty-eight hours interval. I fail to see eye to eye with my critics who are of opinion that we should not raise our voice in defence of Turkey or Persia, even if we see them lying in a mangled heap before us. I would not be true to myself as a Muselman, and true to my numerous constituents as a journalist, nor would I be loyal to the Government to whom I think it my duty to represent the true state of Muslim feeling, if I failed to give expression to the central truth that Musalmans all the world over cannot but share one another's joys and sorrows. I submit that it is not objectionable to give expression to the natural with that Turkey and Persia ought not to be spoliated by a European power or a combination of European powers, and I am sure Your Honour will receive these remarks in the sense in which they are offered.

III.—"Some of the self-styled leaders of the Muslim community were weighed in the balance and found wanting. They sacrified communal interests to ideas of personal aggrandisement, and consequently the Zamindar, voicing as it does the sentiments of the community, asked them in the name of the people either to mend their ways or to vacate their self-appropriated places for men who know their duty towards the Muslim public as well as towards the Government. This was naturally resented by the 'leaders' who could not be expected to give up without a struggle the power that they had acquired before the revivalistic tendencies had set in. They are chafing at the campaign of reform started by the Zamindar, and I am beholden among other causes to some of these gentry for the fix in which I find myself at present. But surely Your Honour will be the last person to deny to a well-meaning publicist the right of criticising the actions of a person or persons if such actions affect the interests of the community and from an Imperial point of view the interests of the Government as well. There is no reason therefore that the Zamindar should be looked upon as 'objectionable in every way' if one of its 'misdeeds' constitutes the exposing of bogus leaders.

IV.—"It is one of the strange ironies of the Coronation Darbar that some of the self-styled representatives of public opinion should twit the Editor of the Zamindar with his efforts to promote an entente between the two communities by inaugurating cordial relations with Hindu journalists. I was under the impression that after the noble sentiments to which expression was given by our beloved Emperor as to the desirability of Hindus and Musalmans living side by side in mutual harmony and good-will very few would have the hardihood to jeopardise the true interests of the country by perpetuating the differences which were responsible for the notorious Hindu-Muhammadan aloofness. Hence I have been doing my level-best to promote good relations between the two communities by example and precept, and if certain scurvy politicians, for motives of their own, add this item to the catalogue of my sins I am sure that Your Honour's true statesmanship will prove my expiation.

"In conclusion I respectfully beg to assure Your Honour that the most critical perusal of the Zamindar by unbiassed person will fail to detect anything that is objectionable in the sense in which this word is censoriously used. On the other hand it will be found abounding in sentiments that breathe intense love and devotion to the British Crown. If, notwithstanding all this, Your Honour's officials persist in regarding it as 'in every way objectionable' it is the misfortune of the Muslim community. These officials may, for ought I know, have recommended the gagging of the Zamindar, and I may 'in a day or two' hear that it has been decided that I should deposit a deterrant security. I wish such an eventuality may not come to pass, for such a decision would be tantamount to condemning one unheard, and though my personal esteem for Your Honour's Government will remain unimpaired it is hard to contemplate that the Musalmans in general and the readers of the Zamindar in particular should be given an opportunity of harbouring the impression that the Zamindar had to pay the penalty of offending disappointed rivals and disconcerted leaders who are adepts in the arts of stabbing in the dark.

"I sincerely hope that Your Honour's firm hand, guided by your well-known love of justice, will prevent your officers from cherishing uncharitable sentiments towards the Zamindar and from suppressing the dawning conviction that Musalmans have a right to live with honour and freedom under the glorious flag of England. Long live the Emperor!"

The paper also publishes an Urdu translation of the letter.

One M. Salim, of Lahore, writing to the Zamindar (Lahore), of the 12th March 1912, enquires whether there is any Muhammadan who did not feel sorry and indignant on perusing the foregoing note and was not led to exclaim "Save me from my friends!" He further asks whether the "friends" of the Zamindar will prove successful in ending its days and, along with it, the twenty thousand Muhammadans who regard it as "Islamic and spiritual food;" and whether this food, which breathes new life into dead bodies, will be snatched out of "our" mouth. Will the paper, which constitutes the only means of saving Muhammadans from destruction, renders true services to Islam, lays the real needs of the (Muhammadan) community before Government, and teaches true loyalty to the throne, cease to exist because of certain Musalmans who cannot tolerate "our" very existence? If this comes to pass it must be concluded that "we" possess no sense of shame and do not wish to lead an honourable life. The death of the Zamindar will mean triumph for those traitors to the (Muhammadan) community who have already caused it considerable injury by acting up to their personal views; while it will again plunge poor Musalmans into the darkness from which they had begun to emerge through the instrumentality of that paper. The writer's suggestion to avert the threatened calamity is that, before security is demanded from the Zamindar, nay, "from us," "we five thousand subscribers" should each procure one more subscriber and have his subscription paid into the paper's office; so that the demand for security may at once be complied with and the circulation of the paper may also be increased. Next he urges the subscribers to adopt his suggestion without loss of time, so that their activity may silence the Zamindar's opponents (lit. our friends) for the future. In conclusion, he advises the remittance of Re. 1-2-0 as subscription from one subscriber.

The Zamindar (Lahore), of the 16th March 1912, publishes two letters under the heading "Ardour of Sympathy." One of the writers—Mirza Ghulam Mohy-ud-Din, Book-binder, Sutar Mandi, Lahore—makes remarks similar to those expressed by M. Salim, and adds that, although he is a poor man, he has not the least hesitation in laying down even his life in the service of his community. He wishes that his worthless life could prove of use to Zafar Ali or any one else feeling for his co-religionists. In conclusion, he states that the Muhammadan public is anxious that a meeting should be held in connection with the demand of security from the Zamindar, so that "this national affair" may be laid before Musalmans and they may act up to the resolutions adopted at the meeting.

The other correspondent—one Nur-ud-din—praises the Zamindar and goes on to remark that it creates "a correct political taste" in Muslim youths; that Muhammadans cannot dispense with it; and that this is why not a few of them have recently told him that it is the duty of the community to find any security that may be demanded from the paper.

Security from the Zamindar.

22. The Zamindar (Lahore), of the 17th March 1912, publishes an article headed "Appreciation of poetry by the denizens of the region above, or security from the Zamindar. Do not fear as you are one of the faithful." The Editor begins by quoting an extract in which the late Sir Syed Ahmad Khan says that "we" should spread the education received by "us in these civilised countries" among the people of "our" own country and race; that the task is undoubtedly beset with great difficulties; that "we" have, among other things, to face opposition from those narrow-minded members of the ruling race who cannot tolerate an improvement in "our" social and political condition; but that "we" should look to "our" own and "our" community's good, and should most patiently endure the troubles and difficulties that may befall "us." Continuing, he remarks that the Zamindar has always praised the British Government, and that he has done his best, in both prose and verse, to make Muhammadans entertain feelings of true love for the Crown. He did this without much thought of winning praise or reward, still he had the idea that he would at least be allowed to profit by those first rights of humanity, which are enjoyed by the subjects of every Government however, uncivilised it may be; and that he would be permitted to lead a life of that liberty and peace which are among the proud characteristics of England and of which she is never tired of singing. It is, however, idle to hope in these days, which are time of troubles and calamities for Islam, that "we" can, in spite of being Muhammadans, escape misfortune. "Our" reward for publishing odes in praise of the King Emperor and His Majesty's Government has been that "we" have been called to furnish security. Next the Editor reproduces two orders by the District Magistrate, Lahore, demanding securities in respect of the weekly and daily editions of the Zamindar. He also transcribes his reply to the said officer, in which he contends that the order regarding the weekly Zamindar goes against section 4 (1) of the Press Act. As to the order about the daily edition of his paper, he can make no reply to it until he has consulted his readers in the matter. He then goes on to say that he undoubtedly told the Deputy Commissioner that the daily Zamindar would confine itself to the (Turco-Italian) War and connected things. The compact was observed up to the 21st December last, but he changed the character of the paper with effect from the 1st idem (sic.). His chief reason for the change was that Maulvi Inshaulla, who also was allowed to bring out a daily edition of the Watan on the aforesaid understanding, had been publishing, for months previously, articles having no concern with the war. And as the Maulvi sees the Deputy Commissioner and the Additional District

Magistrate more frequently than the Editor, the last named was right in thinking that he (the Maulvi) must have obtained permission to publish the writings referred to. He cannot, therefore, agree with the Deputy Commissioner that the daily Zamindar should be required to furnish security on the ground only of its not having abided by the compact made with the said officer. If it is just to make the demand for this reason alone, the Watan should be the first paper to be called upon to deposit security. He then goes on to say that he is at a loss to understand how his tone, which is considered simply "objectionable" in regard to the daily Zamindar, becomes "exceedingly immoderate and objectionable" in his weekly paper, which is only a collection of the articles appearing in the daily edition.

The supersession of Dewan Narendra Nath.

23. The following is from the Tribune (Lahore), of 20th March 1912 :—

"The news that in selecting for appointment to officiate as Commissioner in the place of Colonel Parsons and Mr. Maynard the claims of Dewan Bahadur Narendra Nath have been overlooked has been received with regret and disappointment throughout the Province. Personally the Dewan Sahib is held in high esteem by all classes of his countrymen and there is naturally great sympathy with him in the very awkward predicament in which he finds himself placed by his supersession by his juniors in both service and rank. But apart from his personality, the action of the Local Government is taken exception to on broad grounds of policy. The Dewan Bahadur is a high-caste Brahman of aristocratic birth, he is one of the most distinguished graduates that the Punjab University has produced; his intellectual equipment is of a high order, and his official record is very high. When he was selected last year to officiate as Commissioner the appointment was received with great approbation by all Indians as indicating the desire of Government to carry out the wishes of Queen Victoria as expressed in the Proclamation of 1858 and repeated half a century later by King Edward VII, and again reiterated and reaffirmed only last year by the King Emperor by selecting Indians for high offices of trust and responsibility. The fact that he has now been superseded will go a long way to neutralise the pleasure then felt. The feeling throughout the Province is that the just claims of an Indian officer of recognised ability and admitted integrity have been passed over. It is felt everywhere that there can be no hope of an Indian rising to any of the high posts in the executive line when such an admittedly able officer as Dewan Bahadur Narendra Nath has been passed over. In Bombay, Madras and Bengal Indians have been selected for appointment to the Executive Councils, and in the Executive Council of the Viceroy himself a place has been found for an Indian. In the Council of the Secretary of State for India also room has been found for two Indian members. In the Punjab there is no Executive Council, and there is indeed no likelihood of one being established in the near future. But the people had begun to think that they would have ere long an Indian Commissioner. Their disappointment will be very keen indeed if it turns out that the expectation in question is not likely to be realised. If the claims of Dewan Narendra Nath are passed over now, there will be no occasion for the appointment of another Indian as Commissioner for several years to come. And what guarantee is there that even if such an occasion does arise, the claims of an Indian will fare any better than on the present occasion?"

Decadence of public life.

24. The Tribune (Lahore), publishes the following contributed article in its issue of 21st March 1912 :—

"No one who loves his country at all can help rejoicing that at last the consciousness of something wrong with the public life of the country is slowly dawning upon the thinking minds of the nation. Thanks to a note of alarm sounded by the Indu Prakash, of Bombay, the matter seems to have roused attention all over the country, and the leading papers have taken it up in a spirit of deep concern. Nothing can be of deeper concern to a people situated as we are, than 'the decadence of public life' which, if true, necessarily involves a falling off in the standard of public morality. A healthy public life is one of the elemental necessities of modern times. No Government, however representative and benevolent, can alone, and fully, satisfy the needs of the body politic, much less a Government which from the very necessity of its situation is only just beginning to introduce the element of representation in its Legislative and Executive Councils. Even fully self-governed countries like England and Germany cannot solely depend upon their Governments alone for the culture and the strengthening of the morality of the nation and the introduction and the maintenance of forces which contribute to national progress. A fortiori, a much more vigorous public life is needed in countries like India, where the duties and functions of Government are vested in a body of Crown servants who are foreign in religion, sentiments and modes of life to the vast bulk of the population governed. With the best of intentions they cannot do everything, nor are they anxious or even competent to do everything. They cannot, for example, without incurring the risk of being misunderstood meddle with the religious and social ideas and practices of the people. In the task of administering laws framed and made in the spirit of the West at every step they meet a volume of prejudices and sentiments which stand as an adamantine wall between the life to which they have been accustomed in their island home and life as it is led and practised in India. At every step in the performance of their executive, administrative, legislative and judicial functions, they need the help of Indians who are not only able and willing to give them advice but who possess a sufficiently strong personality as well as honesty of purpose to give them sound and correct advice. No human institution can be self-sufficient. However strong and efficient in the discharge of its obligations most of the Government strength must eventually depend on the strength of those who are in a position to give it a timely warning against mistakes or who can prevent it from falling into errors or becoming a victim of weaknesses inherent in human nature. * * * Public life outside official circles means one of two things, co-operation for common purposes and the creation and development of a sound independent public opinion which may effectively control the official mind and will, whenever the latter be disposed to go wrong. This neither means hostility to established authority nor subservience to it. What it is needed is that it should not be corrupt and self-seeking; that it should neither indulge in hysterics against the Government, nor be a mere shadow of the latter; that to be effective it should be sufficiently bold and courageous, though respectful and constitutional; that the measure of its strength should be the purity of its moving springs and the thorough disinterestedness of its motives; that it should seek its reward in the consciousness of having done its duty and not in the extent of the benefits which it brings in the shape of honours and privileges."

After discussing at some length the bad points of present-day public men, and the mistakes of Government and the people who elevate them to public prominence, the paper continues :—

"Public life brings with it public honours. They are of two kinds. Honours conferred by Government and honours conferred by the public. The Government confers honours for reasons of its own which may not in all cases commend themselves to the public. What we, however, find is that after obtaining Government honours the recipients try hard, by hook or crook, to have the seal of public approval put upon their career. The public, whether out of fear of official displeasure or for some other reason, forsake their tried servants, throw them into the background and let those bask in the sunshine whose sole claim to their confidence is the possession of official honours and titles. The public services of a non-official public man can be estimated in several ways :—

(1) By the amount of time he has been giving to the study of public questions and the solution of public problems.

(2) By active service such as in the cause of education or in the municipality or in the relief of public distress or otherwise by pen or by tongue.

(3) By the amount of money he has been spending in the public interest.

(4) By the risk he has been running by espousing the public cause, and so on.

"The purity of public life can never be maintained in a country or Province or city where public honours are conferred regardless of the above tests.

* * * * *

"All communities possess a number of people who know how to play their cards skilfully, blow their trumpet or have it blown by others. These persons manage to bring themselves to the front in every phase of public activity. Brass does pay to great extent in human affairs but then the building up of a national life is a very serious thing to be allowed to be trifled with. National life must be guided by people who devote time and labour to the study of national requirements. The fact that a man has won a Rai Bahadurship or has succeeded in his business or profession is not necessarily a qualification for leadership in national affairs. The latter can only be entrusted to tried and faithful captains who have stood fire, who have shown what sacrifice is, and who have not flinched when misrepresented and calumniated. The second defect in our public life which requires immediate looking after, is the inordinate desire of some people of leading every possible department of public life and that of gathering all the strings of public life into their own hands. For example there are certain people who want to lead every movement, whether it is industrial, educational, intellectual, moral, religious, &c., regardless of their fitness for them and regardless of the time at their disposal. There are men who never refuse any office yet never attend to the duties of any. There are others who want the sweets of every office without either the patience or the ability to put up with its bitters too. With some the prevailing notion seems to be that holding office in different societies and corporations adds to their dignity and influence, specially so if the society or association is in every way official or semi-official and the membership of which affords opportunities of mixing with and pleasing high officials. There are many of people who seek the membership of Associations, Universities, Public Libraries, &c., for these very reasons, to say nothing of Municipal Committees and Legislative Councils. These are all unhealthy signs which demoralise public life and debase public ideas; what we want in public life is a sense of fitness, a sense of proportion, a sense of discipline, a sense of self-control and, last but not least, a fair and honest division of labour."

C. STEAD,

LAHORE: } Assistant to the Deputy Inspector General of Police,
The 23rd March 1912. } Criminal Investigation Department, Punjab.

Punjab Government Press, Lahore—27·3·12—238—107—H. L. S.

[ Confidential. ]

[ Vol. XXV. ] SELECTIONS [ No. 13. ]

FROM THE

NATIVE NEWSPAPERS

PUBLISHED IN THE PUNJAB.

Examined up to 30th March 1912.

---

CONTENTS.

Page.

I.—Politics.

(a) Foreign—

1. The Turco-Italian War (Zamindar) ... ... 227
2. Ditto (Observer) ... ... ib.

(b) Home—

3. Sikhs and politics (Loyal Gazette) ... ... ib.
4. Sedition hunting and the growth of true public spirit (Panjabee) ... ... ... 228

II.—Afghanistan and Trans-Frontier.

5. Tribal raids into British territory (Zamindar) ... 228

III.—Native States.

6. The Kashmir Murder case (Panjabee) ... 228

IV.—Kine-killing.

Nil.

V.—Native Societies and Religious Matters.

7. The Egyptian President of the forthcoming annual session of the Nudwat-ul-Ulema (Zamindar) ... 229
8. Message of the Moslem world to the Muhammadans of India (Tribune) ... ... ... ib.

VI.—Legislation.

9. The Press Act (Hindu) ... ... ... 229
10. The Elementary Education Bill (Observer) ... ib.
11. Ditto ditto ( Ditto ) ... 230
12. The Punjab Panchayat Bill (Panjabee) ... 231
13. Defects in the present Council Regulations (Panjabee) ... ... ... ... ib.

Page.

VII.—General Administration.

(a) Judicial—

Nil.

(b) Police—

14. Dacoities and murders (Panjabee) ... 232
15. The Military riot at Ambala ( Ditto ) ... ib.

(c) Municipal and Cantonment affairs—

Nil.

(d) Education —

Nil.

(e)—Agriculture and ·· ..tions affecting the land— ··

16. Pasturage for cattle in villages (Tribune) ... 232

(f) Railways and Communications—

Nil.

(g) Postal matters—

Nil.

(h) Miscellaneous—

17. Security from the Zamindar (Zamindar) ... 233
18. Ditto ditto ( Ditto ) ... ib.
19. Ditto ditto (Watan) ... 234
20. The Zamindar newspaper (Zamindar) ... ib.
21. Ditto (Watan) ... ib.
22. The Zamindar and the Editor of the Watan (Watan) ... ... ... ... 236
23. Maulvi Insha-Ulla and the Zamindar (Zamindar) 237
24. Hasan Nizami and the Zamindar ( Ditto ) 238
25. The supersession of Diwan Narendra Nath (Tribune) ... ... ... ... 239
26. Question in the Bombay Legislative Council re instruction in 'salaaming' (Panjabee) ... ib.
27. Lord Crewe and English journalists of Calcutta (Tribune) ... ... ... ... 240

LIST OF NEWSPAPERS AND PERIODICALS EXAMINED BY THE SPECIAL BRANCH AS IT STOOD ON THE 30TH MARCH 1912.

| No. | Name. | Locality. | Name of Publisher. | Circulation. |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| | ENGLISH. | | | |
| | DAILY. | | | |
| 1 | Tribune ... | Lahore ... | Bihari Lal ... | 1,758 copies. |
| | TRI-WEEKLY. | | | |
| 2 | Panjabee ... | Lahore ... | Mul Chand ... | 2,424 copies. |
| | BI-WEEKLY. | | | |
| 3 | Observer ... | Lahore ... | Nizam-ud-din ... | 1,000 copies. |
| 4 | Punjab Times and Frontier News. | Rawalpindi ... | J. R. Thapur ... | 200 „ |
| | WEEKLY. | | | |
| 5 | Arya Patrika ... | Lahore ... | Devi Chand ... | 650 copies. |
| 6 | Harbinger ... | Do. ... | Durga Parshad ... | 300 „ |
| 7 | Khalsa Advocate ... | Amritsar ... | Bahadar Singh ... | 752 „ |
| | FORTNIGHTLY. | | | |
| 8 | Jijnasu ... | Lahore ... | Ishwar Das ... | ... |
| | MONTHLY. | | | |
| 9 | D. A.-V. College Magazine... | Lahore ... | Saraswati Nath ... | 1,000 copies. |
| 10 | Forman Christian College Notes.* | Do. ... | ... | ... |
| 11 | Practical Medicine* ... | Delhi ... | ... | ... |
| 12 | Punjab Educational Journal | Lahore ... | R. B. Mohan Lal ... | 700 copies. |
| 13 | Punjab Mission News ... | Do. ... | Revd. Wigram ... | 250 „ |
| 14 | Ravi ... | Do. ... | Mr. B. M. Jones ... | ... |
| 15 | Review of Religions ... | Qadian (Gurdaspur) ... | Sadr Anjuman Ahmadia, Qadian. | 800 copies. |
| 16 | Science Grounded Religion... | Lahore ... | Dev Rattan ... | 25 „ |
| 17 | Teacher ... | Dinga (Gujrat) ... | Kanhaya Singh ... | 200 „ |
| | URDU. | | | |
| | DAILY. | | | |
| 18 | Akhbar-i-'Am ... | Lahore ... | Govind Sahai ... | 630 copies. |
| 19 | Paisa Akhbar ... | Do. ... | Abdul Aziz ... | 1,011 „ |
| 20 | Watan ... | Do. ... | Muhammad Insha Alla ... | ... |
| 21 | Zamindar ... | Do. ... | Zafar Ali Khan, B.A. ... | ... |
| | BI-WEEKLY. | | | |
| 22 | Vakil ... | Amritsar ... | Abdul Aziz ... | 1,970 copies. |
| | WEEKLY. | | | |
| 23 | Afghan ... | Peshawar ... | Saiyid Muhammad Abdulla | 500 copies. |
| 24 | Ahl-i-Hadis ... | Amritsar ... | Sanaulla ... | 925 „ |
| 25 | Ahluwalia Gazette ... | Do. ... | Lehna Singh ... | 500 „ |
| 26 | Al-Moin ... | Do. ... | Mehraj-ud-din ... | ... |
| 27 | Army News ... | Ludhiana ... | Hira Lal & Co. ... | 1,300 copies. |
| 28 | Arorbans Gazette ... | Amritsar ... | Labh Singh ... | ... |
| 29 | Arya Gazette ... | Lahore ... | Bhowani Das ... | 550 copies. |
| 30 | Badar ... | Qadian, Gurdaspur District | Muhammad Sadiq ... | 200 „ |

* Not received during the month.

LIST OF NEWSPAPERS AND PERIODICALS EXAMINED BY THE SPECIAL BRANCH AS IT STOOD ON THE 30TH MARCH 1912—CONTINUED.

| No. | Name. | Locality. | Name of Publisher. | Circulation. |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| | URDU—CONTINUED. | | | |
| | WEEKLY—continued. | | | |
| 31 | Bharat ... | Jullundur ... | Thakur Sheoratan Singh | ... |
| 32 | Civil and Military News ... | Ludhiana ... | Saiyid Muhammad ... | 1,325 copies. |
| 33 | Curzon Gazette ... | Delhi ... | Mirza Hairat ... | 111 „ |
| 34 | Delhi Gazette* ... | Do. ... | Sajjad Husain ... | 200 „ |
| 35 | Edward Gazette* ... | Abbott-abad ... | Muhammad Latif ... | 200 „ |
| 36 | Hakam ... | Qadian, Gurdaspur District | Yakub Ali ... | 900 „ |
| 37 | Haq ... | Delhi ... | Kasim Ali ... | 200 „ |
| 38 | Haq Pasand ... | Amritsar ... | Ram Nath ... | 382 „ |
| 39 | Hindu ... | Lahore ... | Hari Lal Sharma ... | ... |
| 40 | Hindustan ... | Do. ... | Ram Sarn Dutt ... | 8,070 copies. |
| 41 | Indar ... | Do. ... | Dharm Pal, B.A. ... | ... |
| 42 | Islam ... | Do. ... | Abdul Latif ... | 200 copies. |
| 43 | Jhang Sial ... | Jhang ... | Prabh Dyal ... | 2,262 „ |
| 44 | Kapurthala Akhbar ... | Kapurthala ... | Hamid Husain ... | 155 „ |
| 45 | Loyal Gazette ... | Lahore ... | Amar Singh ... | 200 „ |
| 46 | Lytton Gazette ... | Delhi ... | Bulaki Das ... | 1,000 „ |
| 47 | Milap* ... | Lyallpur ... | Jawahar Lal ... | ... |
| 48 | Millat ... | Lahore ... | Shuja Ulla ... | 1,500 copies. |
| 49 | Mister Gazette ... | Do. ... | Ali Bakhsh ... | 150 „ |
| 50 | Munir ... | Jhang ... | Hafiz Khuda Bakhsh ... | 200 „ |
| 51 | Musalman ... | Amritsar ... | Sana-ulla ... | 400 „ |
| 52 | Nur ... | Qadian, Gurdaspur District | Muhammad Yusaf ... | 200 „ |
| 53 | Nur Afshan ... | Ludhiana ... | Revd. Dr. E. M. Wherry | 500 „ |
| 54 | Paisa Akhbar ... | Lahore ... | Abdul Aziz ... | 8,377 „ |
| 55 | Parkash ... | Do. ... | Krishan ... | 1,723 „ |
| 56 | Punjab Advocate ... | Mianwali ... | Karm Chand, Bahl ... | 1,000 „ |
| 57 | Punjab Samachar ... | Lahore ... | Hira Lal ... | 705 „ |
| 58 | Rajput Gazette ... | Do. ... | Thakur Sukhram Das ... | 650 „ |
| 59 | Municipal Gazette and Sada-i-Hind. | Do. ... | Din Muhammad ... | 500 „ |
| 60 | Sadiq-ul-Akhbar ... | Bahawalpur ... | Maulvi Ata Ullah ... | 392 „ |
| 61 | Ditto ... | Rewari ... | Safdar Hussain ... | 200 „ |
| 62 | Sanatan Dharm Pracharak... | Amritsar ... | Rulia Ram ... | 200 „ |
| 63 | Shanti ... | Rawalpindi ... | Kishan Chand Mohan ... | 300 „ |
| 64 | Sialkot Paper ... | Sialkot ... | Todar Mal ... | 500 „ |
| 65 | Siraj-ul-Akhbar ... | Jhelum ... | Maulvi Fakir Muhammad | 450 „ |
| 66 | Tahzib-ul-Niswan ... | Lahore ... | Mumtaz Ali ... | 240 „ |

*Not received during the week.

LIST OF NEWSPAPERS AND PERIODICALS EXAMINED BY THE SPECIAL BRANCH AS IT STOOD ON THE 30TH MARCH 1912—CONCLUDED.

| No. | Name. | Locality. | Name of Publisher. | Circulation. |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| | URDU—CONCLUDED. | | | |
| | WEEKLY—concluded. | | | |
| 67 | Victoria Paper ... | Sialkot ... | Gian Chand ... | 600 copies. |
| 68 | Wafadar* ... | Lahore ... | Fazal-ud-din ... | 600 „ |
| 69 | Waqt ... | Do. ... | Ali Husain ... | 200 „ |
| 70 | Watan ... | Do. ... | Muhammad Insha Ullah... | 1,800 „ |
| 71 | Zamindar ... | Do. ... | Zafar Ali Khan, B.A. ... | 750 „ |
| | FORTNIGHTLY. | | | |
| 72 | Biwah Samachar ... | Lahore ... | Ram Chand ... | 300 copies. |
| 73 | Kam Dhenu ... | Ludhiana ... | Daulat Ram ... | 100 „ |
| 74 | Mohyal Gazette ... | Kala, Jhelum District ... | Mehta Sham Das ... | 250 „ |
| | PERSIAN. | | | |
| | FORTNIGHTLY. | | | |
| 75 | Siraj-ul-Akhbar ... | Kabul ... | Abdul Khalik ... | ... |
| | URDU. | | | |
| | MONTHLY. | | | |
| 76 | Arorbans Parkash ... | Lahore ... | Salig Ram ... | 200 copies. |
| 77 | Arya Musafir ... | Jullundur ... | Wazir Chand ... | 1,300 „ |
| 78 | Jauhar ... | Amritsar ... | Muhammad Ismail Khan | 200 „ |
| 79 | Kakezai Social Reformer ... | Lahore ... | Fazl Din ... | 200 „ |
| 80 | Makhzan ... | Delhi ... | Abdul Kadir ... | 4,000 „ |
| 81 | Rafiq ... | Lahore ... | Charinji Lal ... | 500 „ |
| 82 | Sadhu ... | Do. ... | Sheobart Lal ... | 500 „ |
| 83 | Martand ... | Do. ... | Kanhya Lal ... | 250 „ |
| 84 | Raghbir Patrika ... | Do. ... | Prab Dial ... | 500 „ |
| 85 | Zaban* ... | Delhi ... | Hamid Hasain ... | 500 „ |
| | GURMUKHI. | | | |
| | WEEKLY. | | | |
| 86 | Khalsa Sewak ... | Amritsar ... | Jiwan Singh ... | 1,000 copies. |
| 87 | Punjab Reporter* ... | Do. ... | Ganda Singh ... | ... |
| 88 | Punjabi Surma ... | Lahore ... | Gian Chand ... | 1,000 copies. |

* Not received during the week.

I.—Politics.

(a)—Foreign.

The Turco-Italian War.

1. The Zamindar (Lahore), of the 22nd March 1912, has an article headed "Rumours of peace." After remarking that a handful of ill-armed Arabs have succeeded in bringing the Italians to their senses, it says that Turkey's appeal to the Powers for mediation failed to move the latter's philanthropic feelings. The sole reason for this was that a Christian Government appeared to have the upper-hand of Muhammadans, which led the Powers to believe that the Prophet's followers were being trampled on, and that they (the Powers) should play the part of silent on-lookers. When, however, Italy began to receive a thrashing and a Christian (lit. European) kingdom seemed about to be disgraced, they began to devise plans to induce the belligerents to come to terms. Apparently these champions of humanity wish to exert pressure on Turkey to concede some rights to the Italians in her African possession. The Turks can, however, fully see through the idle threats and foxy ways of the Powers, and have rejected Russia's proposals for peace with scorn. The Tanin (Constantinople) writes that they have decided to prefer honourable death to a life of disgrace; and will agree to no conditions likely to take away from the dignity of His Majesty the Sultan. Continuing, the paper observes that signs are not wanting that proposals for peace will be made; that the Powers will try to injure Turkey; but that the latter will not yield and there will be a most sanguinary war.

The Turco-Italian War.

2. The following is from the Observer (Lahore), of 23rd March 1912:—

"The news will be read with general satisfaction that the Porte has received assurances from the Powers that no pressure will be brought to bear upon it for the purpose of ending the War. The powers expressed their inability to intervene at the commencement of the War, when the Porte requested them in the name of humanity and justice and fair-play to persuade Italy to leave Tripoli alone. Their asking Italy, of their own initiative, as to the terms on which she would accept mediation now, when Italy is going to reap the reward of her brigandage and her atrocities, this apparent volte face on the part of the European Powers at the present juncture, naturally created apprehensions that the Powers were coming to the rescue of Italy to the prejudice of Turkey. It is, however, satisfactory to find that there is no fear of such a contingency coming to pass and that the Powers will continue to observe strict neutrality. The present is not the time for mediation and any proposals to that effect will, to say the least, be liable to misconstruction."

(b)—Home.

Sikhs and politics.

3. The Loyal Gazette (Lahore), of the 17th March 1912, publishes a communication from one B. Hari, of Khushab, headed "Reasons for our aloofness from politics." The writer endorses the views expressed in the articles which have already appeared in the paper on the subject (vide paragraphs 9 and 9 of Selections Nos. 9 and 10 respectively). Continuing, he enquires whether Sikhs have ever pondered over the fact that, while only half a century back they were rulers of this Province, to-day they have no place in branches of the public service, excepting only the Military Department, Government, he adds, is on no account to blame for this: it will appear on reflection that the fault rests with Sikhs themselves. After asking why Government should give them posts without a demand for the same, he remarks that the first reason for their non-participation in politics consists in their "misconception of loyalty." It is true that Sikhism enjoins on its followers more strongly than any other religion to be loyal to their rulers, and that it is the duty of Sikhs to remain thoroughly loyal to Government. This does not, however, mean that they should eschew politics if they keep themselves within the bounds of law and remain loyal and obedient to their rulers. Excess is always bad. Extremism (in politics) is as reprehensible as "slavish loyalty;" but their civilised Government does not expect the latter from Sikhs. After remarking that loyalty and not "loyalty to a fault" should be their great virtue, the writer says that the second reason for their eschewing politics is that they are wanting in the spirit of self-respect and self-confidence. The third cause is their backwardness in education; while the fourth and fifth are that their leaders and papers work away from the (country's) political centre and they have no middle class. Their first duty should now be to establish a strong Political League, consisting of educated Sikhs and having its head office at Lahore. Again their chiefs should start Sikh Colleges at both Delhi and Lahore; while some Sikh papers, one of which must be a daily, should issue from the new capital.

Sedition-hunting and the growth of true public spirit.

4. The Panjabee (Lahore), of 26th March 1912, publishes the following under the heading 'Sedition in the superlative':—

"It is a question worthy of deep consideration by thoughtful statesmen at the helm of affairs whether sedition-hunting in India is not over-done to the detriment of the growth of true public spirit. Every Indian thinker, including the Hon'ble Mr. Gokhale, seems to think so. Anglo-Indian rulers, however, seem to think quite the reverse. Evidently in the minds of the latter there is a lurking sense of satisfaction that even the suppression of true public spirit and activity is good on the whole. But we are afraid that the want of true public spirit and the co-operation with Government that springs from it, will be no strength to the Government and the State. Sedition-hunting must be confined to legitimate limits and very good care must be taken to see that it does not harm true public activities. The people of India are naturally timid and gentle, fearing authority more than any other nation. Every repressive measure has in practice magnified itself ten-fold, harming institutions which the central authorities could never have contemplated. When Mr. Gokhale observed that his Society was watched by the C. I. D. in an offensive manner, what was the reply that the Hon'ble Home Member gave? He insinuated that societies existed having some ostensible objects which they use as a cover for political motives! Mr. Gokhale's Society can never be of this description, but it could not win the approval of the Hon'ble Sir Reginald Craddock. The result of the present suspicious policy is that many of the blows armed at the seditionists are actually falling on the loyalists, since sedition is non-existent. It is not for us to point out what the effect of this misapplication of reprisals will be but let the Government contemplate."

II.—Afghanistan and Trans-Frontier.

Tribal raids into British territory.

5. The Zamindar (Lahore), of the 27th March 1912, publishes a leader headed "Prevention of dacoities in the Frontier ilaka in the Punjab." The Hindustan, it says, has made the suggestion that Sahukars and (other) wealthy persons in those places where dacoities have been, or are likely to be, committed, should be freely granted licenses to keep rifles and revolvers. That paper adds that, as Hindu Sahukars chiefly fall a prey to dacoits, great liberality should be displayed in allowing Hindus to keep arms. Dacoits, however, make no distinctions of religion, while it is an admitted fact that Muhammadans are generally very poor and that Hindu Sahukars roll in wealth. This is why tribal dacoits (usually) loot Hindu money-lenders; but they do not spare even a well-to-do Muhammadan when they can get hold of one. It is, therefore, absurd on the part of the Hindustan to advise (Government) to arm only Hindus and to leave Musalmans at the mercy of dacoits. Besides, Hindu Sahukars are so weak by nature that even arms cannot give them the courage to fight dacoits. The Zamindar then takes exception to the Hindustan's further suggestion that Hindus of those places where dacoities are committed should not be burdened with the cost of punitive police. That paper, it adds, argues that the arrangement would prompt Muhammadans to vie with Hindus in putting an end to dacoities. It is, however, more likely that the uneducated Muhammadans (lit. party) of the Frontier Province would be still further inflamed by this illegal treatment, and would prove still more dangerous for Hindus. It is, therefore, to be hoped that Government will not commit a legal mistake by acting up to the Hindustan's suggestion.

III.—Native States.

The Kashmir Murder Case.

6. The following is from the Panjabee (Lahore), of 28th March 1912:—

"We invite the attention of the Government and of our readers to the Kashmir Murder Case, brief particulars of which are given elsewhere in this issue. The notable fact about this case is that the Government of India have interfered in a strange and mysterious manner and ordered the release of the accused (Muhammadans) who had been found guilty of the offence of murder by three successive courts of the Kashmir State in their able and learned judgments. The case passed through a most critical scrutiny in the Sessions Court by Mr. Bodhraj Sawhney, Barrister-at-Law, and in the High Court by Rai Bahadur Pandit Radha Kishan, Kaul, Judge, and lastly, in the Court of the Maharaja Bahadur of Jammu and Kashmir, by His Highness himself. There is a certain amount of difficulty in dealing with matters connected with Native States, howsoever important they might be. The State officials and subjects out of fear would not ventilate their grievances and difficulties to the Supreme Government. Men of the British territory have no right to speak or represent Native State affairs directly to Government as the latter have proclaimed the policy of 'non-interference.' Lastly, the members of the Provincial or Imperial Legislative Councils are not allowed to put any questions regarding the Native States. Who, then, will deal with the injustice done to or by Native States? It is a question which one finds oneself confronted with in connection with the Native States matters. In the present case we are concerned more with the constitutional side of the question. And what is the present status of the accused murderers? Are they guilty or innocent? The fact of their release does not establish their innocence and in that case it would seem that the law itself has its limbs broken by this executive mandate."

V.—Native Societies and Religious Matters.

The Egyptian President of the forthcoming annual session of the Nudwat-ul-Ulema.

7. Writing under the heading "Sayad Rashid Raza's arrival in India," the Zamindar (Lahore), of the 21st March 1912, remarks that it will highly please Indian Muhammadans to learn that the Sayad [the learned Editor of the Manar (of Cairo)], who has been selected to preside over the ensuing annual session of the Nudwat-ul-Ulema, was to have landed at Bombay on the 22nd instant. The paper then proceeds to say that the arrival of Sayad Rashid Raza from Egypt constitutes a life-giving commentary on the verse "All Muhammadans are brothers." The Sayad has come out at the request of Maulana Shibli, and it is the duty of Indian Muhammadans to treat him with love and affection and to make the coming session of the Nudwa a great success, so as to prove their oneness with Egyptian Musalmans in the matter of upholding the traditions of Islam.

Message of the Moslem world to the Muhammadans of India.

8. The following is from the Tribune (Lahore), of 29th March 1912 :—

"At a meeting of Muhammadans at Lucknow, Khwaja Ghulam-us-Saqlain, a Vakil of Meerut, gave an interesting account of his tour in the Muhammadan countries of Persia, Arabia, Turkey and Egypt. In the course of his speech he said :—'Wherever I went, Persia, Syria, Egypt or Hedjaz, everywhere I was told that Indian Muhammadans are following a mistaken policy, they should see that Hindus and Muhammadans live in peace. People in India should live peacefully. Everybody should promote the interests of his religion through peaceful means and not by quarrelling with one another?' The Muhammadans of these countries have rightly understood the situation in India. The welfare of the Muhammadans is bound up with the welfare of the Hindus. They will rise and fall together. This message of their co-religionists to cultivate peace and amity, will, we hope, find an active response among our Muhammadan fellow-countrymen."

VI.—Legislation.

The Press Act.

9. The Hindu (Lahore), of the 21st March 1912, has a paragraph headed "The difficulties of the Press." Since the passing of the Press Act, it says, newspapers and printing presses have been buffeted by a sea of troubles. It has become extremely difficult, not only to start and run a paper, but also to maintain the independence and dignity of the Fourth Estate. The Act has invested District Magistrates with unlimited powers, while some of its provisions are so complex and fine-drawn that special care is required to (correctly) interpret them ; and even the least carelessness on the part of officials can embitter the lives of journalists and owners of printing presses.

The Elementary Education Bill.

10. In the course of a leading article in its issue of 23rd March 1912, the Observer (Lahore), remarks :—

"* * * Mr. Gokhale's aim is the aim of the Government also. There is difference of opinion as only to the means ; and though the Government has not yet seen its way to accept the principle of compulsion in the propagation of elementary education, and though some details of the Bill were admittedly capable of improvement, and though the measure experienced opposition in some non-official circles also—such opposition being due either to honest doubt or groundless misapprehension of its provisions and, perhaps, in some instances to the deliberate motive of perpetuating the ignorance of the masses for the good of the classes—in spite of all this, there is no reason to feel despondent. The time is not far distant when the sagacity of all India will recognize the absolute correctness of the prescription proposed by Mr. Gokhale for removing the malady of Indian ignorance, and when the British Government will concede the necessity of bringing India in a line with the more advanced nations of the day in matters educational, as it has conceded in so many other things."

The Elementary Education Bill.

11. The following is from a leading article of the Observer (Lahore), of 27th March 1912 :—

* * * * * * * *

"With regard to the Muhammadan opposition, we are constrained to observe that Nawab Abdul Majid's objections we are unable to endorse. Though an office-bearer of the Muslim League, he yet opposed the Bill. The same remarks, however, apply to Malik Umar Hayat Khan, Tiwana, C.I.E., and Khan Bahadur Mian Muhammad Shafi. Nawab Abdul Majid is of the view that unless adequate safeguards are provided the Bill will make compulsory the study of Hindi to the exclusion of Urdu. But had such an eventuality been feared, the measure would never have received the support of the Muhammadan Educational Conference and the Muslim League. Mr. Gokhale had, moreover, already provided in his opening speech, a safeguard for the protection of Urdu by suggesting that if a certain number of children speaking a particular language attended a school, provision should be made for teaching them in that language, and where the number was less, it should be left to the community to decide whether their children should come under the compulsory clauses of the Bill or not. The study of Hindi, it should be remembered, will advance among the Hindus, whether there is compulsion or no compulsion, especially as Hindu Elementary Education Leagues are pushing it on with the greatest vigour. But as long as the Musalmans read the Quran, they will not abandon Urdu, Arabic and Urdu scripts being so similar. And the fear that the Bill will make religious education impossible for Muslims seems equally groundless. Reading and writing are already taught in our maktabs. If only elementary arithmetic were added to their curricula the Maktabs would certainly be regarded as elementary schools under Mr. Gokhale's Bill. This will mean that the Bill, so far from realising the fears of the Nawab, would tend to make religious education compulsory for Muslim children, a consummation which all Musalmans should devoutly wish for. Malik Umar Hayat Khan, as Vice-President of the All-India Muslim League, ought to have supported the Bill. As, however, the telegraphic report of his speech gives hardly any intelligible summary of his utterance, we shall pass on to the remarks of Mian Muhammad Shafi. Before leaving Lahore, the Hon'ble Mian voluntarily promised to reflect in the Imperial Council not personal opinion, not even Muhammadan opinion only, but the opinion of the Punjab in general. Surely he cannot have ignored the fact that the Hindus support the Bill to a man and that an overwhelming majority of the Muhammadans of the Punjab are also in its favour. When pledges made 'on a voluntary basis' cannot be kept, that constitutes another argument in favour of compulsion. The only ground on which he opposed 'the enactment' seems to have been that there is no need of compulsion, as "a great deal of the objects" of Mr. Gokhale's Bill has, according to the Khan Bahadur, been already achieved. We wish the telegraphic summary of his speech were more explicit on the point, for Mr. Gokhale wants to do in ten years what the present rate of progress would achieve in century. Some Muslims are, however, hugging the figures of Muhammadan advance in primary education to their breasts and saying that though the Mnsalmans started after the other communities in education, yet they have out-stripped the latter in primary education and concluding therefrom that Mr. Gokhale's Bill will be more useful for non-Muhammadans. * * *"

In another place the paper publishes the following under the heading "Punjab Muhammadans and Mr. Gokhale's Bill" :—

"The opposition on the part of Khan Bahadur Mian Muhammad Shafi and Malik Umar Hayat Khan, Tiwana, C.I.E., M.V.O., to Mr. Gokhale's Bill, might lead the public outside the Punjab to think that most, if not all, of the Muhammadan members of the Imperial Council from the Punjab were against the measure. But it should be remembered that neither of the gentlemen above-mentioned represents, in the strict sense of the term, the Musalmans of the Province. The Hon'ble Malik is a representative of the Zamindars, while the Hon'ble Mian represents the Provincial Legislative Council. The Muhammadans of the Province are represented in the Supreme Legislative Council by Nawab Zulfiqar Ali Khan, C.S.I., and had he been present in the Council when Mr. Gokhale moved for the reference of his Bill to Select Committee, there is reason to believe that the Nawab would have supported Mr. Gokhale's motion. When asked by our representative on the occasion of the last session of the All-India Muslim League at Calcutta whether the Nawab was in favour of the Bill being referred to Select Committee before final decision about it, the representative of the Punjab Muhammadans in the Imperial Council stated that he would support the reference of the Bill to the Select Committee on the 18th instant. But circumstances seem to have compelled the Hon'ble Nawab to return earlier to the Punjab.

The Punjab Panchayat Bill.

12. The following is from the Panjabee (Lahore), of 20th March 1912 :—

"* * * * It is clear that the Civil Panchayat Bill from its very nature should be enabled to steer clear of all technicalities and legal difficulties. A court of law, however, even if it be a Panchayat, cannot altogether ignore questions of Res Judicata and the like. Now 'Res Judicata' is thus defined in the Civil Procedure Code. 'No Court shall try any suit or issue in which the matter directly and substantially has been directly and substantially in issue in a former suit between the same parties or between parties under whom they or any of them claim, litigating under the same title, in a Court competent to try such subsequent suit or the suit in which such issue has been subsequently raised and has been heard and finally decided by such Court.' There are no less than six explanations to this definition and the result is a highly complex and technical piece of juristic definition. The Civil Panchayat Bill has substituted in its place a much simpler definition. Section 6 says: 'No Bench shall try any suit or issue in which the matter substantially in issue is pending for decision or has been decided by a Court or Bench of competent jurisdiction in a former suit between the same parties or those under whom they claim.' The definition is both simple and free from objection. We shall suggest only one amendment to the above. We suggest the addition of the word 'heard' before the word 'decided.' In order to be Res Judicata, the matter substantially in issue should be heard and decided. We make this suggestion in order to avoid Res Judicata in cases, where the matter in issue has been decided incidentally or by mere implication. We trust that our suggestion will commend itself to the Legislative Council, when the Bill comes up for final consideration. It is important to eliminate from the definition all issues decided incidentally without being heard. The amendment we propose will be in strict accordance with the spirit of the Select Committee in omitting the original section 7, which enabled a Panchayat to take incidental decision of non-cognizable matters.

"The other amendments we propose are of a simple character. Section 19 says that a suit shall be deemed to be instituted when the parties have nominated a Bench under section 10, or section 18. Section 10 says that parties wishing to institute a suit before a Panchayat are to appear before a Munsif and to intimate their consent to the suit being tried by a Bench to be nominated by the parties. Section 18 relates to the periodical meeting of Panchayat and says that when parties to any dispute cognizable by a Panchayat attend before the Panchayat so assembled and state in writing the particulars of the dispute and nominate members therefrom by whom they wish to be tried, such members can take cognisance of the suit. We propose that in addition to the above methods, parties should be able to have suits instituted before the regular law courts taken by their mutual consent to the jurisdiction of a Panchayat. In other words, we wish that there should be some provision to enable pending suits to be taken to Panchayat courts, if the parties so desire. Such a provision will, we are sure, add to the usefulness and scope of these courts and will be appreciated by the public. The other suggestion we make is that in case of non-agreement between parties, and of consequent failure to have the dispute tried by Panchayat courts, the time spent in appearing before the Munsif and in nominating the Bench should be excluded from computation of the period of limitation for the trial of the suit by regular courts. Unless this is done, there is a danger of some suits being time-barred in case of failure of the parties to agree to the constitution of a Panchayat Bench. We think that these simple suggestions will serve to remove some of the objections that may be taken against the Bill and to increase its usefulness. The measure is, of course, in the nature of an experiment, but judging from the past history of Panchayats in this country, we are hopeful of its success."

13. The Panjabee (Lahore), of 26th March 1912, has the following under the heading "Travesties of Reform" :—

Defects in the present Council Regulations.

"The constitution and composition of the Punjab Legislative Council have been criticised by several men as being illiberal and hardly conducive to the popularising of the Government. At the annual dinner of the Cambridge Indian Majlis, held on March 2nd, Mr. H. E. A. Cotton made a lengthy speech, in the course of which he criticised the Indian politics and pointed out what should be done in the future. With some emphasis, he said that 'an end must be put to such travesties of reform as the Legislative Council in the Punjab where there were exactly seven elected members out of a total of 25.' The regulations must be drastically remodelled so as to include every man of education and position. There must be Legislative Councils in every Province and Executive Councils with Indian members, in whose nomination Indian public opinion should have a real voice. Within three years the new enlarged Councils have shown more of their imperfections than their utility and people all over India are already asking for amending the Council Regulations suitably."

VII.—General Administration.

(b)—Police.

Dacoities and murders.

14. The following is from the Panjabee (Lahore), of 26th March 1912 :—

"Elsewhere in this issue we publish the gruesome accounts of horrible, pre-meditated murders, dacoities and utter failure of the Police in detection, reported by correspondents. 'Where is the Kaffir so-and-so?' is the question put by the 'true believing murderer' and he fires a couple of shots and kills the Kaffir Hindu. The Police come long after and busy themselves in arresting certain men who enjoy the fun knowing that they will be acquitted either in the first instance or in the Sessions. So the game of murders goes on unchecked and in nine cases out of ten Kaffir Hindus are the victims. This discloses a very serious state of affairs and the efforts of the Police are either wanting or unavailing. It would have been easy to put an end to all this crime had the victims been any others than the mild Hindus. No one is satisfied that Government have done all they could to prevent this state of lawlessness in the border districts. The drama of horrors and bloodshed is played to the delectation of those who enjoy at the sight of injustice and horror. Unless the people themselves are allowed to keep arms in every exposed village, we fail to see how the situation can be prevented. It is necessary that some honourable member in the Council should move a resolution."

The military riot at Ambala.

15. The following is from the Panjabee (Lahore), of 28th March 1912 :—

"The military riot at Ambala, the particulars of which appeared in our issue of the 21st instant, has, we are glad to learn, engaged the serious attention of the District authorities. The Cantonment Magistrate, Ambala, after completing the preliminary enquiries, has submitted the case to the Deputy Commissioner, Ambala, who is to try it judicially. This is quite a proper and just step. Otherwise it is difficult to imagine what the two hundred or more soldiers of the 23rd Pioneers, all stalwart men, would have done when they entered the Cantonment to wreak their vengeance against the shop-keepers and the police. They took the law into their own hands, beat the people and the police, tried to break open the lock-up, and began looting several shops. We do not yet know in what way the sufferers are to be recompensed, but we hope that the ends of justice will be fully met by holding a judicial enquiry of the kind contemplated, and that no pains will be spared to bring the offenders to book and to restore public confidence by an exemplary punishment to the offenders concerned."

(e)—Agriculture and questions affecting the land.

Pasturage for cattle in villages.

16. The following is from the Tribune (Lahore), of 30th March 1912 :—

"The first sign of scarcity is the scarcity of fodder and agricultural cattle suffer before the pinch of want is felt by the people. The reason is the shrinkage of grazing grounds in villages. The price of bullocks has risen enormously and it is difficult to find pasturage for them. Milch cows and she buffaloes can only be kept by the well-to-do classes. This disappearance of grazing grounds is comparatively a recent feature in village economy. Formerly a portion of every village was set apart for pasturage and was called the Shamlat land. Cattle were more numerous in those days and domestic and milch cattle were also kept by village folk who cannot afford to do so now. These Shamlat lands have disappeared as land has changed hands. Every owner of land in a village had a share in the Shamlat land. When land was mortgaged this share was also mortgaged and generally for a consideration much lower than that of culturable land. In point of fact, however, the Shamlat land having remained fallow so long was much more valuable than land under cultivation, but the shrewd mortgagee would not admit this. After the foreclosure of the mortgage a claim for partition of the share of the Shamlat land was brought forward and the land so partitioned was placed under cultivation. Slices were thus cut off from the Shamlat land till the whole of it disappeared and now there is no common pasturage ground left in any village. The Shamlat land was of great benefit to the rich and poor alike. There being free pasturage people kept more animals and milk and ghee were available for the villagers. The leaves of plants and the cattle dung on the Shamlat land helped the manuring of culturable land while the shrubs were utilised for fences for standing crops and the dry wood served for fuel. The alienation of land is responsible for the vanishing of this excellent feature of the village organisation. In order that the constant danger of a fodder famine may be averted and also that the dairy produce in villages may increase it is essential that the old system should be revived and Shamlat land should be set apart in every village, and such land or part of such land should be declared absolutely inalienable. This land should contain grass, trees, shrubs and hedges. No land shou'd be permanently Shamlat, but the whole village should be divided for this purpose by rotation.

If a piece of land is selected it may be declared Shamlat for, say, 20 years, after which it should be brought under cultivation and another piece of land declared Shamlat. To compensate for the loss of revenue the Tirni system which is in vogue in the Montgomery, Multan and Muzaffarnagar districts may be introduced. The proposal is of the utmost importance and should be seriously considered by the Punjab Government."

(h)—Miscellaneous.

Security from the Zamindar.

17. The Zamindar (Lahore), of the 20th March 1912, publishes three communications under the heading "(The demand of) security from the Zamindar and its effect on the paper's readers." One of the writers—Khawaja Hasan Nizami, of Delhi—says that it is being noised abroad that security is about to be demanded from the Zamindar. The result, he adds, is that every Muhammadan of Delhi is foaming at the mouth and is ready to sacrifice his all for the paper. This has led him to the conclusion that security should assuredly be demanded from the Zamindar and that it should be for double the maximum amount prescribed by law, so that Government may be able to judge of the love which Musalmans have for the paper. He has no doubt that "a sum of Rs. 10,000 will be collected before the hand of the clock has made ten rounds." Continuing, he reports that it was (recently) remarked by a wild spirit (at Delhi) that, unless the plough was used, the seed could not be sown; that nothing could be produced without the use of manure; and that the pens of the Zamindar's enemies were like the plough, while the security demanded from the paper would serve the purpose of manure. After telling the Editor not to give way to despair, he says that Sir Louis Dane is a wide-awake ruler, cognisant of the feelings which everywhere actuate the awakened Muhammadans.

Security from the Zamindar.

18. The Zamindar (Lahore), of the 24th March 1912, publishes several letters under the heading "Security from the Zamindar and its effect on the paper's readers." One of the writers—Abdul Karim, a timber merchant, at Wazirabad—states that if the paper had been required to furnish a security even of Rs. 10,000, he would have supplied the entire amount out of his own pocket.

Another correspondent, Abdul Aziz, Assistant Medical Officer, Malerkotla State, promises to secure one subscriber for the paper, and tells the Editor that he has rendered matchless services to the (Muhammadan) community.

There is also a letter from the daughter of Khwaja Ahmad Hasan, of Delhi, who advises remittance of one year's subscription by postal money order.

One Fakir Muhammad Abdul Latif, of Kharor, Multan District, is of opinion that the Zamindar has so far published nothing contravening the law. He wishes that Government would believe it to be a loyal paper and would withdraw its demand for security.

One Sarwar Khan, of Jangar (?), Kohat District, remarks that the (Muhammadan) community cannot bear to see the Zamindar die, for the reason that the paper's death would throw an obstacle in the way of the communal advancement of Musalmans. The Zamindar is a well-wisher of both Government and Muhammadans, and the writer is of opinion that, in all probability, the authorities will soon realise their mistake (in having demanded security from it).

There are also three other letters in this issue couched in similar language.

Commenting on the above the Editor says that if, at a time when M. Muhammad Insha Ullah is determined to prove him and other Muhammadans to be rebels, there is anything, in addition to God's kindness and the approbation of his own conscience, which can console him, it is the knowledge that lovers of Islam consider the Zamindar's policy beneficial both for Government and the (Muslim) community. He also tenders his heartfelt thanks to those of his (Musalman) brothers and sisters who have extended their "sincere Islamic sympathy" to him at the present juncture.

Security from the Zamindar.

19. Writing under the heading "A very great danger to the country and the (Muslim) community," the Watan (Lahore), of the 23rd March 1912, says that the fatal consequences of the new movement (started by the Zamindar) have, for some time past, been painfully realised by far-sighted and truthful lovers of the Prophet's followers. This should be evident from the letter addressed to the paper by a highly-placed man like Qari Muhammad Shah Suleman, Chishti, of Phalwari in the Patna district, on the 11th February last. Had the Watan been jealous of the Zamindar (lit. of any one), it would have forthwith given publicity to the communication. It, however, followed a different course, influenced by the thought that "some friends" might, perhaps, even at that time come into the right path. But now when matters have become extremely serious and the demand of security (from the Zamindar) has still further added to the temerity (of that journal), it considers it a duty to tell Government and Muhammadans that a considerable section of the (Muslim) community is still hostile to the inauspicious movement referred to. Next it publishes the aforesaid letter, in which the writer says, among other things, that the extremist fervour of the Zamindar fascinates common Muhammadans; that some leading members of the (Muslim) community also approve of the same; that "people given to running paper horses" have a good opportunity to profit by the excitement and make themselves notorious; and that they have been supporting and will continue to support everything—whether good or bad—done by the Zamindar. He also told Maulvi Zafar Ali at the (Muhammadan Educational) Conference (held at Delhi in December last) that he was so much exercised over the latter's extremism that he daily offered prayers to the effect that it might not injure either him (the Maulvi) or his community. His words could not have been forgotten by the Maulvi; but the praises bestowed on the latter from all side have prevented him from changing his policy even in the slightest degree.

The Zamindar newspaper.

20. The Zamindar (Lahore), of the 22nd March 1912, publishes "An open letter to His Honour the Lieutenant-Governor of the Punjab," in which the writer—Maulvi Muhammad Gami Basir, Lahore—says that while the wounds inflicted by the heartless, cruel, and aggressive attack of Italy on Tripoli are still fresh in the minds of Muhammadans, they have also been deeply pained by the conduct of wily Russia in dealing with Persia in a false and fraudulent manner. They are, moreover, still in great perplexity on account of the revocation of the Partition of Bengal; and, to cap all, they are now face to face with another trouble. They now hear that a certain high officer of Government has, owing to some misapprehension, become prejudiced against the Zamindar, and that Government is about to deal with it according to the law. After remarking that Muhammadans are in great need of newspapers of the stamp of the Zamindar in their present condition, the writer expresses regret that a paper like the Zamindar, which ought be regarded as the strong arm of Government, should be put to trouble. It is a pity, he adds, that there are some Muhammadans who are determined to create misunderstanding in the minds of Government without rhyme or reason. The Zamindar is a true well-wisher of the Muhammadan community and is sincerely loyal to Government. No newspaper can be compared with it in the matter of evoking loyalty in the minds of the people.

The Zamindar newspaper.

21. The Watan (Lahore), of the 22nd March 1912, has an article headed "A very great danger to the (Muslim) community and the country. Further silence is highly injurious and it is incumbent on every true lover of the community and the country to remedy the evil." No thoughtful person, it says, is now unaware of the secret and open efforts which have, in imitation of the example of a particular section of the population, been made for some months past to lead even Indian Muhammadans astray. Far-sighted and truthful servants of the community were suspicious of these efforts from the very outset; but they ascribed the same to simple-minded foolishness and decided to keep silent. The mischief-makers took advantage of this silence to quicken the pace of their intrigues and to spread their net to their satisfaction. This led the well-wishers of the Muhammadan community to raise their voices a little to prevent their co-religionists from leaving the right path. They, however, did so in a gentlemanly way; but were not long in discovering that this was another mistake on their part. Those who wished to undermine the foundations of the community under the pretext of reforming it have thoroughly completed their arrangements for neutralising the effect of good advice. (Even) a highly-placed and selfless servant of the Prophet's followers like the Agha Khan has been soundly abused for the sole offence of having advised them not to be prejudiced against Government on the score of unfounded complaints. If the abuse had been based on the standpoint—however mistaken—of (real) service to the community it would have been welcomed by unselfish servants of the Muslim community. But when facts and circumstances left no room for doubt, some of the above gentlemen considered it their duty to warn their co-religionists. Every description of abuse, craftiness, and cunning was, however, resorted to in reply; while no hesitation was shown even in inciting (Muhammadans) to murder. Those (Musalmans) who do not wish their community to swerve from the right path even by a hair's breadth were called fulsome flatterers of Government. Regret was also expressed that Government's laws should protect the lives and property of those men, and that they could not be executed like Babak, Ibu Muque and Mansur. On the other hand, side by side with the grossest insults to the Quran and the Prophet, now and again some poem in praise of the King Emperor was represented as being defamatory of Muhammad, and at other times nothing was left undone to cause mad excitement among Musalmans. The result was that a few days ago Government expressed its displeasure (with the Zamindar's tone); but it is to be regretted that the remedy should have only led to the aggravation of the disease. It is for Government and the (Muslim) community to unravel the secret as to how it is that those Hindu papers, which only three months back used to speak of the movement (started by the Zamindar) as highly injurious, now defend (that journal) in their columns; while Lala Dina Nath (of the Hindustan) goes and addresses entreaties (? to the editor) for hours (? to desist from exposing Zafar Ali). They should also find out why, in place of the demand for security from the Zamindar (lit. the warning) having been profited by, temerity is being displayed in assailing the authorities and their action is being used as a pretext to still further excite the (Muhammadan) masses. Surprising boldness is being shown, and stories are being invented to throw dust in the eyes of both Government and the (Muslim) community; while those Musalman journalists, etc., who are given to tendering good advice to their co-religionists have epithets like "traitors to the community," "bogus (leaders)" and "flatterers" applied to them in each and every issue (of the Zamindar). It is high time that those followers of Islam who claim to be unselfish servants of their community put forth manly efforts to end the mischief. Their silence did not matter much so long as "this inauspicious movement" was confined to a few persons; but now that its circle has been widening at a rapid pace further indifference to it would prove suicidal. At all events, it should be definitely decided who are traitors to the community—those who advise moderation, or those who uselessly cause excitement and loudly and repeatedly sing of the revival of Islamic feelings.

The paper has also an article headed "A very great danger to the country and the (Muslim) community. Is this what Islam teaches?" in its issue of 23rd March 1912. The fact, it says, that the Zamindar has had to meet its deserts has led that paper, not to examine its own conduct or to feel thankful to the (Local) Government for its lenient treatment, but to spit poison against those who have been tendering good (lit. true) advice to the Muhammadan community. It has also been led to openly disseminate exceedingly harsh sentiments about the powers that be. If thoughtful people, it adds, have any objection to make against the executive actions of the authorities, it is that, not infrequently, the latter display a spirit of extreme patience and forbearance. The Zamindar, however, is telling the followers of Islam that the authorities in India are the most hasty and credulous persons in existence. Thoughtful Musalmans cannot swallow this; but their more simple-minded co-religionists should enquire (from the Zamindar) whether it was at the instance of "traitorous journalists and bogus leaders" that Government demanded security even from the Haq, the Mujaddad, the Punch Bahadur, the Jhang Sial, the Sh'ana-i-Hind and the Edward Gazette. Again, had any of these persons any hand in the special warning or warnings addressed to the Zamindar previous to the demand of security from it? Why did they not, moreover, add fuel to the fire when the Hindustan, the Tribune and the Panjabee, whose sympathy with the Zamindar now knows no bounds, repeatedly urged Government during the last quarter of 1911 to put down inflammatory writings in the last namedpaper? Nor is this all. What was Qari Shah Sulaiman (the writer of the letter referred to in paragraph 19 ante) jealous of that he began to pray for Mr. Zafar Ali so far back as November last and also personally spoke plainly to the latter in the opening days of December? It would please the paper to see Zafar Ali prove his innocence to Government; but does he consider the British nation, which rules over ⅓rd of the globe, to be so simple-minded that he hopes to be able, by reprinting brief extracts from the back numbers of the Zamindar, to hoodwink it as to the nature of the rest of his writings? The Government that could unravel the minutest threads of the Manicktolla conspiracy cannot be incapable of understanding, without extraneous help, writings published in newspapers. As to the letters which have so far appeared (in the Zamindar) to enlighten Government (about that paper's character), it may be said without exaggeration that most of the (alleged) correspondents must be unable to understand the contents of the writings which have been published over their signatures. One of them, Khawaja Hasan Nizami, is not of course a stranger to the world of literature. It was hoped that his recent visit to the Hedjaz, &c., would fire him with a special desire for the real improvement of his community. The deplorable ideas, however, with which he returned home, have been expressed by him in his pamphlet called the Senonssi. Islam teaches (its followers) to obey even a tyrannical order by their ruler, but the Khawaja has preached a strange sermon to his community over a merciful (official) reproof (to the Zamindar). After reprinting his recent letter in the Zamindar (on the subject of security from that paper) (vide paragraph 17 ante) the Watan observes that he represents Musalmans as foaming at the mouth at the mere fact of security having been demanded from the Zamindar, and suggests (lit. advises) that the security should be for double the maximum amount prescribed by law. Has the suggestion been made from the thought that, if a security of Rs. 2,000 can throw Muhammadans into a passion, the raising of the amount to Rs. 20,000 would make them ready to sell their lives? If Government had, adds the paper, to treat any one among the Prophet's followers as Tilak and Amba Parshad have been treated, what advice would Khawaja Hasan Nizami tender to his co-religionists? Again, while the Khawaja has given Rs. 15 (to the Zamindar) he gave a much smaller amount in aid of the Muhammadan sufferers in Tabrez and Tripoli; although he depicted (in the papers) the wretched plight to which their ruin had reduced them. The paper then goes on to say that the Salonica Committee of Union and Progress—the deceptive doings of which at first fascinated even learned men like Maulana Jamal-ud-din, Shaikh-ul-Islam, and Sayad Amir Ali—does not hold the opinion that the object of Islamic teachings is the same as is suggested to one by a perusal of the Quran and the Prophet's life. On the contrary, it regards the teachings of the Qramatis, Batinis and European socialists as the best means of achieving progress; while its views have been shared even by the Chinese who think with it. If some Indian Muhammadans also should decide to follow this example, it would be the duty of the leading members of the (Muslim) community to express their opinion on the matter.

The Zamindar and the Editor of the Watan.

22. The Watan (Lahore), of the 26th March 1912, publishes an article headed "Save the country and the (Muslim) community from a very great danger." The Editor says that the Zamindar is wrong in alleging that he has charged all his co-religionists with being rebels and seditionaries. Continuing, he remarks that the paper named is engaged in causing and fanning, by means of letters and editorial notes, feelings of deep anger and indignation against him. Next he enquires whether this continuous provocation is not likely to inflame one or more simpletons or monomaniacs. After observing that this is more than probable, he says that every accusation preferred against him (by the Zamindar) has been accepted as gospel truth by some friends (of that paper). For instance, he adds, in its issue, dated the 23rd March, the Zamindar accused him of having set down all Muhammadans as rebels. What effect the allegation must have produced on Musalmans living at a distance (from Lahore) should be evident from a letter which appeared in that journal the following day and in which the charge was repeated by a number of Muslim shopkeepers in the Kashmiri Bazar, Lahore. The communication shows that it would not be surprising if some adviser of the said paper were even to act up to certain other pieces of advice. The Editor would, therefore, most humbly request Government and the local authorities to order instant enquiries into the above charge, and, in the event of its proving unfounded, to take necessary steps for the good, not only of himself, but of all the ruled, as also for the preservation of the public peace.

Maulvi Inshaullah and the Zamindar.

23. The Zamindar (Lahore), of the 26th March 1912, reports that 100 students of the local Islamia College have sent it an article entitled "A dangerous accusation against Muhammadans." The writing, which bears their signatures, expresses deep regret and contempt at the conduct of Babu Inshaullah in having published an offensive article in the Watan, dated the 23rd idem, under the heading "A very great danger to the country and the (Muslim) community." (Vide paragraph 20 ante). The self-respecting students named have (also) requested Government to take notice of the above dangerous deed of the Babu; while they have asked their Principal to exclude the Watan from the library of the Islamia College. Such incidents, adds the paper, show that the lying articles penned by Babu Inshaullah have had the effect of inflaming the general Muhammadan public which cannot tolerate any journalists or "recognised leader" charging them with disloyalty.

In another place the paper publishes an article headed "The cat is out of the bag." The Editor of the Watan, it says, has preferred the sensational charge that Zafar Ali in particular and Indian Muhammadans in general have been hatching a dangerous and deep-laid plot against the British Government. This has filled the Prophet's followers with feelings of sorrow, anger, contempt, and disgust; while the dreadful accusation has caused quite a sensation among the Musalmans of Lahore. The latter are wondering what phantasy has led Babu Inshaulla to level a terrible and revolting charge against his co-religionists in support of which he had, and can have, no proof whatever. The articles published by him under the heading "A very great danger to the country and the (Muslim) community" not only constitute a daring and insolent breach of Section 49 (sic.) of the Press Act and all Divine ordinances, but have also "murdered" the feelings of loyalty and devotion which the King Emperor's seven crores of Muhammadan subjects entertain for His Majesty. The result is that the Muhammadans of Lahore have come to regard the Watan with such feelings of contempt and disgust as cannot be very gratifying to the Babu. Proceeding, the paper says that, thanks to some Muhammadans "who are past masters in the art of cutting the throat of their community," the mischief had been brewing for some time past, and that "the poison had been dropped into the ears of some officers" that the Muhammadans of Lahore had been conspiring to take the lives of their European officers. When some enlightened and leading members of the Muslim community came to know of these invidious attempts they were seized with extreme anxiety and uneasiness. It was decided in the end that the terrible charge in question should be publicly refuted, so as to reassure Muhammadans and remove all doubt from the minds of the authorities. Accordingly, Khwaja Kamal-ud-din (a pleader at Lahore), attempted the refutation in the third lecture on "What should Muhammadans do now?" delivered by him on the 24th March at the Ahmedia Buildings. His remarks have exposed the dangerous fact that there exist some Muhammadans who sacrifice their communal interests at the altar of self, betray their community, and are in the habit of inventing dangers. As usually persons of this type alone have access to the authorities they are not infrequently successful in working on the feelings of the latter. The real object of these sycophants is to impress on the authorities that they are both very loyal and influential; and after the storms thus raised have subsided they hasten to ask for some honour on the ground of having prevented their co-religionists from raising the standard of rebellion. Next the paper quotes an extract in which Khwaja Kamal-ud-din says that, although the Quran sets it down as a great virtue to refrain from speaking of one's own good services, "we" are always on the look out for an opportunity to make "our" services known to Government, that "we" brand as rebels only those persons who are "our" enemies or rivals; and that nothing can be more villainous or mischievous than to represent an innocent community as being composed of traitors.

Hasan Nizami and the Zamindar.

24. The Zamindar (Lahore), of the 27th March 1912, publishes "A letter from a Dervesh" to Maulvi Insha Ullah, Editor of the Watan. The writer—Hasan Nizami, of Delhi—complains that the Maulvi has begun to prefer (diverse) charges against him. Apparently Insha Ullah wishes to leave the rest of India—the whole of which is in favour of the Zamindar—alone; and has singled out the correspondent, a recluse who might be expected to keep his peace. If the Editor of the Zamindar also had been desirous of injuring the Insha Ullah he would have published in his paper an account of the interview which he had with the latter at Lahore in February last in the presence of Hakim Ghulam Nabi and Munshi Nawab-ud-din, a hide merchant of Amritsar; and in which his assailant preferred a most disgusting charge against Hafiz Haji Sayad Jama'at Ali Shah, Naqshbandi. (The Editor interposes here and states that, recently, Maulvi Insha Ullah caused one of his henchmen to give out that the Hafiz had made away with some money collected by him in aid of the proposed Muhammadan University; while he soundly abused such leading members of the Muslim community as Shibli and the Nawab Vicar-ul-Mulk). Continuing, the writer reports that the Maulvi (also) remarked (in course of this interview) that he did not look upon (present day) Muhammadans as (true) Musalmans, but that Europeans were the true followers of the Prophet. After stating that he also found some copies of the Quran lying amongst shoes at the house of the Editor of the Watan, he says that, when it was cabled to India as the result of his enquiries on the spot, that the English antiquarians concerned had carried away no relics from Omar's mosque, the Editor named was the first man to express disbelief and thereby furnished an opportunity for Muhammadans to feel prejudiced against the British Government. He not only wrote in the Watan, but also verbally expressed the opinion that the writer was an emissary of the British Government. Again, when Mulla Muhammad-ul-Wahidi, Editor of the Nizam-ul-Mashaikh (Delhi), forwarded to Maulvi Insha Ullah the writer's letter containing a true statement of facts, the Maulvi did not publish the same owing simply to (his) enmity to Government. Why did he not publish the contradiction and why did he let Musalmans continue prejudiced against Government? The result is that, owing to the Watan's remarks, they are still under the impression that the correspondent was really an emissary of the English, and that the English (antiquarians) did steal (the relics kept in the mosque). The writer threw a veil over Maulvi Insha Ullah's dire offence as he was a brother Muhammadan. His assailant has, however, unrighteously branded both him and the Editor of the Zamindar as rebels. As to the charge that he shares the views of a certain revolutionary society of the Turks, the British Consuls at Jerusalem, Beirout, and Damascus possess documentary evidence to show that he always proved himself a well-wisher of the British Government and mixed with no suspicious society at those places. Government is also aware that his pamphlet called the Senousi, which contains a prophecy about "the English Emperor" embracing Islam, has had a good effect on (Indian) Muhammadans. In conclusion, he asks Maulvi Insha Ullah to discontinue attacking the innocent Zamindar, adding that otherwise (all) truth-loving Muhammadans will become thoroughly disgusted with the Watan, which even now they consider it an Islamic duty to boycott.

25. The Tribune (Lahore), of 23rd March 1912, publishes the following correction to its note re "The supersession of Dewan Narendra Nath," published in its issue of 20th March 1912 (Selection No. 12, paragraph 23).

The supersession of Dewan Narendra Nath.

"With regard to the supersession of Dewan Narendra Nath we must rectify an error into which we were led by the Punjab Civil List of the 1st January, 1912. Under the heading of date of present rank it is shown that Dewan Narendra Nath attained the rank of Deputy Commissioner, first grade, on September 28th, 1906, while Lieutenant-Colonel Young is shown to have attained that rank on May 25th, 1891.* As a matter of fact Colonel Young was deputed to Patiala as Settlement Commissioner and the period of deputation has not been mentioned. In the list Colonel Young's name is above those of Messrs. Renouf, Thompson and Connolly who were all appointed first grade Deputy Commissioners in 1910. As regards length of service Colonel Young joined the Punjab Commission on December 24th, 1888, and Dewan Narendra Nath on February 3rd, 1888, so that Colonel Young is only some months junior to Dewan Narendra Nath. It may be that the work Colonel Young did in Patiala was very much appreciated, but Dewan Narendra Nath was never given an opportunity of doing settlement work."

The same paper also makes the following remarks in its issue of 27th March 1912 :—

"The contention referred to the other day in these columns that no officer who has not worked as a Settlement Collector should be appointed a Commissioner is as untenable as it is unreasonable. In the Punjab it has never been upheld and acted upon in the past, and to put it forward now as the main reason for passing over an officer who is in all other respects thoroughly well qualified is, to say the least, to go against the dictates of common justice and fair play. Among the officers who at present hold the office of Commissioner there are not a few who have not worked as Settlement Collector. Before we go into the details of this point we should like to make it clear that whilst every officer has to undergo settlement training, only those who are selected for that purpose work as Settlement Collectors. Dewan Narendra Nath had his Settlement training under Sir (then Mr.) Louis Dane, in Gurdaspur when His Honour was in charge of Settlement operations, but it is quite true that Dewan Narendra Nath has not worked as Settlement Collector. The Hon'ble Mr. M. W. Fenton, who is now 2nd Financial Commissioner, has never worked as a Settlement Collector. That fact has not stood in the way of his selection as permanent Financial Commissioner. Mr. H. J. Maynard, who is one of the ablest and most popular of our Commissioners, never had charge of a Settlement and never worked as Settlement Collector. Mr. C. J. Hallifax, who is Commissioner of Multan and holds a Commissionership sub. pro tem., was never a Settlement Collector. Both Colonel C. G. Parsons and Colonel C. M. Dallas, who were appointed permanent Commissioners only last year and who have been acting in these offices now for some time, were never Settlement Collectors at any stage of their official careers. Mr. Meredith, who has been a permanent Commissioner for several years and who had acted as Financial Commissioner on more than one occasion, was never a Settlement Collector. Among the present Commissioners, Mr. P. J. Fagan is the only officer who has worked as a Settlement Collector. The point on which we wish to lay stress is that what has not been considered as a disqualification in the case of Colonels Dallas and Parsons, and Messrs. Meredith, Maynard, Fenton, and Hallifax, cannot be put forward as a just reason for passing over Dewan Narendra Nath. To do so would be to lay Government open to the charge that any stick is good enough to beat an Indian with. In fact, it will, if anything, make the injustice and invidiousness of the action of Government still more glaring. What is sauce for the goose should be sauce for the gander, and to pass over Dewan Narendra Nath in the selection for Commissionerships for a reason which was ignored in the case of several European officers will be, we respectfully submit, unjust in the highest degree. It is, in our opinion, absurd to contend that no officer who has not worked as a Settlement Collector cannot make a successful Commissioner. In the Punjab Commission Messrs. Maynard and Fenton are living examples of the absurdity of this contention."

26. The following is from the Panjabee (Lahore), of 23rd March 1912 :—

Question in the Bombay Legislative Council re instructions in 'Salaaming.'

"The doubts and difficulties of the Indian people are daily increasing. The administrative burdens of the rulers, too, are growing heavy, though they have doubtless proved equal to any occasion. The Government have introduced order where there was chaos. They have settled the country and introduced method and uniformity in many things. Yet there are a few difficult problems of hopeless diversity, inconsistent variety and ugliness which require attention and effort. Not the least perplexing question of the day is the manner and matter of salaaming the various men of power. There is the actually ruling race, there is the aristocracy of wealth and intellect, there are the politically important communities—and all these are to some extent affected by the manner and degree of respect shown to them by those who are the inferior hewers of wood and drawers of water. Nothing is more shocking and even subversive of law and order than an omission to salaam or even a profusion of salaaming. There are instances of men who have suffered by receiving abuses, blows, kicks and even prosecutions for failing to salaam in the proper way, or for over-salaaming. The Madras High Court has now on its hand an intricate problem of over-salaaming which at one time seemed to baffle solution. In Bombay a clerk failing to salaam in a proper way brought a bad name to all his community. Hundreds of others have suffered similarly. We are not, therefore, surprised that the Hon'ble Mr. Karandikar asked the following question in the Bombay Legislative Council:

* It should be 1911 vide Tribune, dated 24th March 1912.

'In the interests of consistency and regard for etiquette, will Government be pleased to issue definite instructions in the matter of 'salaaming' such as may avoid the recurrence of circumstances ending in orders like the one issued by Mr. A. F. Maconochie, Collector of Ahmednagar, when dismissing a Registration clerk?'

"The reply of the Government was that they 'do not propose to issue instructions of the nature referred to.' This will certainly leave the people afflicted in dire distress. In the Punjab we salaam so profusely, and sometimes with both the hands, that we are fortunately free from troubles. But in other provinces there is a legitimate complaint that for want of proper regulations and instructions, innocent and well meaning people are suffering from calamities. We sincerely hope that the Government of India will issue the instructions prayed for and prevent once for all the ugly cases that crop up in the provinces due to ignorance and want of authorised procedure."

Lord Crewe and English journalists of Calcutta.

27. The following is from the Tribune (Lahore), of 28th March 1912 :—

"The English journalists of Calcutta have protested against the observation of Lord Crewe in the House of Lords that if the opinion of the public had been invited on the Delhi changes before they were announced then some of the English journals in Calcutta might have placed themselves under the more stringent measures of the Press Act. The theory put forward is that the Anglo-Indian Press, under all circumstances, must be considered loyal, and the Press Act of 1909 was principally intended for some seditious vernacular newspapers. We do not admit the accuracy of this contention at all. The way in which the Statesman began attacking Lord Hardinge, if persisted in, would have created a dangerous excitement among the Anglo-Indian community of Calcutta and might have even endangered the personal safety of the Viceroy. The law is bound to prevent a contingency of that kind, and but for the sudden and pacific change in its attitude the Statesman would have brought itself under the Press Act. Unless the English journalists of Calcutta have very short memories they must remember what happened in Calcutta and Bengal when the Ilbert Bill was introduced. Lord Ripon was insulted and menaced in public by Anglo-Indians and he was hooted when he was leaving Darjeeling. There was a plot to seize his person and to carry him on board a ship and send him back to England. Was that a seditious conspiracy or not? There is no monopoly of loyalty anywhere and Lord Crewe referred to a contingency which was well within the range of practical politics."

ERRATUM.

Selection No. 12, paragraph 6, page 203.

In second line for the ward "October "read" March."

LAHORE:

The 30th March 1912.

C. STEAD,

Assistant to the Deputy Inspector-General of Police, Criminal Investigation Department, Punjab.

Punjab Government Press, Lahore—4-4-12—242—107—H. L. S.

[ Confidential. ]

[ Vol. XXV. ] SELECTIONS [ No. 14. ]

FROM THE

NATIVE NEWSPAPERS

PUBLISHED IN THE PUNJAB.

Examined up to 6th April 1912.

CONTENTS.

Page.

I.—Politics.

(a) Foreign—

1. The Islamic world (Zamindar) ... ... 247
2. Ill-treatment of Indians in Africa (Vakil) ... ib.
3. Indians in South Africa (Tribune) ... ... ib.
4. Indians in foreign countries (Panjabee) ... ib.
5. Relations with Persia (Tribune) ... ... 249

(b) Home—

6. Government and Muhammadan grievances (Vakil) 249
7. The Viceroy's speech at the last meeting of the Imperial Legislative Council (Observer) ... 251
8. Hindus and politics (Arya Patrika) ... ib.
9. The coming of Imam Mehdi (Arya Patrika) ... 252
10. Tampering with soldiers (Panjabee) ... ib.
11. Change of capital from Calcutta and its future (Tribune) ... ... ... ... 253

II.—Afghanistan and Trans-Frontier.

12. An open letter to the Amir (Musalman) ... 253
13. Tribal raids into British territory (Zamindar) ... ib.
14. The Frontier raids (Panjabee) ... ... 254

III.—Native States.

15. The Kashmir murder case (Panjabee) ... 254
16. Viceroy's speech at the Patiala State Dinner (Panjabee and Tribune) ... ... 255

IV.—Kine-killing.

17. Muhammadans and cow killing (Jhang Sial) ... 255

V.—Native Societies and Religious Matters.

18. Complaint against the Afghan (Hindustan) ... 256
19. Neo-Sikhs and Aryas (Panjabi Surma) ... ib.
20. Mixed marriages (Indar) ... ... ib.
21. Muhammad and Dayanand (Indar) ... ... 257
22. Communal organisations in India (Tribune) ... ib.

Page.

VI.—Legislation.

23. The Press Act (Jhang Sial) ... ... 257
24. The Imperial Legislative Council (Observer) ... 258
25. The Sindh Musalman Education Bill (Observer) ... ... ... ... 259
26. Social Legislation and private bills (Panjabee) ... ib.

VII.—General Administration.

(a) Judicial—

27. The case against the Khan of Hoti (Akhbar-i-'Am) ... ... ... ... 259
28. The case against the Khan of Hoti (Vakil) ... 260
29. Ludhiana rape case (Panjabee) ... ... ib.

(b) Police—

Nil.

(c) Municipal and Cantonment affairs—

Nil.

(d) Education —

30. The Gurukula (Indar) ... ... ... 261

(e)—Agriculture and questions affecting the land—

Nil.

(f) Railways and Communications—

Nil.

(g) Postal matters—

Nil.

(h) Miscellaneous—

31. Security from the Khalsa Sewak (Khalsa Sewak) 261
32. Ditto Zamindar (Jhang Sial) ... ib.
33. Security from the Zamindar (Zamindar) ... ib.
34. The Zamindar newspaper (Zamindar) ... 262

LIST OF NEWSPAPERS AND PERIODICALS EXAMINED BY THE SPECIAL BRANCH AS IT STOOD ON THE 6TH APRIL 1912.

| No. | Name. | Locality. | Name of Publisher. | Circulation. |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| | ENGLISH. | | | |
| | DAILY. | | | |
| 1 | Tribune ... | Lahore ... | Bihari Lal ... | 1,758 copies. |
| | TRI-WEEKLY. | | | |
| 2 | Panjabee ... | Lahore ... | Mul Chand ... | 2,424 copies. |
| | BI-WEEKLY. | | | |
| 3 | Observer ... | Lahore ... | Nizam-ud-din ... | 1,000 copies. |
| 4 | Punjab Times and Frontier News. | Rawalpindi ... | J. R. Thapur ... | 200 „ |
| | WEEKLY. | | | |
| 5 | Arya Patrika ... | Lahore ... | Devi Chand ... | 650 copies. |
| 6 | Harbinger ... | Do. ... | Durga Parshad ... | 300 „ |
| 7 | Khalsa Advocate ... | Amritsar ... | Bahadar Singh ... | 752 „ |
| | FORTNIGHTLY. | | | |
| 8 | Jijnasu ... | Lahore ... | Ishwar Das ... | ... |
| | MONTHLY. | | | |
| 9 | D. A.-V. College Magazine... | Lahore ... | Saraswati Nath ... | 1,000 copies. |
| 10 | Forman Christian College Notes.* | Do. ... | ... | ... |
| 11 | Practical Medicine* ... | Delhi ... | ... | ... |
| 12 | Punjab Educational Journal | Lahore ... | R. B. Mohan Lal ... | 700 copies. |
| 13 | Punjab Mission News ... | Do. ... | Revd. Wigram ... | 250 „ |
| 14 | Ravi ... | Do. ... | Mr. B. M. Jones ... | ... |
| 15 | Review of Religions ... | Qadian (Gurdaspur) ... | Sadr Anjuman Ahmadia, Qadian. | 800 copies. |
| 16 | Science Grounded Religion... | Lahore ... | Dev Rattan ... | 25 „ |
| 17 | Teacher ... | Dinga (Gujrat) ... | Kanhaya Singh ... | 200 „ |
| | URDU. | | | |
| | DAILY. | | | |
| 18 | Akhbar-i-'Am ... | Lahore ... | Govind Sahai ... | 630 copies. |
| 19 | Paisa Akhbar ... | Do. ... | Abdul Aziz ... | 1,011 „ |
| 20 | Watan ... | Do. ... | Muhammad Insha Alla ... | ... |
| 21 | Zamindar ... | Do. ... | Zafar Ali Khan, B.A. ... | ... |
| | BI-WEEKLY. | | | |
| 22 | Vakil ... | Amritsar ... | Abdul Aziz ... | 1,970 copies. |
| | WEEKLY. | | | |
| 23 | Afghan ... | Peshawar ... | Saiyid Muhammad Abdulla | 500 copies. |
| 24 | Ahl-i-Hadis ... | Amritsar ... | Sanaulla ... | 925 „ |
| 25 | Ahluwalia Gazette ... | Do. ... | Lehna Singh ... | 500 „ |
| 26 | Al-Moin ... | Do. ... | Mehraj-ud-din ... | ... |
| 27 | Army News ... | Ludhiana ... | Hira Lal & Co. ... | 1,300 copies. |
| 28 | Arorbans Gazette ... | Amritsar ... | Labh Singh ... | ... |
| 29 | Arya Gazette ... | Lahore ... | Bhowani Das ... | 550 copies. |
| 30 | Badar ... | Qadian, Gurdaspur District | Muhammad Sadiq ... | 300 „ |

* Not received during the month.

LIST OF NEWSPAPERS AND PERIODICALS EXAMINED BY THE SPECIAL BRANCH AS IT STOOD ON THE 6TH APRIL 1912—CONTINUED.

| No. | Name. | Locality. | Name of Publisher. | Circulation. |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| | URDU—CONTINUED. | | | |
| | WEEKLY—continued. | | | |
| 31 | Bharat ... | Jullundur ... | Thakur Sheoratan Singh | ... |
| 32 | Civil and Military News ... | Ludhiana ... | Saiyid Muhammad ... | 1,325 copies. |
| 33 | Curzon Gazette ... | Delhi ... | Mirza Hairat ... | 111 „ |
| 34 | Delhi Gazette* ... | Do. ... | Sajjad Husain ... | 200 „ |
| 35 | Edward Gazette* ... | Abbott-abad ... | Muhammad Latif ... | 200 „ |
| 36 | Hakam ... | Qadian, Gurdaspur District | Yakub Ali ... | 900 „ |
| 37 | Haq ... | Delhi ... | Kasim Ali ... | 200 „ |
| 38 | Haq Pasand ... | Amritsar ... | Ram Nath ... | 382 „ |
| 39 | Hindu ... | Lahore ... | Hari Lal Sharma ... | ... |
| 40 | Hindustan ... | Do. ... | Ram Sarn Dutt ... | 8,070 copies. |
| 41 | Indar ... | Do. ... | Dharm Pal, B.A. ... | ... |
| 42 | Islam ... | Do. ... | Abdul Latif ... | 200 copies. |
| 43 | Jhang Sial ... | Jhang ... | Prabh Dyal ... | 2,262 „ |
| 44 | Kapurthala Akhbar ... | Kapurthala ... | Hamid Husain ... | 155 „ |
| 45 | Loyal Gazette ... | Lahore ... | Amar Singh ... | 200 „ |
| 46 | Lytton Gazette ... | Delhi ... | Bulaki Das ... | 1,000 „ |
| 47 | Milap* ... | Lyallpur ... | Jawahar Lal ... | ... |
| 48 | Millat ... | Lahore ... | Shuja Ulla ... | 1,500 copies. |
| 49 | Mister Gazette ... | Do. ... | Ali Bakhsh ... | 150 „ |
| 50 | Munir ... | Jhang ... | Hafiz Khuda Bakhsh ... | 200 „ |
| 51 | Musalman ... | Amritsar ... | Sana-ulla ... | 400 „ |
| 52 | Nur ... | Qadian, Gurdaspur District | Muhammad Yusaf ... | 200 „ |
| 53 | Nur Afshan ... | Ludhiana ... | Revd. Dr. E. M. Wherry | 500 „ |
| 54 | Paisa Akhbar ... | Lahore ... | Abdul Aziz ... | 8,377 „ |
| 55 | Parkash ... | Do. ... | Krishan ... | 1,723 „ |
| 56 | Punjab Advocate ... | Mianwali ... | Karm Chand, Bahl ... | 1,000 „ |
| 57 | Punjab Samachar ... | Lahore ... | Hira Lal ... | 705 „ |
| 58 | Rajput Gazette ... | Do. ... | Thakur Sukhram Das ... | 650 „ |
| 59 | Municipal Gazette and Sada-i-Hind. | Do. ... | Din Muhammad ... | 500 „ |
| 60 | Sadiq-ul-Akhbar ... | Bahawalpur ... | Maulvi Ata Ullah ... | 392 „ |
| 61 | Ditto ... | Rewari ... | Safdar Hussain ... | 200 „ |
| 62 | Sanatan Dharm Pracharak ... | Amritsar ... | Rulia Ram ... | 200 „ |
| 63 | Shanti ... | Rawalpindi ... | Kishan Chand Mohan ... | 300 „ |
| 64 | Sialkot Paper ... | Sialkot ... | Todar Mal ... | 500 „ |
| 65 | Siraj-ul-Akhbar ... | Jhelum ... | Maulvi Fakir Muhammad | 450 „ |
| 66 | Tahzib-ul-Niswan ... | Lahore ... | Mumtaz Ali ... | 240 „ |

*Not received during the week.

LIST OF NEWSPAPERS AND PERIODICALS EXAMINED BY THE SPECIAL BRANCH AS IT STOOD ON THE 6TH APRIL 1912—CONCLUDED.

| No. | Name. | Locality. | Name of Publisher. | Circulation. |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| | URDU—CONCLUDED. | | | |
| | WEEKLY—concluded. | | | |
| 67 | Victoria Paper ... | Sialkot ... | Gian Chand ... | 600 copies. |
| 68 | Wafadar* ... | Lahore ... | Fazal-ud-din ... | 600 „ |
| 69 | Waqt ... | Do. ... | Ali Husain ... | 200 „ |
| 70 | Watan ... | Do. ... | Muhammad Insha Ullah... | 1,800 „ |
| 71 | Zamindar ... | Do. ... | Zafar Ali Khan, B.A. ... | 750 „ |
| | FORTNIGHTLY. | | | |
| 72 | Biwah Samachar ... | Lahore ... | Ram Chand ... | 300 copies. |
| 73 | Kam Dhenu ... | Ludhiana ... | Daulat Ram ... | 100 „ |
| 74 | Mohyal Gazette ... | Kala, Jhelum District ... | Mehta Sham Das ... | 250 „ |
| | PERSIAN. | | | |
| | FORTNIGHTLY. | | | |
| 75 | Siraj-ul-Akhbar ... | Kabul ... | Abdul Khalik ... | ... |
| | URDU. | | | |
| | MONTHLY. | | | |
| 76 | Arorbans Parkash ... | Lahore ... | Salig Ram ... | 200 copies. |
| 77 | Arya Musafir ... | Jullundur ... | Wazir Chand ... | 1,300 „ |
| 78 | Jauhar ... | Amritsar ... | Muhammad Ismail Khan | 200 „ |
| 79 | Kakezai Social Reformer ... | Lahore ... | Fazl Din ... | 200 „ |
| 80 | Makhzan ... | Delhi ... | Abdul Kadir ... | 4,000 „ |
| 81 | Rafiq ... | Lahore ... | Charinji Lal ... | 500 „ |
| 82 | Sadhu ... | Do. ... | Sheobart Lal ... | 500 „ |
| 83 | Martand ... | Do. ... | Kanhya Lal ... | 250 „ |
| 84 | Raghbir Patrika ... | Do. ... | Prab Dial ... | 500 „ |
| 85 | Zaban* ... | Delhi ... | Hamid Hasain ... | 500 „ |
| | GURMUKHI. | | | |
| | WEEKLY. | | | |
| 86 | Khalsa Sewak ... | Amritsar ... | Jiwan Singh ... | 1,000 copies. |
| 87 | Punjab Reporter* ... | Do. ... | Ganda Singh ... | ... |
| 88 | Punjabi Surma ... | Lahore ... | Gian Chand ... | 1,000 copies. |

* Not received during the week.

I.—Politics.

(a)—Foreign.

The Islamic world.

1. The Zamindar (Lahore), of the 28th March 1912, publishes some verses by one Munshi Muhammad Abdulla, Faiz, of Hyderabad, now residing at Karachi. The writer says that Islam is involved in difficulties in these days; that the Kaiser has been casting avaricious eyes on Baghdad; and that the day of judgment must now be near at hand, seeing that the King of Italy is thinking of blockading Medina and Yembu. Next he praises the awakening of Islam which, he observes, is talked of everywhere and is ascribable to the tyranny of Europe.

Ill-treatment of Indians in Africa.

2. The Vakil (Amritsar), of the 27th March 1912, has a note entitled "Distinctions of colour and creed in the British Colonies." With their arrival in any of these colonies, says the paper, Indians forfeit all the rights enjoyed by them in their motherland as British subjects. Next it complains of the ill-treatment of Indians in West and East Africa, and goes on to remark that it is incumbent on both Hindu and Muhammadan publicists to invite Government's attention to the wretched plight of their fellow-countymen in the Dark Continent. They should also strain every nerve to secure for Indian immigrants the same rights as are enjoyed by other British subjects in the colonies named.

Indians in South Africa.

3. The Tribune (Lahore), of 31st March 1912, publishes the following under the heading "The White Book on the rights of Indians in South Africa":—

"Reuter has generously devoted a few lines to the White Book promised and issued on the rights of Indians and the working of the Townships Amendment Act in South Africa. The main interest in the book seems to centre in a minute passed on the 2nd December by the Union Ministers. This minute repeats the assurances 'that it is not proposed to interfere with certain vested rights of Indians. But, it is added, it is impossible to allow attempts to acquire new rights. Asiatic leaders appear to be making an organised attempt to invade towns where Asiatics had no rights before. . . . .' The attitude of the Union Ministers in limiting the assurances to the mystifying expression 'certain rights' is certainly incomprehensible. They are evidently trying to draw a strong cordon round the Indians and isolate them in the most rigorous fashion so that their choice to remain in their adopted country might appear worse in comparison with the alternative allowed to them. When British Indians agreed to the compromise suggested by the Ministers it was stated that the decision had been arrived at in no grudging spirit. This led to the belief that Indians who had adopted South Africa as their home would not be deprived of their ordinary rights of British citizenship. But the Minister's minute referred to by Reuter endeavours to limit those rights to 'certain vested rights.' In other words, Indians who have elected to stay under all circumstances should agree to become social and political outcasts. That is a position to which no self-respecting Indian can reconcile himself and the duty that lies before us is obviously to renew the fight here and carry it on vigorously."

Indians in foreign countries.

4. The following is from a contribution by "A Hindu" published in the Panjabee (Lahore), of 30th March 1912, under the heading "Hindus in foreign countries":—

"* * * There is plenty of work in Canada of clearing land, and if one has a little capital of his own, he can get free land from the Canadian Government, about 160 acres, very cheap, and thus he can cultavate it for himself and become the real farmer here. I admit the duty of the Indian labourer is to help the Motherland in her uplift, but I am convinced that this sense of duty and responsibility could be better developed here than in India, as the circumstances are far better here, and the circumstances have a good deal to do with the moulding of personal achievements. Then there is not only field in Canada for the Hindus but further there is a vast field for them in the southern part of America, I mean Argentine Republic, there is plenty of work for them there, provided that they have some means to go there and get the land for cultivation purposes. What is required is that the leaders in India should take the lead in the way of finding fields or work for the labourers and markets for business in the Western World, and thus organise the mass here in such a shape that they may be most useful in the cause of uplift of Motherland. I know fully well that there are some defects in our labouring mass, as they are illiterate ones; yet what they need is a strong personality of leader, not the kind who are here, self-imposed leaders, but real ones. I see the situation so well here on the Pacific Coast, and there a great field of work in the line of business, and establishing farms, but one man cannot do so unless he has the power and capacity of organising the mass here. If these fifty young men who are already here, could be organised and put into such a position, they can devote a part of their time in teaching the mass and looking after their interests, and training them into such organisation that the mass may be raised and become the backbone in the cause of the uplift of the Motherland. I am glad to know that Lala Lajpat Rai and Lala Harkishan Lal are trying their best to uplift the masses in the Punjab, and they have started free schools for them, and Chaudhri Ram Bhaj Dutt is taking the lead in Shudhi affairs and thus the spirit of revival is working in the land of five rivers to uplift the masses, whereas the Christian Missionary propaganda is also working among the low class people, to raise them by making them Christians by faith, and thus uplift their social position. So this work would be really for the good of the people in India if it is carried earnestly and honestly, but I am fully convinced that this sort of work could be better done here among the masses, and when the masses here realise the seriousness and advantages of the work done here, they would gladly offer their material help, and would gladly do the service required of them.

"But before I request anything else to my countrymen, especially the leaders, I would draw their attention to the situation here. In Vancouver, B C., the Sikh, especially the Tat Khalsa element, is strong, and Professor Teja Singh, M.A., late of the Khalsa College, is the leading personality in one section, but the other section is against him, as among them are also a section of Doaba, Manjha and Malwa, who are working separately. The Doaba element is now in favour of one Bhai Kartar Singh, of Mahalpore, and he has got at his back Raja Singh, Piara Singh, Karam Singh, Ram Singh and many others of Doaba, Jullundur and Hoshiarpur districts. So there is always conflict between them, and moreover it is very costly for them to maintain Professor Teja Singh, as he is with his wife and two children, and further on, he travels a good deal, as he does not like the idea of staying in one place, and do the work permanently. Though his party has bought a home for him and his family, and they are paying him about one hundred dollars, i.e., Rs. 300 in India, for his maintenance allowance, which is the handsome pay of a Deputy Magistrate in Punjab, yet the other party does not see any good results of his labour, and hence the conflicts. The Tat Khalsa element is also not on good terms with those of their own brethren who have not got their long hair, or those who have cut their hair, not caring for the sentiment of the other party, and hence the trouble is serious. The Hindu element is weak as they also are not united like the Sikh element on account of many reasons. Though they started one Canada India Supply and Trust Co., under the guidance of one white man, he has cheated them, and the other leaders have lost their interest in it, and now the Company is in the hands of Muhammadans. Mr. H. Rahim is the Manager of the same. Dr. Sunder Singh is the other prominent person, who is now taking a great deal of interest and struggling hard for the amendment of the Immigration Laws in Canada. But I am sorry to say that he has no following. The Sikhs do not want him, as he does not keep long hair, and beard and moustaches. Though he once got the pahul, under the ceremony of Professor Teja Singh, but he again joined with the Hindu element in the Company affairs. Now he is again trying his best to advocate the loyalty of the Sikh people in the eyes of the Government, and trying to induce the Sikh to become enlisted in the Canadian Regiment as recruits. He is also seeking the sympathy of the Christian people to help the Sikhs to get the permission from the Dominion Government to allow them to bring their families in British Columbia, and settle here permanently. Though I do not concur with him in all his ways of work and policies, yet I am in favour of his pleading for the amendment of the Immigration Laws so that not only a few Sikhs—Khalsa Sikhs, but all the Hindus and Muhammadans should be allowed to bring their families here where they have settled themselves.

"I advocate strongly the principle of unity among all sections of the Indian people, keeping aside their religious beliefs, and so I started some philanthrophic work among the people there, but I being in minority, could not succeed. I may mention that the powers of the Immigration Department are just like the powers of the Police Department in India. The Judges have no jurisdiction to try a case against the decision of the Immigration Official whom he wants to deport or hurt. All that rests with the Immigration Department. And some of these officials are so corrupt that last year there was some investigation about the Chinese, and now I am fully aware that the Hindus living in United States of America while going to Canada are not allowed under the Immigration Laws, they not arriving direct from India. But they are entering in dozens and scores, after paying the nominal fee to the Immigration officials, and thus getting their purpose served with a little cost, and enriching the officials of the Department. When I asked my countrymen why they pay they say plainly that as they want to go to Vancouver, and want to see their friends and attend to some other business, they cannot go without paying, so either they should suffer or they should pay a little and get the purpose done. It is the easiest way to do it. If you ask them to come forward to stand as a witness they are afraid and moreover they would not be able to get their purpose served in future while they need. Now as regards the relation of the Hindus and Muhammadans, they are indifferent.

"So what we need is that leaders should take genuine interest in the welfare of the Motherland as a whole. Not as Sikhs, because they are in majority, not as Hindus because they are not strong, and not as Muhammadans because they are very few. We need a personality capable of organising them here, independent of his means. If one has to depend upon the earnings of the countrymen here he would be a failure, as I am, or others are; if he is a sectarian he would not be successful. The work which I suggest is the work of constructive nature, educating the masses here, giving them the idea of cleanliness, hygiene, and helping them at the time of sickness, rather train them in such a way so that they may become the backbone of the Motherland in the long run. Students here, who are about two hundred in number, from the different parts of India, Punjab, Bengal, Bombay, Madras, United Provinces, could be organised in such a way that they may mix together and form a nucleus for the United India. Hindus, Sikhs and Muhammadan elements should be handled in such a way that they may become the component parts of the machinery which would be going to work for the uplift of the Motherland. In a word the work could be carried on the lines and principles of Young Men's Christian Association here on the Pacific Coast, and not as such in India. I am sorry I cannot give details of the whole work of Young Men's Christian Association here as the work itself requires a great deal of illustration, and this article has already become lengthy. Therefore I stop here and would be glad to request any of the leaders in India to come forward and take the lead in the work. I wish there would be some one like the Hon'ble Mr. Gokhale who would take the lead here for India."

Relations with Persia.

5. The following is from the Tribune (Lahore), dated 5th April 1912 :—

"The Persian Government has been much exercised over the announcement of Lord Hardinge that the Government of India may be forced to deal directly with the unruly tribes in South Persia through the Consul-General at Bushire. This action on the part of the Government of India would be an infringement of the sovereign rights of Persia. In the troublous times of Persia the foreign Powers who have commercial relations with the country have exceeded the limits of international law. They have taken powers in their hands which in ordinary times would have been strongly resented. They have contracted treaties without consulting the country concerned. And now a foreign Power wants to deal with the subjects of Persia direct without reference to the Persian Government. Especially is this deplorable when it is alleged that attempts are being made by the Persian Government to restore peace and order in the country. Foreign intervention in subjugating the turbulent tribes would be most prejudicial to the authority of the Persian Government. It is true that British commerce has suffered a little by the turbulence of these unruly tribes, and attempts so far made to restore order have not been very successful. But the Persian Government has not exhausted all its resources. Swedish officers have been appointed to make the troops efficient. It is therefore highly desirable that the Government of India should wait for some time more and let Persia manage its own internal affairs. It is significant that both Hindus and Muhammadans are united in desiring that Persia should be left to work out its destiny without interference."

(b)—Home.

Government and Muhammadan grievances.

6. The Vakil (Amritsar), of the 27th March 1912, publishes a leader headed "We can neither speak nor keep silent (lit. conceal)." It says that the Prophet's followers in all parts of the world (excepting only India) have, of late, been showing some signs of life. After referring with approval to what the Musalmans concerned have been doing to maintain the dignity of Islam and its followers in connection with the Turco-Italian War, it remarks that in India, which has the largest Muslim population, Muhammadans are so inert that they remain unaffected even by incidents which occur in their midst. (Their) newspapers devote themselves to personalities; the rich spend all their time in flattering Government; while their leaders are engrossed in pursuing fame. They are not even moved by the sacrifice of life on the part of their brethren (in Tripoli), and refuse to learn a lesson from the latter's religious and national sense of self-respect. After remarking that all of them are sincerely loyal to Government, the paper says that the latter wishes its subjects well; but that, unfortunately for Indians, the authorities do not have matters laid before them in their true colours. It then makes the following observations to illustrate its views :—

(1) In the preliminary stages of criminal cases no distinction is made as a rule between the guilty and innocent; and the izzat of respectable people is placed in danger. Dr. Basharat Ahmad and Hakim Amin-ud-din were found innocent by the courts concerned; but what reparation can be made to these poor men for the humiliation they had to suffer during their trials?

(2) The Elementary Education Bill was rejected at a recent meeting of the Imperial Legislative Council with the help, chiefly, of official members. While, however, free and compulsory education has been denied to Indians, Sir George Clarke strongly urged in a speech on the 21st March that education should be made compulsory for the children of the domiciled community; and that, in the event of their parents being unable to pay tuition fees, it should also be free. His Excellency added that the prevalence of ignorance among Christians would have the effect of making Indians hold Christ's faith in contempt. The question now arises as to why education should be made free and compulsory for the domiciled community and not for the children of the soil. Again, when Government looks on all religions with the same eye, why should the ignorance of Christians be regarded as humiliating for Christianity, and why should it be considered necessary to remove the same, while the ignorance and faiths of Indians are treated differently?

(3) Cows were always killed in India under both Hindus and Muhammadans; but the spread of the (counter) movement has now rendered the situation dangerous. The Musalmans of Ajudhia were not allowed to sacrifice kine on the occasion of the last 'Id, while beef has now been prohibited in the bazar of Islamabad (Badaun District, United Provinces). Pandit Krishen Chandar Joshi, Extra Assistant Commissioner, who issued the latter order, did so without making any enquiries as to how long the practice had been prevalent in the town. Should any officer of Government have the power to promulgate an order without first ascertaining facts?

(4) The Hon'ble Maulvi Rafi-ud-Din asked, at a recent meeting of the Bombay Legislative Council, whether Muhammadan prisoners had had suitable arrangements made to enable them to perform their religious duties. The official reply was that the prisoners named had general permission to pray three times a day, and that there was (consequently) no necessity to accede to the Hon'ble Maulvi's request about Friday prayers. It is a matter for surprise that Government should not even know that Muhammadans are required to pray five times a day, and that special importance attaches to Friday prayers. To stand in the way of saying all these prayers clearly amounts to interference in religious matters, which has been set down as unlawful by Government itself.

(5) Polygamy has been declared illegal in the Transvaal, and a certain Muhammadan immigrant was recently refused permission to bring his second wife into that colony. It need not be pointed out that the latter act goes wholly against the ordinances of Islam.

Continuing, the paper remarks that England is the greatest Muhammadan power in the world, and has conferred legitimate religious liberty on all sections of her subjects. Is it not, then, surprising, it asks, that some haughty and egotistical British officers should place their personal views above law, and should thereby leave nothing undone to lower Government in the estimation of the people? Does it not (moreover) behove Government to make searching enquiries into such cases, subsequently calling those officers to account who may have misused the law, or, if necessary, taking steps to amend the law itself? The paper further remarks that there are also several other instances similar to those mentioned above in which the law has been misused. This being so, should it, out of loyalty to Government, disclose facts or hold its peace? The former course leads to no particular results; while, if the latter procedure is adopted, hardships are multiplied in a manner injurious both to the country and Government.

Continuing its remarks in its issue, dated the 30th March 1912, the paper says that the truest loyalty to Government consists in plainly acquainting the authorities with those things which are likely to give the public cause for complaint. There can be no doubt, it adds, that this has not, so far, led to any useful results, nor is there much prospect of future improvement in this respect. Next it makes the following observations :—

(1) Muhammadans are in a minority (in Government service) everywhere. The disregard shown for their claims has been brought to the notice of Government for years past, but things continue moving in their old groove—witness the paucity of Musalmans in the office of the Military and Public Works Department, Ambala.

(2) They fare still worse in Native States. For instance they constitute 90 per cent. of the population of Kashmir; but, thanks to the State authorities, the Muslims of the Happy Valley occupy, in point of education and wealth, that grade of humanity which Darwin characterised as intermediate between men and animals. Their helplessness has reached such a point that, in all probability, the condition even of animals in the Sahara is not more pitiable.

(3) The Siraj-ul-Akhbar, of Jhelum, reports that the local Divisional Forest Officer, Pandit Sheo Nath, has taken possession of a garden belonging to Muhammadans as also of the attached mosque, which is being used as a stable. Musalmans cannot, however, tolerate—even in their present degraded condition—insults to their places of worship.

In conclusion, the paper remarks that it must be definitely decided by Government and the public as to what should be done regarding "the deplorable circumstances which are coming to pass."

The Viceroy's speech at the last meeting of the Imperial Legislative Council.

7. The following is from the Observer (Lahore), of 30th March 1912 :—

"The Viceroy's speech at the last meeting of the Imperial Legislative Council, briefly referred to in a previous issue, is reproduced in full on another page, and we invite to it the reader's prominent attention. It is a strikingly significant utterance and possesses special interest for the elucidation of the policy of Government in more respects than one, which the head of the British Government in India and a statesman of the position of Lord Hardinge has set forth in his deliverance of Monday last. The speech, we have not the slightest hesitation in declaring, will have a very re-assuring effect, and the evidence which it affords of the sympathy and foresight of the Viceroy will further enhance the great esteem in which His Excellency is held by all sections of the Indian community. Important as the speech on the whole is and worthy of a careful perusal as every part of it is, that portion of it which deals with the foreign policy of the British Government and the solicitude of the latter for the sentiments of its Muslim subjects will deepen the gratitude of the Musalmans of India towards their rulers."

Hindus and politics.

8. The following is from the letter of a Bombay correspondent of the Arya Patrika and published in that paper's issue of 30th March 1912 :—

"From the advent of the Aryans into India up to a few years ago, Hinduism had quietly absorbed millions of aborigines, but now Christianity is very active in bringing within its fold these classes of people. During the last decade the Christians in India have increased by one million souls, and certainly no Hindu has any reason to blame Christian missionaries for this magnificent result. The most discreditable feature of this affair is that some of the Hindu States, which are the strongholds of Hindu orthodoxy, contribute a very large proportion of converts. Now, why should not the Hindus of the present generation follow in the footsteps of their ancestors in this direction and make efforts to propogate their religion among the various aboriginal races in India and Burma who number more than ten millions. To my mind the conversion of these people to Hinduism is more important and far-reaching in its effects than a Vedantic mission to Europe and America or the acquisition of a few higher posts in the Government service. Hindus must now devote more of their time and energy to social, educational and religious matters, and leave politics severely alone for some time to come, or better still, leave it to our loyal Muhammadan fellow-subjects. For, the net result of the political agitation for the last 20 years has been more to the advantage of the Muhammadans than the Hindus, whose deep but silent loyalty was so long suspected by the Government. Hence I appeal to Hindus of every shade of religious opinion to pay closer attention to the problem of the general advancement of the Hindus, including the depressed classes and the aborigines, and to find out ways and means to achieve that end. No nation can rise in the scale of civilization unless it shakes off its lethargy and keeps abreast of the times. Therefore, ye Aryans of India, wake up! Do not fritter away your whole time and energy in politics in demanding a few higher posts from the Government. Elevate all your depressed classes including the aborigines, renounce all harmful social customs, learn to sympathise with each other, and consolidate your scattered forces. For therein lies your true salvation, and not in reviling and criticising Government in season and out of season. Do not take shelter behind inactivity. Learn to understand the true meaning of Karma and put your faith in work—in silent, solid, strenuous work for your unfortunate countrymen. Take advantage of the Pax Britannica to set your house in order and share your happy, peaceful life with others less fortunate than yourselves. Help your depressed classes, ye Aryans, with your money: help them with your brains, if you have no money to spare; help them with your active sympathy if you have neither money nor brains, and God will help and bless your cause. Amen! Yours faithfully, Sympathy."

The coming of Imam Mehdi.

9. The following is from the Arya Patrika (Lahore), of 30th March 1912 :—

"The Paisa Akhbar refers to a prophesy of the late Maulana Hakim Muhammad Hussan made in his book Kakahuddrya, published 13 years back, regarding the Turko-Italian War to the effect that Rome (Italy) with the help of three or four other Christian Powers shall engage in a war with the Turks and this war will continue for two and a half years. The prophecy justly fits in the case of the Tripoli subjugation. Now Sheikh Abdul Ali claims to prove on the authority of the Quran and Hadis that after the wars of Italy and Russia with the Mussalmans the time has come for the appearance of Imam Mehdi.

"The Ahmadias used to tell us that the late Mirza Ghulam Ahmad, of Qadian, was the promised Messiah and he is come and gone. However this is a question which we leave to our Muhammadan brethren to decide among themselves, believing that the present prophet will have nothing to do with Indian affairs."

Tampering with soldiers.

10. The Panjabee (Lahore), of 30th March 1912, has the following :—

"Few people in India can read without surprise a curious case started by Government in England, that somebody was tampering with the British soldiers. A charge like that in India would be easily believed by Englishmen, even though not a particle of evidence is forthcoming. But how could British people themselves tamper with the duties of soldiers? Reuter the other day wired that on a question asked by one of the Socialist members, Sir Rufus Isaacs 'denounced the wicked and dishonest statements of those saying that soldiers were required to fire on persons doing no wrong in the event of rioting with which police were unable to deal. The only alternative to the use of the military was anarchy.' Look at the dexterous use of ideas like the possibility of rioting with the use of the military and the fear of anarchy. With what marvellous quickness one leads to the other and cultimates in anarchy! We do not know to what case Sir Rufus referred, but the London Standard, in its issue of the 27th February, published the proceedings at the Aldershot Police Court in which Fred. Crowley was charged with inciting 'divers persons, to wit, two soldiers, to commit treasonable practices in South Camp.' The accused, it would appear, circulated certain handbills in the barracks entitled : 'An open letter to British soldiers.' The pamphlet opened with sentences similar to this : 'When we go on strike to better our lot, which is the lot also of your fathers, mothers, sisters, and brothers, you are called upon by your officers to murder us. Don't do it. . . Boys, don't do it.' If this appeal is rioting, failure of the police, employment of the military, and anarchy, Sir Rufus Isaacs must have marvellously unhealthy imagination. Anyway, we see he is climbing down and is prepared to recommend reduction of sentences. The case reminds us of the exaggerated conditions pictured by panicstricken officials in India sitting in their easy chairs and knowing little of the innocent mob outside groaning under some heavy burden and praying for redress. They must be answered by sympathetic statesmen and not with gunshots. But the misuse of the military is apparently as common in India as in England."

Change of capital from Calcutta and its future.

11. In the course of a leading article in its issue of 3rd April 1912, the Tribune (Lahore), remarks :—

"* * * Calcutta with its modern surroundings, its industrial and intellectual activities, its extensive harbour crowded with shipping and the great railway systems converging upon it, is the symbol and sign manual of British sovereignty in India. It bears no signs of a past civilisation, no wreckages of previous empires, nothing to remind of the teaching of the Preacher, vanity of vanities, all is vanity. Calcutta stands for the living present and the very near past which is tied to the present in a living bond of union and presents no gap or hiatus. There is no succession in empire as there is in a family or a dynasty. There is no natural heirship, no law of heredity by which an empire passes from one nation to another. The transfer of the capital to Delhi will not prove that the British are the natural heirs of the Moghuls any more than the Moghuls inherited the kingdom and the capital from the Pathans or the Pathans from the Hindus. The succession of empires is a see-saw movement: one goes up and another goes down and then the former goes down and some other goes up. Calcutta was the capital of the British Empire in India; Delhi, even if rebuilt, will never be known as owing its existence to the British Government. Varying slightly the words of the book Delhi may well say—

> Empires may come and Empires may go,
> But I stay on for ever.

"We have observed that the final departure of the Viceroy from Calcutta was more impressive than the last sitting of the Imperial Legislative Council. This was not due to any great function of State or any imposing ceremonial, but to nature which seemed to emphasise the change that was coming over Calcutta. On the day the Viceroy left severe thunderstorms passed over Calcutta and nature was in a state of convulsion. There was a report that the flagstaff on the top of Government House was struck by lightning: This is denied but it is admitted that the flag was torn by the violence of the wind. Astrologers and superstitious people will not fail to regard this as a bad omen. Even Europeans were greatly perturbed when the steamer Delhi was wrecked just about the time the transfer of the capital to Delhi was announced. The King Emperor's sister, brother-in-law and nieces had a narrow escape, though the Duke of Fife soon afterwards succumbed to disease brought on by shock and exposure. Superstitious people will now attach an exaggerated importance to the tearing of the flag in Calcutta. We are not, however, superstitious and we share the robust optimism that associates the change of capital with a fresh period of prosperity and progress. * * *

"And now Calcutta has ceased to be the seat of the Government of India. The people directly affected by this change have, on the whole, taken it in good part. One or two hysterical outbursts were soon subdued. It is recognised that although deprived of its official position Calcutta has not ceased to be the great city it is. The glamour of four months of Viceregal state will pass but nothing else has been taken away. Calcutta has taken heart of grace and views the future without dismay and with hope and confidence. Whether it will be to the advantage of the Government of India to avoid the fierce light of a vigilant public opinion is a question that need not be discussed here, but the future of Calcutta is cloudless and clear and full of promise as its past has been full of achievement. The men who have made Calcutta what it is have not lost heart and their successors will ensure the unbroken advance of that great city."

II.—Afghanistan and Trans-Frontier.

An open letter to the Amir.

12. The Musalman (Amritsar), of the 26th March 1912, publishes an open letter from its Editor (Maulvi Sana-Ullah) to His Majesty the Amir of Afghanistan. The Maulvi refers to the great achievements of early Muhammadans and asserts that the same were ascribable to the said Musalmans making the Quran their guide in every respect. Next he urges Habibulla Khan to devote his best attention to the dissemination of the teachings of the Quran, enacting a law to forbid the marriage of Afghan boys and girls till they can translate (passages from) the said scripture into their mother tongue. The Editor can also offer his services for the attainment of the desired object and would ask the Siraj-ul-Akhbar (Kabul) to lay his request before His Majesty.

Tribal raids into British territory.

13. The Zamindar (Lahore), of the 28th March 1912, publishes an article headed "Suppression of dacoity in the frontier ilaka of the Punjab." In continuation of its previous remarks on the subject (vide paragraph 5 of Selections No. 13), the Editor says that the Hindustan further suggests that the Kabulis in India should be declared a criminal tribe, for the reason that, although they work as labourers during the day, they commit armed dacoities at night in the houses of Hindu Sahukars. He cannot, however, endorse the suggestion, as he knows that the said Pathans neither act as dacoits nor do they wantonly harass British subjects. He is, therefore, of opinion that it would be a piece of unjustifiable oppression to declare peaceful Kabulis in British territory a criminal tribe. The Hindustan's last suggestion, he adds, is that (only) Hindu Inspectors of Police should be deputed to enquire into dacoities committed in the houses of Hindu Sahukars. This, however, is an undoubtedly unfair suggestion, conveying as it does the idea that Muhammadan investigating officers do not extend to the above Sahukars the sympathy due to all injured persons.

The Frontier Raids.

14. The following is from the Panjabee (Lahore), of 30th March 1912:—

"Every day there is some news from the border districts of raid or raids having been committed by the frontier outlaws. These have been remarkable for the extraordinary daring and absolute fearlessness of law they show. A case showing similar daring has recently taken place in Paris where, according to Reuter, six desperadoes stopped a motor-car, killed the driver, then went to a bank and there shot dead the cashier and ran away with 40,000 francs, in the motor-car. After driving away to a far distant place they left the car and walked to their homes. Who can be sure that our frontier raiders will not some day develop their methods of looting in the same way. We are thankful to the Government for adopting special measures. It has already quartered punitive police on several of the frontier villages known to be harbouring dacoits. It has also appointed a special officer. But much more is required to create fear in the minds of the desparate outlaws. The Amir recently had some dacoits blown from the guns as he thought this to be a more effective way of dealing with them than the humane way in the British territory. The police, the lambardars and other village officials should be held responsible for what takes place. Arms should be supplied to the exposed subjects and Hindu investigating officers appointed to make searching enquiries of the whereabouts of these outlaws. It is only by persistent efforts that the Punjab and the North-West Frontier Governments can succeed in doing something effective in putting an end to frontier raids and dacoities before they develop into yet more frightful forms."

III.—Native States.

The Kashmir murder case.

15. The following is from the Panjabee (Lahore), of 30th March 1912:—

"In addition to the constitutional question as to how far the Governor-General in Council was justified in interfering in the internal administration of Native States of the status of Kashmir, there are a number of other questions equally important to deal with. The first of these is as to how the Government of India was led to interfere in this case. Could it be the Maharaja himself or any of the State officials, who, with a view to seek the opinions of the Government of India, referred the case to it? This seems improbable because who would like to hint or suggest that a decision given by three successive Courts of the State did not stand on a firm judicious ground? Besides, when compelled to reverse his own orders, the Maharaja wrote to say that 'in obedience to the orders passed by the Governor-General in Council, the prisoners be released at once.' This shows that His Highness the Maharaja did not voluntarily move in the matter and bring about a reversal of his own orders. Could it then be the subjects or the prisoners themselves or their guardians who moved the Government of India? Certainly it cannot be they, because under the constitution of Native States, and the non-intervention policy proclaimed by the Government in relation to them, the subjects have no right of appeal to Suzerain Power, even if they desire to do so. Then was it the British Resident at the Court of the Kashmir State who referred the matter to the Government of India? The Resident also as the most constitutional officer of the Government would have liked to refer the question to the Maharaja himself on the spot rather than to the Government at Calcutta or Simla. Was it the Government of India itself, then that was moved in the interests of the 'politically important community' to secure the release of the unfortunate prisoners? That could not be so. Lord Hardinge's Government, known for its impartiality cannot take sides on individual grounds and disturb the happy relations established between the Government of India and the Native States. Was it then, the position and influence of the men in trouble that was possible for the Government of India's direct interference? In our opinion such a presumption is unjustifiable as the interests of no individual are above those of law and equity. It, therefore, remains a perfect mystery how the matter was reported to the Supreme Government, who did it, and by what recognised process the reversal of the punishment was effected without disturbing the verdict of the judicial trial. Further light should be thrown on the case to make it intelligible to the public."

Viceroy's speech at the Patiala State dinner.

16. The following is from the Panjabee (Lahore), of 2nd April 1912 :—

"His Excellency the Viceroy while replying to the toast of his health at the Patiala State Dinner on Saturday, made a lengthy speech alluding to the loyal and brave qualities of the ruling family. Incidentally His Excellency referred to the tremendous noise once made in that (sic) about sedition that did not exist. In doing so the Viceroy said :—

'Times are changing in these days. I think I may say that they are changing rapidly. Education is spreading, a new spirit is among the peoples of India and bringing in its train, I hope, loftier ideals and higher aspirations ; but there is no doubt that here and there, and from time to time, this development has given unhappy birth to a certain restlessness and discontent, which on occasion may take a form hostile to the paramount power and I might almost say, to all Governments, and may require to be dealt with a firm hand.'

"What necessity there was for this unhappy allusion, we do not know. The sentiments are not pleasing at a time when the past is being forgotten and a sound basis for the future is being laid. As regards the effects of spreading education, Lord Hardinge stated two facts. The first about which His Excellency was not certain, is the 'loftier ideals and higher aspirations.' The second about which 'there is no doubt,' is the 'restlessness and discontent, which may take a form hostile to the Paramount Power.' This frame of mind of the Viceroy was never suspected before and we are ignorant of the circumstances which called forth sentiments like these in the peaceful State of Patiala. This speech is calculated to damp the spirits of those who are enthusiastic about educational progress and it would be disastrous if that could be the aim of the Viceroy."

The Tribune (Lahore), of 3rd April 1912, also has the following on the same subject :—

"* * * There are thus, according to the great authority that must attach to a deliberate pronouncement by the Viceroy of India, three contingencies which the future holds, peaceful progress, agitation and war. The last must be a danger from outside for there is scarcely any apprehension of war in India itself. As regards the other two, peaceful progress is inalienable from constitutional agitation while the other kind of agitation which becomes hostile to the Paramount Power is more or less determined by the policy of that Power itself. A persistent policy of irritation, a perpetual disregard of popular feeling and sentiment must have undesirable consequences. A Viceroy like Lord Curzon, or a Lieutenant-Governor who is not afraid to drive agitation underground may leave their successors to face bitter agitation, while it is inconceivable that a Viceroy like Lord Ripon or Lord Hardinge need have any apprehension of the limits of peaceful progress being exceeded."

IV.—KINE-KILLING.

Muhammadans and cow-killing.

17. Writing under the heading "The question of cow-protection," the Jhang Sial (Jhang), of the 23rd March 1912, says that Muhammadans seem determined to extirpate kine on the ground that beef is a lawful article of food. This is not, however, wise, seeing that their conduct is likely to result even in their own disappearance from the world. It, moreover, argues extreme weakness on their part not to abstain from killing the cow in spite of their being aware of the usefulness of that animal. They look at the question from (only) a religious standpoint, whereas it deserves to be considered from political and economic points of view also. After referring to the great usefulness of the cow to Indian agriculturists, the paper observes that kine-killing is injuring Muhammadans far more than Hindus, for the reason that the former own more agricultural land than the latter. Feelings of bigotry, it adds, have so far prevented Musalmans from realising the situation, but their eyes are beginning to open at last. It was recently asked by Khan Bahadur Sayad Mehdi Shah in the Punjab Legislative Council what steps the (Local) Government had taken to help zamindars in procuring a sufficient number of oxen. What has, however, Government to do with the matter ? How is it to blame if "we" cannot distinguish good from evil ? The remedy for the evil complained of by the Khan Bahadur is in the hands of his own co-religionists. Muhammadans also should, like Hindus, make it their highest religious duty to protect cows, and thereby promote the welfare of India.

V.—Native Societies and Religious Matters.

Complaint against the Afghan.

18. The Hindustan (Lahore), of the 22nd March 1912, publishes a note headed "Mischievous writing by the Afghan." It quotes an extract from the paper named, which states that the Holi passed off peaceably at Peshawar, but that the patience displayed by Muhammadans proved of great help in preserving the peace; that Hindus hit on new plans to provoke their Muslim neighbours; that they were guilty of the gross foolishness of throwing coloured water on (all) passers-by, whether Hindu or Muhammadan; that they accorded this treatment even to Khan Sahib Muhammad Akbar Khan, City Inspector of Police; that this shows that they have become so emboldened that they reck nothing of (Government) officers; that bands were loudly played in front of mosques from motives of zid and with the sole object of making mischief; and that unworthy and foolish efforts were made to seize any opportunity to have a fight (with Muhammadans). Commenting on the quotation, the paper remarks that every word in the same breathes mischief; and that the object of the insolent Peshawar journal seems to be that, if the local Hindus and Muhammadans ever come to blows on the occasion of the Holi, it may be able to say that the provocation was afforded by the former. Such writings cannot but injuriously affect the pleasant relations (lit. conditions) that have been gradually brought about (between the two communities) through the statesmanlike efforts of the Chief Commissioner. It behoves the Government of the Frontier Province to nip the evil in the bud by taking prompt notice of the aforesaid writing.

Neo-Sikhs and Aryas.

19. The Panjabi Surma (Lahore), of the 15th March (received on the 1st April) 1912, publishes a communication headed "Religious discussion between the Arya Samaj and Neo-Sikhs." The writer—Guranditta Mal, of Shamnagar, Amritsar district—says that the local Singh Sabha held its annual celebrations on the 23rd, 24th and 25th February last. On the evening of the 23rd, he adds, one Bhai Budh Singh challenged the Arya Samaj to a discussion and used grossly obscene and unbecoming expressions in doing so. As to the discussion itself (the representative of) the Sikhs had to admit that their duties were not merely to bathe in the tanks at Tarn Taran, the Golden Temple or in the Baoli Sahib (at Lahore). Nor were they confined to prostrating themselves before, and making offerings to, the Panja Sahib, the Beri Sahib, the Bara Sahib, &c. The educated Sikhs present (*they should be called uneducated) made unsuccessful attempts to create a disturbance; while, on the conclusion of the discussion, Bhai Budh Singh and several other mischievous Sikhs acted in a provocatory manner at the Samaj Mandir. The Aryas, however, displayed great patience, with the result that there was no breach of the peace.

Commenting on the above the editor remarks that it is fully evident from the letter that the Neo-Sikhs do not consider it good for them to worship the Beri Sahib, &c. This, he adds, is as it should be, seeing that such ignorant things cannot flourish in these days of enlightenment. He would also strongly urge Sikhs to cease—and that at an early date—waving chowris over the Granth, offering flowers and Karah Parshad to that scripture, and bowing their heads to it; because the days of this sort of idol worship also are numbered, and educated people cannot tolerate such ignorance.

Mixed marriages.

20. The Indar (Lahore), of the 22nd March 1912, publishes a note headed "A dreadful blow to the Arya Samaj: wanted a new law." The Samaj, it says, does not believe in caste, and has had marriages performed in disregard of caste restrictions. After stating how a marriage between a Brahman woman and a man of another caste has recently been declared illegal by the High Court of Bombay, the paper says that marriages of the above description—solemnised under the auspices of the Samaj—must also be regarded as illegal; seeing that Aryas have no Marriage Act of their own and are governed by the Hindu Law. This, it adds, constitutes a dreadful blow to the Arya Samaj; and the only remedy is that Aryas should either have a special law passed to legalise mixed marriages or should discontinue forming such unions. As to those Aryas who have been married in disregard of caste-restrictions, they should get their marriages legalised by having the same registered under the 1872 Act, or should marry again under the Anand Marriage Act.

*The brackets are the writer's own.

Muhammad and Dayanand.

21. The Indar (Lahore), of the 22nd March 1912, has a note entitled "Appearance of the light of Muhammad." The Mission of Swami Dayanand's life, it says, was the same as that of Muhammad's, viz., to unite men, to make them worship only one God, and to breathe feelings of a universal brotherhood into them. The only difference, it adds, is that, while unitarianism and the above brotherhood are still to be found in Islam, in the Arya Samaj they ceased to exist with the death of Swami Dayanand. Continuing, it remarks that Dayanand was an incarnation of Muhammad, and that if the former was a rishi of his times the latter was a Maharishi of his age. Although, however, the founder of Islam was superior to the founder of the Arya Samaj in some respects, still he was inferior to the latter in point of knowledge. Nevertheless, his work in the field of monotheism and (human) brotherhood is to that of Swami Dayanand as a river is to a rainpond. This is due to the fact that, while Muhammad's mantle fell on men like Abu Bakr, Omar Usman and Ali, the Swami's work passed into the hands of lawyers, who have (only) brought ruin on the Arya Samaj.

Communal organisations in India.

22. The following is from the Tribune (Lahore), of 31st March 1912 :—

"To observers of recent events some of the acts of the leaders must have seemed inexplicable. His Highness the Agha Khan resigned his Presidentship of the All-India Muslim League and hedged round his permission for re-nomination with certain significant conditions. The Hon'ble Khan Bahadur Mian Muhammad Shafi resigned his Secretaryship of the Punjab Branch of the Muslim League, and quite recently Sir Currimbhoy Ibrahim also resigned his Presidentship of the Bombay Branch of the League. Then as regards the Hindu Sabha, the proposed central organization which Mr. Sarada Charan Mitra was to have inaugurated never crystallised into action. While the Punjab Hindu Sabha has remained a name with the doors of its head office permanently closed, that across the Jumna, organised on the Punjab model, seems to derive its inspiration from the leaders of its prototype. This then is the fate of communal organisations which at one time threatened to paralyse the united labours of tried leaders who were working for national unity and who were endeavouring to reconcile the differences of communities by concentrating efforts on the common purpose of national uplift. No one need regret if these sectional organizations make their final exit from the Indian stage."

VI.—Legislation.

The Press Act.

23. Writing under the heading "The Press Act should be repealed," the Jhang Sial (Jhang), of the 23rd March 1912, says that peace now reigns in all parts of India, that no vestige of sedition has been left in the country, and that (the once misguided) journalists have come into the right path and are engaged in removing every misunderstanding between the rulers and the ruled. There can be no denying the fact, it adds, that at one time they ascribed all the troubles of their motherland to the British Government and tried to prejudice Indians against their present rulers. It is, however, equally true that they were misled by the writings of certain Englishmen, while they have now realised their mistake and are making amends for their past conduct. It is, therefore, neither wise nor brave on the part of Government to withhold pardon from them. Next the paper complains of the manner in which the Press Act is being enforced and says that this prevents respectable people from adopting the profession of journalism. In conclusion, he requests Government to repeal the Act.

24. The following review of the work done by the first Imperial Legislative Council formed under the Reform Scheme has been published in the Observer (Lahore), of 30th March 1912 :—

The Imperial Legislative Council.

"Monday last witnessed the concluding meeting of the Viceregal Legislative Council at Calcutta and probably the last important meeting of the first Imperial Legislative Council, organised under the Minto-Morley scheme. The Simla session of the Council has not so far been conspicuous for the discussion of any weighty matters and the same may be expected during the next summer session. It would, therefore, be well to take stock of the work done by the Council during the last three years.

"Before doing so, however, we may summarise briefly the work attempted by the Council in the course of the one month's session that has just come to a close. Though unusually short for a winter session, this year's session was one of the most important, no less than fourteen meetings being crowded together in the short span of four weeks and a half."

After detailing the various measures and resolutions dealt with by the Council, the paper proceeds :—

"Passing on to its activities since its formation towards the end of 1909, we may observe that there is reason for general satisfaction, not unmixed, however, with a sense of disappointment from the Muslim point of view. That a wider introduction of the popular element in the Supreme Council has been justified by its results hardly any one will deny. It has afforded both the Government and the people a means of more intimately learning each other's views, and extended the mutual sympathy that comes from true knowledge. The grants for education and sanitation have been raised during the last three years by more than 60 per cent. and, as the Finance Member admitted in one of his speeches, a part of the credit for the increases belongs undoubtedly to the non-official members. Moreover, the Council has brought into prominence the unanimity of Indian opinion on several matters of far-reaching moment—the treatment of Indians in the British Colonies, the indentured labour, the countervailing duty on cotton goods and the fiscal policy of the Indian Government. The Government has not yet been able to concede Indian demands on a majority of these questions and some of them will perhaps take a very long time to grant. But there can be no doubt that the discussions on these subjects have already been productive of much good. They have focussed opinion on the subjects, and with the lapse of time and a maintenance of the sobriety and moderation which a preponderant majority of members, both official and non-official, have brought to bear upon the discussions, there is every hope that Indian views will appeal more and more effectively to the Government in India and England. Thus if the Council has, on the one hand, served as a means for the political education of hundreds of thousands of the newspaper reading public, it has, on the other hand, had the effect of producing mutual sympathy and respect for one another's views among officials and non-officials, and tended to bind Europeans and Indians together in the silken cords of loyalty to the British Raj.

"It would be absolutely unfair to deny that the one non-official member who has done the greatest service to the country, whose remarks in the Council have been listened to with the greatest attention and respect, is Mr. Gokhale. We do not pretend to see eye to eye with him on all questions. With regard to some matters of importance, our policy is diametrically opposed to his views. But justice demands a warm acknowledgment of Mr. Gokhale's profound study of Indian problems, his persuasive eloquence and his disinterested patriotism. The representatives of the Bombay Presidency have indeed been head and shoulders above other Provinces in this respect and have deservedly won encomiums from all. Other Provinces have also done very well. But to the shame of this Province, be it said, the Punjab has been the last to distinguish itself. Not one resolution has been proposed, not one Bill has been introduced, in the Council by any representative of the Punjab; not more than one question, and even that relating to another Province, has been asked by a Punjab member, and hardly any weighty speech has been delivered by any of them. Turning to the Muhammadan members of the Council, we find that, with the exception of Maulvi Shams-ul-Huda, all who have distinguished themselves have Congress leanings. The first Indian member of the Executive Council of the Bengal Presidency is an asset of great value to the Muhammadan community and has advanced his views in the Council with much skill, consummate tact and great eloquence. Mr. Jinnah, though a Congressman, is the one Musalman member who has introduced, and is best fitted to pilot, a Bill whose passing into Act will be fruitful of lasting benefit to the community. With Mr. Mashar-ul-Haq's views on some questions we do not find ourselves in complete agreement. In some respects, they are at variance with general Muhammadan opinion in the country. But these differences notwithstanding, Indian Musalmans may justly be proud of him. He has maintained Muhammadan reputation for manliness, and made his mark for the courage of his convictions. We had great hopes from that cultured nobleman and learned representative of the Punjab, Nawab Zulfiqar Ali Khan, C.S.I. Circumstances have, however, prevented him from regularly attending the meetings of the Council and realising the hopes of his admirers. Mr. Bhurgri promises to represent the enlightened section of the Zamindars of Sind, and our only regret is that he has joined the Council during the last year of the present Council. Nawab Syed Muhammad is a well-known Congressman and prepares his speeches with great labour and discharges his duties faithfully. On the whole, however, the Muslim element comes out only second best. But we hope the next Council will bring about an improvement."

The Sind Musalman Education Bill.

25. The following is from the Observer (Lahore), of 3rd April 1912 :—

"A peculiar interest attaches to the Bill recently introduced in the Bombay Legislative Council by the Hon'ble Mr. G. M. Bhurgri for the purpose of promoting the education of Muhammadans in Sind. The measure seeks for this object to levy on all Musalman landholders of that province a cess of quarter anna on every rupee assessable as ordinary land revenue and to create the Educational Cess Committee, to be presided over by the Commissioner in Sind, which will dispose of the funds for the stimulation of secondary, higher and primary education. The Bill has received the unqualified support of the leading zamindars of the province, has been welcomed by the All-India Muhammadan Educational Conference, by the various Associations in Sind and by the press, and will not be opposed by the Government. * * *

"* * * The Sind Musalman Landholders' Education Bill is a measure of self-help and is therefore deserving of the approbation of Indians in general and of the Muhammadans in particular. The Muhammadans of that province now seek the aid of the Legislature and of the existing State machinery to collect the cess for them, and we hope their efforts will meet with success. For this will be hardly a novelty in this country, as Government does the same thing for the Tea Cess Committee. The estimated revenue from this cess is Rs. 1,25,000 per annum. This sum may not appear very large, but it will be recurring, and it will enable them to do a great deal. The scheme is, first of all, to create a sufficient number of scholarships for secondary and higher education ; to open new primary and secondary schools wherever they are urgently required, and to improve the Mulla Schools and bring them to the standard of efficiency which the Government schools maintain. It is also intended to introduce elementary instruction in agricultural subjects ; and to provide hostels wherever there are efficient Government and private schools and to make arrangements for imparting religious instruction in them. The scheme is thus a most commendable one, and we trust the Bombay Government will give it a fair trial by accepting a measure introduced by that enlightened zamindar, the Hon'ble Mr. Ghulam Muhammad Bhurgri, Barrister-at-Law.

Social Legislation and Private Bills.

26. The following is from the Panjabee (Lahore), dated 6th April 1912 :—

"It is announced that several non-official Bills relating to social reform will be laid before the Imperial Legislative Council at Simla. Messrs. Madge and Dadabhoy have two Bills on hand and Mr. Mudholkar will introduce a third to prevent the employment of dancing women in temples. Private Bills affecting political and legal matters have had no chance of success and the Hon'ble Members have now been diverting their legislative energy to reform the old society. If the Government does not bear correction, cannot society submit meekly to it ? But we are afraid Government is too jealous of its own Legislative authority to permit reforms either way. Social Legislation has its own difficulties and, on the whole, we fear the zeal of the Hon'ble Members has no outlet. Social orthodoxy on the one side and administrative bureaucracy on the other offer perpetual opposition."

VII.—General Administration.

(a)—Judicial.

The case against the Khan of Hoti.

27. The Akhbar-i-'Am (Lahore), of the 23rd March 1912, publishes a leader headed "Deplorable oppression on the Khan (lit. Nawab) of Hoti." In continuation of previous remarks on the subject (vide paragraph 14 of Selections No. 12), the paper complains of the irregularities committed by the Frontier Police in connection with the case against the Khan. The troubles, it adds, which he has had to suffer were not accidental but the result of premeditation ; while they are traceable, not to the aforesaid irregularities, but directly to high-handedness on the part of the Frontier authorities and to the enmity (they evidently bear the Khan). Continuing, it remarks that the details disclosed throw the responsibility—and it is a very serious one—on the head of the local administration, viz., Sir George Roos-Keppel. The paper then proceeds to remark that it was owing to the Chief Commissioner's enmity with him that the Frontier Police arrested the Khan on a trumped-up and serious charge. The Khan bears a good name; and it is, therefore, difficult to understand why Sir George Roos-Keppel should thirst after his life and should openly heap abuse on him in print. The Frontier Province may be non-regulation, but does this mean that the officer in question can defy law and bring ruin on whomsoever he chooses? The Viceroy is about to visit Peshawar, and it is to be hoped that His Excellency will look into the matter.

The case against the Khan of Hoti.

28. The Vakil (Amritsar), of the 23rd March 1912, has an article headed "Conflict between law and despotism: surprising revelations about the case against the Khan of Hoti." After publishing remarks similar to those recently made by the Tribune (vide paragraph 13 of Selections No. 12), the paper observes that it is not a little surprising that such a case should have cropped up in a part of the dominions of the just British Government. What, it adds, still more surprises one is the fact that Government should so far be ignorant of the astonishing things connected with the case, as was stated at a recent meeting of the Viceroy's Legislative Council. This is why the public feels extremely uneasy in the matter and is eager to know what action Government intends taking and when. The Hon'ble Mr. Justice Davar's words "Thank God I was not born in the Frontier Province!" do not reflect credit on the British Government. One of the main causes of the strength of British rule in India and its popularity in this country consists in its evenhanded justice. Those who go against this characteristic of Government are its worst enemies, and it would be a serious mistake not to make adequate enquiries into their conduct.

Ludhiana rape case.

29. The following is from the Panjabee (Lahore), of 2nd April 1912 :—

"Elsewhere we publish the full text of the judgment of Mr. H. A. Rose, Sessions Judge of Ludhiana, acquitting all the accused in the horrible outrage case. The decision has, as we pointed out before, created the most profound disappointment and horror in the Hindu community. The perusal of the judgment shows that the learned Magistrate has taken quite a singular view of the relevancy and value of identification. And according to the strictures he adopts, no identification of any kind can be of any judicial value. He has altogether neglected to take into consideration the frightful and pitiable position of the outraged girl, and does not extend to her the usual considerations which impartial judges do. Her previous character and social position have been taken into consideration to prejudice her against her getting justice. Even supposing that she was of immoral character, how does that mitigate the offence? The learned judge doubts every piece of evidence, and is not convinced of this or that matter. It is a purely personal opinion of his and how far a case of this importance can be left at this stage for want of appreciation of evidence, is for the Government to decide. His verdict is not at all based on sound logic. He dismisses medical opinion on the ground that 2 or 3 and not 6 men outraged the girl. He relies on probabilities, and from the beginning shows a disinclination to believe the evidence placed and calls for evidence not recorded. It is undoubtedly a case for appeal to the Chief Court, and considering the tardy manner in which the police have conducted the case, and the indignation caused to the public, we hope that the Government will issue instructions to appeal against the decision.

"If the Ludhiana outragers were left unpunished and the accused persons let off, then what is the moral of it all? It shows that a horrible outrage has been committed upon an unprotected girl in the railway station and in the busiest part of the busy station amidst the guardians of law, and after 6 months of tardy trial nobody is punished. Not only this, but the decision of the Judge gives a clear impression that the law will not recognise modern methods of identification. Any woman, gagged and outraged by ruffians, who may come disguised or who may afterwards change their appearance, will not stand very severe tests of identification. Her identication immediately after the crime, must be more valuable than others. What is the good of maintaining the police and the judicial machinery if in a horrible case like this the culprits are not punished? What is the difference between taking into cognisance a case like this and refusing to make any enquiry at all? In the dark days of India people never complained of such outrages to the police or went to the judiciary. They employed their rude ways of retaliation which had some deterrent effect. In the modern days of police protection and judicial efficiency criminals after criminals are caught and let off, and judges seem to get more doubts, the more learned they become in law. If a case like this had happened in England, would the results have been as at present. And yet here is a case of the most fiendish cruelty perpetrated on a girl, about which every one seems helpless to do justice. It will take many years to efface the sad impression that the failure of justice in this case has created and to restore anything like confidence in the public mind in the power and impartiality of our judicial and police machinery."

(d)—Education.

The Gurukula.

30. The Indar (Lahore), of the 22nd March 1912, publishes an article headed "Preaching of the Vedas and Sober reflection—XII." After reiterating what it has already said about the Gurukula, the paper says that the fact of the said institution having a large income and an increasingly large number of applications for admission does not necessarily mean that it is a successful seminary. Next it suggests that the only way to ensure the success of the Gurukula is to have it affiliated to a University, to appoint an Englishman as its Principal, and to teach comparative theology to its students. To this end the services of Maulvis and others well acquainted with their respective religions should be engaged.

(h)—Miscellaneous.

Security from the Khalsa Sewak.

31. The Khalsa Sewak (Amritsar), of the 13th (received on the 29th) March 1912, publishes a note headed "Thank God that Aryas also have come out of 'widowhood.'" The Editor states that, writing about the security recently demanded from his paper, the Hindustan remarks that "certain people have been labouring under the unfounded impression that Government does not extend its protection to Arya Samajists." That journal also expresses the hope that the Khalsa Sewak will bear in mind in future that Aryas also are subjects of Government and as much entitled to official protection as Sikhs and other communities (vide paragraph 24 of Selections No. 10). The Hindustan does not, however, even know whether it is the Khalsa Sewak or the press (at which it is printed) that has been called upon to furnish security, and whether the writing objected to was from the Editor's pen or a communication. It only knows that, thanks to Government, Aryas have come out of "widowhood" and are now in the happy state of "wifehood" (in the good graces of the authorities). It is certainly due to Government's kindness to them that Arya papers like the Parkash and the Panjabi Surma, which heap the grossest abuse on Sikhs and wound their feelings by insulting the Gurus, are not interfered with; while security has been demanded from the Khalsa Sewak, which is a loyal journal and writes only in self-defence.

Security from the Zamindar.

32. The Jhang Sial (Jhang), of the 23rd March 1912, says that it has been deeply pained at the news of the Zamindar having been called upon to furnish security. The sole reason for this, it adds, is that the demand is likely to stop the pen of a Muslim journalist whose inflammatory writings have been making his Hindu confreres conduct themselves with care. After remarking that, apparently, the District Magistrate's orders are illegal, the paper goes on to say that the Zamindar is the subject of much talk in Lahore, and that there are highly-placed men among the intimate friends of its Editor. This is why he came to know of the District Magistrate's confidential orders before the same had been issued, and (thereupon) published an open letter to the Punjab Government. Proceeding, the Jhang Sial remarks that, if the above orders are not reversed, all journalists should consider their (papers') existence in danger; for the reason that, otherwise, whenever any District Magistrate might be displeased with an Editor he could demand security on one pretext or another.

Security from the Zamindar.

33. The Zamindar (Lahore), of the 28th March 1912, publishes a number of communications headed "(The demand of) security from the Zamindar and its effect on the paper's readers." One of the writers—a Sayad Farzand Hussain, of Narowal, Raya tahsil (in the Sialkot district)—reports that it has deeply pained Musalmans to read about the above demand. If, he adds, this is how the well-wishers of Government fare, then loyalty is at an end. After contending that the Zamindar teaches better loyalty than servile papers, he asks the Editor not to give way to despair, saying that the latter will be helped by God and that true Muhammadans are ready to sacrifice even their lives for him and Government.

One Muhammad Khan, Girdawar, Wadhi Circle (Mauza) Hussain Shah, in the Shahpur district, reports that he feels extremely indignant at the demand of security from the paper, and that the news drew tears from the eyes of every Muhammadan who heard of the same. He is confident, however, that the just Government will cause no injury to the Zamindar at the instance of (certain) selfish and servile persons. Next he swears by God and the Prophet, and declares that he is ready to do everything for a lover of his community like Zafar Ali, who has taught "us" what is due to God and Muhammad, and what loyalty to Government means.

The Secretary of the Anjuman-i-Zia-ul-Islam, Bombay, reports the proceedings of a weekly meeting of his society at which sympathy was expressed with the Zamindar.

The Zamindar newspaper.

34. The Zamindar (Lahore), of the 28th March 1912, publishes a note headed as follows:—"We have grown to youth under the shadow of swords, the dagger of the crescent is our national emblem." The above couplet, by Dr. Muhammad Iqbal, says the Editor, used to be published at the top of the first page of his paper. After remarking that it is a commentary on the verse "Heaven is under the shadow of the sword," he states that recently, while reading the Quran, he came across the following:—"The moon when it shone." "Do not fear, for verily thou art above all." The result was that he at once discarded the said couplet and replaced it by the words quoted, "which fully represented (lit. were fully in consonance with) not only the (ideas associated with the) crescent but also the state of the heart of Muhammadans." Next he says that Babu Inshaullah is wrong in remarking that he has discarded the couplet owing to its being calculated to cause seditious excitement and thereby likely to attract the attention of Government.

LAHORE:
The 6th March 1912.

C. STEAD,
Assistant to the Deputy Inspector-General of Police, Criminal Investigation Department, Punjab.

Punjab Government Press, Lahore—15-4-12—2—107—C. D.

[ Confidential. ]

[ Vol. XXV. ] SELECTIONS [ No. 15. ]

FROM THE

NATIVE NEWSPAPERS

PUBLISHED IN THE PUNJAB.

Examined up to 13th April 1912.

---

CONTENTS.

Page.

I.—Politics.

(a) Foreign—

1. The Turco-Italian War (Vakil) ... ... 267
2. Another menace for Turkey (Observer) ... ib.
3. Persian affairs (Paisa Akhbar) ... ... ib.
4. Indians in America (Tribune) ... ... ib

(b) Home—

5. Government and popular grievances (Jhang Sial) 269
6. Indians and higher military appointments (Vakil) ib.
7. Modification of the Partition (Paisa Akhbar) ... 270
8. Indians and higher military appointments (Tribune) ib.
9. Provincial Autonomy (Tribune) ... ... ib.

II.—Afghanistan and Trans-Frontier.

Nil.

III.—Native States.

Nil.

IV.—Kine-killing.

Nil.

V.—Native Societies and Religious Matters.

10. Sayad Rashid Raza, President-elect of the forthcoming session of the Nadwat-ul-Ulema (Paisa Akhbar) ... ... ... ... 270
11. The Muhammadan community (Zamindar) ... 271
12. The Arya Samaj (Sanatan Dharam Parcharak) .. ib.
13. Mutual relations of Hindus and Muhammadans and Sir John Hewett's speech (Tribune) ... 272

Page.

VI.—Legislation.

Nil.

VII.—General Administration.

(a) Judicial—

Nil.

(b) Police—

14. Crime in the Punjab (Panjabee) ... ... 273

(c) Municipal and Cantonment affairs—

Nil.

(d) Education —

15. Secondary education for girls (Panjabee) ... 273
16. The Bahawalpur College (Tribune) ... ... 274

(e)—Agriculture and questions affecting the land—

Nil.

(f) Railways and Communications—

Nil.

(g) Postal matters—

Nil.

(h) Miscellaneous—

17. Personnel of the Town-planning Committee for Delhi (Tribune) ... ... ... 274

LIST OF NEWSPAPERS AND PERIODICALS EXAMINED BY THE SPECIAL BRANCH AS IT STOOD ON THE 13TH APRIL 1912.

| No. | Name. | Locality. | Name of Publisher. | Circulation. |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| | ENGLISH. | | | |
| | DAILY. | | | |
| 1 | Tribune ... | Lahore ... | Bihari Lal ... | 1,758 copies. |
| | TRI-WEEKLY. | | | |
| 2 | Panjabee ... | Lahore ... | Mul Chand ... | 2,424 copies. |
| | BI-WEEKLY. | | | |
| 3 | Observer ... | Lahore ... | Nizam-ud-din ... | 1,000 copies. |
| 4 | Punjab Times and Frontier News. | Rawalpindi ... | J. R. Thapur ... | 200 „ |
| | WEEKLY. | | | |
| 5 | Arya Patrika ... | Lahore ... | Devi Chand ... | 650 copies. |
| 6 | Harbinger ... | Do. ... | Durga Parshad ... | 300 „ |
| 7 | Khalsa Advocate ... | Amritsar ... | Bahadar Singh ... | 752 „ |
| | FORTNIGHTLY. | | | |
| 8 | Jijnasu ... | Lahore ... | Ishwar Das ... | ... |
| | MONTHLY. | | | |
| 9 | D. A.-V. College Magazine... | Lahore ... | Saraswati Nath ... | 1,000 copies. |
| 10 | Forman Christian College Notes.* | Do. ... | ... | ... |
| 11 | Practical Medicine* ... | Delhi ... | ... | ... |
| 12 | Punjab Educational Journal | Lahore ... | R. B. Mohan Lal ... | 700 copies. |
| 13 | Punjab Mission News ... | Do. ... | Revd. Wigram ... | 250 „ |
| 14 | Ravi ... | Do. ... | Mr. B. M. Jones ... | ... |
| 15 | Review of Religions ... | Qadian (Gurdaspur) ... | Sadr Anjuman Ahmadia, Qadian. | 800 copies. |
| 16 | Science Grounded Religion... | Lahore ... | Dev Rattan ... | 25 „ |
| 17 | Teacher ... | Dinga (Gujrat) ... | Kanhaya Singh ... | 200 „ |
| | URDU. | | | |
| | DAILY. | | | |
| 18 | Akhbar-i-'Am ... | Lahore ... | Govind Sahai ... | 630 copies. |
| 19 | Paisa Akhbar ... | Do. ... | Abdul Aziz ... | 1,011 „ |
| 20 | Watan ... | Do. ... | Muhammad Insha Alla ... | ... |
| 21 | Zamindar ... | Do. ... | Zafar Ali Khan, B.A. ... | ... |
| | BI-WEEKLY. | | | |
| 22 | Vakil ... | Amritsar ... | Abdul Aziz ... | 1,970 copies. |
| | WEEKLY. | | | |
| 23 | Afghan ... | Peshawar ... | Saiyid Muhammad Abdulla | 500 copies. |
| 24 | Ahl-i-Hadis ... | Amritsar ... | Sanaulla ... | 925 „ |
| 25 | Ahluwalia Gazette ... | Do. ... | Lehna Singh ... | 500 „ |
| 26 | Al-Moin ... | Do. ... | Mehraj-ud-din ... | ... |
| 27 | Army News ... | Ludhiana ... | Hira Lal & Co. ... | 1,300 copies. |
| 28 | Arorbans Gazette ... | Amritsar ... | Labh Singh ... | ... |
| 29 | Arya Gazette ... | Lahore ... | Bhowani Das ... | 550 copies. |
| 30 | Badar ... | Qadian, Gurdaspur District | Muhammad Sadiq ... | 200 „ |

* Not received during the month.

LIST OF NEWSPAPERS AND PERIODICALS EXAMINED BY THE SPECIAL BRANCH AS IT STOOD ON THE 13TH APRIL 1912—CONTINUED.

| No. | Name. | Locality. | Name of Publisher. | Circulation. |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| | URDU—CONTINUED. | | | |
| | WEEKLY—continued. | | | |
| 31 | Bharat ... | Jullundur ... | Thakur Sheoratan Singh | ... |
| 32 | Civil and Military News .. | Ludhiana ... | Saiyid Muhammad ... | 1,225 copies. |
| 33 | Curzon Gazette ... | Delhi .. | Mirza Hairat .. | 111 „ |
| 34 | Delhi Gazette* .. | Do. ... | Sajjad Husain ... | 200 „ |
| 35 | Edward Gazette* ... | Abbott-abad ... | Muhammad Latif ... | 200 „ |
| 36 | Hakam ... | Qadian, Gurdaspur District | Yakub Ali .. | 900 „ |
| 37 | Haq .. | Delhi ... | Kasim Ali .. | 200 „ |
| 38 | Haq Pasand ... | Amritsar .. | Ram Nath .. | 382 „ |
| 39 | Hindu ... | Lahore ... | Hari Lal Sharma ... | ... |
| 40 | Hindustan ... | Do. ... | Ram Sarn Dutt .. | 8,070 copies. |
| 41 | Indar ... | Do. ... | Dharm Pal, B.A. ... | ... |
| 42 | Islam ... | Do. ... | Abdul Latif ... | 200 copies. |
| 43 | Jhang Sial ... | Jhang ... | Prabh Dyal ... | 2,262 „ |
| 44 | Kapurthala Akhbar ... | Kapurthala ... | Hamid Husain ... | 155 „ |
| 45 | Loyal Gazette ... | Lahore ... | Amar Singh ... | 200 „ |
| 46 | Lytton Gazette ... | Delhi ... | Bulaki Das ... | 1,000 „ |
| 47 | Milap* ... | Lyallpur ... | Jawahar Lal ... | ... |
| 48 | Millat ... | Lahore ... | Shuja Ulla ... | 1,500 copies. |
| 49 | Mister Gazette ... | Do. ... | Ali Bakhsh ... | 150 „ |
| 50 | Munir ... | Jhang ... | Hafiz Khuda Bakhsh ... | 200 „ |
| 51 | Musalman ... | Amritsar ... | Sana-ulla ... | 400 „ |
| 52 | Nur ... | Qadian, Gurdaspur District | Muhammad Yusaf ... | 200 „ |
| 53 | Nur Afshan ... | Ludhiana ... | Revd. Dr. E. M. Wherry | 500 „ |
| 54 | Paisa Akhbar ... | Lahore ... | Abdul Azix ... | 8,377 „ |
| 55 | Parkash ... | Do. ... | Krishan ... | 1,723 „ |
| 56 | Punjab Advocate ... | Mianwali ... | Karm Chand, Bahl ... | 1,000 „ |
| 57 | Punjab Samachar ... | Lahore ... | Hira Lal ... | 705 „ |
| 58 | Rajput Gazette ... | Do. ... | Thakur Sukhram Das ... | 650 „ |
| 59 | Municipal Gazette and Sada-i-Hind. | Do. ... | Din Muhammad ... | 500 „ |
| 60 | Sadiq-ul-Akhbar ... | Bahawalpur ... | Maulvi Ata Ullah ... | 392 „ |
| 61 | Ditto ... | Rewari ... | Safdar Hussain ... | 200 „ |
| 62 | Sanatan Dharm Pracharak... | Amritsar ... | Rulia Ram ... | 200 „ |
| 63 | Shanti ... | Rawalpindi ... | Kishan Chand Mohan ... | 300 „ |
| 64 | Sialkot Paper ... | Sialkot ... | Todar Mal ... | 500 „ |
| 65 | Siraj-ul-Akhbar ... | Jhelum ... | Maulvi Fakir Muhammad | 450 „ |
| 66 | Tahzib-ul-Niswan ... | Lahore ... | Mumtaz Ali ... | 240 „ |

*Not received during the week.

LIST OF NEWSPAPERS AND PERIODICALS EXAMINED BY THE SPECIAL BRANCH AS IT STOOD ON THE 13TH APRIL 1912—CONCLUDED.

| No. | Name. | Locality. | Name of Publisher. | Circulation. |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| | URDU—CONCLUDED. | | | |
| | WEEKLY—concluded. | | | |
| 67 | Victoria Paper ... | Sialkot ... | Gian Chand ... | 600 copies. |
| 68 | Wafadar* ... | Lahore ... | Fazal-ud-din ... | 600 „ |
| 69 | Waqt ... | Do. ... | Ali Husain ... | 200 „ |
| 70 | Watan ... | Do. ... | Muhammad Insha Ullah... | 1,800 „ |
| 71 | Zamindar ... | Do. ... | Zafar Ali Khan, B.A. ... | 750 „ |
| | FORTNIGHTLY. | | | |
| 72 | Biwah Samachar ... | Lahore ... | Ram Chand ... | 300 copies. |
| 73 | Kam Dhenu ... | Ludhiana ... | Daulat Ram ... | 100 „ |
| 74 | Mohyal Gazette ... | Kala, Jhelum District ... | Mehta Sham Das ... | 250 „ |
| | PERSIAN. | | | |
| | FORTNIGHTLY. | | | |
| 75 | Siraj-ul-Akhbar ... | Kabul ... | Abdul Khalik ... | ... |
| | URDU. | | | |
| | MONTHLY. | | | |
| 76 | Arorbans Parkash ... | Lahore ... | Salig Ram ... | 200 copies. |
| 77 | Arya Musafir ... | Jullundur ... | Wazir Chand ... | 1,300 „ |
| 78 | Jauhar ... | Amritsar ... | Muhammad Ismail Khan | 200 „ |
| 79 | Kakezai Social Reformer ... | Lahore ... | Fazl Din ... | 200 „ |
| 80 | Makhzan ... | Delhi ... | Abdul Kadir ... | 4,000 „ |
| 81 | Rafiq ... | Lahore ... | Charinji Lal ... | 500 „ |
| 82 | Sadhu ... | Do. ... | Sheobart Lal ... | 500 „ |
| 83 | Martand ... | Do. ... | Kanhya Lal ... | 250 „ |
| 84 | Raghbir Patrika ... | Do. ... | Prab Dial ... | 500 „ |
| 85 | Zaban* ... | Delhi ... | Hamid Hasain ... | 500 „ |
| | GURMUKHI. | | | |
| | WEEKLY. | | | |
| 86 | Khalsa Sewak ... | Amritsar ... | Jiwan Singh ... | 1,000 copies. |
| 87 | Punjab Reporter* ... | Do. ... | Ganda Singh ... | ... |
| 88 | Punjabi Surma ... | Lahore ... | Gian Chand ... | 1,000 copies. |

* Not received during the week.

I—Politics.

(a)—Foreign.

The Turco-Italian War.

1. The Vakil (Amritsar) of the 30th March 1912, has a paragraph headed "A strange circular from the Department of Public Instruction, Bengal." The paper has been extremely surprised to learn that the head of the above Department has issued a confidential circular directing all his subordinates to abstain from expressing sympathy with either of the combatants in the Turco-Italian War, as also from collecting money in aid of the wounded and (other) sufferers. After stating that the circular clashes with the wishes of Government and that it would not even be unlawful to quietly go to the Front as a volunteer (witness the case of Lieutenant Montague), the paper suggests that the Government should be asked to compel the Director of Public Instruction, Bengal, to withdraw his order, which is calculated to cause pain and annoyance to a section of its most loyal subjects (Muhammadans).

Another menace for Turkey.

2. The following is from the Observer (Lahore) of 10th April 1912 :—

"While the European Powers have raised the bogey of the Yellow Peril without any cause, Italy had been casting longing eyes on Tripoli since the days of Mazinni, the time of its deliverance from the Austrian yoke and of its independence. The unpreparedness of the Turks for an Italian raid on Tripoli can, therefore, be only ascribed to the purblindness of Hakki Bey and his colleagues. Long before the perpetration of the brigandage, the Italian papers had been discussing the invasion and not one person conversant with foreign politics could have been ignorant of Italian designs. What the result of the criminal negligence of the fortifications and forces of Tripoli on the part of the Ottoman Government will be is hidden in the womb of the future. We, however, hope that the present lesson will not be lost upon them and that they will take time by the forelock in connection with Austrian intentions regarding Macedonia. Austrian military men have so often spoken of an advance on Salonica in their professional organs that the Porte should be prepared for anticipating any sudden descent on Macedonia. Moreover, the new Russian Ambassador for Constantinople is reported to be a personal friend of the Austrian Ambassador, and it is stated that as soon as the Turco-Italian war comes to an end, Austria, backed by Russia, will press for a permission to extend its railway to Salonica. Neither France not England, according to a Near East correspondent, may be expected to lend Turkey anything beyond moral support. The Ottomans will therefore have to rely on their own right arm. Germany may possibly help them. Kaiser William, however, has already proved a broken reed to lean upon and it would hardly be statesmanlike to count on his assistance. But forewarned is forearmed and we hope the brave Turk will manage to extricate themselves from the difficulties with which they are on all sides assailed."

Persian affairs.

3. The Paisa Akhbar (Lahore), of the 5th April 1912, publishes a communication headed "The wretched condition of Persia." On the one hand, says the writer, England has been assuring "us" that the independence of the Persians will be kept intact and that she has asked Russia to withdraw the Muscovite forces from the Shah's dominions. On the other hand, however, Reuter has cabled the disquieting news that Russia still maintains 2,000 soldiers in Meshed and has proclaimed martial law in that town. "We" are, therefore, at a loss to decide whether "we" should believe in England's promise or should credit the news supplied by Reuter. After remarking that a continuance of the existing state of affairs would end the days of Persia and pave the way for the advance of Russia on India, the writer asks England to reassure Muhammadans by fulfilling her aforesaid promise.

Indians in America.

4. The following is from the Tribune (Lahore) of 13th April 1912 :—

"It was Swami Vivekananda who really brought India in close contact with America. Since he stood on the platform of the Parliament of Religions, held at Chicago in 1893, and addressed his audience as 'Sisters and Brothers of America,' a relationship was established between India and America which has been growing steadily ever since. Of all western countries America is the country which takes the greatest interest in the cause of India and this is the reason why India feels so much drawn towards America. A new zeal of inquisitiveness has seized the Indian youth to look forward to see what is beyond the seas, and attention is drawn towards the 'almighty dollar' land, the land of hard toil and the land of freedom and optimism. Time was when Indian boys were sent only to England to try their chance in the Civil Service, the Medical Service, or the Educational Service. The Bar in England had the greatest attraction for the well-to-do young men of your country who, for lack of anything better, became barristers and took their chance of success or failure in after-life. The new ruling that only graduates will henceforth be admitted to the Bar is sure to do some good to our young men and we hope that others who are now debarred from joining the Inns of Court and are not permitted to become barristers, will turn to business or try to do something which will do good to the country. The prospects of the English and American universities are quite different. Indian students go to England mainly with an object of getting into service. They do not go there with the object of learning only but to try either to secure an appointment or to get a degree or diploma, as in the case of medicine, which would help them to make their livelihood in India. But the young Indians who go over to America have no such thing in view. Official favour or a distant vision of Government service does not attract them to that distant country. Indian students go there to get higher education, an education which has usefulness and self-help as its sole aim. Those who go to England generally go with a mercenary object, if we may use the expression without offence, and their chief objective is a living, and they have no higher object. They may get some culture, but not much strength of character. But those who go to America go there for altogether a better and higher object, namely, education for its own sake and self-reliance and strength of character.

"There is a strange contrast between Indian life in England and in America. Our young men who go to England are generally well to do, or scholarship-holders of the Indian Universities. But those who go to America generally belong to the middle class and are neither rich nor scholarship-holders. They depend more upon their energy than upon their purse. They are engaged in technical study and in the study of useful sciences and industries, and generally work for their living. This practice is not possible in England. No University freshman in England can earn his own living while he is a student. Indian students in England think it beneath their dignity to work for a living. They get plenty of money from their own people and have a very easy time while in England. But in America most of the Indian students support themselves. Poverty drives them to work and work begets self-confidence and self-reliance. They work for their bread and develop their mental faculties by education. By dint of manual labour Indian students earn their board and lodging and they do not depend upon their own people for their maintenance. They learn to support themselves and come to know the value of self-reliance and resourcefulness. This experience is quite unknown to Indian students in England. Indian life in England is nothing but an academic career with many dangers and temptations. But Indian life in America is strenuous and gives an insight into the reality and aim of a useful life. We know of a young man who once quarrelled with one of the professors of a college. The unpleasantness between the student and the professor was due to a difference of opinion regarding some Hindu religious rites. Matters went so far that the student was about to be rusticated but he did not wait for it and suddenly disappeared and was heard of in Japan and later on in America, where he joined a University. He was poor but he took this daring step as he had no prospects in India. He was not a brilliant student in his school days but he was strong-minded. When he landed in the United States in 1906 he had only Rs. 15 in his pocket. He expected no help from home for he was a runaway and his people were too poor to afford to send him any money. But he worked his way through college, graduated from the college of Liberal Arts of the University of Washington, standing second in the University, and won a Fellowship of nearly Rs. 1,250 to study for the M.A. degree. He wrote on one occasion :—'I have been supporting myself all through. I remember how I was discouraged by all in Japan, but I dared and came here. I have found it very easy to win the Fellowship, and am confident that intelligent students of Indian Universities could do a hundred times better with less effort. I have done every kind of work, both easy and hard, but nothing seemed hard to me. . . . . America is the land which makes men dynamic.' This is the experience of one of the many Indian students who are now in America. Manual labour is their recreation and they earn their meals by doing every kind of work. They do not despise any kind of work if it is honest work. They work as waiters, dish-washers, 'bus-boys ; they work as house-cleaners, and gardeners. They gladly do any work for there they learn that to work is honourable. This wage-earning does not interfere with their studies ; on the contrary, they come back to the college refreshed. Here in Indian people would despise young men who do work that is generally done by menials. No honest work is looked down upon in America. A false pride and a false sense of dignity have done incalculable mischief to India. But when Indians go to America and see American, European and Asiatic students supporting themselves by honest labour they lay aside the false notions imbibed in India and work for their bread with cheerful willingness.

The teaching of self-reliance is the greatest boon that America can confer upon us. Self-reliance will lead us to self-consciousness which will make us realise better ideals of nationalism. England may pity us, may commiserate us, but America regards us with quite other feelings. America is no longer known to India by mere reputation as the country of Washington and Emerson, but a hospitable country which is willing to teach young Indians the secret and success of honest labour and useful education. The dependence on favour and service under Government are about to make room for honest labour and energy, self-reliance, knowledge and hope. This is a happy augury of better things to come, the first peep of an approaching dawn of brightness and prosperity."

(b)—Home.

Government and popular grievances.

5. The Jhang Sial (Jhang), of the 30th March 1912, publishes a leader headed "Knock and it shall be opened unto you." It begins by stating that the British Government does not turn a deaf ear to the cries of its subjects, and that it is always ready to rectify its mistakes. Some selfish people, adds the paper, aver that Government has lost all prestige by annulling the Partition of Bengal, and that it was frightened at the agitation of the Bengalis (against the division of their province). Facts, however, tell quite a different tale : the reversal of the Partition constitutes proof of Government's sense of justice and its solicitude for the welfare of the ruled. It took the step in question out of regard for the feelings of its (Bengali) subjects, and this has had the effect, not of lessening, but of greatly enhancing its prestige. It has immensely risen in the estimation of the people, who have been convinced that Government is theirs and that they should repose confidence in it. Continuing, the paper remarks that the annulment of the Partition has added to the force of the saying that forms the heading of this article. The people have, because of it, begun to realise their rights; and blessed is the King whose subjects know their rights and keep him acquainted with their grievances. The event under reference has also shown the people that if Government is ever inattentive to a popular complaint, the reason lies, not in its unwillingness to listen to the grievance, but in the same not being laid before it with one voice. After remarking that Government has recently redressed several of their complaints, the Editor praises it for having acceded to the request of the public to grant licenses to respectable persons in the Frontier Province to keep guns and revolvers to defend themselves against tribal dacoits. He then goes on to say that every popular grievance ought to be laid before Government, and that those who abstain from acquainting it with legitimate complaints do not deserve to be called loyal subjects. Government follows the principle "Knock and it shall be opened unto you," and it is to be regretted that the people should not so far have profited by this golden maxim. But for this, the Press Act, the (Punjab) Alienation of Land Act, etc., would have been repealed long ago. The British Government is just and never turns a deaf ear to well-founded complaints laid before it in the right words.

Indians in higher military appointments.

6. The Vakil (Amritsar), of the 30th March 1912, publishes a note under the heading "Distinctions of race and colour in the Indian Army." It says that Indians were assured in the Royal Proclamation of 1858 that they would be treated as the equals (of their British fellow-subjects). Again, it was announced by Lord Morley four years back that race and colour would not be taken into account in conferring rights on the (Indian) people. As a matter of fact, however, Indians are not appointed to higher military posts, while, not infrequently, English youths are placed above experienced and much older Indian officers. Next the paper quotes an extract from the Contemporary Review in which Major-General H. S. Jeffreys, C. B., remarks that Asiatics are not wanting in ability and bravery. The Major-General is of opinion, it adds, that their appointment to these posts would add to the apprehension of another mutiny. In other words, a legitimate right is being withheld from Indians through the imaginary fear of a second military rising. The apprehension is, however, wholly unfounded. Government has reversed Lord Dalhousie's extremely cruel policy of annexing Native States, which had the effect of prejudicing the people (against their British rulers) and of ultimately causing excitement and unrest among a section of the Indian Army. The ideas of the people have also now been greatly changed, and there is no longer any possibility of a repetition of the incidents of 1857. This being so, Government ought to purge its mind of the above fear, which constitutes a foul blot on the loyalty of its Indian forces. It should remove all distinctions of race and colour, as also every obstacle in the way of Indian military officers standing on a footing of equality with their British comrades; thereby affording proof of its (really) being a champion of peace, justice, and equality.

Modification of the Partition.

7. The Paisa Akhbar (Lahore), of the 5th April 1912, has a paragraph headed "Effect of the modification of the Partition of Bengal." Writing about the meeting recently held in the Calcutta Town Hall to consider the situation in Bengal, the paper remarks that the proceedings were strictly in consonance with the policy which Bengalis have always been following. In one breath, it adds, Government was thanked for having modified the Partition; while, in the next, fault was found with it for the proclamation fixing the boundaries of Bengal. Continuing, it says that, since the Bengalis themselves have also set up an agitation in regard to the modification of the Partition, they cannot justly condemn the Nawab of Dacca for his presidential address at the recent annual session of the All-India Muslim League.

Indians and higher military appointments.

8. The Tribune (Lahore) of 9th April 1912 has the following:—

"The resolution of which the Hon'ble Mr. Madge had given notice for raising an Anglo-Indian and Eurasian regiment but which could not be brought forward on account of Mr. Madge's absence, and a similar proposal in Madras have had the effect we anticipated of eliciting a similar demand from the Indian community. * * * The time has undoubtedly come when the situation should be squarely faced. Association with the Government does not mean merely seats on Legislative Councils and district and municipal boards but the fullest participation in every branch of the public service, civil and military. An Indian has been appointed a member of the Governor-General's Executive Council but there is not a single Indian Lieutenant in the army in active service. Honorary Military rank deludes no one. Several years ago an Indian, bearing an English Christian name and born of a Bengali father and English mother appeared at the Woolwich examination. His name and complexion misled the authorities and he passed the cadet's examination topping the list. Then his parentage became known and he was politely told that he could not be admitted to the army. The young man then appeared at the Indian Civil Service examination and again took a high place on the list. We believe he is still in the Indian Civil Service. This policy of exclusion cannot be maintained for ever and an organised effort should be made for the admission of Indian cadets to the army."

Provincial Autonomy.

9. The following is from the Tribune (Lahore) of 13th April 1912:—

"The most important resolution of the Conference was that relating to the prospects of Provincial Autonomy. Bengal has been reconciled to the removal of the seat of the Imperial Government from Calcutta in the hope of getting a more effective voice in the Government of the Presidency. The Government of India cannot be divested of its paramount power, but it can delegate some of its powers to deal with purely provincial matters. This has been foreshadowed in the despatch of the Government of India. Provincial Governments as at present constituted require the supervision of the Imperial Government. But the Provincial Governments must grow and likewise the people under those Governments. That is the ideal of Provincial Autonomy. The utterances of Lord Crewe in the House of Lords gave rise to misgivings as to the intention of the Government, but the Under-Secretary of State for India emphasised this aspect of the administrative changes. He admitted that this was an answer to the demands of the nationalist party in India. Mr. Surendra Nath Bannerji in moving the resolution said its authors deliberately used the expression and used it in its natural interpretation. It cannot be explained away as meaning decentralisation of powers. The time has come to take a stand on the despatch. There is no likelihood of receding from the position that has been taken, and slow but steady progress must be the order of the day."

V.—Native Societies and Religious Matters.

Sayad Rashid Raza, President-elect of the forthcoming session of the Nadwat-ul-Ulema.

10. The Paisa Akhbar (Lahore), of the 6th April 1912, publishes an article headed "The learned Sayad Rashid Raza at Lahore." It reports that the Sayad, who has come out to India to preside over the ensuing session of the Nadwat-ul-Ulema and to study the educational condition of the Muhammadans of this country, stayed at Lahore for a couple of days on his way to Lucknow. He could not attend any public meeting (of Musalmans), but his private talks left no room for doubt that he holds independent views and is a highly enlightened and religious man. He expressed the opinion that the poverty and adversity in which his co-religionists were involved at present were due to their not being true followers of the Prophet. He also made the request that some (Muslim) societies and rich Muhammadans in India should each send one or two students to the school maintained by him in Egypt for turning out Islamic Missionaries. Next the paper reports that he effected a reconciliation between Maulvis Inshaulla and Zafar Ali Khan at the "Nawab Palace" (residence of Nawab Fateh Ali Khan), and made these journalists embrace each other. On this occasion he also spoke most eloquently on the past greatness and the present (unsatisfactory) condition of Islam; laid stress on (the desirability of) a revival of the said faith; and asked the Muhammadans of Lahore to confine themselves solely to the devising of means for promoting unity and progress among their co-religionists.

The Muhammadan community.

11. The daily Zamindar (Lahore), of the 3rd April 1912, publishes a letter headed "The voice of Muhammadans." The correspondent — Mr. Muhammad Abdullah, Secretary, Muslim Club, Delhi, — writes: "Traitors to the (Muslim) community, keep silent..... the spell is broken. 'Pray for the safety of (your own) cup.' There is joy (here)..... It is reported that the community will soon have those chairs vacated which were provided by it, Sir Sayad, and the Mohsin-ul-Mulk (and) which have been forcibly occupied owing to your being well-to-do or having access to the authorities. 'Islam' exists and will continue to exist among the poor alone... Wait patiently (to see) what is to be accomplished by Nathu and Gujar (i.e., the poorer Musalmans)..... You neither speak the truth yourselves nor let us speak it..... Now that we have been ruined and have opened our lips you tell Government (lit. teach Government the lesson) that we are going to rebel contrary to the teachings of Islam..... See, Government is now inviting us (to it) and the words (lit. the sound) loudly echo in our ears 'He who asks will obtain.'.... We shall take and it (Government) will give.....our conduct will serve as a guide to coming generations." Next the writer prays that the tongue which does not interpret "our" hearts may perish; that God may destroy those who retard the progress of Muhammadans from personal considerations; that Musalmans may wake and distinguish between good and evil; and that they may be led by men who are true servants of God and model followers of the Prophet.

The Arya Samaj.

12. The Sanatan Dharm Parcharak (Amritsar), of the 1st April 1912, has an article headed "The African speaker." The paper reports the proceedings of an imaginary meeting held on All Fools' Day to hear an address from a learned and big-paunched Arya speaker from Africa. The first part of the report is intended to condemn the shuddhi movement and to convey the idea that Dharmpal is to be driven out of the Arya Samaj on the unfounded allegation that he has been corresponding with Christians (with a view to embracing their religion); that the statements published by Dharmpal about the Gurukula are well founded; that the Satyarth Parkash contains words calculated to breed feelings of (racial) hatred; and that Swami Dayanand was not such a good man as the Samaj thinks him to have been. As to the speaker from Africa, he is made to say that the men (Aryas) whom he addresses are "women, who do not make use of their brains, who murder justice and are even weaker than the gentler sex." The words are also put into his mouth that a long time back he was told by a certain Arya that Swami Dayanand had been re-incarnated, but that his (the speaker's) subsequent search after the Swami had shown him that the above news was false. He has since come to the conclusion that everything told by an Arya Samajist should, from the very outset, be regarded as a lie.

Mutual relations of Hindus and Muhammadans and Sir John Hewett's speech.

13. The Tribune (Lahore), of April 9th, has the following remarks on Sir John Hewett's speech at the last meeting of the Legislative Council of the United Provinces:—

* * * * * * * *

"We have not the least desire to underrate either the importance of the question referred to by Sir John Hewett or the significance of the obvious duty which both Hindus and Muhammadans owe to their country in this connection. There can be no possible excuse for a Hindu or Muhammadan who does anything to widen the gulf that already separates the two communities, and his conduct is worthy of wholesale and unreserved condemnation. But we cannot help observing that the responsibility for the present admittedly undesirable and unsatisfactory condition of affairs lies partly with a class of European officers who have not been for several years past holding the balance even between Hindus and Muhammadans. The Hindus complain and there is much truth in their complaint that Muhammadans are being favoured at their expense. Sir John Hewett referred to the duty that lay on the British rulers of India to protect the weak against the strong. This is enunciating an unexceptionable doctrine but we cannot help observing that in not a few districts in Upper India generally British officials have interpreted it so as to substitute Hindus and Muhammadans for the words strong and weak respectively. This is what lies at the root of the trouble. Sir John gave the leaders of the two communities very excellent and much needed advice, but it would have been only fair if he had also given a warning to his own officials against their open favouritism of Muhammadans. The question of special and racial electorates in Councils and in Municipal and District Boards, has much to answer for the present exceedingly unsatisfactory state of the relations of Hindus and Muhammadans. So far as the Legislative Councils are concerned Lord Minto is to blame for this great evil. But so far as Municipal and District Boards are concerned, the responsibility in the United Provinces lies on the Government of Sir John Hewett. That highly objectionable document which was subjected to great adverse criticism in the Press and which in popular parance is styled as the Burn circular, is responsible for much of the unsatisfactory character of the relations between Hindus and Muhammadans. So long as no notice is taken of the open partiality shown to Muhammadans by a certain class of officials there can be no hope of improvement in the present state of things. Mischievous men who find it paying to accentuate the difference at present existing between Hindus and Muhammadans not unoften take their cue from these official partisans. The Advocate, of Lucknow, brings to public notice a most disgraceful condition of affairs in the United Provinces as regards the mutual relations of Hindus and Muhammadans. In connection with a vacancy in the Legislative Council which had to be filled by election last month there were two candidates, one of them was Sheikh Shahid Husain, a Muhammadan gentlemen of education, culture and a taluqdar. The other candidate was Mr. Syed Nabiullah, a Barrister and a prominent member of the Muslim League. The Sheikh Sahib is one of those Muhammadans who regret the differences between the two communities and who wish to conciliate them. A letter was circulated on behalf of Syed Nabiullah, among the electors in the course of which it was mentioned that 'Sheikh Shahid Husain is Joint Secretary of the British Indian Association, hence to expect that he will be able to raise his voice in the Council against the Hindus is a sad mistake. The following facts will bear witness to this:—(1) In his opinion separate electorate is not beneficial to the country and nation; (2) he holds that cow-killing is responsible for the ruin of the country; (3) he cannot sympathise with Turks or Persians because he is under apprehension that his estates might be confiscated.' The Shaikh Sahib is condemned simply because he has friendly feelings for the Hindus. The letter goes on to say, 'brother, what right has he who feels in this way got to be your representative in the Council? In my opinion it is a matter of shame that he should seek the help of separate electorates to which he is opposed for his honour and it is a greater matter of shame and humiliation for you electors that you should vote for a person who declares your electorate as one which clogs the progress of the country. In this election there is a great mystery which should no more be allowed to remain shrouded. It is this, that from the time that the Hon'ble Mr. Jenkins made a declaration to the effect that separate electorates will continue to exist till such time that the Muhammadans do not themselves come to demand them, our fellow-countrymen (biradran-i-watan) are on the look-out for securing a majority of such Muhammadans in the Councils who might tell Government that they do not need separate electorates. Do not forget the fact that Mr. Shahid Husain will be a member of this party and that is the reason why the old friend of Muhammadans, Babu Ganga Prasad Varma and his senior, Khalifa, Sheikh Muhammad Yusuf Husain Khan, are strong canvassers of Mr. Shahid Husain. There was no reason why Mr. Shahid Husain should have stood for this electorate.' We need scarcely add that the letter was written in Urdu and that the Advocate has translated it into English. We do not think we need make any apology for reproducing the letter at such length, for we think the best interests of both Hindus and Muhammadans require that the tactics disclosed in this letter should be exposed to the right of day. The Advocate is quite right in regarding this letter as 'a specimen of the disgraceful tactics used by the friends of separate electorates in order to discredit rival candidates. The letter further lays bare the objectionable methods adopted by a certain disreputable class of men to fan the feelings of religious animosity against the Hindus by means of unfounded statements in order to establish the claim of sectarian electorates. We are glad to note that in this particular case the tactic in question failed to carry the day, and Mr. Shahid Husain was elected in spite of them. But this does not in the least counteract their highly mischievous character. Among an ignorant and gullible public writings of this kind do incalculable mischief. We should like to know what Sir John Hewett has to say about the matter."

VII.—General Administration.

(b)—Police.

Crime in the Punjab.

14. At the conclusion of a long communicated article on 'Crime in the Punjab' in the issue of the Panjabee (Lahore), of April 9th, 1912, the following remedy is suggested :—

"The root of the evil can be removed better when the provisions of the Criminal Tribes Act, 1871, be applied to individuals with certain modifications. Let the provisions of this Act be applied to all those who are required to execute a bond for good behaviour under section 110 of the Criminal Procedure Code, 1898. The Criminal Tribes Act should no longer be applied to people simply because they happen to belong to a particular tribe, gang or class. In this way the innocent people of the present criminal tribes will be saved from unnecessary trouble and harassment. On the other hand, persons of bad reputation for whom execution of a bond for good behaviour is not sufficiently preventive from committing crime, will be better checked when the provisions of the Criminal Tribes Act are applied to them. Under the provisions of the Act no registered person can leave his or her ordinary place of residence without first taking permission of the nearest Police Inspector or Magistrate. Even if he gets a leave of absence he is very carefully watched by the police. His route of journey and the probable date of his arrival at different stations is put down in his pass. A duplicate pass is sent to the place of his destination through all the police posts in his route. Under such circumstances it would become very difficult for these people to go on their nightly excursions and thus be able to rob other people without any hitch or hindrance. If the Criminal Tribes Act be modified in this way, hardened criminals can be brought under thorough control of the police. By this modification the unnecessarily harsh aspects of this Act will also be removed. Then there will be less need of imposing punitive police and there will be less necessity for magistrates to be unduly harsh and strict to the accused. The relaxation of the provisions of the Arms Act and the extension of the Criminal Tribes Act, 1871, to individuals instead of tribes would be quite sufficient to render the increase of crime in the Province a thing of the past. Let the leaders in the legal profession bestow their best consideration on this suggestion, and let the people's representatives in the Punjab Council take up this question in right earnest."

(d)—Education.

Secondary Education for Girls.

15. The following is from the Panjabee (Lahore) of 9th April 1912 :—

"One of the resolutions passed at the Hindu Educational Conference held at Lahore on Saturday was to request the Government to start Model Secondary Schools for girls in each district of the Punjab. On this question there was much discussion and a sharp difference of opinion prevailed. Lala Lajpat Rai moved the resolution and his main point seemed to be that people as yet know little of the advantages of secondary education for girls and that the lead of Government agencies is necessary. While admitting the advantages of Government lead in the matter, many Hindus apprehend the consequences of what is called a 'Godless education for Hindu girls.' Their point is that in the case of the boys the purely secular education was rendered necessary by force of circumstances which, however, do not obtain in the case of girls. It is apparent that Hindu nationality and home life are preserved in their purer form now, the credit being due to the women who are the mainstay of ancient culture and civilisation. If they, too, should acquire the same kind of education that boys do, there is apparently danger to Hindu culture and civilisation. It was considered that private schools teaching religion and home life were more suited than Government Model Schools which were, as a rule, secular.

"Nevertheless the resolution was passed and the public express considerable surprise that a man like Lala Lajpat Rai should support a form of education which is, according to their ideas, unnational. So far as Hindu opinion goes, there is no doubt that secular education is greatly disliked. The question is whether Government Schools can teach what Hindus want. The position of the Hindus in the Punjab is moreover somewhat different from that of Hindus in Bengal, Madras and Bombay and, considering their environment, they cannot help holding rigidly to their traditional virtues of domestic life and civilisation of which women are the best guardians and custodians. Everything should be done not to allow denationalizing influences to currupt Hindu women. That Government will start separate schools for Hindu girls alone is out of the question, nor is it feasible that a form of religious and national curricula in girls' schools will be adopted which will suit girls of all nationalities and promote their individual traditions and virtues. Social ideals, moral laws and ethical considerations are changing as men and women come under the influence of education, and what girls should learn is a point which is for the parents to decide. While admitting the necessity for secondary education of girls and teaching them arts and sciences, their end and aim of life cannot be ignored Secondary and collegiate institutions for girls under official auspices have nowhere in India been successful and it would be a marvel if they do in the Punjab.

"The unseemly effects of Western intellectualism grafted on oriental culture have often been condemned by critics in both the countries. Recently Professor Sundar Ram Iyer, of Madras, attributed the physical degeneracy of Hindus to un-Shastric conduct and to the neglect of restrictions in marriage. 'The greatest sinners, in this respect,' he declared, 'are those who have received a Western education.' What would be the effect if the mistakes of education committed in the case of men were repeated also in the case of girls? It will give a set back to the cause of female education itself and the present enthusiasm created in favour of female education will be damped by the life of the denationalized products. Recently the Indian residents of London organised an oriental drama in London for the dilectation of the English public. Episodes from the life of Buddha were re-acted, commenting on which Dr. Kumarasamy writes :—

"'The palace scenery and costumes were more suggestive of Bombay Parsi drawing room than of ancient India. Several costumes were absolutely ludicrous, and the same was true of the dancing. Worst of all was the 'behaviour' of the principal actors. The most simple elements of Oriental etiquette were ignored throughout. Not one (of the ladies) was shy or quiet-voiced, and their easygoing English manners made one hot with shame. The men were little better; even Prince Siddhartha's attitude towards Yasodhara when they first met seemed coarse, and when she permitted him to kiss her in public, the limit of outrage to Indian convention was reached.'

"And yet educated Indians, both gentlemen and ladies, were responsible for this exhibition. And they are all products of the system extant. Surely Lala Lajpat Rai does not aim at reproducing such scenes in the Hindu Home life in the Punjab. The recent enthusiasm for the Hindu University would be meaningless were we to accept the ideals of education for girls accepted at the Conference last week."

16. The following is from the Tribune (Lahore) of 10th April 1912 :—

The Bahawalpur College.

"We have been hearing for some time that the maintenance of the Bahawalpur College was in doubt, but it is very difficult to get any reliable information from that State and we were disinclined to attach much credence to such a rumour. We are now informed that a meeting of the State officials was held to discuss the affairs of the College. The meeting was confidential and the staff of the college were not present. Our information is that the efficiency of the staff was questioned. Whether this will be followed by the change of the staff or the abolition of the college is still unknown, but the Council of Regency has a very grave responsibility in the matter. The college has been in existence for over twenty years and its abolition would bring serious discredit on the Council of Regency. If the college has suffered it is because it has not been properly maintained and very little is spent on its upkeep. The State stables cost several times as much as the college. Bahawalpur ranks as the second State in the Punjab and it would be a great shame if the Council of Regency decide to abolish the college."

(h)—Miscellaneous.

17. The Tribune (Lahore), of 11th April 1912, publishes the following under headings 'Layman and why not?' and 'Indian Architects' :—

Personnel of the Town-Planning Committee for Delhi.

"Of the three men who are to preside over the destiny of the new capital, one is a layman. This is the qualification which makes him not only a member of the Committee of Experts but its President. We are told the Secretary of State has taken full responsibility for the appointment, but no light has yet been thrown on the nature of that responsibility. How does it sound that the 'experts' as they are called, would be working under the presidentship of a declared layman? Are we to suppose that there is a very thin line of demarcation between an expert and a layman in this case, or a layman associated with the experts to show the relative difference between a layman and an expert? In the words of Mr. Montagu, Captain Swinton is a man 'with experience of the administrative problems of a great city.' But do administrative faculties and town-planning and designing come under the same category? And if some one was required having administrative abilities, the Secretary of State might have nominated somebody who was not a layman. Captain Swinton, we are told, has served the London County Council for 11 years and was A.-D.-C. to Lord Lansdowne in India. But does the London County Council or ornamental service for a few years in India make a man thoroughly experienced in the administrative affairs of Indian cities? There are many Indian Civilians who have a better experience of both the country and the administration. We do not object to a layman coming here to get some experience, but we would like to know how many such laymen are to be taken on on the Committee of Experts.

" * * * It is presumed that Indians cannot hold the responsible post of an architect and all Indian engineers are sent either to the Irrigation or the Public Works Department. Indian Colleges of Engineering have prescribed tests and as soon as Indians pass through them they are allowed to practise the profession of an architect, engineer and a designer. But what architectural training do they get in these colleges and what practical knowledge do they gain in the Public Works Department? No Indian ever gets any chance of getting any architectural training while in service. European architects are consulted and the secret of architecture remains with them; and when Indians are taken in they as a rule have a subordinate position where they have to do what the so-called European master-architects want them to do. The Government of India will sooner or later entertain the idea of having an Indian architect. But we are sure official records will not show any Indian architect, for Indians have never been entrusted with architectural construction. Naturally it follows that the choice of the Government of India will fall upon an Anglo-Indian who is supposed to be an architect, whereas in reality he has little or no knowledge of the architecture which is best adaptable in India. Architecture and sculpture are living arts in India. The life of Indian architecture and sculpture is in evidence everywhere in India. Hundreds of beautiful monuments are constructed even to this day when European architecture has found such a hospitable home in India. But under the British administration Indian architecture does not get its legitimate place. The time has come when this evil may be rectified. There are hundreds of the descendants of the Indian master-builders who made the Taj, but what recognition do they get now? They practise the profession of their forefathers and have chiefly to depend upon private builders, and the only reward that they get from the Government is a bronze medal at an exhibition! This Philistinism on the part of the Government is quite unpardonable and it is highly desirable that proper attention should be paid to the cause of Indian architecture which the Public Works Department has so long ignored. Let the Government appoint a committee of Indian engineers and let the question of architecture rest solely with them. Let a few non-official members be added to give ideas of useful Indian architecture to these engineers and let the whole work be done by the descendants of the master-builders of India, who are quite numerous and follow their hereditary profession with little less ability. The Committee of European experts may supervise the whole construction with advantage, but it should leave the style of Indian architecture alone and look only to the requirements of the new capital."

C. STEAD,

Assistant to the Deputy Inspector-General of Police,
Criminal Investigation Department, Punjab.

LAHORE:

The 13*th March* 1912.

Punjab Government Press, Lahore—18-4-12—6—107—T. W. L.

[ Confidential. ]

[Vol. XXV. ] [ No. 16. ]

SELECTIONS

FROM THE

NATIVE NEWSPAPERS

PUBLISHED IN THE PUNJAB.

Examined up to 20th April 1912.

---

CONTENTS.

Page.

I.—Politics.

(a) Foreign—

1. The Turco-Italian War (Observer) ... ... 283
2. The Islamic world (Vakil) ... ... ib.
3. Indian Muhammadans and Imperial Policy (Tribune and Observer) ... ... ... ib.
4. The Khedive as the Khalifa of Islam (Observer) 286
5. The Persian situation (Observer) ... ... ib.
6. The Royal Commercial Commission (Paisa Akhbar) ... ... ... ... ib.

(b) Home—

7. Lord Hardinge's policy (Jhang Sial) ... 286
8. Muhammadans and Government (Millat) ... 287
9. Muslim politics (Zamindar and Paisa Akhbar) ib.
10. Muslim interests in Bengal (Observer) ... 288

II.—Afghanistan and Trans-Frontier.

Nil.

III.—Native States.

Nil.

IV.—Kine-killing.

Nil.

V.—Native Societies and Religious Matters.

11. The last anniversary of the Anjuman-i-Himayat-i-Islam, Lahore (Observer) ... ... 288
12. A lecture by the Principal of the Islamia College, Lahore (Zamindar) ... ... ... ib.
13. Insult to Swami Dayanand's picture (Bharat) ... 289
14. The Arya Samaj (Indar) ... ... ib.
15. Arya Preachers (Harbinger) ... ... ib.
16. The Hindu Elementary Education League and the Punjab Hindu Sabha (Harbinger) ... ib.
17. The marriageable age of girls (Tribune) ... 290

VI.—Legislation.

18. The working of the Punjab Land Alienation Act (Panjabee) ... ... ... 290
19. The Punjab Alienation of Land Act (Jhang Sial) 292

Page.

VII.—General Administration.

(a) Judicial—

Nil.

(b) Police—

20. Arming the villages in the Punjab (Panjabee) ... 292
21. Recrudescence of dacoities in the Punjab (Jhang Sial) ... ... ... ... ib.
22. The recent fire at Peshawar (Hindustan and Munir) 293

(c) Municipal and Cantonment affairs—

Nil.

(d) Education —

23. The proposal to establish a Zenana College at Delhi (Paisa Akhbar)... ... ... 294
24. The Sikh Educational Conference at Sialkot (Khalsa Advocate) ... ... ... ... ib.
25. Technical and Industrial Education in the Punjab (Observer) ... ... ... 295

(e)—Agriculture and questions affecting the land—

Nil.

(f) Railways and Communications—

Nil.

(g) Postal matters—

Nil.

(h) Miscellaneous—

26. The Frontier Province (Panjabee) ... ... 296
27. Punjab Budget discussion (Panjabee) ... ib.
28. Security from the Zamindar (Zamindar) ... ib.
29. Laying out of the Minto Park, Lahore (Tribune)... 298
30. Excise revenue in the Punjab (Tribune) ... ib.
31. Cotton Excise duty (Tribune) ... ... 299
32. The Pioneer and Government advertisements (Tribune) ... ... ... ... 300

LIST OF NEWSPAPERS AND PERIODICALS EXAMINED BY THE SPECIAL BRANCH AS IT STOOD ON THE 20TH APRIL 1912.

| No. | Name. | Locality. | Name of Publisher. | Circulation. |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| | ENGLISH. | | | |
| | DAILY. | | | |
| 1 | Tribune ... | Lahore ... | Bihari Lal ... | 1,758 copies. |
| | TRI-WEEKLY. | | | |
| 2 | Panjabee ... | Lahore ... | Mul Chand ... | 2,424 copies. |
| | BI-WEEKLY. | | | |
| 3 | Observer ... | Lahore ... | Nizam-ud-din ... | 1,000 copies. |
| 4 | Punjab Times and Frontier News. | Rawalpindi ... | J. R. Thapur ... | 200 „ |
| | WEEKLY. | | | |
| 5 | Arya Patrika ... | Lahore ... | Devi Chand ... | 650 copies. |
| 6 | Harbinger ... | Do. ... | Durga Parshad ... | 300 „ |
| 7 | Khalsa Advocate ... | Amritsar ... | Bahadar Singh ... | 752 „ |
| | FORTNIGHTLY. | | | |
| 8 | Jijnasu ... | Lahore ... | Ishwar Das ... | ... |
| | MONTHLY. | | | |
| 9 | D. A.-V. College Magazine... | Lahore ... | Saraswati Nath ... | 1,000 copies. |
| 10 | Forman Christian College Notes.* | Do. ... | ... | ... |
| 11 | Practical Medicine* ... | Delhi ... | ... | ... |
| 12 | Punjab Educational Journal | Lahore ... | R. B. Mohan Lal ... | 700 copies. |
| 13 | Punjab Mission News ... | Do. ... | Revd. Wigram ... | 250 „ |
| 14 | Ravi ... | Do. ... | Mr. B. M. Jones ... | ... |
| 15 | Review of Religions ... | Qadian (Gurdaspur) ... | Sadr Anjuman Ahmadia, Qadian. | 800 copies. |
| 16 | Science Grounded Religion... | Lahore ... | Dev Rattan ... | 25 „ |
| 17 | Teacher ... | Dinga (Gujrat) ... | Kanhaya Singh ... | 200 „ |
| | URDU. | | | |
| | DAILY. | | | |
| 18 | Akhbar-i-'Am ... | Lahore ... | Govind Sahai ... | 630 copies. |
| 19 | Paisa Akhbar ... | Do. ... | Abdul Aziz ... | 1,011 „ |
| 20 | Watan ... | Do. ... | Muhammad Insha Alla ... | ... |
| 21 | Zamindar ... | Do. ... | Zafar Ali Khan, B.A. ... | ... |
| | BI-WEEKLY. | | | |
| 22 | Vakil ... | Amritsar ... | Abdul Aziz ... | 1,970 copies. |
| | WEEKLY. | | | |
| 23 | Afghan ... | Peshawar ... | Saiyid Muhammad Abdulla | 500 copies. |
| 24 | Ahl-i-Hadis ... | Amritsar ... | Sanaulla ... | 925 „ |
| 25 | Ahluwalia Gazette ... | Do. ... | Lehna Singh ... | 500 „ |
| 26 | Al-Moin ... | Do. ... | Mehraj-ud-din ... | ... |
| 27 | Army News ... | Ludhiana ... | Hira Lal & Co. ... | 1,300 copies. |
| 28 | Arorbans Gazette ... | Amritsar ... | Labh Singh ... | ... |
| 29 | Arya Gazette ... | Lahore ... | Bhowani Das ... | 550 copies. |
| 30 | Badar ... | Qadian, Gurdaspur District | Muhammad Sadiq ... | 200 „ |

* Not received during the month.

LIST OF NEWSPAPERS AND PERIODICALS EXAMINED BY THE SPECIAL BRANCH AS IT STOOD ON THE 20TH APRIL 1912—CONTINUED.

| No. | Name. | Locality. | Name of Publisher. | Circulation. |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| | URDU—CONTINUED. | | | |
| | WEEKLY—continued. | | | |
| 31 | Bharat ... | Jullundur ... | Thakur Sheoratan Singh | ... |
| 32 | Civil and Military News ... | Ludhiana ... | Saiyid Muhammad ... | 1,325 copies. |
| 33 | Curzon Gazette ... | Delhi ... | Mirza Hairat ... | 111 „ |
| 34 | Delhi Gazette* ... | Do. ... | Sajjad Husain ... | 200 „ |
| 35 | Edward Gazette* ... | Abbott-abad ... | Muhammad Latif ... | 200 „ |
| 36 | Hakam ... | Qadian, Gurdaspur District | Yakub Ali ... | 900 „ |
| 37 | Haq ... | Delhi ... | Kasim Ali ... | 200 „ |
| 38 | Haq Pasand ... | Amritsar ... | Ram Nath ... | 382 „ |
| 39 | Hindu ... | Lahore ... | Hari Lal Sharma ... | ... |
| 40 | Hindustan ... | Do. ... | Ram Sarn Dutt ... | 8,070 copies. |
| 41 | Indar ... | Do. ... | Dharm Pal, B.A. ... | ... |
| 42 | Islam ... | Do. ... | Abdul Latif ... | 200 copies. |
| 43 | Jhang Sial ... | Jhang ... | Prabh Dyal ... | 2,262 „ |
| 44 | Kapurthala Akhbar ... | Kapurthala ... | Hamid Husain ... | 155 „ |
| 45 | Loyal Gazette ... | Lahore ... | Amar Singh ... | 200 „ |
| 46 | Lytton Gazette ... | Delhi ... | Bulaki Das ... | 1,000 „ |
| 47 | Milap* ... | Lyallpur ... | Jawahar Lal ... | ... |
| 48 | Millat ... | Lahore ... | Shuja Ulla ... | 1,500 copies. |
| 49 | Mister Gazette ... | Do. ... | Ali Bakhsh ... | 150 „ |
| 50 | Munir ... | Jhang ... | Hafiz Khuda Bakhsh ... | 200 „ |
| 51 | Musalman ... | Amritsar ... | Sana-ulla ... | 400 „ |
| 52 | Nur ... | Qadian, Gurdaspur District | Muhammad Yusaf ... | 200 „ |
| 53 | Nur Afshan ... | Ludhiana ... | Revd. Dr. E. M. Wherry | 500 „ |
| 54 | Paisa Akhbar ... | Lahore ... | Abdul Aziz ... | 8,377 „ |
| 55 | Parkash ... | Do. ... | Krishan ... | 1,723 „ |
| 56 | Punjab Advocate ... | Mianwali ... | Karm Chand, Bahl ... | 1,000 „ |
| 57 | Punjab Samachar ... | Lahore ... | Hira Lal ... | 705 „ |
| 58 | Rajput Gazette ... | Do. ... | Thakur Sukhram Das ... | 650 „ |
| 59 | Municipal Gazette and Sada-i-Hind. | Do. ... | Din Muhammad ... | 500 „ |
| 60 | Sadiq-ul-Akhbar ... | Bahawalpur ... | Maulvi Ata Ullah ... | 392 „ |
| 61 | Ditto ... | Rewari ... | Safdar Hussain ... | 200 „ |
| 62 | Sanatan Dharm Pracharak... | Amritsar ... | Rulia Ram ... | 200 |
| 63 | Shanti ... | Rawalpindi ... | Kishan Chand Mohan ... | 300 |
| 64 | Sialkot Paper ... | Sialkot ... | Todar Mal ... | 500 „ |
| 65 | Siraj-ul-Akhbar ... | Jhelum ... | Maulvi Fakir Muhammad | 450 „ |
| 66 | Tahzib-ul-Niswan ... | Lahore ... | Mumtaz Ali ... | 240 „ |

*Not received during the week.

LIST OF NEWSPAPERS AND PERIODICALS EXAMINED BY THE SPECIAL BRANCH AS IT STOOD ON THE 20TH APRIL 1912—CONCLUDED.

| No. | Name. | Locality. | Name of Publisher. | Circulation. |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| | URDU—CONCLUDED. | | | |
| | WEEKLY—concluded. | | | |
| 67 | Victoria Paper ... | Sialkot ... | Gian Chand ... | 600 copies. |
| 68 | Wafadar* ... | Lahore ... | Fazal-ud-din ... | 600 „ |
| 69 | Waqt ... | Do. ... | Ali Husain ... | 200 „ |
| 70 | Watan ... | Do. ... | Muhammad Insha Ullah... | 1,800 „ |
| 71 | Zamindar ... | Do. ... | Zafar Ali Khan, B.A. ... | 750 „ |
| | FORTNIGHTLY. | | | |
| 72 | Biwah Samachar ... | Lahore ... | Ram Chand ... | 300 copies. |
| 73 | Kam Dhenu ... | Ludhiana ... | Daulat Ram ... | 100 „ |
| 74 | Mohyal Gazette ... | Kala, Jhelum District ... | Mehta Sham Das ... | 250 „ |
| | PERSIAN. | | | |
| | FORTNIGHTLY. | | | |
| 75 | Siraj-ul-Akhbar ... | Kabul ... | Abdul Khalik ... | ... |
| | URDU. | | | |
| | MONTHLY. | | | |
| 76 | Arorbans Parkash ... | Lahore ... | Salig Ram ... | 200 copies. |
| 77 | Arya Musafir ... | Jullundur ... | Wazir Chand ... | 1,300 „ |
| 78 | Jauhar ... | Amritsar ... | Muhammad Ismail Khan | 200 „ |
| 79 | Kakezai Social Reformer ... | Lahore ... | Fazl Din ... | 200 „ |
| 80 | Makhzan ... | Delhi ... | Abdul Kadir ... | 4,000 „ |
| 81 | Rafiq ... | Lahore ... | Charinji Lal ... | 500 „ |
| 82 | Sadhu ... | Do. ... | Sheobart Lal ... | 500 |
| 83 | Martand ... | Do. ... | Kanhya Lal ... | 250 |
| 84 | Raghbir Patrika ... | Do. ... | Prab Dial ... | 500 |
| 85 | Zaban* ... | Delhi ... | Hamid Hasain ... | 500 „ |
| | GURMUKHI. | | | |
| | WEEKLY. | | | |
| 86 | Khalsa Sewak ... | Amritsar ... | Jiwan Singh ... | 1,000 copies. |
| 87 | Punjab Reporter* ... | Do. ... | Ganda Singh ... | ... |
| 88 | Punjabi Surma ... | Lahore ... | Gian Chand ... | 1,000 copies |

* Not received during the week.

I.—Politics.

(a)—Foreign.

The Turco-Italian War.

1. The Observer (Lahore), of the 13th April 1912, has the following on "The War and mediation":—

"A telegram from Reuter's Constantinople correspondent, dated the 10th instant, states that the Powers 'are agreed as to the terms of the request to the Porte with regard to the termination of the Turco-Italian War. They will point out the desirability of peace in the interests of Europe generally, and request the Porte to signify the conditions on which it is prepared to terminate hostilities in view of the offer of the Powers to mediate.' This awakening of the Powers to the necessity of peace is really wonderful. At the outset of the War when the Porte repeatedly requested the Powers to dissuade Italy from her mad and criminal adventure, the Powers turned a deaf ear to the Ottoman proposals. As long as there was a hope of Italy's success, mediation seemed to be undreamt of. But now when it has become impossible for Italy to retreat with honour, when summer is approaching and Italy going to reap the fruits of her crime in the scorching heat of Tripoli and through the patriotic valour of the Arabs, the Powers have 'realised the desirability of peace in the interests of Europe.' The only condition on which the Porte should be prepared to terminate hostilities is the evacuation of the Ottoman dominions in Africa by the Italian forces. If the Powers are not prepared to mediate on this condition, the Powres should keep their mediation to themselves. Surely the interests of international morality, the interests of the Sultan as the spiritual head of Islam, the interests of the preservation of the weaker Powers in the world joined together, ought to over-ride the supposed interests of Europe."

Tha Islamic world.

2. The Vakil (Amritsar), of the 6th (received on the 16th) April 1912, has an article headed "Islam—I." After referring to the past greatness of Musalmans, as also to the recent happenings in Morocco, Tripoli, and Persia, the paper dwells on the present unsatisfactory condition of Muhammadan kingdoms. After having expelled the Prophet's followers, it adds, from its south-western part (? Spain) and weakened their hold on the south-east corner ( ? Turkey), (Christian) Europe is now determined to drive them out of Persia and North Africa also, and to bring all the four quarters (of the globe) under its own sway. The time for the West to realise its wishes is near at hand, while the revengeful zeal it has been displaying in destroying the greatness of Islam should teach a lesson to those (Muhammadans) who have eyes to see. No one can read the future, but the existing circumstances give no hope of a revival of Islam. Next the paper urges Muhammadans to be up and doing.

Continuing its remarks in its issue, dated the 10th April 1912, the paper observes that Japan's successes against Russia have had no effect on the Islamic world, and that the West is as ready to profit by the weakness of Muslim (lit. Oriental) nations as ever. The British Government is undoubtedly engaged in mending matters out of regard for the feelings of crores of its Muhammadan subjects, (but) the future is, however, on the knees of the gods. The recent happenings in Tripoli, Persia and Turkey have led an eminent statesman to predict that the world is about to witness a stupendous change. It is evident that this change can never be beneficial for Muhammadans. Its result will be that Muslim countries will, generally speaking, pass into the hands of non-Muhammadans. Should Musalmans sacrifice themselves at the altar of European diplomacy and (passively) await their end, or should they devise means to save themselves? They can, if they will, regain their lost greatness even now with the aid of the Quran. This, however, requires unbounded courage, perseverance, true zeal, and honesty of purpose. A nation of traitors and loquacious flatterers has never as yet achieved progress.

Indian Muhammadans and Imperial policy.

3. The following is from the Tribune (Lahore) of 19th April 1912:—

"The comments that have appeared in the Muhammadan newspapers throughout India with reference to the state of affairs in Turkey, Tripoli and Persia and the numerous public meetings that have been held in all parts of India by Muhammadans in order to give expression to their views regarding the Turco-Italian hostilities and the intervention of Russia in Persia, have raised a question of some importance as to how far Indian Muhammadans can expect to influence the policy of Great Britain as regards her relations with foreign powers. In the British Press and in influential European circles in this country the view taken is that in regulating her foreign relations with great Powers Great Britain cannot 'possibly pay much regard to the feelings of her Indian subjects.' It is held that considerations which ought to regulate and control the foreign policy of Great Britain have nothing whatever to do with and are quite apart from the interests of His Imperial Majesty's Indian subjects. It may be mentioned whilst on this point that the largest section of the population of India, viz., the Hindus, have no particular or personal interest in the foreign policy of Great Britain. With the Muhammadans of India, however, the case is quite different. They have a great and a personal interest in Turkey, Persia and Afghanistan. The ruler of the former country they regard as the protector and the guardian of the sacred places of Islam in Arabia, and in the affairs of Persia their interest is dictated by the fact that the Persians are of the same religion as themselves. Twenty years ago the Muhammadans of India did not take any active personal interest in the affairs of the Muhammadan countries outside India. But a vast change has occurred since then. The Pan-Islamic propaganda, which seeks to unite all followers of Islam in one common brotherhood, is responsible for the existing condition of affairs. The propaganda in question has very rapidly spread all over India during the past ten years. It is quite true that so far its adherents are confined to what are known as the educated and the articulate classes among Muhammadans. So far as the best interests of India are concerned the spread of the Pan-Islamic propaganda cannot but be viewed with alarm and anxiety. There is no link more binding than that of community of religion, and history shows that religious fanaticism is always strong enough to override all bonds of prudence, wisdom and policy. It is well-known that once religious passions are roused, there is no knowing the length to which things may proceed. Once men's minds are swayed by religious sentiment, it is very difficult for them to discriminate between what is wise and desirable and what is not. The conduct of a section of the Muhammadan population of India with reference to the Turco-Italian hostilities and the Russo-British intervention in the affairs of Persia is an instance in point. Ethnologically, politically and socially the Muhammadans of India have nothing whatever to do with the Turks, Afghans, Arabs and the Persians. There is no affinity of race, language and literature among them. In the very large majority of cases the Muhammadans of India are the descendants of the Hindu converts of Islam. With the Hindus they have everything in common. They belong to the same race, and speak the same language. They have common disabilities and suffer from common grievances. Their best interests require that they should live like brothers and good neighbours. For many years they did so, and their conduct never gave ground for complaint. But since the initiation of the Pan-Islamic propaganda things have undergone a complete change. Some Muhammadans have begun to think that their best interests are centred in Arabia, Turkey, Persia and Afghanistan and that with the Hindus their relations should be marked by nothing but antagonism, conflict and irritation. This is a very deplorable state of affairs, and Muhammadans have for a number of years been encouraged by a section of Europeans and Anglo-Indians to persist in their antagonism against the Hindus. They have been told that their interests are not common with the interests of the Hindus and that they have their own needs and requirements which are different from and even conflicting against those of the Hindus. This mischievous policy has done its work. The Pan-Islamic propaganda, which owes its force to religious fanaticism, has greatly helped and furthered it. The Muhammadans have had their heads filled with an idea that they are an Imperial race, and that their historic importance demands that they should receive specially favoured treatment from the British Government. So long as this policy only resulted in widening the gulf that separates the Hindus and the Muhammadans in India from each other, it was not of much consequence to the Anglo-Indian Press in India. Indeed they were glad that it was succeeding and thereby preventing that coalition between Hindus and Muhammadans which is so essential to the political advancement of the country. But it has had unfortunately other and more serious consequences. It has in a way recoiled upon its promoters. The Europeans and Anglo-Indians who encouraged the Muhammadans in their antipathy to the Hindus now find that they are in danger of being hoisted with their own petard. They have begun to find that their chickens have now come home to roost. Men whose minds have been filled with vague and false notions of 'historic importance,' who find it difficult to give up their agreeable dreams of empire and dominion, have begun actually to dictate to Great Britain as to how she should regulate her foreign policy. This demand or dictation has by no means been confined to the ignorant or the fanatical among the Muhammadans. It has been put forward in responsible quarters and embodied in representations sent up by responsible organisations representing Muhammadans. These representations opened the eyes of the writers in Anglo-Indian newspapers and they gave the Muhammadans a rather stiff lecture as regards their duties and loyalty to the Government of India. The Pioneer of Allahabad, which had taken an active part in encouraging Muhammadans to adopt a separatist propaganda and which had even winked at the spread of the Pan-Islamic propaganda, was the first soundly to rate the Muhammadans for their pretensions which that paper had no hesitation in characterising as preposterous and impossible. The Muhammadans had a rather rude awakening. Not a few of them had their eyes opened and saw the fools' paradise they had been living in for so many years.

"The Pioneer was angry that the Muhammadans of India had ventured at all to criticise the foreign policy of Great Britain. The Right Hon'ble Syed Ameer Ali, C.I.E., who had for years been patted on the back by the Pioneer as the most sensible and representative Muhammadan in India, was quickly denounced by the same newspaper as an irresponsible and even mischievous critic of Government. The Muhammadan newspapers in India wrote a series of articles and notes demanding that Great Britain should undertake to guarantee the independence and integrity of Persia and that she should compel Italy to give up Tripoli. Public meetings of Muhammadans held all over the country put forward the same demands. Similar requests were made in the representations sent on the subject by the Moslem League and other Muhammadan societies of a representative character. With reference to these demands the Times of London made the statement that the demands put forward were absurd and preposterous, and that in its estimation the independence of Persia and Turkey was not worth the bones of a Grenadier Guardsman.

"Now that the crisis has passed, the Times has turned round and is again endeavouring to palaver the Muhammadans of India. It says, 'for while the permanence of Muhammadan rule cannot be guaranteed either in the Turkish Empire or in Persia by Britain or any other alien power, Britain's strength alone maintains the conditions in which Muhammadan rule may yet survive, while Britain's weakness would involve its inevitable collapse.' Completely forgetting what the Times wrote only a few months ago, it asks: 'Have Indian Muhammadans any real reason for believing that the recent course of our policy shows less than our usual strong respect for the interests they have at heart.' The writer seeks to justify its previous remarks by pointing out that 'British policy may not always have chosen the best immediate methods to secure this end, but the sincerity of its purpose at least should never have been in doubt. Only inadequate information, coupled with an incomplete grasp of the difficulties which the Persian situation presents, can indeed explain the suspicious of British action which many Indian Muhammadans have felt.' The writer goes on to explain: 'but though the opportunities presented to our diplomacy must vary from time to time, its general purpose is plain enough; for while the internal regeneration of the Ottoman Empire must depend on its own efforts alone, the history of the revolution of 1908 is there to show how deeply and sincerely British sympathies are engaged in the success of the new régime.' The Times goes on to clinch its argument by saying 'we have not only a special interest in the Muhammadan system, wherever it extends, but we alone of all the Western Powers have something resembling, and indeed surpassing, the Turkish Empire's wide diversity of creeds and races to control. Indian Muhammadans may feel at times that British policy with its manifold interests is liable to overlook their sentiments and claims, but a deeper insight would assure them that British interests and theirs are inseparably intertwined.' It is breathing hot and cold of this kind, which in reality does not signify anything, which is responsible for the 'swollen heads' to which we owe the irresponsible Muhammadan criticism of British foreign policy, more especially when it touches Turkey, Persia and Afghanistan."

With reference to the above-mentioned quotations from the London Times the Observer (Lahore), of 13th April 1912 publishes the following under the heading "The Times on the Indian Muslims":—

"The London Times is nothing if not authoritative, and its views on the topics of the day have ever commanded respect. An issue of it to hand by the last mail publishes a very important article on 'Indian Muhammadans and Imperial policy,' which we reproduce in another column, as it deserves the closest attention of every educated Indian Muslim who takes any interest in the advancement of his people and their policy in matters political. This article, which we take as an index of the feeling of the ruling race and their attitude towards the feelings and sentiments of our co-religionists in this country, will be enthusiastically welcomed in Muslim circles as evidencing the great regard of the British race for 'Muslim sentiments and claims' and constituting an explicit declaration of the 'inseparable' identity of Muslim and British interests. The significance of the sentiments to which the Times has given emphatic utterance is enhanced all the more by the fact that their publication almost coincided with the great speech of the Viceroy at the last meeting of the Imperial Legislative Council, wherein His Excellency showed that in formulating Imperial policy, British statesmen did not overlook Muslim feeling, and that in shaping England's attitude towards the Muslim world in general due weight was given to the wishes of the King-Emperor's Muhammadan subjects. Nor are we the less grateful for the Times' declaration that 'there is much in this new (Muslim) activity' which is by no means regretted by the Times and therefore by the spokesmen and representatives of Great Britain. It is, moreover, a matter of real satisfaction to us to find this powerful exponent of English opinion seising the salient points of the Indian Muslim situation, and sketching, especially in the opening paragraph, the reasons for the disturbance of the Muhammadan equilibrium with such unerring insight. We highly appreciate the encouraging words and the sympathetic tone of the whole article; while the definite declaration of English policy is even more welcome."

The Khedive as Khalifa of Islam.

4. The Observer (Lahore), of the 17th April 1912, has the following :—

"The Fortnightly Review, in the course of a mischievous article suggesting the collusion of the British Ministry in the Italian raid on Tripoli, has indulged in day-dreams about the dismemberment of the Ottoman Empire. It is the earnest wish and heartfelt prayer of the Musalmans that the Turks as a nation may again become the true sons of Islam, and the Osmanli Sultans continue to be the spiritual heads of Islam. But if God wills otherwise, even then the dreams of the journal about the Khedive being recognised as a Khalifa will not be realised. There can be no forcing of the will in spiritual affairs, and no one can compel the Musalmans to recognise the nominal ruler of Egypt as the Khalifa."

The Persian situation.

5. The following is from the Observer (Lahore), of 17th April 1912 :—

"The blue-book on Persian affairs, referred to by Reuter, shows that while Sir Edward Grey was at least a party to the dismissal of Mr. Shuster he tried to curb the impetuosity of Muscovite chauvinists who were clamouring for a Russian occupation of Teheran. The British Foreign Secretary animadverted in diplomatic language on the despatch of the Russian ultimatum to Persia and on the non-withdrawal of Muscovite troops when Persia had complied with the demands of Russia. Moreover, though suggesting that Persia should be asked not to appoint foreign advisers without the consultation of the two Legations, Sir Edward Grey explicitly told the Russian Ambassador in London that if further far-reaching demands were made without consultation with Great Britain, the Convention might come to an end. Thus the fear of the effect that Russian aggression might have on the Muhammadan world and in India led Sir Edward Grey to urge the moderation of the Russian demands. But these and similar considerations, we think, must have weighed with the British Government had there been no Anglo-Russian Agreement. It is indeed not impossible that if Russia had in that eventuality followed the policy that she has pursued for the last two years, Great Britain might, in her own interests, have called upon Russia to leave Persia alone. Let us, however, hope that Persia will no more be subjected to indignities at the hands of Russia and that the Muscovite troops will clear out at an early date."

The Royal Commercial Commission.

6. The Paisa Akhbar (Lahore), of the 10th April 1912, has a note headed "The British Empire Commercial Commission." Adverting to the appointment of a Royal Commission to enquire into the commercial resources of the British Empire, the paper regrets that there should not be a single Indian among the members of the Commission. The high position, it adds, which India occupies in the British Empire on the score of the vastness of its industrial and commercial resources, imperatively demands that its trading community should also be represented on the Commission.

(b)—Home.

Lord Hardinge's policy.

7. The Jhang Sial (Jhang), of the 6th April 1912, publishes an article headed "Lord Hardinge's desire has been realised." His Lordship, it says, plainly told the Bombay Muslim League on his arrival in India that favours to one community meant corresponding disabilities to another. His words made it clear, adds the paper, that he wished Hindus and Muhammadans to regard themselves as equals and to claim no superiority over each other. After remarking that his desire was highly auspicious for India, it observes that the result has been that Musalmans have left off asking for separate representation and the like. Continuing, it says that Lord Curzon and Lord Minto created an impassible gulf between Hindus and Muhammadans by respectively partitioning Bengal and conferring political importance and the right of separate representation on the latter community. This conduct on the part of these Viceroys laid the British Government open to the charge of following a policy of "Divide and rule," and of consequently promoting strife between the followers of Islam and Hinduism. Lord Hardinge has, however, removed this mistaken impression; and has convinced the Indian public that Government wishes Hindus and Muhammadans to live in peace and is solicitous for the welfare of India. If His Excellency also had followed the policy of his two immediate predecessors a misunderstanding extremely dangerous for both India and her present masters would have arisen. Lord Curzon and Lord Minto undermined the foundations of British rule in India, but Lord Hardinge has placed them on a firm rock. (Like the latter) the former also wished to keep India under England for ever, but they sought to gain that object with the aid of despotism. History, however, plainly and loudly says that no Government which practises oppression on its subjects can maintain itself for any length of time. If Lord Hardinge had followed in the footsteps of his predecessors, the British Government also would have been unable to exist (in India) much longer. Lords Curzon and Minto wished to benefit England by involving Indians in ruin and sufferings; but the present Viceroy desires to strengthen British rule by making her children prosperous. Next the paper approves of His Excellency's policy, which, it says, has proved successful in composing racial differences and re-establishing peace in the country.

Muhammadans and Government.

8. The Millat (Lahore), of the 5th (received on the 15th) April 1912, has an article headed "Great Britain and Muhammadans." The paper begins by referring to the great help which the British Government rendered to Turkey against Russia in 1877. Next it praises England for her work in Egypt, as also for her conduct in having prevented Italy from blockading Jedda and Yembu. Continuing, it reports that a few months back a highly-placed British officer in the Foreign Office assured an influential Muhammadan rais that England would never allow Russia to take Persia, and that if the Turks continued gaining victories in Tripoli, she would not let the Powers force Turkey (to cede Tripoli to Italy). Again, every Muhammadan in India knows, or ought to know, how bravely the British Government has been safeguarding the rights of his co-religionists against the (Hindu) majority. Where is, then, the Musalman who would not call Government a true friend of Islam?

Muslim politics.

9. The Zamindar (Lahore), of the 9th April 1912, publishes an article headed "The Liberal party: Is it a dangerous thing?" It begins by quoting a remark by Shams-ul-Ulema Maulana Shibli, who says that the time has come when the Liberal section of the (Muslim) community should separate itself from the Conservative party. Next the paper contends that liberalism does not mean extremism, and that its followers are not given to hatching secret plots against Government. Continuing, it says that Indian Musalmans form two parties, one of which consists of Conservatives. These men are averse to moving with the times, refrain from laying the real feelings of (their) community before Government, consider it seditious to criticise the mistakes made by the authorities or to take exception to improper official doings, regard it as a serious mistake to carry on even constitutional agitation, and implicitly follow (lit. worship) leaders who are connected with Government and, having access to the authorities, can speak nothing betokening courage and boldness. The other party favours the opposite course, and does not follow the lead of title-holders or of men closely associated with Government, whose position prevents them from plain-speaking. Both parties are, however, thoroughly loyal to Government. Indeed the existence of extremists among the Prophet's followers in India is impossible. The Muslim League voices the sentiments of Conservative Muhammadans, but their Liberal brethren desire that it should work on liberal lines, and that those of its members whom their present position prevents from acting with courage should sever their connection with it, seeing that they stand in the way of its rendering satisfactory political services to the entire Muhammadan community. In the other event, adds the paper, Liberal Muhammadans should separate themselves from the Conservatives and should establish a society of their own, which should have a high ideal, display zeal in rendering political services to the community, create a "political taste" among Muhammadans, and teach them to resort to constitutional agitation in demanding (their) rights. "Our friends and elders may, however, rest satisfied in every way" that the society will not be a secret or seditious organisation; that it will follow a policy of liberalism and moderation; and that it will never transgress the bounds of law.

The Paisa Akhbar (Lahore), of the 9th April 1912, publishes a leaderette headed: "What does 'Liberal Party' mean?" Some Muhammadan enthusiasts, it remarks, have started a discussion on the formation of a Liberal Party (among Musalmans) and evince unusual interests in politics. They are welcome, it adds, to launch a radical and extremist party into existence; but they should, for God's sake, discontinue speaking ill of their opponents, who value the boons conferred by Government (on the country) and employ respectful language in demanding further rights. It is not gentlemanly on their part to taunt these men with being sycophants and with hankering after honorific titles. They should, moreover, state what new politics has been discovered by them and how it is so antagonistic to the present (Muslim) politics that a new (political) party must be brought into existence. Enthusiasm and harsh language alone cannot constitute Liberalism, while Radicalism can confer no benefit on Indian Muhammadans in their present condition.

Muslim interests in Bengal.

10. The following is from a leading article of the Observer (Lahore), of the 17th April 1912:—

"A very important letter has been addressed by the Honorary Secretary of the London Branch of the All-India Muslim League to the India Office, wherein the attention of the Secretary of State has been prominently invited to certain aspects of the re-organisation of Bengal, to Muslim anxiety in connection therewith, and to the necessity of safeguarding Muslim interests in the United Provinces and of taking steps so that Musalman development in Eastern Bengal may not be retarded by the administrative changes. The representation in question is so well argued and it so correctly sets forth the Muhammadan stand-point, that we have not the slightest hesitation in according support to its contents and joining our voice to that of the League, in the hope that now that Muslim apprehensions have been specifically detailed, the Secretary of State will consider them in a spirit of sympathetic earnestness. The interests involved are so vital and the issues at stake so momentous that the greatest possible care is essential in dealing with the whole problem and in avoiding the upsetting of the racial balance in favour of one party or the other."

* * * * * * * *

V.—Native Societies and Religious Matters.

The last anniversary of the Anjuman-i-Himayat-i-Islam, Lahore.

11. The following is from the Observer (Lahore), of 13th April 1912:—

"The last anniversary of the Anjuman-i-Himayat-i-Islam, Lahore, has been remarkable, as we stated in our last, not only for the excellence of the mental, moral and religious pabulum provided for by the different speeches, sermons and poems, but also for the unprecedented number of people that attended its sittings and the enthusiasm that prevailed throughout the duration of the 'national festival.' No one whose views are not jaundiced by personal or party prejudice could have left the anniversary without feeling proud of the educational awakening that is gradually coming over Muslim Punjab. A few individuals, it is true, did not afford the Anjuman the assistance that could have well been expected from them. The fact is very much to be regretted. As the Paisa Akhbar says, it is most unfortunate that the desire for personal aggrandisement and selfish motives should lead some people to try to damage highly useful and much needed institutions like the Anjuman-i-Himayat-i-Islam. But some gentlemen, we are deeply grieved to find, are now glorying in the fanciful idea that the subscriptions realised at the last anniversary were less than those collected a year before. Nothing is farther from facts; but then any stick is good enough with which to beat the Anjuman" * *

A lecture by the Principal of the Islamia College.

12. The Zamindar (Lahore), of the 10th April 1912, has a leader headed "Mr. Henry Martin and Mr. Muhammad Shafi." It publishes a resumé of a lecture delivered by Mr. Henry Martin, Principal of the Local Islamia College, on the evening of the 6th instant, under the presidency of the Hon'ble Mian Muhammad Shafi. The speaker remarked, among other things, that, although he was a Christian, he did not believe Christ to have been the son of God; that he did not mind if this led to his being called a Muhammadan; and that the Prophet had learnt different things from Christianity, Judaism, etc. Commenting on the last statement the paper remarks that if this had been really the case Islam would not have taken such deep root as it has done. Europe, it adds, wishes to uproot Muhammadans, but it is unable to do so and can only gnash its teeth. After remarking that if the Muhammadans of to-day (lit. we) acted up to the Quran they could become what early Musalmans were; it finds fault with Mian Muhammad Shafi for having said in his concluding remarks "If we can be Christians in spite of (our) being unitarian Muhammadans, we are such Christians no doubt (sic.)." In conclusion, it opposes the idea of the Prophet's followers calling themselves Muhammadan Christians.

Insult to Swami Dayanand's picture.

13. The Bharat (Jullundur), of the 5th April 1912, publishes a paragraph headed "Inconsiderate treatment of Maharishi Dayanand's picture." Not long ago, says the paper, a Sikh at Nankana tore up a picture of Swami Dayanand (vide paragraph 19 of Selections No. 48 of 1911). It now understands that, recently, Sardar Gurdas Singh, of Rawalpindi, gave a building to be used as a boarding house in connection with the Khalsa High School. The building contained a picture of the Swami, but the Sikhs who occupied the same—or some of them—cut out the eyes in the likeness. After stating that the Sardar was very angry at this, the paper enquires whether Sikhs are not endangering the public peace by acting in this manner. It adds that the silence of the responsible Sikhs in the matter makes the Arya Community think that they do not reprobate doings of the above description.

The Arya Samaj.

14. The Indar (Lahore), of the 5th (received on the 15th) April 1912, has a leader headed "The mission of the Arya Samaj and universal peace—I." After calling Swami Dayanand the "Prince of Peace," the paper deplores the present condition of the Arya Samaj, saying that that Society is at loggerheads with Hindus, Sikhs, Muhammadans, and Christians; and has managed to forfeit the sympathy of Government. It then goes on to remark that, if the chapters of the Satyarth Parkash, in which harsh words have been used in respect of Islam and Christianity were deleted, the relations between Aryas and other communities would undergo a change for the better. The first (lit. old) edition of the book did not contain these chapters and its author would have expunged them (from subsequent editions), according the same treatment to the strong language employed in it towards other (non-Arya) faiths also. Death, however, prevented him from doing so, while "those who came after him," not understanding the spirit which moved him, made additions to the Satyarth Parkash "which set the religious world on fire" and converted the Arya Samaj into a house of unrest. Next the paper refers to the differences between the Sikhs and Aryas, and promises to resume its remarks on some future occasion.

Arya preachers.

15. The following is from the Harbinger (Lahore) of 14th April 1912:—

"There are now-a-days so many men qualified to preach the Vedic religion at Arya Samaj anniversaries that it is quite useless for the Samajes to depend on the Pratinidhi Sabha for the supply of preachers. Paid preachers are unable to tell out their heart. A few days before holding anniversaries, the Samajes should notify in popular papers and ask well-known preachers to attend. In this way many new able men will join the Samaj, who wish to spread the Vedic religion. At present the Pratinidhi Sabha or Arya Samajes employ such men as their preachers as worship their leaders, who have usurped the place of religion."

The Hindu Elementary Education League and the Punjab Hindu Sabha.

16. The following is from the Harbinger (Lahore) of 14th April 1912:—

"The Hindu Sewak Sabha (servants of India Society) and the Hindu Elementary Educational League and Conference evidently indicate a split in the camp of the Hindu movement in the Punjab. The word Hindu is a cheap article of profitable trade. If a thing is not sold, call it Hindu, and it is sure to find a speedy sale with desired profit. The objects of these new societies being the same as those of the Punjab Hindu Sabha, it is hard to understand what the cause of their organisation is. Many organisers are members of the Punjab Hindu Sabha. Perhaps these restless spirits are dissatisfied with the lethargy of the P. H. S. The best advice to them is to work with the Sabha."

17. In a leading article in its issue of 18th April 1912 the Tribune (Lahore) has the following on 'the evil effects of child marriage' :—

The marriageable age of girls.

* * * * * * * *

"The prevailing present custom is to marry girls early. But we do not know how and when this baneful custom first appeared among the Hindus. As far as can be ascertained this institution of the early marriage of girls is by no means an ancient one. In the great Hindu epics we do not find any mention of early marriage. The Swayamvara system of marriage is a clear indication that girls were allowed to grow up to an age when they could choose their husbands for themselves. In those days girls were educated and were allowed to attain to womanhood before there was any thought of their marriage. The Swayamvara of Indumati and Damayanti, which are vividly described, shows that they were not children or very young girls at the time of marriage. Similarly Sakuntala, Savitri and Sita were all married at a grown up age. It is quite evident that child marriage was unknown in India in ancient times. It is impossible to state even approximately when the ancient wholesome custom disappeared and the early marriage of girls was introduced. It must have been when a state of decadence commenced and extraneous influences began to work upon the decadent Hindu society. Anyhow the custom of early marriage has now taken firm root in India. Its evils are in evidence everywhere but are always overlooked. The only religious sanction to the early marriage of girls is to be found in the merit which is supposed to be earned by Gauridan, or the giving in marriage of girls at a very tender age, usually not exceeding ten. Let us however see what the word literally means. Gauri is the name of Parvati, the consort of Siva; the term is also applicable to unmarried young girls from the original application to Parvati when she was a very young girl. There is a deep spiritual significance in this mythological incident. Gauri, when she was a little girl, remembered her former birth and knew that she was the bride of Siva for all time, and she daily worshipped Siva even as a little girl. The confusion is in the belief that Gauri was actually married young. The belief which led to the early marriage system was that if girls are married at an age when they are called Gauri they would be happy and get husbands like Siva. This superstitious belief seems to be at the root of the idea of early marriage. But was Gauri, i.e., Parvati herself married at an early age? In Kalidasa's Kumarsambhabam we are distinctly told that Gauri was in the full bloom of her youth when she captivated Siva and which finally led to their union. How much more beneficial would have been the result if instead of the misinterpretation of Gauridan, the true spirit of it were realised and utilised in the Hindu custom of marriage?

"But leaving aside ancient traditions and customs the physiological aspect of child marriages does not require much argument to bring the evils of it home to minds of average intelligence. Can any one deny that child marriage is one of the prime factors which are responsible for the physical deterioration of the Indian people? We need not go to the highest medical authorities to be convinced of this. Our own houses are full of living examples. Physical degeneracy and low physical energy are the features of the people, specially of the higher and middle classes. We admit that sufficient food and unhealthy surroundings are to a certain extent responsible for the decadence of the race, but it must be recognised that the greater part of the mischief is due to the effects of child marriage. Even to this day such sections of the population as have not adopted this custom have more vitality and physical energy than those among whom child marriage is prevalent. The half aboriginal tribes in the hills of Northern India do not marry their girls at an early age. They are a race of sturdy people enjoying a healthy vigorous life. Early marriage begets poverty and deteriorates vitality. Children born of very young parents are seldom healthy and strong. They are weak and have low vitality. The evils of this custom are being noticed in the Punjab also though we must say that child marriage is not so common in the Punjab as it is in Bengal or elsewhere, and it is gratifying to notice that child marriages are becoming fewer, with the progress of time.

"If female education is considered necessary, and it is essential to the advancement of the nation, the early marriage of girls must necessarily gradually disappear. It must be borne in mind that the marriage of girls at a grown-up age is in perfect accordance with the real Hindu spirit and custom as already explained. It almost invariably happens that Indian girls do not receive any education after marriage. Hence it is desirable and essential that girls should be married at an age when they have received a certain amount of education and when they are old enough to become wives and mothers. How many of us realise that the future of Indian national life is indissolubly bound up with Indian womanhood just as much as with Indian manhood? In the making of the nation man and woman have equal share. The young India of to-morrow is to be built up not merely by thought-power but by work and sacrifice and the devotion of the men and women of India."

VI.—Legislation.

18. The following is from the Panjabee (Lahore) of 13th April 1912 :—

The working of the Punjab Land Alienation Act.

"The Report of the Punjab Land Revenue Administration, which was recently reviewed in our columns, takes great pains to show the so-called success of the working of the Punjab

Land Alienation Act. We do not deny that there is a point of view from which the Act may be said to be fulfilling its purpose. It is true that the result of all the transactions in land made during the last agricultural year, taken together, shows a gain of 8,769 acres to the notified agricultural tribes. But this does by no means preclude us from questioning the efficiency of the Government test. We are not prepared to say that the test proposed by the Financial Commissioners is a sure or infallible criterion for judging the success or failure of the Act. There are, for instance, several omissions in the Report, many points on which the Financial Commissioners express no opinion. In the last year's report the Financial Commissioners expressed the apprehension that owing to the growth of a class of money-lenders among the so-called agricultural tribes and the consequent expropriation of the smaller peasant proprietors by these agricultural Shylocks, it might be necessary to create sub-groups within district groups. Now the rise of agriculturist money-lenders is a very serious thing. It would have, in fact, defeated the very purpose of the Act. The Act may have saved the Government the Scylla of professional money-lenders, but could hardly avoid the Charybdis of agriculturist sowcars. The lot of the smaller peasant-proprietors could hardly improve by their being changed from the frying pan to the fire. It was therefore not without reasons that His Honour the Lieutenant-Governor in his annual review last year got alarmed at the suggestion of creating district sub-groups of agricultural tribes and said that he could sanction the measures only as a last resort and with great reluctance. We should, therefore, have expected the Hon'ble the Financial Commissioners to have said something about this suggestion of creating district sub-groups in the current Report, but the Report is discreetly silent on these points. All that the Report says is that there has been a net gain of over 8,000 acres to the agricultural tribes during the year under review. We are not told, however, whether the smaller peasant-holders have shared in this gain or whether the whole gain has been absorbed by agricultural sowcars, who have been notified as agriculturists. We have no means of knowing from the Report itself how far the smaller fry has been swallowed by the monster fishes among the agricultural tribes. In the absence of these facts and figures, it is impossible to say whether the benefit of this legislation has fallen on deserving shoulders.

"We are, however, strengthened in our aforesaid remarks by the fact that many Muhammadan tribes, who are notified in the schedules of agricultural tribes, have no claim to call themselves agriculturists in any sense of the term. In fact, in some cases they have been found by the highest tribunal in the province to be not agriculturists. We shall illustrate our meaning by a specific instance. In a case reported in No. 5 P. R. 1906, the Hon'ble Justices Robertson and Rattigan observed with regard to the Koreshis that 'it may be safely predicated of Koreshis that they are not members of an agricultural tribe. They belong to a tribe which came originally from Arabia, or, at least tradition so has it, and they claim to be the tribe to which the Prophet belonged.' With regard to the particular Koreshi gentleman, Pir Manawar Shah, their Lordships observed :—

"'Pir Manawar Shah has never done, and obviously never will do, any agricultural work himself, and he has been (on his own showing) quite content to draw the income from his land or to raise money on the security of such for the purpose of leading a life of depravity and dissipation. To hold that such a person is 'an agriculturist' would be an absurdity. He belongs to a tribe that is, in its origin at least, in no sense agriculturist; but (as he would have us believe) a dissipated spendthrift, and the mere fact that he happens to own a large amount of land, which is cultivated by his tenants, cannot, in our opinion, make him in law what he obviously is not in fact a member of an agricultural tribe.'

"Still, in spite of the above finding, Koreshis of Jhelum are, and continue to be, classed among agricultural tribes. When the matter was brought to the notice of the Government by means of a question in the Punjab Legislative Council, Sir James Douie virtually said that members of notified agricultural tribes need not conform to the usages common to agriculturists. When such is the view of the Government it is no wonder that a large number of Muhammadan money-lenders have come to be included among the notified tribes. The extreme volatility of classification of Muhammadan tribes and the great facility with which converts to Muhammadanism can change their nomenclature, naturally help the growth of sowcars among the notified tribes.

"Just look at the other side of the picture. The grievances of Hindus under the Act were very lucidly and ably set forth in the speech made by the Hon'ble Rai Bahadur Shadi Lal at the meeting of the first Punjab Hindu Conference. His arguments were simply unanswerable and the Government recognised its force to some extent by withdrawing the bar against the acquisition of sites for a workshop or a factory or a building close to a town or village in certain cases. We refer to the correction slip issued by the Financial Commissioners to paragraph 37 of the Land Administration Manual. But men of capital and brains are still excluded from freely acquiring and improving land. We do not, however, propose to enter into that economic question. What we make a special grievance of is the exclusion of even such Hindus from acquiring land as have been proved to have been hereditary holders of agricultural lands and in cultivation of land before the advent of the British Raj in this province. Regarding them, Sir Macworth Young, then Lieutenant-Governor of this province, wrote :—

"'I see no reason for receding from the position that the person, who not being a member of an agricultural tribe, has been connected with agricultural land from an early period in British rule, must be treated as an agriculturist of the village in which that land is situated, and not as a non-agriculturist. There are two reasons for adhering to this position. The first is that it is defensible on its merits. The policy of the British Government has been to maintain as far as possible the status attained under previous Governments, and it is in accordance with this policy to deem those persons agriculturists who had embarked in agricultural enterprise before our revenue system was regularized. And to degrade the class hitherto regarded as old agriculturists to the level of the money-holder, who has embraced the facilities afforded him by a settled administration to effect an entrance into the land-owning class, would be at once harsh and a breach of continuity of our land record system. The second reason is that the maintenance of the position of the non-agriculturists who had obtained land in the early days of British administration has already been indicated in the Bill.'

"For the time, deference was paid to the views of the then Lieutenant-Governor. Opportunity was, however, early taken to repeal the statutory agriculturist and this was done by the Amending Act of 1907. At present, even those Hindus who are hereditary holders of land and have been holding it from a period dating prior to British rule, are put under a ban, while trans-border Pathans, tired of their marauding habits, are classed among agricultural tribes. Have not Hindus, therefore, good reasons to complain of this Act, which deprives them of their hereditary calling and confers the same on an alien, who may not even be a British subject?"

The Punjab Alienation of Land Act.

19. The Jhang Sial (Jhang), of the 6th April 1912, has a note headed "The Punjab Alienation of Land Act." The feelings of dissatisfaction, it says, with which the Hindus of this Province regard the Act, have never been given adequate expression. After remarking that the Act constitutes a piece of gross injustice to Hindus, the paper repeats their objections to the same. Next it regrets that Sahukars, who were once greatly respected in villages, should, because of this Act, have been reduced to a state of such humiliation that they have now to entreat zemindars to allow them to live in their midst. Continuing, the paper urges Hindus to carry on a systematic agitation to have the Act repealed.

VII.—General Administration.

(b)—Police.

Arming the villages in Punjab.

20. The Panjabee (Lahore), of 13th April 1912, has the following:—

"The idea of arming the villages of the Punjab which are in danger of dacoities is an excellent one. This has been suggested at various times both by the people and Government officers. * * * * In view of the fact that the Government of India did not approve of the proposal to arm the affected villages, will the member representing Punjab in the Imperial Council move a proposition on the subject at the next meeting of the Council?"

Recrudescence of dacoities in the Punjab.

21. The Jhang Sial (Jhang), of the 6th April 1912, has a note headed "How can dacoities be put down?" It complains that dacoities have now begun to be committed even in the interior of the country, e.g., in the districts of Jhelum, Rawalpindi, Gujrat, Gujranwala, Lahore and Jhang. This has plunged the general public into great uneasiness, and people keep awake at night for fear of dacoits. As regards the police, they have utterly failed to put down the evil; punitive police posts also having proved of no avail. Next the paper publishes a communication from a Srinagar correspondent, who makes the following suggestions to bring about the desired result:—

(1) That honest retired Gurkha and Sikh soldiers be employed as special guards on handsome salaries, the cost being met by Government and the people (concerned) in equal shares.

(2) That respectable Hindus be liberally granted licenses to keep arms.

After endorsing the suggestions, it asks Government and (Indian) members of the Viceregal Council to pay special attention to the recrudescence of dacoities in the country. Continuing, it states that, in spite of the teachings of the Zamindar and the Afghan, and in spite of temptations from the dacoits, the Muhammadans of Pir Jangla, Attook district, recently joined their Hindu fellow-villagers in driving away a party of about sixty armed dacoits. This, it adds, is the first instance of its kind, and if the good example were followed by Musalmans everywhere peace would assuredly be restored in the country. It is, however, to be regretted that the Islamic press has made Muhammadans regard Hindus with such feelings of hatred that the former have become averse to standing by the latter in their troubles. This is why dacoities have, of late, been on the increase.

The recent fire at Peshawar.

22. The Hindustan (Lahore), of the 5th April 1912, publishes a communication from "One who feels" under the heading "God's wrath on Peshawar: loss of about 15 lakhs by fire: European officers' sympathy and solicitude for the good of the ruled." Writing about the disastrous fire which broke out in the Asir Mohulla, Peshawar, on the 26th ultimo, the writer says that the local Hindus feel deeply grateful for the help rendered by the aforesaid officers—including the Chief Commissioner—in putting down the fire. The Deputy Commissioner, he adds, went to the length even of endangering his life, while Mr. Henry, (?) Assistant Superintendent of Police, deserves special thanks for his brave doings on the occasion. Continuing, he regrets that some Muhammadans should have, instead of rendering help to Hindu sufferers, displayed activity in injuring the latter. Some Muslim constables grossly oppressed Hindus, while a certain Muhammadan Sub-Inspector tried, not to extinguish the fire, but to spread it, by diverting water away from the place on fire. Again, at about 8 (P. M. ?) some 6 or 7 "sepoys" (? constables), who appeared to be Muhammadans, began to plunder the shop of a Hindu halvai. Some (Muslim) "sepoys," moreover, attempted to take gold bracelets off three Hindu women, who were, however, rescued by four (private) individuals. One of the last named reported the matter to the Tahsildar, who related the same to the Deputy Commissioner; upon which the latter officer posted soldiers, at the scene of the fire, and gave orders that no Muhammadans, especially constables, should enter the burning Mohullas. This proved highly beneficial, and ensured the safety of a considerable amount of property, which would otherwise have been lost. Next the writer enumerates and eulogises the great services rendered by the Arya Sewak Sabha; and goes on to say that the fire was all but got under by 9 o'clock on the night of the 27th of March. In the latter part of the night, however, it broke out again "through mischief-making by someone." Some Muhammadans acted in a most deplorable manner on the occasion, pouring kerosine oil on houses in that part of the Asir Mohulla which had so far escaped the fire. The incident, however, became known; and a report was made to the authorities concerned, who very kindly posted Sikh soldiers at the back of the Jogan Shah Mohulla, through which place the aforesaid Muhammadans had entered the Asir Mohulla. Next some Musalman badmashes made up their minds to set fire to other part of the city. They picked the lock of a Hindu shop in the Thaki Dalgaran Mohulla which contained canisters of ghi and kerosine oil. They set to work to soak some rags in the oil, but the matter became known and they had to flee from the shop. Continuing, the writer states that, on the 27th March, Hindus experienced great difficulty in removing the property taken out of the burning houses. The reason for this was that some Maulvis had been preaching to Muhammadans for two days to refrain from helping Hindus; with the result that Muslim labourers refused to accept even one rupee, whereas they had worked for four annas on the first day.

Commenting on the above the Munir (Jhang), of the 8th (received on the 19th) April 1912, deplores the strained relations between Hindus and Muhammadans, and refuses to credit the allegations made by the Hindustan's correspondent. After regretting that the Hindustan and its correspondent should convert everything into a Hindu-Muhammadan question, it remarks that the foregoing letter is likely to make ignorant (Hindus and Musalmans) abstain from helping each other even on critical occasions like the one in question. Next it expresses the hope that Government will attend to the matter, and that, in the event of the above allegation proving unfounded, exemplary punishment will be inflicted on the persons concerned.

(d)—Education.

The proposal to establish a Zenana College at Delhi.

23. The Paisa Akhbar (Lahore), of the 12th April 1912, publishes a paragraph headed "Proposal to found a Zenana College at Delhi." Adverting to the Begum of Bhopal's suggestion about the establishment of a college of the above description in the new metropolis in commemoration of the Queen Empress's recent visit to India, the paper expresses the hope that Her Highness's useful and welcome proposal will be crowned with success, and that Government also will not hesitate to render pecuniary help to the college.

The Sikh Educational Conference at Sialkot.

24. The following is from the Khalsa Advocate (Amritsar) of 12th April 1912 :—

"Easter like Christmas has become a season of conferences. The new life pulsating in the nerve cells of the twentieth century India finds its articulate expression in these assemblies. For the Sikhs the Educational Conference has come to take the place of the old Diwans.

"The Sialkot brothers, conscious of the paucity of workers in their midst, set early to work with laudable zeal and singleness of purpose. It is too late now to re-call the spade work done during the twelve months of watching and waiting. March went and the month of conference came. Sialkot became alive with bustle, until the 4th day of April saw crowds of eager, practical horny handed sons of the lands of the five rivers with here and there a necktie or a pair of spectacles as indicative of the fact that the Romantic Past is in serious struggle with the victorious present and that the latter is daily encroaching upon the domains of the former.

"To a Sikh familiar with the accounts of the old Sikh gatherings when love was the sole God on the throne of our democracy, the chorus of numerous persons and groups chanting divine hymns as the trains whistled away through the smiling plains or rattled over the mighty rivers recalled the happy old days :—

"When every morning brought a noble chance,

"And every chance brought out a noble knight.

"The 5th of April dawned and the clear blue sky unveiled itself over the pretty canvas town that had sprung up on the sacred spot hallowed by the reminiscences of the beloved Guru Nanak. All hearts were agog for the hour when the special train of the Premier Prince of the Punjab—the hope and head of the Phulkians—was to steam up in their midst. The buntings and festoons were but a poor reflex of the leaping hearts. About mid-day it was bruited forth though without authority that the 'observed of all observers was expected at about 3 P.M.' Long before that hour the crowds began to pour into the station with their eager, intent eyes. Hour after hour struck away but no certain news. Delayed hopes began to ebb down into suspense and at last the heartless wire cast down the words that His Highness the Maharaja Sahib of Patiala had to be inavoidably absent. Who would judge of the gloom, despondency and even despair of ten thousand hearts.

"But the wistful crowds were not left long in this dejection, for a short hour and a hal fleeted away the clock struck half past four and lo! and behold! Sardar Jogindra Singh and the Hon'ble Sardar Sundar Singh Majithia alighted from the train and received an ovation which in spite of the reaction which the Maharaja's telegram had caused in the spirits of the expectant multitude was very enthusiastic. A procession was then formed which extended over more than a mile and comprised more than fifteen thousand souls.

"We can barely touch the camp arrangements. Long rows of tents had been pitched with separate blocks for the several towns and 'ilaqas' with lamps and with carpets of nature. The Reception Committee had spared no pains to afford all possible comfort to the guests and they fully earned the admiration of the visitors. The Pandal arrangements were elaborate and praiseworthy.

"On the 6th, the doors were opened about an hour and a half before the proceedings commenced. It was bare in time that some 8,000 people including over 2,000 ladies could find their seats. So great was the concourse!

"Sardar Jogindra Singh Sahib was, on entry, received with loud and sky-lifting shouts of 'Sat Sri Akal.'

"After Bhai Takht Singh had offered a fervent prayer, S. Khark Singh, B.A., the President of the Reception Committee, welcomed the guest in a striking speech. Next the President Sardar Jogindra Singh delivered his address which, considering the short spell of time at his disposal, was indeed a creditable performance with illuminating, bold and straightforward expressions on a few of the momentous problems. Dr. Harnam Singh, S. Sadhu Singh, Bhai Bishan Das, Puri, M.A., and others addressed the audience. The students of the Sikh Kanya Mahavidyala, Ferozepore, Kairon, Lahore and Sialkot enlivened and relieved as well as edified those present with their divine hymns. The excellent poem of Bhai Santokh Singh was as usual much appreciated.

"There was much stuff as well as beauty in most of the speeches but sooth to say, we rose from the proceeding with a sense of cloud on our brows probably caused to a certain extent by an undertone of thought created by the unfortunate absence of His Highness the Maharaja Sahib.

"The next was the day of real and unqualified success. The tone of the papers read as well as speeches delivered was indeed very high. Papers of Bhai Jodh Singh, M.A., Sardar Dyal Singh, Man, Sardar Ladha Singh, B.A., LL.B, were delivered. It was, besides, on that day that the stirring speech of Mr. Puran, extolling the Sikh creed as the 'summum bonum' of the world's faith was heard with rapturous attention and vociferous repeated shouts of Sat Sri Akal. Kaka Samund Singh, who though of seven or eight years, is gifted with a masterly skill in music, held the audience spell bound with his sweet hymns.

"On an appeal being made for the National Fund more than Rs. 40,000 in hard cash, was subscribed. Rupees twenty one-thousand being donated by His Highness alone.

"Sardar Shivdev Singh announced the inauguration of the High Department in the Khalsa High School, Sialkot. About Rs. twenty thousand were subscribed on the spot and Sirdar Jogindra Singh held out hopes, that His Highness too, would donate a handsome amount. It was estimated that about 1½ lakhs were promised or given for different institutions.

"Bibi Agya Kaur, the wife of our worthy labourer Bhai Takht Singh, delivered an eloquent address on female education.

"A number of Resolutions were adopted which we will give in our next issue.

"The President then thanked the Reception Committee for their labours. Sardar Shivdev Singh asked forgiveness for any shortcomings that might have been detected in the arrangements for the comfort of the visitors.

"The 'punctual servant of the world' had retired for rest before the Khalsa rose for the closing prayer. So great was the interest that though all had sat for about ten hours at a stretch yet they were loth to disperse. Amid the deafening shout of 'Sat Sri Akal' and after the chorus of the divine song ਪੂਰੀ ਆਸਾ ਜੀ ਮਨਸਾ ਮੇਰੇ ਰਾਮ- thousands lined back to their quarters or to the Railway Station longing to see such an assembly once more in Ambala which had invited the Conference for the next year. It is interesting to note here that some 32 delegates handed over their fees and 275 maunds of grain were promised for Langar on the spot for the next year."

Technical and Industrial Education in the Punjab.

25. The following is from the Observer (Lahore), of 17th April 1912 :—

"We hope the Director of Public Instruction is incorrectly reported as asserting, in the course of the last budget debate in the Punjab Legislative Council, that 'our medical engineering and technical colleges had nothing to fear from comparison with other colleges' in India. It would be a palpable terminological inexactitude to make such an assertion. When the Punjab has not got a single technical college of its own, how can we talk of comparing an imaginary institution with real technical institutes of Bombay and Baroda? Nor can we boast of any engineering college. The engineering college at Rasul, though about to start into being, has yet to be opened, and if, when opened, it is at least as good as the college at Roorkee, then alone can we be partly justified in making the remarks attributed to Mr. Godley. As for the Medical College at Lahore, though in future it may be made more efficient out of the King Edward Memorial Fund, at present it can hardly compare favourably with simiar institutions in Calcutta and Bombay. The number of pupils in our industrial schools is no doubt larger than in the industrial schools of the United Provinces. But this fact bears more trustworthy testimony to the industrial awakening among the Punjabis and their freedom from the absurd notions about the dignity of non-labour than to any specially practical solicitude on the part of the authorities for the industrial regeneration of the Province. No amount of whitewashing can disguise the fact that in the matter of technical and industrial education the Punjab has yet to come up to the level of some other Provinces. When the reproach is removed, no one will be more ready to offer acknowledgments than the Punjab publicists. But the first thing is to redress the grievance. Mere repudiation of a genuine complaint hardly serves any useful purpose."

(h)—Miscellaneous.

The Frontier Province.

26. The Panjabee (Lahore), of 16th April 1912, publishes the following under the heading 'The Punjab Partition':—

"The separation of the North-Western Frontier Province from the Punjab, nearly eleven years ago, has hardly benefited the people of the Punjab. Nor has the isolated treatment of the backward frontier been one of rapid progress. One evil effect of this Partition is the alarming increase of dacoities, robberies and lawlessness, as a consequence of which rich Hindus are attacked, murdered and outraged. Before the Partition there was hardly any crime of this sort. It is believed that the question of reunion is under consideration, and the opinions of the people are considered. Moreover it will be some sort of 'compensation' for the loss of Delhi in the event of Sind being left undisturbed or treated as a separate Province under the direct control of the Government of India. Our correspondence from Dera Ismail Khan says that the Deputy Commissioner is consulting the popular wishes and there seems to be a unanimous desire for a reunion. It is also hoped that the Viceroy's visit is in some way connected with this, though no definite statement is made on the subject."

Punjab Budget discussion.

27. The following is from the Panjabee (Lahore) of 13th April 1912:—

"The discussion that took place in the Punjab Legislative Council on Wednesday on the Budget for 1912-13 was a model of temperate reasoning and general acquiescence in the policy and principles of administration. There was a happy tone of satisfaction at the prosperous finances and the general progress made in the departments. The Hon'ble Mr. Shadi Lal pointed out how the functions of the Finance Committee were made more effective by allotting an increasing sum for their consideration and disposal. In 1910, the amount was limited to Rs. 3·17 lakhs and subsequently it rose to 12 and 45 lakhs. While we must thank the Government for this step, we must also express the hope that this progressive increase in the amount alloted for the consideration of the Committee will be kept up in future. The advantages are obvious. It will give a larger opportunity to the representatives of the people to discuss and shape the form of the budget—thereby carrying out the real objects of the reformed Council. The Hon'ble Mr. Shadi Lal observed that the Local Government had shown every disposition to associate the representatives of the people with the preparation of the budget. He also pointed out the duties and responsibilities of the non-official members. 'On the one hand,' he said, 'we are bound to place before the Government the views of the people of this Province and watch their interests carefully. On the other hand we owe a duty to the Government. We know that the administration of this country is a very complex machinery and full of difficulties and it is not always possible for Government Officers to accept all the demands of the people.' This is undoubtedly the correct view of the present constitution. It is the duty of every non-official member to be vigilant in representing popular views in the Council and securing their wants. And it is equally the duty of the officers to adopt those views as far as they are consistent with the progressive policy and principles of Government. To urge impracticable measures on the Government would be unavailing, and to refuse all the demands of the people would be equally unsatisfactory. His Honour observed that there should be no opposition or government party in the Council and that is an ideal which can only be fostered by a steady pursuit of moderation by both the sections of the Council and by accommodating as far as possible to each other's opinions. We do not think that in the Punjab Council there is an excess of popular representation. We have no Gokhales and Basus among us who have made themselves so very valuable yet, but from the steady though slow progress made here, we can anticipate bright results for the future."

Security from the Zamindar.

28. The Zamindar (Lahore), of the 11th April 1912, publishes an article headed "Why were we made to furnish security?" The Editor is afraid that when his friends read the articles in respect of which he has had to deposit a security they will be certain to enquire whether any person can be "fined Rs. 2,000" for the sole offence of having profited by the blessings conferred by England on India, for having taught the King Emperor's (? Muslim) subjects to be loyal to their sovereign, and for having tried to put down, by loyal writings, that fire of their religious passions which, in the other event, would assuredly have burst into a flame. Continuing, he states that he saw the District Magistrate on the 28th ultimo, when he learned from the latter which articles in the daily Zamindar had been taken exception to. After remarking that he has not been informed of the alleged offending writings in the weekly edition of his paper, he says that, the next day, he sent to the above officer the issues of the daily Zamindar containing the articles objected to, with the request that the offending passages might be marked with red ink. No reply has, however, been vouchsafed to him up to the present, and he cannot, therefore, say which parts of the writings in question have been considered objectionable. Next he announces his intention of reproducing these articles and of attempting a brief defence thereof.

Continuing its remarks in its issue, dated the 12th April 1912, the paper states that one of the writings objected to is a communication from a Maulvi Sayad Sulaiman, of Lucknow, which was published by it on the 25th November last, under the heading "West and East, or Christianity and Islam" (vide first part of paragraph 7 of Selections No. 48 of 1911). After reproducing the letter it observes that the District Magistrate does not say whether he objects to the Maulvi's words or to Jules Clottie's (?) dictum that Christians should combine to tear the Quran to pieces, to appropriate (to themselves) Muhammadan virgins and married women, to take forcible possession of Muslim countries, to occupy Mecca and Medina, and to baptize Musalmans into the Christian fold. The District Magistrate might have been told by the (Government) Translator that the letter was calculated to stir up Musalmans' sense of religious self-respect and to inflame their anger against Jules Clottie and other European Christians of his type. If so, the Editor would point out that his comments on the communication (see second part of the above paragraph) were intended to serve as an antidote. After reprinting these comments, he observes that he can never expect Mr. Humphreys to approve of a mad French priest lacerating, by his ravings, the hearts of seven crores of Muslim subjects of His Majesty the King Emperor. The Foreign Minister, he adds, should move the "Continental" Powers to resort to law to put down the sentiments which Jules Clottie & Co. have expressed about Islam and its followers, the same being calculated to deeply wound the feelings of loyal Musalmans of India. Instead, however, of obliging Muhammadans by doing anything to bring about this result, the District Magistrate of Lahore orders them to abstain even from raising their voice against Jules Clottie. If the last named had expressed about any European lady the sentiments he has penned in regard to Muslim virgins and married women, quite a commotion would have been caused in Europe, and Jules Clottie's *do-warqi would have been consigned to Hell. Continuing, the paper asserts that the communication and the Editor's comments thereon (lit. our writing) are not objectionable but deserving of praise. It also feels compelled to add that, should Jules Clottie or "any of his kith and kin" spit against Islam and its followers the poison with which the prayers of his Eastern Question are besmeared, Muhammadans would be justified in adopting in reply the tone in which the writings in question are conceived.

In its issue, dated the 13th April 1912, the paper states that the District Magistrate has declined the Editor's request to mark the specially objectionable passages in the offending articles, saying that the suggested course has been taken in no other instance. After contending that he has not contravened the provisions of the Press Act in any way, the Editor remarks that there also exists no precedent for requiring security on the score only of the tone of a paper. Next he says that another of the writings objected to is a communication from Maulvi Muhammad-ul-Wahidi, Editor of the Nizam-ul-Mashaikh, of Delhi (vide paragraph 1 of Selections No. 46 of 1911). After reprinting the letter, he expresses his inability to discover anything objectionable in it; adding that Mr. Humphreys' translator must have mistranslated the same.

Continuing its remarks in its issue, dated the 14th April 1912, the paper says that the District Magistrate has also taken objection to two letters from Shaikh Fayyaz Ali, Municipal Commissioner, Shahabad, in the Hardoi district (vide paragraph 1 of Selections No. 4). After remarking that the Shaikh is a true well-wisher of the British Crown, it asserts that he has not used a single word which oversteps the bounds of law. The most serious objection, it adds, that can be raised against his writings is that they are plain-spoken. Next it reproduces the communications.

* I.e., a book of two leaves or a small book. The word is also used, in slang, to denote the anus.

In its issue of the 17th April 1912, the paper says that it would have had no complaint to make if the writings, in respect of which security has been demanded from it, had been criticised by some orientalist like Professor Browne and not by persons who take their opinions from "translators whose standard is defective and who are fettered by self-interest." It adds that, in these days, Deputy Commissioners bestow rewards only on those foul-mouthed persons who make things hot for them in the Council (chamber) Press, and on the platform; venting their displeasure on only those who may, like the Prophet's followers, be friendless, helpless, and voiceless. Continuing, it states that another of the aforesaid writings is the poem headed "Quintessence of Islamic feelings" which appeared on the 18th January last (vide paragraph 2 of Selections No. 5). Next it reproduces some of the verses and contends, in a satirical tone, that they contain nothing contravening the provisions of the Press Act. The paper then goes on to say that it is not for District Magistrates, whose acquaintance with Urdu literature has been daily on the decrease, to judge of the style and tone of the writings of Urdu newspapers. The work should be entrusted to a committee, which should consist of men possessing intellectual acumen and a sense of responsibility. As it is, the destinies of unfortunate Urdu papers have been placed in the hands of incapable translators, who distort the originals into English; and, on the strength of such translations, District Magistrates ask for security from Editors without even calling for an explanation. It is nothing short of a dire calamity for the country to place the dreadful "weapon of the press law" in the hands of District Magistrates, who withhold from Urdu journalists even the right of defence. It is high time that means were devised to protect Urdu journalism against a calamity, which may not be out of place under the tyrannical and antiquated Governments of Russia and China, but cannot even remotely be associated with England.

29. The Tribune (Lahore), of 14th April 1912, publishes the following under the heading 'Progress of official schemes':—

Laying out of the Minto Park, Lahore.

"It is stated that the final proposals of the Government of the Punjab regarding the laying out of the proposed Minto Park in the neighbourhood of Lahore Fort are now being submitted to Army Headquarters for consideration. This statement is an illustration of how slowly the wheels of official machinery move in this country. It was in the spring of 1909 that His Honour Sir Louis Dane conceived the idea of laying out the Minto Park, and funds were provided the same year for what may technically be called spade work preliminary to the laying out of the Park. All the arrangements in connection with the Industrial and Agricultural Exhibition which was held in Lahore in 1909-10 were made on the understanding that as soon as the Exhibition was over the ground would be laid out in the shape of a Park. Since then funds have been provided for the purpose every year in the Provincial Budget. It is nearly two years ago that the Exhibition Buildings were demolished and the grounds made over to the civil authorities, but the scheme has evidently hung fire all this time. This is very much to be regretted. Let us hope that the matter will be expeditiously disposed of at the Army Headquarters. It will be quite in the fitness of things that Sir Louis Dane should be able, before his time is up, to open the Park. But this will be possible only if the pace of the official machinery is accelerated a bit."

Excise revenue in the Punjab.

30. The following is from the Tribune (Lahore) of the 16th April 1912:—

"During the year 1911-12 the receipts from excise in the Punjab showed an increase of 2½ lakhs of rupees. The increase is said to have been due partly to sale proceeds of excise opium, but mainly to license and distillery fees for the sale of liquors and drugs. This is undoubtedly a very disquieting feature. * * * There is force in the contention that 'to raise the duty does more harm than good if the consequent decline in the consumption of liquor on which duty has been paid is accompanied by an equal or greater increase in the consumption of illicit products.' It is pointed out by way of justifying the increase in duty made three years ago that the preventive establishment recently sanctioned and engaged is sufficient to prevent illicit distillation on a large scale. It is further advanced also as an argument in favour of a further rise in the duty that the Inspectors recently engaged would be in a position to keep down illicit distillation. We think a little too much is being made of the efficiency of this establishment. It is really very difficult, if not impossible, to stop illicit distillation. The fear that the higher the duty the larger will be the scale on which illicit distillation is carried on is not altogether groundless. It is well-known that in not a few places illicit distillation is carried on with the connivance of the underlings of the Excise Department. True, a certain number of excise Daroghas have been engaged, but the towns and villages in their charge extend over a large area of which effective supervision is out of the question.

"The Hon'ble Mr. M. W. Fenton, Financial Commissioner, in the speech made by him on the occasion of the presentation of the Budget in the Punjab Legislative Council, explained that there was no cause for alarm on the score of increased consumption of liquor, as the larger part of the increase referred to the higher fees obtained at auction sales of retail licenses. * * * Mr. Fenton asserted most emphatically that there was no evidence to show that the bidders were in any way ruining themselves. How then do these people recoup themselves for the very large sums that they pay to Government? His answer which he gave on the authority of a Commissioner is 'watering and short measure.' This raises a very interesting question which requires consideration for itself. * * * It is we think established that a not inconsiderable proportion of the profits of retail vendors is derived from the sale of bottles and of water. The question which is now raised is how far it is the duty of the State to protect the consumer against the liquor vendor. Mr. Fenton thinks there is room for considerable difference of opinion in the matter. He says 'the temperance advocate may see no objection to water being sold as an intoxicant. On the other hand, if things come to such a pass that pure liquor is obtainable from the illicit still only, the result may be just the opposite to that which the temperance advocate seeks to achieve.' Or it may be that the customers when they find that liquors of indigenous manufacture are not to be had unmixed with water and in full measure for the price paid they may take largely to imported liquors. Mr. Fenton does not believe that the employment of a preventive establishment has not had much to do with putting down illicit distillation. He goes a little further and attributes the increase that has taken place in the consumption of licit liquor to the great check that illicit production has received of late years. He maintains at the same time 'the increase in the total excise income is not entirely due to liquors. The import duty on charas has been raised, the poppy average duty has been enhanced and the import fees levied on Hill States opium have been correspondingly raised. All these cases have contributed to the excess of the revised estimate over last year's actuals and the current year's budget.' We think it would have been much better and facilitated discussion as also the correct understanding of the whole question if the details of the increase under the several heads had been given."

Cotton excise duty.

31. The Tribune of 17th April 1912 has the following :—

"The imposition of an excise duty on the cotton weaving industry in India has seriously fettered and impeded the growth of an infant industry. The duty was imposed at the bidding of the Lancashire manufacturers. Last year Mr. Dadabhoy moved a resolution in the Imperial Legislative Council for its abolition. The Bombay Milliner's Association has also urged the removal of this duty. At the last Cawnpore Industrial Conference a strongly worded resolution was adopted requesting Government to repeal it. The duty has been maintained on the ground that this source of revenue cannot be given up, and that if it is taken off powerloom industry will injuriously affect the handloom industry. The duty was first imposed with a view to prevent Lancashire suffering by competition with the free industry of India. But for the excise duty it was feared the Indian products would steadily drive out English manufactures from the Indian market. This argument is hardly tenable. The qualities of English and Indian manufactures differ. Indian products do not compete with the imports from England, bvt the result of the duty has been the shrinkage of the export of Indian cotton goods to the Far Eastern markets. Japan has been successfully ousting Indian cotton manufactures from China. Gradually our exports of cotton goods are falling off. The weaving industry, in spite of its many advantages, has not been profitable. There is a ready supply of raw material and labour is cheaper than in England. Still the industry is not thriving, because the excise duty hampers it. The low profits in the industry do not attract capital. The revenue from the duty on cotton goods is 41 lakhs a year. The Indian Exchequer is now in a prosperous condition, and it will not suffer if it surrenders this income. Moreover the prosperity of the industry will benefit the Government and the country in other ways. A larger number of labourers will find employment and the purchasing power of the country will increase. It is not quite correct to say that duty-free powerloom industry will compete with the handloom industry. The goods turned out by handlooms are either very coarse or very fine. So there can be scarcely any competition between the two industries. There is an additional argument in favour of this abolition of the excise duty. It is said that it is merely a countervailing duty, but as a matter of fact the Indian industry pays more than an equivalent to the import duty. As Mr. Silver pointed out the unfortunate Indian manufacturer besides paying the duty of 3½ per cent. upon all the goods he makes (whether they be sold or not) also pays an import duty usually of 5½ per cent. upon many necessaries of his trade which must be imported, including oils, dyes, driving ropes and on such items of parts of machinery as the customs authorities may be pleased to declare as capable of being used for some purpose other than that for which they have been obviously imported. The Government should reconsider the question and free this promising Indian industry from an unjust impost which is a perpetual menace to its expansion."

The Pioneer and Government advertisements.

32. The following is from the Tribune (Lahore) of 18th April 1912 :—

"It appears from the question asked and the answer given thereto at the Supreme Legislative Council in Calcutta last month that the Pioneer still continues to charge at the rate of eight annaas per line all the advertisements sent for publication in its columns by the various Departments of Government. The question asked by the Hon'ble the Rajah of Dighapatia was 'Is it a fact that the Pioneer till very recently charged double its ordinary rates for all official advertisements. If so, how long since has this arrangement been discontinued?' The answer that the Hon'ble Sir Reginald Craddock gave was 'The rate charged by the Pioneer for Government advertisements is 8 annas per line, and no change has recently been made in this respect. It is understood that the rates charged by the same newspaper for private casual advertisements vary between 4 annas and 9 annas per line according to the position in the paper in which the advertisements are inserted.' The answer shows quite clearly that the Pioneer still continues to charge double its ordinary rates for Government advertisements though the notice to that effect has been omitted from its rates. And we know that such advertisements are sent every week in large numbers to the Pioneer. The defence of the arrangement referred to in the reply furnished by Sir Reginald Craddock is in reality no defence. The ordinary rate for casual advertisements in the Pioneer is four annas a line and special rates are charged in the case of advertisements which appear in the midst of the reading matter. It is stated in the 'Manager's Notice' inserted on page 14 of the issue of the Pioneer, dated the 15th instant, that 'the rate for casual advertisements under the heads Wanted, For Sale, To Let, etc., is four annas per line (averaging six words) in running paragraph form with a minimum of one rupee per insertion.' But these rates do not apply to advertisements sent by Government which have to pay double the ordinary rates, viz., annas eight per line. The most objectionable feature of the arrangement is that the practice is accepted and even encouraged by the Government."

LAHORE:
The 20th April 1912.

C. STEAD,
Assistant to the Deputy Inspector-General of Police, Criminal Investigation Department, Punjab.

Punjab Government Press, Lahore—25-4-12—8—107—E. W. L.

[ Confidential. ]

[ Vol. XXV. ] SELECTIONS [ No. 17. ]

FROM THE

NATIVE NEWSPAPERS

PUBLISHED IN THE PUNJAB.

Examined up to 27th April 1912.

---

CONTENTS.

| | | Page. |
|---|---|---|
| | I.—Politics. | |
| | (a) Foreign— | |
| 1. | England and the Turco-Italian War (Zamindar) | 307 |
| 2. | Indians in Canada (Hindustan) ... ... | ib. |
| 3. | Egyptian Nationalists (Panjabee) ... ... | 308 |
| 4. | Tibetan affairs (Tribune) ... ... | ib. |
| 5. | Indian trade and Persia (Tribune) ... ... | ib. |
| | (b) Home— | |
| 6. | His Majesty the King Emperor (Zamindar) ... | 308 |
| 7. | Home Rule in India and Indian Muhammadans (Observer) ... ... ... ... | 309 |
| 8. | The Nicholson Committee (Tribune) ... | 310 |
| 9. | Hindu religion and liberalism (Panjabee) ... | ib. |
| 10. | Indian politics and the Anglo-Indian community (Panjabee) ... ... ... | 312 |
| 11. | Lawyers and politics (Panjabee) ... ... | ib. |
| 12. | Government and treatment to Hindus, Muhammadans and Europeans (Panjabee) ... | ib. |
| | II.—Afghanistan and Trans-Frontier. | |
| 13. | Hindus in Afghanistan (Arya Patrika) ... | 313 |
| | III.—Native States. | |
| 14. | Gurudwara in Kapurthala (Panjabee) ... | 313 |
| 15. | Charging the pay of the Residents and their staffs to Native States (Tribune) ... ... | ib. |
| | IV.—Kine-killing. | |
| | Nil. | |
| | V.—Native Societies and Religious Matters. | |
| 16. | The depressed classes (Tribune) ... ... | 314 |
| 17. | Hindus and Muhammadans (Hindu) ... ... | ib. |
| 18. | Sikhs and Hindus (Observer) ... ... | ib. |
| 19. | The jhatka-halal question (Nur) ... ... | 315 |
| 20. | The promised Mehdi (Haq) ... ... | ib. |
| 21. | The recent anniversary celebrations of the Anjuman-i-Himayat-i-Islam, Lahore (Hindustan) ... | ib. |
| 22. | A complaint in connection with certain wakf properties at Lucknow (Akhbar-i-'Am) ... | 316 |
| 23. | Dharampal (Sanatan Dharam Parcharak) ... | ib. |
| | VI.—Legislation. | |
| | Nil. | |

| | | Page. |
|---|---|---|
| | VII.—General Administration. | |
| | (a) Judicial— | |
| 24. | Delaying the disposal of cases in India (Paisa Akhbar) ... ... ... ... | 316 |
| 25. | The Khan of Hoti's case (Punjab Advocate) ... | ib. |
| 26. | The case against Guard Gomez (Hindu) ... | 317 |
| 27. | The Ludhiana rape case and the case against Guard Gomez (Akhbar i-'Am) ... ... | ib. |
| | (b) Police— | |
| 28. | Recrudescence of dacoities in the Panjab (Hindustan) ... ... ... ... | 318 |
| | (c) Municipal and Cantonment affairs— | |
| | Nil. | |
| | (d) Education — | |
| 29. | Indians and the Imperial Educational Service (Paisa Akhbar and Hindustan) ... ... | 318 |
| | (e)—Agriculture and questions affecting the land— | |
| 30. | The Land Revenue Administration of the Punjab (Paisa Akhbar) ... ... ... | 319 |
| 31. | The effect of the new irrigation works (Tribune)... | ib. |
| | (f) Railways and Communications— | |
| 32. | Rail road to Baij Nath (Panjabee) ... ... | ib. |
| | (g) Postal matters— | |
| | Nil. | |
| | (h) Miscellaneous— | |
| 33. | The "Titanic" disaster (Tribune and Panjabee)... | 320 |
| 34. | Subscriptions for the relief of the victims of the "Titanic" disaster (Tribune) ... ... | 321 |
| 35. | The late Mr. Stead (Observer) ... ... | ib. |
| 36. | The Frontier Province (Hindustan) ... ... | ib. |
| 37. | Ditto (Punjab Advocate) ... | ib. |
| 38. | Security from the Zamindar (Zamindar) ... | 322 |
| 39. | Exclusion of Indians from the Cawnpore Memorial Gardens (Panjabee) ... ... ... | 323 |
| 40. | Contradiction of the statement that 20 policemen were run over by rail in one journey of the Viceroy (Tribune) ... ... ... | ib. |

LIST OF NEWSPAPERS AND PERIODICALS EXAMINED BY THE SPECIAL BRANCH AS IT STOOD ON THE 27TH APRIL 1912.

| No. | Name. | Locality. | Name of Publisher. | Circulation. |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| | ENGLISH. | | | |
| | DAILY. | | | |
| 1 | Tribune ... | Lahore ... | Bihari Lal ... | 1,758 copies. |
| | TRI-WEEKLY. | | | |
| 2 | Panjabee ... | Lahore ... | Mul Chand ... | 2,424 copies. |
| | BI-WEEKLY. | | | |
| 3 | Observer ... | Lahore ... | Nizam-ud-din ... | 1,000 copies. |
| 4 | Punjab Times and Frontier News. ... | Rawalpindi ... | J. R. Thapur ... | 200 „ |
| | WEEKLY. | | | |
| 5 | Arya Patrika ... | Lahore ... | Devi Chand ... | 650 copies. |
| 6 | Harbinger ... | Do. ... | Durga Parshad ... | 300 „ |
| 7 | Khalsa Advocate ... | Amritsar ... | Bahadar Singh ... | 752 „ |
| | FORTNIGHTLY. | | | |
| 8 | Jijnasu ... | Lahore ... | Ishwar Das ... | ... |
| | MONTHLY. | | | |
| 9 | D. A.-V. College Magazine... | Lahore ... | Saraswati Nath ... | 1,000 copies. |
| 10 | Forman Christian College Notes.* | Do. ... | ... | ... |
| 11 | Practical Medicine* ... | Delhi ... | ... | ... |
| 12 | Punjab Educational Journal | Lahore ... | B. B. Mohan Lal ... | 700 copies. |
| 13 | Punjab Mission News ... | Do. ... | Revd. Wigram ... | 250 „ |
| 14 | Ravi ... | Do. ... | Mr. B. M. Jones ... | ... |
| 15 | Review of Religions ... | Qadian (Gurdaspur) ... | Sadr Anjuman Ahmadia, Qadian. | 800 copies. |
| 16 | Science Grounded Religion... | Lahore ... | Dev Rattan ... | 25 „ |
| 17 | Teacher ... | Dinga (Gujrat) ... | Kanhaya Singh ... | 200 „ |
| | URDU. | | | |
| | DAILY. | | | |
| 18 | Akhbar-i-'Am ... | Lahore ... | Govind Sahai ... | 630 copies. |
| 19 | Paisa Akhbar ... | Do. ... | Abdul Aziz ... | 1,011 „ |
| 20 | Watan ... | Do. ... | Muhammad Insha Alla ... | ... |
| 21 | Zamindar ... | Do. ... | Zafar Ali Khan, B.A. ... | ... |
| | BI-WEEKLY. | | | |
| 22 | Vakil ... | Amritsar ... | Abdul Aziz ... | 1,970 copies. |
| | WEEKLY. | | | |
| 23 | Afghan ... | Peshawar ... | Saiyid Muhammad Abdulla | 500 copies. |
| 24 | Ahl-i-Hadis ... | Amritsar ... | Sanaulla ... | 925 „ |
| 25 | Ahluwalia Gazette ... | Do. ... | Lehna Singh ... | 500 „ |
| 26 | Al-Moin ... | Do. ... | Mehraj-ud-din ... | ... |
| 27 | Army News ... | Ludhiana ... | Hira Lal & Co. ... | 1,800 copies. |
| 28 | Arorbans Gazette ... | Amritsar ... | Labh Singh ... | ... |
| 29 | Arya Gazette ... | Lahore ... | Bhowani Das ... | 550 copies. |
| 30 | Badar ... | Qadian, Gurdaspur District | Muhammad Sadiq ... | 200 „ |

* Not received during the month.

LIST OF NEWSPAPERS AND PERIODICALS EXAMINED BY THE SPECIAL BRANCH AS IT STOOD ON THE 27TH APRIL 1912—CONTINUED.

| No. | Name. | Locality. | Name of Publisher. | Circulation. |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| | URDU—CONTINUED. | | | |
| | WEEKLY—continued. | | | |
| 31 | Bharat ... | Jullundur ... | Thakur Sheoratan Singh | ... |
| 32 | Civil and Military News ... | Ludhiana ... | Saiyid Muhammad ... | 1,325 copies. |
| 33 | Curzon Gazette ... | Delhi ... | Mirza Hairat ... | 111 „ |
| 34 | Delhi Gazette* ... | Do. ... | Sajjad Husain ... | 200 „ |
| 35 | Edward Gazette* ... | Abbott-abad ... | Muhammad Latif ... | 200 „ |
| 36 | Hakam ... | Qadian, Gurdaspur District | Yakub Ali ... | 900 „ |
| 37 | Haq ... | Delhi ... | Kasim Ali ... | 200 „ |
| 38 | Haq Pasand ... | Amritsar ... | Ram Nath ... | 382 „ |
| 39 | Hindu ... | Lahore ... | Hari Lal Sharma ... | ... |
| 40 | Hindustan ... | Do. ... | Ram Sarn Dutt ... | 8,070 copies. |
| 41 | Indar ... | Do. ... | Dharm Pal, B.A. ... | ... |
| 42 | Islam ... | Do. ... | Abdul Latif ... | 200 copies. |
| 43 | Jhang Sial ... | Jhang ... | Prabh Dyal ... | 2,262 „ |
| 44 | Kapurthala Akhbar ... | Kapurthala ... | Hamid Husain ... | 155 „ |
| 45 | Loyal Gazette ... | Lahore ... | Amar Singh ... | 200 „ |
| 46 | Lytton Gazette ... | Delhi ... | Bulaki Das ... | 1,000 „ |
| 47 | Milap* ... | Lyallpur ... | Jawahar Lal ... | ... |
| 48 | Millat ... | Lahore ... | Shuja Ulla ... | 1,500 copies. |
| 49 | Mister Gazette ... | Do. ... | Ali Bakhsh ... | 150 „ |
| 50 | Munir ... | Jhang ... | Hafiz Khuda Bakhsh ... | 200 „ |
| 51 | Musalman ... | Amritsar ... | Sana-ulla ... | 400 „ |
| 52 | Nur ... | Qadian, Gurdaspur District | Muhammad Yusaf ... | 200 „ |
| 53 | Nur Afshan ... | Ludhiana ... | Revd. Dr. E. M. Wherry | 500 „ |
| 54 | Paisa Akhbar ... | Lahore ... | Abdul Aziz ... | 8,377 „ |
| 55 | Parkash ... | Do. ... | Krishan ... | 1,723 „ |
| 56 | Punjab Advocate ... | Mianwali ... | Karm Chand, Bahl ... | 1,000 „ |
| 57 | Punjab Samachar ... | Lahore ... | Hira Lal ... | 705 „ |
| 58 | Rajput Gazette ... | Do. ... | Thakur Sukhram Das ... | 650 „ |
| 59 | Municipal Gazette and Sada-i-Hind. | Do. ... | Din Muhammad ... | 500 „ |
| 60 | Sadiq-ul-Akhbar ... | Bahawalpur ... | Maulvi Ata Ullah ... | 392 „ |
| 61 | Ditto ... | Rewari ... | Safdar Hussain ... | 200 „ |
| 62 | Sanatan Dharm Pracharak... | Amritsar ... | Rulia Ram ... | 200 „ |
| 63 | Shanti ... | Rawalpindi ... | Kishan Chand Mohan ... | 300 „ |
| 64 | Sialkot Paper ... | Sialkot ... | Todar Mal ... | 500 „ |
| 65 | Siraj-ul-Akhbar ... | Jhelum ... | Maulvi Fakir Muhammad | 450 „ |
| 66 | Tahzib-ul-Niswan ... | Lahore ... | Mumtaz Ali ... | 240 „ |

*Not received during the week.

LIST OF NEWSPAPERS AND PERIODICALS EXAMINED BY THE SPECIAL BRANCH AS IT STOOD ON THE 27TH APRIL 1912—CONCLUDED.

| No. | Name. | Locality. | Name of Publisher. | Circulation. |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| | URDU—CONCLUDED. | | | |
| | WEEKLY—concluded. | | | |
| 67 | Victoria Paper ... | Sialkot ... | Gian Chand ... | 600 copies. |
| 68 | Wafadar* ... | Lahore ... | Fazal-ud-din ... | 600 „ |
| 69 | Waqt ... | Do. ... | Ali Husain ... | 200 „ |
| 70 | Watan ... | Do. ... | Muhammad Insha Ullah... | 1,800 „ |
| 71 | Zamindar ... | Do. ... | Zafar Ali Khan, B.A. ... | 750 „ |
| | FORTNIGHTLY. | | | |
| 72 | Biwah Samachar ... | Lahore ... | Ram Chand ... | 300 copies. |
| 73 | Kam Dhenu ... | Ludhiana ... | Daulat Ram ... | 100 „ |
| 74 | Mohyal Gazette ... | Kala, Jhelum District ... | Mehta Sham Das ... | 250 „ |
| | PERSIAN. | | | |
| | FORTNIGHTLY. | | | |
| 75 | Siraj-ul-Akhbar ... | Kabul ... | Abdul Khalik ... | ... |
| | URDU. | | | |
| | MONTHLY. | | | |
| 76 | Arorbans Parkash ... | Lahore ... | Salig Ram ... | 200 copies. |
| 77 | Arya Musafir ... | Jullundur ... | Wazir Chand ... | 1,300 „ |
| 78 | Jauhar ... | Amritsar ... | Muhammad Ismail Khan | 200 „ |
| 79 | Kakezai Social Reformer ... | Lahore ... | Fazl Din ... | 200 „ |
| 80 | Makhzan ... | Delhi ... | Abdul Kadir ... | 4,000 „ |
| 81 | Rafiq ... | Lahore ... | Charinji Lal ... | 500 „ |
| 82 | Sadhu ... | Do. ... | Sheobart Lal ... | 500 „ |
| 83 | Martand ... | Do. ... | Kanhya Lal ... | 250 „ |
| 84 | Raghbir Patrika ... | Do. ... | Prab Dial ... | 500 „ |
| 85 | Zaban* ... | Delhi ... | Hamid Hasain ... | 500 „ |
| | GURMUKHI. | | | |
| | WEEKLY. | | | |
| 86 | Khalsa Sewak ... | Amritsar ... | Jiwan Singh ... | 1,000 copies. |
| 87 | Punjab Reporter* ... | Do. ... | Ganda Singh ... | ... |
| 88 | Punjabi Surma ... | Lahore ... | Gian Chand ... | 1,000 copies. |

* Not received during the week.

I.—Politics.

(a)—Foreign.

England and the Turco-Italian war.

1. Commenting on an article which recently appeared in the Fortnightly Review on "England, Egypt and the war in Tripoli*" the Zamindar (Lahore), of the 19th April 1912, says that the views expressed by the writer are probably held by (lit. are probably the quintessence of the brains of) only a few short-sighted Englishmen like himself, with whose opinions British Statesmen can collectively have nothing whatever to do. In view of the fact that it has been openly declared by the responsible British authorities that England follows a policy of strict neutrality in regard to the Turco-Italian war, no person endowed with even a grain of sense could ever assert, as (the writer in) the Fortnightly Review has done, that Italy was induced by England to invade Tripoli, nor could he pray for the downfall of Turkey and express a desire that the English should become the guardians of Mecca and Medina with the aid of Egypt. There can be no doubt that the almost kingly powers which Sir Edward Grey has begun to exercise in connection with foreign affairs are very much of a despotic character. It must also be admitted that, for some months past, the Foreign Minister's attitude towards Islamic countries has been such that Muhammadans would be justified in desiring his replacement by Lord Curzon, Lord Lamington, or some other broad-minded statesman in sympathy with Islam. The paper cannot, nevertheless, believe that Sir Edward is so unprincipled or could so far forget himself that he would, as the writer in the Fortnightly Review thinks, while outwardly disclaiming all intention to help Italy, pat her on the back in secret and tell her to continue firm and go on working the ruin of Muhammadans. Continuing, it says that it is no easy task to end the days of Turkey, and that Muhammadans believe that the occupation of Mecca and Medina by a non-Muslim power would usher in the day of judgment.

Indians in Canada.

2. The Hindustan (Lahore), of the 19th April 1912, publishes an article headed "A serious and old complaint of Indians in America." It is a grossly cruel and inhuman law, says the paper, which prevents the Indian settlers in Canada from taking their wives to the said part of America. Last year a deputation—consisting of three Sikhs and one white clergyman—waited upon the Prime Minister of Canada to request him to repeal the above law. That functionary assured the deputation that the serious grievance in question would be redressed; but his promise has turned out to be false (lit. wrong). It is a pity that Great Britain's loyal and obedient Indian subjects should receive unjust and inhuman treatment in several parts of the British Empire. It should be the first duty of the British Government, which is the champion of liberty and equality, to take effective steps to end the grievances of Indians settled in the Crown colonies. Next the paper publishes a letter from one Mehar Chand, of Vancouver, who states how the wives of two Sikhs named Bhag Singh and Balwant Singh, who own landed property in Canada, were not allowed to land at Vancouver. The appeal, he adds, filed on their behalf was heard and rejected on the 15th March last, and the women were ordered to be returned to their homes. Next he asks Indian leaders to make manly efforts to secure redress. He also encloses a letter contributed by (Professor) Teja Singh to the News Advertiser (Vancouver) in condemnation of the treatment accorded to the wives of Bhag Singh and Balwant Singh, as also the comments by that paper and another local journal approving of the expulsion of the women.

Commenting on the above the Editor remarks that, apparently, Canadians do not wish that their Indian fellow-subjects, who have long been residing in Canada and own (landed) property and business concerns there, should take up their permanent residence in that country. This, he adds, is calculated to deeply wound the feelings of loyal Indians.

---

* The writing has been reproduced in different issues of the paper.

Egyptian Nationalists.

3. The Panjabee (Lahore), of 25th April 1912, has the following :—

"Those who believe and proclaim that 'loyalty' is an article of faith among Muhammadans will find some difficulty in accounting for the activities and troubles of the Egyptian Nationalists. The Cairo correspondent of the Pioneer, in his letter dated 31st March, published in the last Saturday's issue of that paper, says that Muhammad Farid Bey, the leader of the party, delivered a 'most lengthy and violent speech,' in which he attacked the Egyptian Government. As a result the Minister of Justice sent for him and now he has suddenly disappeared. The correspondent further says that the withdrawal of the two leaders 'will considerably facilitate the task of the Egyptian Government in curbing the turbulent spirit of political agitators.' We do not know if this account is correct and how much of it is perverted and exaggerated. But one pertinent question that it suggests is why, if 'loyalty' to Government is an 'article of faith,' troubles of this kind should arise? Evidently 'articles of faith' are different for India and for Egypt, though the faith itself is fundamentally the same."

Tibetan affairs.

4. The following is from the Tribune (Lahore), of 26th April 1912 :—

"Everything beyond the Himalayas is shrouded in mystery. No one knows the actual state of affairs in Tibet. Whatever is known through reports and rumours is not sufficient to form a correct judgment. Reports of the fight between the Chinese and the Tibetans have made many people believe that China in her altered circumstances may loosen its hold upon the land of the Lamas * * * How affairs will tend in future must be largely a matter of surmise. The Chinese Republic may like to continue the suzerainty over Tibet, but with the disappearance of the Empire there must be a radical change of policy. The only fear is the extension of Russian influence, but against this both China and Great Britain will guard carefully."

Indian trade and Persia.

5. The following is from the Tribune (Lahore), of 27th April 1912 :—

"It appears that the disorder in Persia which is due to the absence of a settled Government has caused great loss to Indian merchants who trade with that country. The most prominent firms of Shikarpur, Sind, which do a considerable trade with Persia have in the course of a long representation sent to Government pointed out that it has become very difficult to carry on any trade with the interior of Persia by way of Bunder Abbas. It is complained that the caravans between Kerman and Bundar Abbas still continue to be looted; and that unless order is quickly restored and the caravans are enabled to pass to and fro in safety, business must come to a standstill and many merchants will be ruined in consequence. It is also stated in the representation that in consequence of frequent robberies in the vicinity of Kerman people do not come into Kerman and the outstandings, therefore, remain unrecovered. It is stated that in the speech which Lord Hardinge made about the affairs in Persia no mention was made of compensation from the Persian Government to merchants for losses sustained by them The Shikarpur merchants suggest that the Persian Government be urged to adjust their outstanding claims from the loan which it is understood has been arranged by the British and Russian Governments jointly. The Committee of the Karachi Chamber has strongly supported the representation of the Sind merchants and addressed the Government of India by wire. The text of the telegraphic message sent is 'In connection with the proposed joint loan by England and Russia to the Persian Government the Chamber would urge that all British and Indian Merchants' claims, some of which are two years old, for losses by robbery owing to inadequate protection of trade routes in Southern Persia by the Persian Government, should now be recovered before the proposed loan be advanced.' A list of the claims to which reference is made in the telegram has also been sent by post. The position taken up by the Karachi Chamber of Commerce in this matter is a most reasonable one and we hope the Government of India will see their way to carry out the suggestion made. So long as it is not brought home to the Persian Government in an effective and convincing manner that it is its duty to maintain peace and order, caravans will continue to be looted and these robberies are bound to have a disastrous effect on trade and commerce. And we cannot think of a better method of making the Persian authorities realise their responsibilities than that of enforcing their liability to pay the losses of those whose goods have been looted.

(b)—Home.

His Majesty the King Emperor.

6. The Zamindar (Lahore), of the 21st April 1912, publishes a communication under the heading "The King of England: a Muhammadan at heart." The writer—Hasan Nizami, Secretary, Nizam-ul-Mashaikh, Delhi—remarks that it was stated by him in his pamphlet entitled "Sennousis-wa-Zahur-i-Imam Mehdi," on the strength of certain predictions, that "the King of England would embrace Islam." He has now brought out the second part of the booklet which he has named the Kitab-ul-Amr; and in which he has discussed the following points, which, he contends, show that King George is assuredly a Muhammadan at heart :—

(1) A copy of) the pamphlet called the Sennousis-wa-Zahur-i-Imam Mehdi was sent to the King Emperor on the occasion of the Coronation Darbar and He was informed in the forwarding letter that the publication contained predictions about His (coming) conversion to Islam. His Majesty acknowledged the receipt of, and sent thanks for, the booklet through His (Private) Secretary, which shows that Islam has undoubtedly made some impression on Him.

(2) The selection by Him of a steamer named 'Medina' for His voyage (to India) also reveals the feelings of His heart (in regard to Islam).

(3) The very first thing done by His Majesty on entering Delhi was to make the circuit (as of a holy place) of the Jumma Mosque.

(4) The banner of Islam was the only religious standard that accompanied the above procession, while it was close to the King Emperor.

(5) His Majesty made a present to the Jumna Mosque and offered broadcloth curtains to the shrine of Khawaja Nizam-ud-din Aulia. No sacred place of any non-Islamic religion was treated in the same manner.

Commenting on the above the Editor states that the pamphlet "Sennousis-wa-Zahur-i-Imam Mehdi" won extreme popularity. After referring to the appearance of its second part, he says that the real object of the publications seems to consist in making Muhammadans love the British Crown and in inviting the British to embrace Islam, which would enable Great Britain to reach the splendid goal ( ? of a world-wide Empire) which was (only) dreamt of by Alexander, Julius Caesar, and Napoleon.

Home Rule in India and Indian Muhammadans.

7. The Observer (Lahore), of 20th April 1912, publishes the following under the heading "Irish Home Rule and the Indian Ulster":—

"* * * Now as the Protestants are in a minority in Ireland, their position is similar, partly at least, to that of Muhammadans in India. They entertain as keen apprehensions of the Hindus trying to wipe off 'old scores' in the event of Home Rule being granted to India as do Ulstermen in regard to their lot in Ireland. Their religion, like that of Ulstermen in Ireland, is also different from the creed of the majority. In a word, Indian Muhammadans represent the Ulster of India.

"Home Rule for India is a far-off dream, but the Reform Scheme may well be regarded as its first instalment. The Irish Home Rule Bill brought forward by Mr. Asquith proposes that out of 146 members of the Irish House of Commons no less than 59 will be elected by Ulster. Both according to the population and the area of Ireland, Ulster should be represented by 48. But in view of the political importance of Ulstermen and the Protestants being in a minority, Ulster will be granted at least 11 seats in excess. Similar will probably be the case with regard to the Irish Senate. But the majority of the Irish population does not protest against this proposal. The Catholics, as represented by Mr. Redmond and Mr. Brien, have, on the contrary, welcomed the Bill, including this feature of it. They do not profess to look upon the grant of representation to Irish Protestants in excess of their numbers as a slur upon themselves, as relegating them to the position of representatives of 'a disinherited race.' Being practical men they see that the interests of the Protestant minority must be protected and that their political importance must be recognised. But look at our Hindu countrymen. The Musalmans have been treated with regard to representation in the Councils in the same way as Mr. Asquith proposes to treat the Protestants in Ireland. The powers of the Legislative Councils in India are much more restricted than those of the Irish Parliament. But our Hindu friends have been rending the skies with their cries about the Government unduly favouring the Musalmans. If one thing proves the unpreparedness of India for autonomy, it is this Hindu jealousy of Muslim interests being safeguarded in the country. Unless and until better counsels prevail among the majority of our countrymen in regard to Muhammadan representation, they should renounce all claim to real patriotism. Another condition, however, precedent to the grant of Home Rule to India, is the growth of its Muslim population from a merely 'loyal and contented' people into a 'sturdy and loyal' race, conscious of its rights and privileges and ready to put them forward loyally but boldly, spiritedly and fearlessly. Of this, however, more another time."

The Nicholson Committee.

8. The following is from the Tribune (Lahore), of 21st April 1912 :—

"Field-Marshal Sir William Nicholson will shortly arrive in India as the head of the Committee to inquire into the military policy and expenditure in India. The other members of this Committee are Lieutenant-General Sir Percy Lake, Lieutenant-General Sir Robert Seaton, and Sir William Meyer. The scope of the inquiry is not yet known and no definite information has been given to the public. But there is a general fear, says the Pall Mall Gazette, that the appointment of this Commission must inevitably mean the abolition of the scheme for the organisation and administration of the Indian Army drawn up by Lord Kitchener. The ex-Commander-in-Chief involved India in an unnecessarily expensive scheme of reorganisation. The scheme has not received strong support from military experts. When Sir William Nicholson was Chief of the Imperial General Staff and First Member of the Army Council he opposed the scheme. Sir O'Moore Creagh, the present Commander-in-Chief, has not taken kindly to the policy of his predecessor. He is in favour of retrenching army expenditure. Lord Kitchener's proposal to construct a network of strategic railways to run along the frontier was vetoed at the time, and the London papers fear that the remainder of his scheme will be likewise wrecked. The Indian public will warmly welcome any reduction in army expenditure in India. We are not very sanguine about the results of this Commission for Commissions do not grapple with large questions and when they do the Government quietly puts their reports on the shelf as it has repeatedly done. It is obvious however that Lord Kitchener desired to establish in India a form of militarism for which there is no need and which is not justified by the conditions in India or the neighbouring countries. For self-defence India has quite a sufficiently large army and there is no likelihood of India being called upon to defend herself against a great Power."

Hindu religion and liberalism.

9. The Panjabee (Lahore), of 20th April 1912 has the following :—

"It is not a matter of sheer speculation to consider the respective claims of Hindu Dharma and modern liberalism. It is a question of practical importance and almost every intellectual Hindu is striving to adjust the mutual claims of a traditional, social and religious law with the acquired and predominating law of modern progress. There are doubtless men who, at the first sight, think it probably hopeless to reconcile the one with the other. There are, we believe, others also who find that there is, at bottom, no contradiction or rivalry between the two. But most people will admit that a certain amount of adjustment is necessary, and the task is certainly not insurmountable. Every passing incident gives us a fresh opportunity to solve this problem. The revolution in China at once brought the question to the forefront again and most intelligent Hindus are asking if the progress in India cannot be hastened in view of the rapid changes effected around us and in countries which have not even half of our facilities. The success or failure of the Chinese revolution cannot be declared now. At the first flush of success the Turkish revolutionaries thought that the future was smooth work. The Persian progressists must have had even a more roseate view of the political possibilities. But to-day we see the gross error of their calculations. Not that they were wrong in yielding to the pressure of progress and removing old time obstacles on their way, but in the execution of their plans they did not, and possibly could not, provide for the adverse forces, both internal and external. We have all to take the circumstances and surrounding positions as they are, with the good and the bad. The removal of one evil does not necessarily open the way for the prevalence of the good. A second evil might come in and surely evil forces, disintegrating influences and disorder have their vitality. At any rate, after the glorious success and example of Japan the efforts of other Asiatic countries to adopt the democratic example of the leading Asiatic Empire, have had a chilling effect. It may be due to internal disssentions, want of organisation, empty exchequers or foreign intrigues. It may be that the people have not been able to bear the burdens of a democratised State or that the genius of the nation would not support the changes involved. But the proposition that the East is prepared to adopt democratic forms of Government in place of personal despotism yet remains to be proved.

"In the case of India, social reformers and Anglo-Indian, observers have often told us that Hindu castes and social customs, as they are, do not encourage the founding of democratic institutions. Even the administrative reforms were long held in abeyance on account of such faulty hypothesis. We believe that this opinion is very much modified now, but there is yet considerable doubt as to how far Hindu Dharma, as it is taught and practised, will admit the progress of free democracy. If this question can be settled by an academical discussion of the principles, the solution would probably be easy. But that does not help us much. We have to deal with living ideals and practical ideas that regulate the action of individuals and large communities. Ideas of individual liberty and claims for equality of treatment have permeated the masses and the complaints of men of the old type are universal. The sweeper to-day, though still subjected to great ill-usage, finds it possible to assert his individuality, whatever it be. The higher castes, claiming respect and deference, find themselves not infrequently asked to prove their worth in the open field of competition. And what is more important is that the justice of this plea is less tardily admitted by those long used to privilege and vested rights. It may be asked, then, how the Hindus, so much divided by castes and recognising a descending scale of merit in them from the Brahman down to the sweeper and the butcher, live peacefully and in comfort under the levelling influence of a democratic civilisation. In parts of South India, the upper castes require that the lower castes should never come near enough to pollute them either by touch, near approach or sight: and this restriction is by tacit consent observed by some to this day. At the same time, another influence is working, viz, one of equality of merit which is insisted on and admitted, though somewhat tardily. Vested rights and traditional privileges are not easily surrendered, but it seems that on the whole neither the caste divisions nor the sense of superiority of birth have any serious obstruction to offer in the onward march of democracy. If the Brahmin still refuses to dine with a Sudra, it is on grounds of physical uncleanliness. Sri Ramanuja Charya, the greatest founder of Deccan Vaishnavism, had no objection to eat with and serve a Paria who was learned and pure. And this catholic spirit is gaining force rapidly without displacing the claims of Hindu Dharma. The fact is rather that Hindu Dharma is much misunderstood and misapplied to serve narrow personal ends by the ignorant people. And the practical standard of life and conduct set by them is by mistake accepted as the genuine law under which the whole nation lives and moves.

"This at once explains that Hindu Dharma does not set itself against true democracy; Inconsistencies are only observed in the practical limitations and application of the law. The errors once made are easily corrected and, without disturbing the caste basis of the social organism, the followers of Hindu castes do find it easy to accept the principles of democratic life and conduct which concern the material side of life. Rights and duties of citizenship, acquisition of knowledge, wealth and social happiness, political organisations, industrial movements, have all to be guided by progressive laws which do not affect the claims of Hindu Dharma or the genius of the people. Rather we find not infrequently that the sense of higher justice, of humanity, purity, and self-sacrifice, so zealously fostered by laws of Dharma, stimulate virtuous actions of a type rarely accepted by the prevailing forms of democracy in Europe. Old age pensions, State conducted orphanages, free feeding of the poor and treatment of the sick and similar benefits will easily secure the unanimous approval of the communities held together by the Hindu Dharma. It is not in political forms but in social ideas that true democracy is preserved in the East. There are doubtless errors and inconsistent forms which are to be met with in the people, but they are easily overcome. Had mass education in India proceeded more rapidly than at present the genius of the nation would have manifested itself in less unmistakeable forms. The labour of suitable adjustment to modern environments is naturally painful. To rise over the surrounding influences and reach the pure ideals involves considerable effort and steadfast purpose. There is really no clash of principles between the genius of the people, their social and religious laws and the democratic forms of Government, civilization and activities. Where defects are actually observed, they are of practical application due to defective environments but the constructive progress of the country is not impeded for want of harmonious ideals in matters affecting social or political conduct. The ancient ideal was not one of personal absolutism and sheer despotism as they are understood during non-Hindu or corrupt ages. The Hindu King was always bound to follow Dharma and regard his position and power as a matter of a heavy and responsible duty. That duty was only to be borne by those who were best fitted for the place, and as in the case of Bharat, the brother of Rama, the ideal monarch of the Hindus, the responsibilities were declined. That does not disclose a real state of affairs nor a theory of life and rule that are inconsistant with democracy. The reformed Councils in India have proved so great a success so far as the establishment of the democratic basis of Hindu ideals is concerned that it is the Government that is afraid of going as fast as the people can. His Excellency the Viceroy stated that India would have to go into the 'melting pot' if the measures of democratic progress urged by the people were all accepted. And he answered, therefore, by rejecting all—including the demand for compulsory free education. Moreover, the defects of Council regulations, the denial of enlarged franchise to the Hindus, the attempts to perpetuate vested interests, race monopolies, caste preferences, are seen all on the side of the imperfectly realised Western democracy, and it is the function of India some day to reform them and give to Western democracy a higher ethical and humane basis."

Indian politics and the Anglo-Indian community.

10. The following is from the Panjabee (Lahore) of 20th April 1912 :—

"The Anglo-Indian Association, Calcutta, is embarking on the high sea of politics and 'political shouting.' It seems to consider itself somewhat neglected in the political progress of India now. At the annual meeting held the other day, at Calcutta, its Secretary observed: 'There are forces harmful to the best interests of the country. Unless we become a power which can help the Government to counteract those forces, we shall have only to blame ourselves, if Government yields to the clamour of unprincipled agitators and allows the executive to be weakened.' We wonder where Mr. Madge learned the high tone of complimenting the Government with the wisdom of yielding to the clamour of 'unprincipled' agitators. What are the superior claims of his own community to advise Government as regards the 'British Indian Empire'? What is the proportion of its interests, its population, its collective wisdom, wealth, status, education, &c., in the affairs of this vast Empire? Everybody knows that this community is already enjoying unduly large preferences and patronage by Government. Every one is entitled to the fruits of his labour, worth and happiness according to his merits. The Anglo-Indian community has its place and function and so far nobody would object to rob it of its advantages. But the abuse of 'unprincipled agitators' is a menace to the efforts of the Indian communities and we fear this tone is calculated to harm the cause of harmonious progress of united India."

Lawyers and politics.

11. The following is from the Panjabee (Lahore) of 23rd April 1912 :—

"The theory that members of the legal profession alone in India discuss politics and were it not for the profession having ample leisure, there would be no 'agitation' in this country has been just expressed by "Law and Justice" in the Pioneer. The correspondent, therefore, suggests that restrictions should be placed on the profession and only so many of them as are necessary for the number of cases instituted, should be allowed to practise. Apparently the writer belongs to the Punjab judiciary, where this principle has already been adopted. Its effect, of course, remains to be seen. We now get a glimpse of the reasons for urging restriction in number. It is an attempt to suppress political agitation of which there is very little, however, in the Punjab. The shrewd writer also throws the following bait to lure the profession into accepting the principle of restriction. He says :—

'I would also introduce the system of recruitment for the Bench from the Bar on the lines they have in England. Thus then when the Bar is limited and the limited Bar has enough to do and there are hopes for promotion to the Bench, there will be no unnecessary dabbling in politics. Of course it is understood that the Bench as in England should not have anything to do with politics.'

"Many harsh and retrogressive measures have been adopted to suppress the political aspirations of the people even on constitutional lines. Apparently the experience of the non-official motions in the Imperial Council has given rise to a resolve of this kind and we see that the writer asks the Allahabad High Court to follow that of the Punjab.

"What remains in the country from end to end is constitutional agitation. The Council Reforms, in theory, have given encouragement for this, and in practise, too, here and there, they are proving useful. It is also true that men of legal profession take a large share in discussing and formulating questions for discussion in the Councils, the Congress, Conferences and the press. But surely this is not the result of having plenty of leisure and defect of legal practice, but due to their intellectual and legal training. They are taught that there is such a thing as 'justice' whose claims are predominant. There is law and legal procedure to attain justice. But unfortunately so many things are done which do not fully harmonise with justice, law and procedure. In the purely judicial line this defect is seen and in the executive, more so. That is how the lawyers come to take a leading part in political discussion. In the present circumstances of the country that is indispensable. But suppose by some means this is stopped. It is possible, nay probable. Executive manifestoes are the order of the day even in the judiciary. There may be a lull in the political atmosphere for a time. But we do not think political representation will suffer long. The country will produce more Gokhales than there are now, and when whole-time servers of the Indian people are created, the outlook for those who wish to see political agitation killed will no longer be so roseate as they imagine."

Government and treatment to Hindus, Muhammadans and Europeans.

12. The Panjabee (Lahore), of 23rd April 1912, publishes the following under the heading 'Equality or preference ?' :—

"It is said that Indians are an inferior nation as compared with Europeans. But in practical treatment open competition between the two is denied and the Europeans need 'protection.' In spite of his 'inferiority' the Indian is not allowed always to compete with his European brother in the learned professions or in manual crafts. Now as between the Hindus and Muhammadans, though open competition is not denied, the latter claims a preferential treatment by virture of their backwardness. Government have, to some extent, recognised this claim in practice. The position of Hindus, therefore, between two communities, claiming protection and preference—the one on the score of superiority and the other on that of inferiority—is extremely anomalous. It is a matter for the consideration of Government. In South Africa Indians are not wanted because they are ousting European tradesmen by 'virtue of their inferiority.' In open competition for Civil Service and employments and professions, there is a double process of eliminating the successful Indian. In the first place, equal competition is denied. Secondly, there is such a thing as colour bar by which, however, efficient, Hindus of merit cannot rise freely in any department. In ministerial appointments, the 'proportional numerical claims' of Muhammadans are being pressed. And amidst all this maze of partiality and unfairness the theory of 'efficiency' is feebly raised. We wonder what efficiency is, what principle is, what justice, equality, protection or preference is. It seems to be only executive expediency or sectarian preferment."

II.—Afghanistan and Trans-Frontier.

Hindus in Afghanistan.

13. The following is from the Arya Patrika (Lahore), of 20th April 1912 :—

"It is known that the Amir of Afghanistan has a number of Hindu subjects; and from what we know of the political shrewdness of the late Amir Abdur Rahman, as also of the present Amir, there is no reason to suppose that the Hindu subjects of His Majesty are not treated with the same consideration and justice as the Muhammadans. A report, however, was published recently that the Hindus of Afghanistan were being compelled to subscribe towards the Red Crescent Fund. Of course except the idea of compulsion, there would have been nothing irregular in Hindus subscribing to the fund. But an Afghan paper contradicts the report altogether, and explains that while the Amir had explicitly told his subjects that there would be no compulsion in the matter Dewan Narayan Das promised on behalf of his co-religionists that Hindus would contribute liberally to the fund. The Afghan paper, beyond denying any compulsion, gives a gratifying account of the conditions under which Hindus live in the Amir's territory. We are told that the relations between Hindus and Muhammadans in Afghanistan are most harmonious and friendly; that many posts of responsibility and trust in the Hindus, (sic.) that His Majesty's private servants include many Hindus; that they alone carry on the occupation of cashiers and money changers; that on the occasion of Durbars there is little in their dress to distinguish between Hindus and Muhammadans; and that Muhammadans and Hindus are treated on a footing of equality. As stated in some of the papers, the Amir has issued an order respecting Begar that Hindus, instead of supplying one soldier for eight persons from among themselves, might substitute a Muhammadan. Perhaps this concession would be better appreciated by Hindus in some parts of India than by those in Afghanistan. Nevertheless it shows the considerate spirit in which the Amir rules the Hindu subjects. Wherever Muhammadans are the rulers, their political shrewdness and foresight seem to be greater. Muhammadan rule in Hyderabad has always been an illustration of the complete effacement of difference between Hindus and Muhammadans and Muhammadan rule; and it is remarkable that even in foreign Muhammadan-governed countries the prevailing differences between Hindus and Muhammadans in India is deplored * * *."

III.—Native States.

Gurudwara in Kapurthala.

14. The following is from the Panjabee (Lahore) of 20th April 1912 :—

"We are informed that a big Gurudwara or Sikh temple is proposed to be built at Kapurthala and private subscriptions are raised for that. A lakh of rupees is the estimate and it is believed that the Maharaja and the Tikka Sahib have promised Rs. 25,000. A sum of Rs. 60,000 is promised by the mofussil people of the State and the balance will probably be raised in Kapurthala town. But a complaint has reached us that attempts are made to bring official pressure here and there to induce unwilling Hindus to pay fixed donations. It is said that a large number of Hindus are dreading the consequences of a refusal and have to borrow to pay their listed donations. It is for the State authorities to make enquiries and put an end to possible harrassment of the people in this undertaking. The Maharaja is absent in Europe and at this time it is necessary to safeguard the interests of the people and protect them against every kind of direct or indirect pressure by the subordinates."

Charging the pay of Residents and their staffs to Native States.

15. In discussing the affairs of "The Indore State" in its leading article in the issue of 27th April 1912, the Tribune (Lahore) makes the following remarks" :—

* * * * * * *

"Before 1899 the Agent to the Governor-General in Central India used to look after the Indore State, but in that year a Resident was appointed and it is interesting to learn that the pay of the Resident and staff was charged to the State Is that the case everywhere? Is the pay of the Residents at Hyderabad and Mysore paid by those States? The question opens a fascinating field of inquiry. Questions about Native States are not permitted by the rules of Legislative Councils, but to call for a return showing particulars about the salaries of Residents and their staffs and the cost to the various Native States will be quite regular. This is an information which ought to be elicited. * * *"

V.—Native Societies and Religious Matters.

The depressed classes.

16. At the end of its leading article on "Touchables and untouchables" the Tribune of 21st April 1912 remarks as follows:—

"The gulf between the touchables and the untouchables may be chiefly due to the different kinds of professions they adopt. It may be said that the orthodox Hindus conception cannot entertain the idea of equality between the touchables and the untouchables. But why should this lead to a sense of hatred between the two or why should caste people despise the untouchables? Every profession, high or low, is honourable if it does not infringe any moral law. The scavenger's profession is filthy but is quite honest. Of the two, a young Brahmin beggar and a coolie who earns his daily bread by the sweat of his brow, who is the better man in the moral sense? Chamars are quite indispensable, but why should they be classed as untouchables. People would not touch a Chamar but would they not shake hands with an European tanner and gladly embrace their own sons when they came back from foreign countries qualified as leather experts? The evolutional spirit of national progress tends towards the focus of unification. Socially the Brahmin and the Chandal may be different, but nationally both are essential. The sense of fellow-feeling is the secret of nationalism. The time has come when the fallen should be lifted by the risen. Exclusiveness had so long kept us divided and weak; now let inclusiveness make us united and strong. The national edifice is to be erected by co-operation and when it is finished both the touchables and the untouchables will be entitled to credit for the part they may play."

Hindus and Muhammadans.

17. The Hindu (Lahore), of the 18th April 1912, publishes a communication headed "Hindu-Muhammadan Unity—I." The writer—one Vidyarthi Ram Dayal, B.A., a Mukhtar at Meerut—says that Hindus have done much to unite the two communities, but that contempt has been the invariable response of the Prophet's followers. Next he quotes an extract from some issue of the Vakil (Amritsar), published in 1907, as also one from Mr. Nabiulla's presidential address at the Nagpur Session of the Muslim League (1910). The quotations show, he adds, that the haughtiness and bigotry which have characterised Muhammadans from the beginning stand in the way of their union with Hindus; that the former have always been dreaming of their (past) rule and treating Hindus with contempt in spite of their now being the latter's fellow-subjects; and that they looked down upon the arts and sciences of the English (lit. foreign nations) and thereby remained backward in education, for which latter thing, however, they blame poor Hindu examiners, teachers and (School) Inspectors. Continuing, the writer says that Sir Syed Ahmed advised his co-religionists to hold themselves aloof from Hindus in respect even of political and social matters. He (also) hit upon the plan of securing influence for them with Government by representing the followers of Hinduism as being inimically disposed towards the present masters of India. This policy, as Raza Ali Beg, Secretary of the Muslim League (? Lucknow), plainly remarked (in his letter to the Pioneer), was the forerunner of disunion between the two communities. Proceeding the correspondent states that the general Muslim public used recently to be told how all its troubles were ascribable to Hindus. After remarking that (Muhammadans) thereby afforded proof of their morality, he describes the separatist and anti-Hindu propaganda of the Muslim League.

Sikhs and Hindus.

18. Under the heading "Persecution of the Sikh Gurus" the Observer (Lahore), of 20th April 1912, has the following:—

"If the Sikhs were not Hindus, asks the Tribune, why were they so fearfully persecuted by the Muhammadans? But if persecution can be the only test of a man belonging to one religion or another, then many recognised Hindu sects should be excluded from Hinduism.

The enmity between the Vishnuvites and Shivites has led several times to mutual persecutions; are we thereby to conclude that the Shivites or the Vishnuvites are not Hindus? The Arya Samajists have been, and still are, persecuted by orthodox Hindus in some places; does that make the Samajists non-Hindus? Or does the terrible persecution of the untouchable classes by the higher castes in Southern India expel the former from the pale of Hinduism? Similarly, Muhammadan sects have also persecuted one another. But these persecutions have never had the effect of the persecuted sects being regarded as non-Muslims. The fact is that the persecution argument cuts both ways, and is as much a proof of the Sikhs being Musalmans as of the Sikhs being Hindus. As for the persecution of the Sikh Gurus, our Hindu contemporaries which are now overflowing with love for the Sikhs evidently forget that each and every Guru was persecuted at the instigation and through the conspiracy of Hindus. The hymns composed by Guru Gobind Singh, the fearful vengeance wrecked by Guru Bunda on the family of the Hindu governor of Sirhind, indeed the entire history of Sikhism, prove this fact. All Sikhs who have closely studied the annals of their faith, we are sure, will bear us out in this connection. The truth is that Islam and Muslims had little to fear from the doctrines preached by Guru Nanak and his immediate followers. Sikhism is monotheistic like Islam, and Islam is as much against caste and other pernicious privileges as the Sikh Gurus. Hindus alone could have resented the attacks on caste, etc., and hence their hatred of Sikhism The fault of the Musalman Emperors was that they trusted 'the men on the spot.' By placing implicit reliance on the assertions of their Hindu representatives they alienated from themselves the sympathies of a body of men who might have proved for them a bulwark of strength and stability. But there can be no question that those primarily responsible for the persecution of the Gurus were men whose descendants now claim the Sikhs as their brethren in faith."

The jhatka-halal question.

19. The Nur (Gurdaspur), of the 15th April 1912, publishes a note headed "The jhatka-halal dispute." Of late, it says, Sikhs have been vigorously agitating that jhatka meat should, like halal flesh, be openly sold in the bazar. After remarking that Muhammadans eat and sell the latter meat in obedience to explicit orders in the Quran, the paper asks Sikhs to quote similar commandments from the Granth in respect of jhatka.

The promised Mehdi.

20. Writing under the heading "Signs for the identification of the awaited Mehdi," the Haq (Delhi), of the 12th (received on the 22nd) April 1912, remarks that these signs, as mentioned in the Traditions, are not worthy of credence. They are so strange as to be grossly ridiculous and wholly improbable. After stating that they are credited by nominal Muhammadans like the (members of ?) Ahl-i-Hadis and other insane persons, the paper details these signs and ridicules them. It then promises to resume its remarks in its next issue and puts some questions to the Secretary of the Khufia (Secret) Anjuman-i-Mujahidin (of what place it does not mention) on the subject of the advent of Mehdi.

The recent anniversary celebrations of the Anjuman-i-Himayat-i-Islam, Lahore.

21. The Hindustan (Lahore), of the 12th April 1912, publishes a communication headed "The anniversary celebrations of the Anjuman-i-Himayat-i-Islam, Lahore." The most noteworthy incident, the writer says, connected with the celebrations is that the Hon'ble Mian Muhammad Shafi did not turn up to move the resolution that stood in his name. This resolution was to the effect that Muhammadans' share of the recent 3½ lakhs educational grant to the Punjab should be commensurate with their educational requirements. The Editor of the Paisa Akhbar was sent to fetch the Mian, but the latter wrote back to say that the resolution had been entered against his name without his permission. After the letter had been read out, Doctor Muhammad Iqbal explained that Mian Muhammad Shafi wished to move the resolution tendering thanks for the Imperial educational grant of fifty lakhs, and that he was in a huff owing to this resolution not having been entrusted to him. This evoked cries of "Shame!" while some people suggested that a vote of censure should be passed against the Mian. Some other persons remarked that he represented, not Muhammadans, but himself; and that he preferred flattering Government to rendering any real service to his community. In conclusion, the writer says that the incident has made the Mian still more unpopular with the far-sighted among his co-religionists.

22. The Akhbar-i-'Am (Lahore), of the 22nd April 1912, publishes a communication headed "A cry for mercy to the Government of India: injustice to pensioners of wakf properties at Lucknow." The writer takes exception to the election, on the 12th March last, of Mutwalli for the Husainabad and Shah Najaf wakf properties at Lucknow. He complains that the Deputy Commissioner deprived the female pensioners concerned of their hereditary right to vote at such elections. After alleging that the officer named did so in order to secure the election of a favourite, he states that the aggrieved purdanashin women appeal to the Government of India to set aside the election. They dare not institute a case against the Deputy Commissioner for fear lest he should deprive them even of their pensions. The incident constitutes a foul blot on the fair fame of Government, which should, therefore exert itself to safeguard the rights of the said women.

A complaint in connection with certain wakf properties at Lucknow.

23. The Sanatan Dharam Parcharak (Amritsar), of the 16th April 1912, has an article headed "Arya Samajists' treatment of Dharampal." So long, it remarks, as the latter was engaged in abusing non-Vedic religions, the former were beside themselves with joy. Now, however, that he has exposed the doings at the Gurukula they have begun to make shameful attacks on him. Again, while he showered praises on the Arya Samaj he was treated with the greatest respect and was given every assistance, legitimate or otherwise. But his exposure of the moves of the Samaj has led to his being roughly handled and unjustly attacked. One Anand Kishore Mehta recently published a booklet entitled "The death of Abdul Ghafur and Dharampal's funeral." It contains personal attacks on Dharampal, and shows what treatment Aryas are in the habit of according to persons exposing the Samaj. Continuing, the paper publishes some extracts from the booklet which contain an account of Dharampal's life, and in which Dharampal has been called an "evil spirit in human form," "Satanic Abdul Ghafur," and the like. He is also charged with having been expelled from the (Dev Dharam) school at Moga for having taken indecent liberties with a boy. Further, he is said to have brought a married girl to Moga, and to have maintained (illicit) intimacy with her. Similarly, he is accused of having had an intrigue at Almora with a widow named Saroj Kumari. Proceeding, the Sanatan Dharam Parcharak remarks that Dharampal has been thus abused owing (simply) to his having given up attacking non-Vedic religions and being inclined to reform the Arya Samaj.

Dharampal.

VII.—General Administration.

(a)—Judicial.

24. The Paisa Akhbar (Lahore), of the 18th April 1912, has an article headed "Unpleasant delay in the disposal of cases." It is owing to the inordinate delay, says the paper, which Indian courts often make in deciding cases that culprits some time escape conviction in many a case of murder, and that Sessions Judges pass death sentences on the strength of evidence which the High Courts regard as wholly unreliable. The prevalent dilatoriness in the disposal of judicial work, it adds, not only subjects the people to inconvenience and monetary loss, but also greatly hampers the administration of justice. It should, therefore, be the first duty of Government to put an end to this state of affairs.

Delay in the disposal of cases in India.

25. The Punjab Advocate (Mianwali), of the 18th April 1912, publishes a paragraph headed "The Khan (lit. Nawab) of Hoti's case in the Supreme (lit. Indian) Legislative Council. "The acts of irregularity and high-handedness, it says, of which the Government of the Frontier Province has been guilty in this case, formed the subject of two questions at a recent meeting of the Viceregal Council. After reproducing the questions and the official replies, the paper deeply regrets that none of the representatives of the Punjab on the Council should have done anything in the matter. Now, it adds, that the Government of India has promised to make enquiries it is expected that "the cat will come out of the bag," while the Chief Commissioner and the District Magistrate will have to explain their conduct. Continuing, it states that it has received a book dealing with the case, and that it will commence reprinting from it from the next week, so as to tell its readers how the Hon'ble Sir (George) Roos-Keppel left no means untried to disgrace a prominent rais. In conclusion, it remarks that if the Frontier authorities go on conducting themselves as they have done in the Khan's case, the people concerned will have to look for protection to God alone.

The Khan of Hoti's case.

The case against Guard Gomez.

26. The Hindu (Lahore), of the 18th April 1912, has a note headed "Rs. 75 (is) the price of chastity." It has been reported, says the paper, that Guard Gomez, who (some time back) entered a carriage for women and laid violent hands on some of its occupants, has been punished only with a fine of Rs. 75. Next it quotes an extract from the judgment in which the Magistrate remarks that the guard undoubtedly entered the carriage, and that in all probability he (also) uncovered and kissed the faces of the women. Let it be granted, it adds, that Western civilisation does not regard the latter act as very reprehensible; but Indian civilisation is of a different character. After observing that the judgment is calculated to grievously disappoint every (Indian), the paper complains that the aggrieved women, who were oppressed by a misbehaved guard, have been held to be unreliable, while the man who assailed their chastity has been fined only Rs. 75. Thoughtful persons should be able to decide whether this would tend to decrease or increase the number of similar occurrences on railways.

The Ludhiana rape case and the case against Guard Gomez.

27. The Akhbar-i-'Am (Lahore), of the 20th April 1912, has a leader headed "Authors of disaffection." It is the duty of all peaceful subjects (in India), says the paper, to be well-disposed towards Government. This, it adds, is still more incumbent on Government officers entrusted with the task of protecting, and administering justice to, the people. Continuing, he remarks that extreme care should be exercised in doing justice to oppressed women, especially when they are poor widows or are without the means of defending themselves. After observing that indifference in this respect would assuredly lead to undesirable consequences, it refers to the Ludhiana rape case, and says that the Sessions Judge has murdered both law and justice. He has ridiculed the very strong medical evidence adduced, and has paid absolutely no thought to the shameful character of the case. Next the paper condemns his criticism of the above evidence; and goes on to remark that, although he admits that Mussammat Nanki had been raped, albeit not as many times as was alleged by her, still he has not convicted any of the accused. Would he have acquitted all of them on shameful and absurd grounds even if the aggrieved girl had been one of his own nationality or caste, and medical evidence of the above character had been adduced on her behalf? It is to be wished that he had realised his important duties, and had also kept in view the fair fame of Government, whose servant he is. Indiscriminate decisions like that given in this case neither secure respect for law, nor do they indicate love for Government. The paper does not mean to say that the Sessions Judge ought to have convicted all the accused for no reason. It (only) wishes to convey that "the things mentioned by him in judging events" clash with common sense. Government, it adds, cannot be blamed for a decision by a solitary Sessions Judge, but (it cannot be denied that) the unpleasantness and disaffection caused in the general public (by decisions like the one in question) directly affect the fair fame of Government. How, it asks, can a woman have the courage after this to complain of the commission of rape on her? Again, what must be the feeling of poor Nanki and her mother, of the village and baradari to which they belong, and of the people who have heard of the case under reference? Moreover, "is this the satisfaction" that should be afforded to grossly oppressed persons like Mussammat Nanki? Continuing, the paper refers to the case against Guard Gomez (vide paragraph ante), and says that the Magistrate writes that the woman, whom the man was alleged to have attempted to rape, is not beautiful and the accused could not have become enamoured of her. After asking whether such Magistrates can adorn the bench, it reports that the judgment further observes that the guard must have attempted only to kiss the woman, and that this must have frightened her into crying out. If the Magistrate, it adds, had been blessed with sense he might have been asked why the accused should have kissed the ugly woman, seeing that she was not his sister, mother, or any other female relation. Are the Courts meant to redress the grievances of the oppressed or to plead the cause of badmashes? Can such a decision be viewed by the public with feelings of satisfaction? The Magistrate has disgraced the bench on which he was placed by Government. The Editor sometimes thinks that it is Magistrates and Sessions Judges who murder justice that are responsible for the promotion of disaffection against Government. He considers it highly necessary in the interests of Government that the latter should take serious notice of the conduct of such officers.

(b)—Police.

Recrudescence of dacoities in the Punjab.

28. The Hindustan (Lahore), of the 12th April 1912, publishes a communication headed "How can dacoits be suppressed?" The writer—one Anokh Rai, Overseer, Military Grass Farm (? of what place he does not state)—says that the dacoits (who have of late been displaying activity in the Punjab) are made up of the following persons :—

(1) Those badmashes in villages who have several times narrowly escaped imprisonment.

(2) Those absconding criminals for whom no one will stand surety and who herd in sequestered places near (lit. in) villages.

(3) Kabuli Pathans, who also work as labourers (during the day).

All these men work in collusion, and are sometimes joined by those zamindars who are in debt to sahukars or bear the last named a grudge. They have been emboldened, adds the writer, by the knowledge that sahukars and chaukidars in villages have no sort of arms in their possession. Next he suggests that all sahukars who pay income-tax should obtain licenses to keep one gun and one revolver each, and that they should employ retired soldiers, who can use arms well, as chaukidars. He knows that some of them are niggardly enough to be unwilling to spend money on arms, but it behoves Deputy Commissioners to prompt them to do so. These officers should also cause it to be known that all village sahukars paying income-tax can be granted licenses to keep arms. He also suggests that Police sowars, who should be under experienced and honest officers, should be posted to those districts in which dacoities have grown frequent. Again zaildars, lambardars, and sahukars helping in running dacoits to earth should be granted special rewards. If the former were to co-operate with the Police it would be possible to lay all dacoits by the heels in a very short time. Villagers know the names and whereabouts of the culprits, but no one dare disclose the same for fear of being killed. If they do not communicate this information to the Police or Deputy Commissioners in a month the writer will have "to step himself into the field."

(d)—Education.

Indians and the Imperial Educational Service.

29. The Paisa Akhbar (Lahore), of the 16th April 1912, has a note entitled "The first Indian Professor in America." Writing about the appointment of Mr. Sudhindra Bose as Professor of Political Science in the State University of Ohio, the paper regrets that able Indians should find it difficult to enter the Imperial Educational Service of their own country.

The Hindustan (Lahore), of the 19th April 1912, says that the appointment constitutes strong proof of the fact that Indians can most efficiently perform the duties even of the highest post in the Department of Public Instruction. It is, however, to be regretted that they can rise to higher posts in the Education Department in India only after great difficulty and in rare instances.

(e)—Agriculture and question affecting the land.

The land revenue administration of the Punjab.

30. The Paisa Akhbar (Lahore), of the 15th April 1912, has an article headed "The Prosperous Punjab." The report, it says, on the land revenue administration of the Punjab for the year 1911 shows that this province goes on enjoying continued prosperity. After referring to the salient features of the report, the paper observes that the Lieutenant-Governor is of opinion that the land revenue realised from the Chenab Colony could be increased, and that, but for an improper working of the rules and inadequate supervision on the part of Collectors, the expansion would already have taken place. It is, however, to be hoped that His Honour will not lose sight of the fact that the advancement of the canal colonies largely depends on the contentment and prosperity of the settlers; and that the more the demand is increased the more unsatisfactory the condition of the colonists will grow and the longer will the introduction of modern scientific agricultural implements be delayed for want of funds. Next the paper prays that the existing pleasant conditions may continue, and that Government may, with an increased income, be able to spend more money on works of public utility.

The effect of the new irrigation works.

31. Commenting on an article in the Madras Times in which the prosperity due to the development of irrigation is said to have resulted in a falling birth-rate and the cultivation of the drink habit, the Tribune (Lahore) of April 24th makes the following remarks:—

"* * * Wrist-watches and gramophones and wine bottles are displayed more than 'the many sturdy and manly qualities' of the nation. If with the prosperous classes it is prosperity that has been the cause of degeneracy it is equally true that with the unprosperous it is poverty and wretchedness that should be considered to have produced the present demoralisation. Drink is a double-edged weapon which cuts both ways. However, as the chief recruiting ground for the army the degeneracy to which the Madras Times refers should induce the Government to adopt precautionary and preventive measures, and no measure can be deemed more effective than the spread of education and knowledge among the Jat peasantry. May we suggest that in the area commanded by the Upper Chenab Canal a portion of the net revenue derivable from irrigation, which is estimated at Rs. 25 lakhs, should be ear-marked for measures that might be found necessary to adopt in order to prevent the thorn to which His Excellency the Viceroy referred growing? The education of the peasantry and the drainage of the irrigated tract form the two-fold question to which the Local Government should devote increased and increasing attention."

(f)—Railways and communications.

Rail road to Baij Nath.

32. The following is from the Panjabee (Lahore), of 25th April 1912:—

"The news will be hailed with delight by all Hindus that a line of railway is contemplated to be constructed from Kalka Station to Baij Nath, a town of ancient renown and religious importance in Kashmir. It is a place of pilgrimage. Baij Nath is situated at a distance of about 160 miles from Kalka towards the North-West and the line will be on two feet six inches gauge, to suit the hilly nature of the country. The Railway Board have sanctioned a reconnaissance survey being carried out, and the survey has been undertaken at the instance of the Punjab Government. The line, if finally constructed, will pass through Nalagarh, Bilaspur, Suket and Mandi, the promising native hill States of the Punjab, and besides opening them out will afford better communication with the Kangra Valley and a part of Kulu. But the route selected is rather lengthy. At present intending visitors to Baij Nath generally go from Pathankot vid Nurpur, Bhagsu and Palampur and the distance is much shorter. Consequently the line from Pathankot to Baij Nath would have been more easy of construction and less costly, but evidently the object of the Railway is not only to connect Baij Nath but to open out the States that will come in the route chosen. But any way the rail connection between Pathankot and Baij Nath will also have to be effected, making a big loop. We hope the scheme will not be dropped and will be carried out to completion."

(h)—Miscellaneous.

The Titanic disaster.

33. After giving a brief account of "The loss of the Titanic" in its leading article the Tribune of 23rd April 1912 concludes :—

"* * * There are conflicting accounts of calm and wild disorder, and it is quite likely that the instinct of self-preservation might have driven some to attempt to rush the boats. But that is not the dominant note of this awful tragedy. What Mr. Asquith so felicitously called the traditions of the sea were fully and gloriously maintained. The women who have been rescued have almost all become widows for their husbands perished in the wreck, and still the husbands showed no desire to join their wives. Millionaires have died while poor people have been saved. Colonel Astor, after helping his wife, helped a young bride into the boat but made no attempt to follow them. Many others did the same thing and then calmly awaited the death that was swift in coming. It is difficult to realise the greatness of the daring that was displayed, for calmness in the face of sudden and violent death is the highest form of daring. Here were men and women belonging to the highest society on board a floating palace sumptuously furnished and believed to be perfectly safe against all accidents. There was no storm nor any disturbance on the sea. They had taken their dinner and had retired for the night in the full consciousness that they would safely arrive at their destination. How many of them had any premonition that they would not live to see the sun rise again ? Suddenly like a thief in the night comes death and demands the forfeit of life. Was there a man or woman dismayed ? There were millionaires born and reared in the lap of luxury, women who were in the enjoyment of life and all that wealth can bring and, in a moment, they realised that the thread of life was about to be snapped. But the men refused to be unmanned and the women refused to wail. In silence and with high Christian fortitude they faced death and silently obeyed the call that none can resist. It is believed that fatalism enables a man to face death calmly, but these were not fatalists and still they never flinched, nor vainly lamented a fate they could not avert. To the men who have so heroically perished the world will take off its hat, for by their death they have proved the greatness of the race to which they belonged and its claim to rule the world. We cannot recall greater heroism than that of the band of the Titanic which gathered in the saloon and played 'Nearer my God to Thee' as the lifeboats drew away from the sinking vessel. Those who have perished have left an imperishable legacy to their race and to the world."

The following on the same subject is from the leading article of the Panjabee (Lahore), of 23rd April 1912 :—

* * * * * * *

"The one thousand and six hundred humanity that sank with the Titanic within a few hours on the fateful Sunday night with a clear, calm, star-lit sky above, must have died a heroic and beautiful death. For rarely does it fall to the lot of man that he receives so awful and vivid a call to death and is given an hour or two to linger between two eternities and then quickly pass away into the unknown region. The quickest death is considered the happiest. DeQuincey has written much on the inexpressible glories of sudden death. But the mere magnitude of the calamity of over 1,600 men, and possibly a few women, dying together on the Titanic is too awful even to contemplate. The courage and manliness of the English nation were best displayed on this solemn occasion. They resolved to die with a heroic determination, and some of the scenes described of wives clinging to their husbands and refusing to be saved are pathetic in the extreme. * * * We are glad that subscriptions are being raised to aid those who have been left destitute. Apart from the terrible loss of life there must have been destitution of no small magnitude, and though Indians may not have directly suffered, we should like to see subscriptions collected and sent from this country also as a mark of the deep sympathy we feel for those who have suffered. For a few days more fuller details of the disaster will be received and all the people will be anxious to know if any more have been or could be saved. Among those who must have sunk with the ship is Mr. W. T. Stead, the well-known journalist, and inspirer of human progress on ethical and moral basis. Nothing definite is known of his fate, though little hope is entertained of his survival. All Indians will particularly grieve the sad end of this one man who has been so well-known to every Indian boy and adult and who was considered as one gifted with qualities and mental powers rare among the Westerns."

Subscriptions for the relief of the victims of the Titanic disaster.

34. The following is from the Tribune (Lahore), of 24th April 1912 :—

"Among the contributors to the fund for the relief of the victims to the Titanic disaster we find a contribution of £ 500 from the Gaekwar of Baroda. This unprecedented disaster has aroused a profound sense of sympathy for the victims and their relations in every civilized country of the world. This prompt philanthrophic action of the Gaekwar may well be followed by other Indian princes and wealthy people, for the terrible wreck of the Titanic appeals irresistibly to our common humanity."

The late Mr. Stead.

35. The following is from the Observer (Lahore), of 24th April 1912 :—

"Among the hundreds of lives that have been lost on account of the Titanic disaster no one was more highly valued or respected than the late Mr. W. T. Stead, Editor of the Review of Reviews. His love of peace, his hatred of vice, his humanitarianism, his true Imperialism, his desire to diffuse education among the masses and his devotion to spiritualism combined with his sturdy commonsense and a vivid style of writing secured him a high place in the regard of the whole world. Ever a friend of liberty and a genuine, liberal, his pen was always at the service of the weak, while he ever took special interest in India and Indians. His denunciation of the Italian raid on Tripoli and his systematic support of reformed Turkey in her hour of trouble won for him the heartfelt gratitude of the Muhammadans who mourn not only the death of a great writer, but a sincere well-wisher and friend."

The Frontier Province.

36. The Hindustan (Lahore), of the 12th April 1912, states that recently the inhabitants of Dera Ismail Khan submitted a memorial to the Viceroy to pray that "The five frontier districts" may be amalgamated with the Punjab. His Excellency, it adds, says in reply that he will decide the question at an early date (lit. immediately after his tour on the frontier) and that he will realise the hopes of "The frontier people." Next it strongly supports the above prayer, and asks Lord Hardinge to grant the same, so as to end several serious grievances under which the people named are labouring.

The Frontier Province.

37. The Punjab Advocate (Mianwali), of the 18th April 1912, publishes a communication headed "Wake up, Frontier brothers ! your Saviour has come. The voice of a Punjabi brother." The writer—Mahashai Hari Chand, of Rawalpindi—wonders that his unfortunate brothers of the Frontier Province should not open their eyes in spite of their having to suffer diverse troubles and hardships. He regrets that, because of the policy of a short-sighted ruler like Lord Curzon, they should have been separated from their Punjabi brothers. Continuing, he says that the advantages, to gain which they were so oppressed, have not been fully realised. He is also at a loss to understand how they can, like the proverbial frog in the well, content themselves with their little world and sacrifice progress and liberty. Human beings, nay even animals, could on no account consent to behave in this way. They were separated from the Punjab about ten years ago, and, during this period, dacoities have grown more frequent in their part of the country. They have also been deprived of the right to compete for (certain) higher posts under Government and to be nominated to Universities and Councils. Again, the severe punishments prescribed for the oppressive and barbarous dacoits from over the border are inflicted on them (i e., inhabitants of the Province) for common offences. In other words, they have parted with democratic rule and have come under an autocratic administration. The writer then goes on to say that some selfish officers on the Frontier deliberately subject them to diverse pieces of oppression, but that they have not the courage even to open their lips in complaint. Proceeding, he remarks that the time has come when their misfortunes should end and they should gain their lost rights. Lala Jhinda Ram, a Pleader at Dera Ismail Khan, has set them an example ; and they should imitate it by holding meetings in every city, town, and village to lay their grievances before Lord Hardinge, who is the very embodiment of justice and a true well-wisher of India.

Security from the Zamindar.

38. The Zamindar (Lahore), of the 16th April 1912, publishes an article headed "Why were we made to furnish security?" In continuation of its previous remarks on the subject (vide paragraph 28 of Selections No. 16), the paper reports that another of the writings objected to is the one which appeared in its issue, dated the 16th December last, under the heading "The Pioneer's offensive conduct" (vide paragraph 2 of Selections No. 50 of 1911). After reproducing the same, the Editor expresses his inability to understand what word or phrase in it can be taken exception to. He is forced to the conclusion that the District Magistrate has taken it ill that he should have called the Pioneer the most haughty and bigoted Anglo-Indian paper, and should also have charged it with caring nothing for the feelings of Muhammadans. It has, however, never so much as crossed his mind that the passing of criticism on a paper—even if it be haughty one like the Pioneer—is an offence rendering the critic liable to be called upon to furnish security. He then goes on to say that, while no action was taken against the above Anglo-Indian journal for having accused Lord Morley of being the real murderer of Mr. Ashe, the poor Zamindar has been made to furnish security for the sole offence of having tried to rebut the false charge dishonestly preferred by the Pioneer against Mr. Amir Ali.

In its issue, dated the 19th April 1912, the paper states that another of the articles objected to is the one which it published on the 13th February last under the heading "The strong beats (the weak) and does not allow him to weep" (vide paragraph 1 of Selections No. 8). The writing contains independent criticism of that conduct on Sir Edward Grey's part which (recently) led people to suspect that the minister named was a mere puppet in the hands of the Russian Government. The paper has published half-a-dozen (other) articles (also) on Sir Edward; but, strangely enough, the District Magistrate does not hold them to be objectionable. He has, however, taken exception to the particular writing referred to, in which only common-place criticism was passed on the Foreign Secretary of State. After reprinting the same, the Editor observes that, although he has undoubtedly found fault with Sir Edward Grey in the article, this writing also affords a glimpse of his loyalty to the British Crown. If, he adds, it renders one liable to (a demand for) security to express one's faith in one's Government, then he has nothing to urge in his defence. Next he enquires whether or not it is the duty of a journalist to pass independent criticism on improper conduct in a Government official. The British Government is after all made up of men and not of angels, and it is not impossible for it to err on occasions. Since men cannot generally see the mistakes made by themselves, why should it be considered reprehensible in the Editor "to have voiced our feelings with honest motives and keeping in view the respect and honour due to Government?"

Continuing in its issue of the 23rd April 1912, the paper says that the District Magistrate has also taken objection to the article headed "An Ulcer in the body of Islam" (vide paragraph 3 of Selections No. 46 of 1911). Next it expresses the opinion that this writing alone is the real cause of its having been called upon to furnish security. (Some time back) it commenced passing rather severe criticism on the doings of those who looked upon themselves as leaders of the (Muslim) community. This had the effect of convincing them that, if the paper were not prevented from plain speaking, they would fall down from the pedestal on which they had placed themselves through the ignorance of their co-religionists. The language of the letter commented on in the article under reference shows clearly enough that the men who appointed Mr. Siraj-ud-din to write the epistle were aflame with feelings of revenge. The communication contained the plain threat that, if the Zamindar did not mend its ways, the enlightened and leading Muhammadans, who had prompted the writer to address it, would publicly express disapproval of the mischief which, they thought, the paper had been making. The Editor then goes on to say that he wishes to show why the aforesaid article has been included among those objected to by the District Magistrate. The fact, he adds, is that the officer named had no special cause to demand security from him. When the supporters of Mr. Siraj-ud-din saw that the (Muslim) community was at the back of the Zamindar and that it would be inadvisable for them to hold a public meeting against the paper, they approached the authorities in a secret manner, and told the latter diverse things against the journal; adding that if prompt steps were not taken the mischief it had been causing would prove a serious danger for Government. The authorities, who were ignorant of the real facts, only argued that there must be some truth in the complaint made by leading Muhammadans. The spell proved effective, and the District Magistrate demanded security from the paper with a view to averting an imaginary danger. The (Muhammadan) community, however, found the entire amount, and thereby afforded proof of the Zamindar being its organ, while the paper increased in popularity. After contending that there is nothing objectionable in the article under reference, the Editor says that he could not have even dreamt that it was an offence under the Press Act to devise means for the betterment of one's community or to protect it against the (evil) influence of traitorous leaders.' Proceeding, the Editor asserts his innocence, and says that, if his writings are really conceived in an immoderate tone, he should be told what parts thereof are open to objection. In the other event, he would crave permission to say that the articles have been grossly mistranslated, and that the translators are utter strangers to Urdu idioms. The District Magistrate should get the writings translated by persons who are thorough masters of both the Urdu and English languages. The Editor should be allowed to see the translation and to satisfy himself (as to its correctness). If his tone is proved to be objectionable even then, well and good. In the other event, the security deposited by him should be refunded. Justice demands that his request should be granted by the District Magistrate, or he will have to knock at the door of Sir Louis Dane, who may be relied upon to do justice to him. He then goes on to reproduce the article under reference.

Exclusion of Indians from the Cawnpore Memorial Gardens.

39. The following is from the Panjabee (Lahore) of 23rd April 1912 :—

"We publish elsewhere what the News of India writes on our comments on the Cawnpore Memorial Gardens, made in our issue of the 11th instant. The Gardens referred to have been raised in memory of some murdered Christian people by the followers of an Indian rebel. It is not a memorial to the Queen and we are further told that it is the 'private property of the European community.' Our contemporary says that these facts justify the exclusion of Indians, because the historic tragedy is a matter of shame to the Indians. It is certainly a most sad and discreditable incident and will be equally deplored by Indians and Europeans of the present generation, who have, of course, no responsibility for what their ancestors in the third or fourth degree did or suffered in the dark ages of India. But why should Indians, for that matter, be wholly excluded is what we still cannot see, especially when similar memorials erected over the graves of Indian heroes and sufferers, whether private or public, are freely open to all visitors. We must further protest against the charge of 'misleading less educated country men' hurled at us. We cannot be presumed to know anything of a memorial which is closed to us and all that we see openly is an invidious distinction between Indians and Europeans. Let those who find excuses for this exclusion at a time when racial differences are removed and are forgotten and when the sincere loyalty of Indians has been accepted by the highest authorities, find out if they do nothing to lead to misconceptions silently borne for years by the people."

A contradiction of the statement that 20 policemen were run over by rail in one journey by the Viceroy.

40. The Tribune (Lahore), of 25th April 1912, publishes the following under the heading "A Monstrous allegation" :—

"An extraordinary story is going the round of the Press in India. We make the following cutting from the Englishman of the 22nd instant:—

Viscount Hardinge, of Lahore, the brother of the Viceroy, has been lecturing at Tunbridge Wells on his recent visit to India. According to a report in a Kentish paper, referring to his visit to the Nizam of Hyderabad, Lord Hardinge said that, in consequence of the attempts made to upset the train of Lord Minto, native police were stationed on the railway line at intervals of 100 yards. They often dropped off to sleep, and in order to waken when the train was coming they laid their heads on the line, with the result that, on one journey the present Viceroy took, no fewer than twenty natives lost their heads.

"We have heard of superstitous stories in India where the credulity of ignorant people is unbounded. For instance, when a new bridge is being built some one starts a story that some hundreds of heads will be buried under the foundations, and people do not stir out of their houses after nightfall for fear of having their heads cut off. Wicked and malicious persons have frequently invented stories to frighten ignorant people. A man was punished in the Punjab for going about saying that the wells were being poisoned in order that the people who drank the water of those wells might die. But all that is nothing compared with this monstrous story which is put in the mouth of the Viceroy's brother by an imaginative English journalist. It is necessary, we think, that it should be promptly and authoritatively contradicted."

LAHORE:

The 27th April 1912.

C. STEAD,

Assistant to the Deputy Inspector-General of Police,
Criminal Investigation Department, Punjab.

Punjab Government Press, Lahore—2-5-12—15—107—H. L. S.

[ Confidential. ]

[Vol. XXV. ] SELECTIONS [ No. 18. ]

FROM THE

NATIVE NEWSPAPERS

PUBLISHED IN THE PUNJAB.

Examined up to 4th May 1912.

---

CONTENTS.

Page.

I.—Politics.

(a) Foreign—

1. The Turco-Italian War (Zamindar) ... ... 331
2. Ditto (Observer) ... ... ib.
3. Persian affairs (Vakil) ... ... ... 332
4. Ditto (Tribune) ... ... ib
5. The doings of Italy and Russia in Tripoli and Persia (Vakil) ... ... ... ib.
6. The proposed Imperial Naturalisation Bill (Panjabee) ... ... ... ... 333

(b) Home—

7. The future policy of Muhammadans (Sadiq-ul-Akhbar) ... ... ... ... 333
8. The Army Commission (Paisa Akhbar) ... 334
9. Sir J D. Rees (Paisa Akhbar) ... ... ib.
10. Mr. Montagu on Indian affairs (Observer) ... ib.
11. The Government of India Bill (Panjabee) ... 335
12. The Times on Indian Autonomy (Panjabee) ... ib.

II.—Afghanistan and Trans-Frontier.

Nil.

III.—Native States.

13. Hyderabad affairs (Paisa Akhbar) ... ... 336
14. The Maharja of Nabha (Tribune) ... ... ib.

IV.—Kine-killing.

Nil.

V.—Native Societies and Religious Matters.

15. The Satyarth Parkash (Indar) ... ... 336
16. Relations between Hindus and Muhammadans (Tribune) ... ... ... ... 337

VI.—Legislation.

17. Suggestions for modifying Council Regulations (Punjabee) ... ... ... 337

Page.

VII.—General Administration.

(a) Judicial—

18. The case against the Khan of Hoti (Akhbar-i-'Am) ... ... ... ... 338
19. The case against the Khan of Hoti (Zamindar) ... ib.
20. The reform of the Punjab Judiciary (Tribune) ... 339

(b) Police—

21. Complaint against the Peshawar Police (Punjab Advocate) ... ... ... ... 340
22. Recrudescence of dacoities in the Punjab (Panjabee) ... ... ... ... ib.
23. Cases of police torture (Panjabee) ... ... ib.

(c) Municipal and Cantonment affairs—

24. The Octroi question (Panjabee) ... ... 340
25. Complaint against the Assistant Cantonment Magistrate, Sikanderabad (Paisa Akhbar and Observer) 341

(d) Education —

26. The teaching of history and the Government (Tribune) ... ... ... ... 342
27. The adoption of Hindi as universal script for the Punjab (Panjabee) ... ... ... ib.
28. The Gurukula (Parkash) ... ... 343

(e)—Agriculture and questions affecting the land—

Nil.

(f) Railways and Communications—

29. Overcrowding in trains (Panjabee) ... ... 343
30. Railway accidents and compensation for injuries (Panjabee) ... ... ... ib.

(g) Postal matters—

31. A complaint (Haq Pasand) ... ... 344

(h) Miscellaneous—

32. Government and Industries (Tribune) ... 344
33. The Imperial Capital (Panjabee) ... ... ib.

LIST OF NEWSPAPERS AND PERIODICALS EXAMINED BY THE SPECIAL BRANCH AS IT STOOD ON THE 4TH MAY 1912.

| No. | Name. | Locality. | Name of Publisher. | Circulation. |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| | ENGLISH. | | | |
| | DAILY. | | | |
| 1 | Tribune ... | Lahore ... | Bihari Lal ... | 1,758 copies. |
| | TRI-WEEKLY. | | | |
| 2 | Panjabee ... | Lahore ... | Mul Chand ... | 2,424 copies. |
| | BI-WEEKLY. | | | |
| 3 | Observer ... | Lahore ... | Nizam-ud-din ... | 1,000 copies. |
| 4 | Punjab Times and Frontier News. | Rawalpindi ... | J. R. Thapur ... | 200 „ |
| | WEEKLY. | | | |
| 5 | Arya Patrika ... | Lahore ... | Devi Chand ... | 650 copies. |
| 6 | Harbinger ... | Do. ... | Durga Parshad ... | 300 „ |
| 7 | Khalsa Advocate ... | Amritsar ... | Bahadar Singh ... | 752 „ |
| | FORTNIGHTLY. | | | |
| 8 | Jijnasu ... | Lahore ... | Ishwar Das ... | ... |
| | MONTHLY. | | | |
| 9 | D. A.-V. College Magazine... | Lahore ... | Saraswati Nath ... | 1,000 copies. |
| 10 | Forman Christian College Notes.* | Do. ... | ... | ... |
| 11 | Practical Medicine* ... | Delhi ... | ... | ... |
| 12 | Punjab Educational Journal | Lahore ... | R. B. Mohan Lal ... | 700 copies. |
| 13 | Punjab Mission News ... | Do. ... | Revd. Wigram ... | 250 „ |
| 14 | Ravi ... | Do. ... | Mr. B. M. Jones ... | ... |
| 15 | Review of Religions ... | Qadian (Gurdaspur) ... | Sadr Anjuman Ahmadia, Qadian. | 800 copies. |
| 16 | Science Grounded Religion... | Lahore ... | Dev Rattan ... | 25 „ |
| 17 | Teacher ... | Dinga (Gujrat) ... | Kanhaya Singh ... | 200 „ |
| | URDU. | | | |
| | DAILY. | | | |
| 18 | Akhbar-i-'Am ... | Lahore ... | Govind Sahai ... | 630 copies. |
| 19 | Paisa Akhbar ... | Do. ... | Abdul Aziz ... | 1,011 „ |
| 20 | Watan ... | Do. ... | Muhammad Insha Alla ... | ... |
| 21 | Zamindar ... | Do. ... | Zafar Ali Khan, B.A. ... | ... |
| | BI-WEEKLY. | | | |
| 22 | Vakil ... | Amritsar ... | Abdul Aziz ... | 1,970 copies. |
| | WEEKLY. | | | |
| 23 | Afghan ... | Peshawar ... | Saiyid Muhammad Abdulla | 500 copies. |
| 24 | Ahl-i-Hadis ... | Amritsar ... | Sanaulla ... | 925 „ |
| 25 | Ahluwalia Gazette ... | Do. ... | Lehna Singh ... | 500 „ |
| 26 | Al-Moin ... | Do. ... | Mehraj-ud-din ... | ... |
| 27 | Army News ... | Ludhiana ... | Hira Lal & Co. ... | 1,300 copies. |
| 28 | Arorbans Gazette ... | Amritsar ... | Labh Singh ... | ... |
| 29 | Arya Gazette ... | Lahore ... | Bhowani Das ... | 550 copies. |
| 30 | Badar ... | Qadian, Gurdaspur District | Muhammad Sadiq ... | 200 „ |

* Not received during the month.

LIST OF NEWSPAPERS AND PERIODICALS EXAMINED BY THE SPECIAL BRANCH AS IT STOOD ON THE 4TH MAY 1912—CONTINUED.

| No. | Name. | Locality. | Name of Publisher. | Circulation. |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| | URDU—CONTINUED. | | | |
| | WEEKLY—continued. | | | |
| 31 | Bharat ... | Jullundur ... | Thakur Sheoratan Singh | ... |
| 32 | Civil and Military News ... | Ludhiana ... | Saiyid Muhammad ... | 1,325 copies, |
| 33 | Curzon Gazette ... | Delhi ... | Mirza Hairat ... | 111 „ |
| 34 | Delhi Gazette* ... | Do. ... | Sajjad Husain ... | 200 „ |
| 35 | Edward Gazette* ... | Abbott-abad ... | Muhammad Latif ... | 200 „ |
| 36 | Hakam ... | Qadian, Gurdaspur District | Yakub Ali ... | 900 „ |
| 37 | Haq ... | Delhi ... | Kasim Ali ... | 200 „ |
| 38 | Haq Pasand ... | Amritsar ... | Ram Nath ... | 382 „ |
| 39 | Hindu ... | Lahore ... | Hari Lal Sharma ... | ... |
| 40 | Hindustan ... | Do. ... | Ram Sarn Dutt ... | 8,070 copies. |
| 41 | Indar ... | Do. ... | Dharm Pal, B.A. ... | ... |
| 42 | Islam ... | Do. ... | Abdul Latif ... | 200 copies. |
| 43 | Jhang Sial ... | Jhang ... | Prabh Dyal ... | 2,262 „ |
| 44 | Kapurthala Akhbar ... | Kapurthala ... | Hamid Husain ... | 155 „ |
| 45 | Loyal Gazette ... | Lahore ... | Amar Singh ... | 200 „ |
| 46 | Lytton Gazette ... | Delhi ... | Bulaki Das ... | 1,000 „ |
| 47 | Milap* ... | Lyallpur ... | Jawahar Lal ... | ... |
| 48 | Millat ... | Lahore ... | Shuja Ulla ... | 1,500 copies. |
| 49 | Mister Gazette ... | Do. ... | Ali Bakhsh ... | 150 „ |
| 50 | Munir ... | Jhang ... | Hafiz Khuda Bakhsh ... | 200 „ |
| 51 | Musalman ... | Amritsar ... | Sana-ulla ... | 400 „ |
| 52 | Nur ... | Qadian, Gurdaspur District | Muhammad Yusaf ... | 200 „ |
| 53 | Nur Afshan ... | Ludhiana ... | Revd. Dr. E. M. Wherry | 500 „ |
| 54 | Paisa Akhbar ... | Lahore ... | Abdul Aziz ... | 8,377 „ |
| 55 | Parkash ... | Do. ... | Krishan ... | 1,723 „ |
| 56 | Punjab Advocate ... | Mianwali ... | Karm Chand, Bahl ... | 1,000 „ |
| 57 | Punjab Samachar ... | Lahore ... | Hira Lal ... | 705 „ |
| 58 | Rajput Gazette ... | Do. ... | Thakur Sukhram Das ... | 650 „ |
| 59 | Municipal Gazette and Sada-i-Hind. | Do. ... | Din Muhammad ... | 500 „ |
| 60 | Sadiq-ul-Akhbar ... | Bahawalpur ... | Maulvi Ata Ullah ... | 392 „ |
| 61 | Ditto ... | Rewari ... | Safdar Hussain ... | 200 „ |
| 62 | Sanatan Dharm Pracharak... | Amritsar ... | Rulia Ram ... | 200 „ |
| 63 | Shanti ... | Rawalpindi ... | Kishan Chand Mohan ... | 300 „ |
| 64 | Sialkot Paper ... | Sialkot ... | Todar Mal ... | 500 „ |
| 65 | Siraj-ul-Akhbar ... | Jhelum ... | Maulvi Fakir Muhammad | 450 „ |
| 66 | Tahzib-ul-Niswan ... | Lahore ... | Mumtaz Ali ... | 240 „ |

*Not received during the week.

LIST OF NEWSPAPERS AND PERIODICALS EXAMINED BY THE SPECIAL BRANCH AS IT STOOD ON THE 4TH MAY 1912—CONCLUDED.

| No. | Name. | Locality. | Name of Publisher. | Circulation. |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| | URDU—CONCLUDED. | | | |
| | WEEKLY—concluded. | | | |
| 67 | Victoria Paper ... | Sialkot ... | Gian Chand ... | 600 copies. |
| 68 | Wafadar* ... | Lahore ... | Fazal-ud-din ... | 600 „ |
| 69 | Waqt ... | Do. ... | Ali Husain ... | 200 „ |
| 70 | Watan ... | Do. ... | Muhammad Insha Ullah... | 1,800 „ |
| 71 | Zamindar ... | Do. ... | Zafar Ali Khan, B.A. ... | 750 „ |
| | FORTNIGHTLY. | | | |
| 72 | Biwah Samachar ... | Lahore ... | Ram Chand ... | 300 copies. |
| 73 | Kam Dhenu ... | Ludhiana ... | Daulat Ram ... | 100 „ |
| 74 | Mohyal Gazette ... | Kals, Jhelam District ... | Mehta Sham Das ... | 250 „ |
| | PERSIAN. | | | |
| | FORTNIGHTLY. | | | |
| 75 | Siraj-ul-Akhbar ... | Kabul ... | Abdul Khalik ... | ... |
| | URDU. | | | |
| | MONTHLY. | | | |
| 76 | Arorbans Parkash ... | Lahore ... | Salig Ram ... | 200 copies. |
| 77 | Arya Musafir ... | Jullundur ... | Wazir Chand ... | 1,300 „ |
| 78 | Jauhar ... | Amritsar ... | Muhammad Ismail Khan | 200 „ |
| 79 | Kakezai Social Reformer ... | Lahore ... | Fazl Din ... | 200 „ |
| 80 | Makhzan ... | Delhi ... | Abdul Kadir ... | 4,000 „ |
| 81 | Rafiq ... | Lahore ... | Charinji Lal ... | 500 „ |
| 82 | Sadhu ... | Do. ... | Sheobart Lal ... | 500 „ |
| 83 | Martand ... | Do. ... | Kanhya Lal ... | 250 „ |
| 84 | Raghbir Patrika ... | Do. ... | Prab Dial ... | 500 „ |
| 85 | Zaban* ... | Delhi ... | Hamid Husain ... | 500 „ |
| | GURMUKHI. | | | |
| | WEEKLY. | | | |
| 86 | Khalsa Sewak ... | Amritsar ... | Jiwan Singh ... | 1,000 copies. |
| 87 | Punjab Reporter* ... | Do. ... | Ganda Singh ... | ... |
| 88 | Punjabi Surma ... | Lahore ... | Gian Chand ... | 1,000 copies. |

* Not received during the week.

I.—Politics.

(a)—Foreign.

The Turco-Italian War.

1. The Zamindar (Lahore), of the 24th April 1912, has an article headed "Europe's international Law." The writing opens with some Urdu verses, among which are the following couplets :—

"People of Europe, you do not at all regard us as human beings ;

"And if you think otherwise, perhaps you take us for fools.

"You are white (while) we are black. Perhaps you think that as (our) life is black, it cannot be dear to us.

"Your (lit. the) civilisation with which you have made the dome of heaven ring

"Has appeared to us the grindstone for your 'sugared knife.'

"Leave us to our fate, we are sick of this civilisation ;

"We have nothing to do with (the rest of) Europe : we want England."

Continuing, the paper remarks that the wealth, learning, power, and commerce of Europe are meant for Europeans. The sole object of the existence of non-European races, it adds, is considered to be that they should be made the slaves of Europe, or be blown away from canon if they raise their heads (even) a little. (Similarly) Europe's international law is meant for (the good only) of Europeans, while it acts justly and abides by its promises (only) where its own people are concerned. The above law guarantees that the large Christian fish shall not swallow the smaller fry ; but it does not afford similar protection to weak Muhammadan kingdoms, although it professes to treat Christian and Muslim, and East and West alike. Austria occupied two Turkish provinces, France swallowed up Morocco, Russia dyed Northern Persia with blood, and Italy invaded Tripoli in defiance of this law ; but its "guardians" held their peace on all these occasions. They and their law did not prevent the Italians from committing heartless brigandage in Tripoli in spite of their having been approached by the Turks in the matter. Now, however, that the shoes of Enver Bey, Fateh Bey and Sheikh Sennousi have beaten the pate of Italy into a pulp, and she has, contrary to the aforesaid law, bombarded the Dardanelles to save her face so that Turkey has been obliged to close the said strait, international law has come into motion all of a sudden, and there has been raised the outcry that the closure is against law. Will the just British Government, asks the paper, tolerate the Turks being deprived even of (man's) first right of self-defence ? Next it regrets that, instead of guaranteeing to keep Italian ships off the Dardanelles, Europe should fail to remonstrate with Italy, and should permit her to bombard any Turkish coast she likes as also to injure Muhammadans to her heart's content. When, however, Turkey adopts any defensive measure, pressure is brought to bear on her, and she is told that her conduct injures trade. The Editor would respectfully appeal to England on behalf of seven crores of Indian Muhammadans to restrain those bloodthirsty wolves that are intriguing with Italy to still further harass Turkey, and who seem determined to thereby bring Christianity into bad odour.

The Turco-Italian War.

2. The following is from the Observer (Lahore) of 27th April 1912 :—

"The report from Rome that Enver Bey was dead is apparently a case of the wish being father to the thought. The Italians pretend to have learnt the story from Cairo, but Reuter's Cairo correspondent, who should learn such news earlier than the Italians at Rome, has heard nothing at all about the death of the son-in-law of the Sultan. All men are of course mortal and there need be no wonder if the hero of the Turkish Revolution died in defence of Ottoman rights in Tripoli. But there is every probability that Enver is not dead and that the rumour is another Italian lie. The latest telegram from Constantinople makes no reference to the matter. It is, however, stated that the Ottoman Council of Ministers discussed at length the question of the reopening of the Dardanelles, but arrived at no definite decision. When the Powers cannot guarantee that Italy will no longer try to blockade the Dardanelles, it is absolutely unjust, if not discreditable, on their part to require the re-opening of the Straits. All fairminded men, we think, will admit that under existing circumstances the Porte is perfectly justified to keep the Dardanelles closed."

Persian affairs.

3. Writing under the heading "True light on Persian affairs," the Vakil (Amritsar), of the 20th April 1912, remarks that the Blue Book which has recently been issued on the above subject should help to remove many a misunderstanding. After quoting several extracts, it observes that the same argue honest intentions on the part of Great Britain, and show that, but for her, Russia would have long ago occupied Teheran. Next it expresses the hope that she will continue her efforts to protect Persia against the Muscovites till the safety of the former country has been fully assured.

Persian affairs.

4. The following is from the Tribune (Lahore), of 30th April 1912 :—

"From all accounts of Persia from authentic sources it is quite clear that the condition of that unfortunate country is going from bad to worse. The authorities are apparently powerless to maintain peace and order, and the country throughout the interior is infested with bands of robbers who have made both life and property quite unsafe. A Government which cannot keep peace and order and guarantee protection to its subjects loses its very raison d'etre. In Southern Persia which is within the sphere of British influence, things are very bad, and the reason is said to be that no British troops have been sent to keep peace and order, in the same way as Russian troops maintain order in the Northern part. The British authorities have been very reluctant to do anything which in the least savours of interference with the internal affairs of Persia, but there are not a few people who feel that this reluctance to interfere, though based on perfectly good intentions, has been carried much too far. As regards the existing situation a correspondent writing from Shiraz to a contemporary says, 'Every one is wondering and no one in the least knows what is going to happen, except that it is sure to be unpleasant in some way or another for all except those who live by the rifle, and they are an ever increasing profession in Persia to-day.' He is of opinion that, nothing but a British expendition will clear the air and teach the tribesmen that there is a power in the world superior to theirs.' The Chiefs or Governors of Provinces are in open revolt against the authority of the Mejliss. One of these, Solat-ud-Daula, the lately deposed Ilkani or chief of the powerful Kashkai tribe, has given the Central Government no end of trouble. This chief is said to be loth to give up his chiefship 'as it is a very profitable billet, and from being a very poor man some ten years ago when he was first appointed he is now reputed to be one of the richest in Persia.' As regards the condition of the interior it is stated that 'practically the whole of Persia is in a state of anarchy and is ruled by robber gangs. Some of these work on a definite system, call themselves road guards, exact as large tolls as they think will just not kill the traffic, and keep off the others who do not work on a regular system, but believe in scooping up the whole of a caravan and then living on the proceeds till they are exhausted. It is during such periods that we read the cheerful announcement, that the trade routes are now safer.' These latter, it is quite true, are as misleading as they are illusory. The accounts relating to the creation of the new Gendarmerie are equally unfavourable. It is quite clear that unless the Mejliss exert themselves to restore peace and order and soon establish some sort of settled government things will go on from bad to worse."

The doings of Italy and Russia in Tripoli and Persia.

5. The Vakil (Amritsar), of the 20th April 1912, publishes a letter from one Rukan-ud-Din, Dana, of Calcutta, headed "The new (? Western) civilization." The writer remarks that this civilization means that one need not observe promises to the weak, and that one should treat only one's co-religionists with humanity, justice, and kindness. After remarking that this new philosophy has been taught "us" by Italy and Russia, he condemns the doings of these countries in Tripoli and Persia respectively, as also the silence of the civilized nations (of Europe) over the same. Next he enquires from the votaries of the above civilization whether it does not grieve them to "uproot the saplings in the Islamic garden" and "to put the sword of oppression to the throats of Adam's descendants." "O butchers," he adds, "our innocent blood will not go in vain. You will see with your own eyes how every drop of it will shed fire and reduce your civilization to a heap of ashes."

Commenting on the above the Editor says that the entire Islamic world shares the writer's views about usurping Russia and Italy. The strenuous efforts, he adds, which Europe has been making to extirpate Islam should extort tears of blood (from the Prophet's followers). Next he remarks that Musalmans in all quarters of the globe are eager to see what Great Britain will do to end the existing state of affairs.

The proposed Imperial Naturalisation Bill.

6. The following is from the Panjabee (Lahore), of 30th April 1912 :—

"Imperial naturalisation is a pompous phrase, but we hope it will also be true to the reality of the Empire. An Imperial Bill is to be introduced in the present session of the British Parliament securing a uniform law of naturalisation throughout the Empire. What it will do to solve the colour question remains to be seen. Some hopes have been excited by the long advertisement given to the Bill that an attempt will be made to obliterate colour bar in Imperial citizenship along with other reforms. The main provisions of the Bill are understood to be that naturalisation of aliens as British subjects shall be conditional on five years' continuous residence within territory under the King's allegiance on good character and on an adequate knowledge of the English language recognised in any dominion. Accordiug to the Unitid Empire :—

"'This provision settles the status of a British subject, but not his rights and privileges. A Chinaman born at Hong Kong or Wei-hai-Wei, and Indian born at Bombay or Fiji, the son of an English father and a German mother born at New York, or the daughter of a French father and an Italian mother born on a British vessel in mid-ocean—all these are ipso facto British subjects. But their legal status still varies in different places within the same allegiance The Chinaman will not be admitted in Australia or the Indians in South Africa, any more than the Englishmen without a certain sum of money will be admitted to Chanda. The new law will do nothing to alter this anomalous condition of affairs; nor is it perhaps possible to do so in the present state of public opinion.'

"Of what earthly use such a law will be to the people of India, we cannot see, and yet it is said that India is the only real Empire and without India there is no British Empire. If the Imperial Naturalisation Bill secures no equality of rights decided on merits, then it has little claim from the pompous name it bears."

(b)—Home.

The future policy of Muhammadans.

7. In its issue, dated the 17th and 24th April 1912, the Sadiq-ul-Akhbar (Rewari), publishes an article headed "The future policy of Muhammadans." The paper makes the following suggestions on the above subject :—

(1) That Muhammadans should live in unity with the rest of the population, and that they should have as their leaders (only) such men as have received an English education, wish their country and community well, do not hanker after fame, and are rich and title-holders.

(2) That they should make strenuous efforts to acquire Western education.

(3) That they should rely on themselves, and demand their rights from Government instead of begging favours from it.

(4) That the Muslim League and the leaders of the community should respectfully request Government to give posts to the unemployed educated Muhammadans.

(5) That Government should (be induced to) distribute all public appointments between Hindus and Muhammadans in proportion to their respective numerical strength.

(6) That they should establish technical, commercial, and agricultural schools also ; Government service alone being insufficient for their maintenance.

(7) That they should give up extravagance and pleasure.

The Army Commission.

8. The Paisa Akhbar (Lahore), of the 24th April 1912, has a note entitled "The question of reducing the (cost of the) Indian Army." Writing about the Nicholson Committee, the paper says that the best way to effect the above reduction would be to decrease the number of British officers in native regiments, and to replace highly-paid Europeans in the Commissariat, Clothing, Equipment, Shipping and other Departments, by able Indians.

Sir J. D. Rees.

9. The Paisa Akhbar (Lahore), of the 26th April 1912, has a note entitled "East Nottingham's representative (lit. membership) in Parliament." It has deeply pained the paper to learn that the above constituency has returned to Parliament, not Sir Henry Cotton, but a man like Sir J. D. Rees, "who is the worst specimen of the few (retired) Anglo-Indian Officers who have the pride of colour and race and regard Indians with feelings of contempt." As a Liberal member of Parliament for the past few years, it adds, Sir J. D. Rees left nothing undone to insult and offend Indians.

Mr. Montagu on Indian affairs.

10. The following is from the Observer (Lahore), of 27th April 1912 :—

"When moving the second reading of the Government of India Bill and replying to criticisms, the Under-Secretary of State for India made speeches of which a summary has been wired by Reuter, but for the sake of Mr. Montagu's reputation we hope that it is not a full summary. For if Reuter's telegram is to be credited, the Under-Secretary of State is fast developing a Gladstonian hatred of Musalmans. In the official despatches about the administrative changes, the Government of India definitely pledged themselves to safeguard the educational interests of the Muhammadans of Eastern Bengal. Lord Crewe repeated and endorsed the promise in the House of Lords. That practically nothing has yet been done to redeem it, there is no need to reiterate. What is far more deplorable is the fact that the Under-Secretary of State appears not only to have ignored the promise but also to be emphatically against its performance. Unless Reuter's report is a defective one, Mr. Montagu seems to be of opinion that Eastern Bengal Muhammadans have 'no right' to expect anything beyond the appointment of a co-religionist on the Executive Council of the new Presidency and the Governor passing a portion of the year at Dacca. If this is really the view of Mr. Montagu, we record our emphatic protest against it as not merely unreasonable and unfair but also in violation of solemn pledges, and hope that the Government of India will make the matter clear.

"The Under-Secretary of State's colossal ignorance of Indian affairs becomes evident from his assertions that the Muhammadans of India are not a homogeneous nationality and that the Musalmans of Eastern Bengal have little or no relation with those outside Bengal. Nothing could be further from the facts. Indian Musalmans have as much cohesion among themselves as the people of Great Britain, and mere assertions, borrowed from administrators who have left behind them nothing but unsavoury memories for the Muslims, cannot affect the truth. The homogeneity of the Musalmans of India, their relations to one another, can be known to those alone who know anything of the shock that convulsed the Muslims throughout the country on hearing of the reversal of the Partition, to those alone who know anything of the doings of the Muhammadan Educational Conference and the Muslim League, to those alone who know anything of the Musalman demand, made from the length and breadth of India, for safeguarding the rights of their brethren of Eastern Bengal. If the demand has not been vociferous it does not indicate that the feeling is not keen. It only shows that Indian Musalmans do not generally follow Western methods of agitation, some of which they regard as discreditable.

"Again Mr. Montagu's solemn assurance that it has never been the policy of the British Government to constrict a Province for the benefit of one race and religion was hardly necessary. No one dreamt that the Partition was designed solely for the benefit of one race or religion. There are, however, many people in India who, assurances of the Radical Ministry and the Government of India notwithstanding, hold the view that the revocation of the Partition not only aims at the conciliation of Bengalees but will specially benefit the Bengalee race and the Hindu religion. The Under-Secretary of State is very tender with regard to the grievances, real or imaginary, of Bengalees. He calls the Partition as drawing a line across the Bengali speaking race. But he is obviously oblivious of the fact that the unsettlement of the Partition has given rise to a genunine complaint on the part of Musalmans of Eastern Bengal and that nothing substantial has yet been done to relieve them from the fear of a recurrence of Bengalee domination.

"The assertion that the policy of the administrative changes has been welcomed by all races and creeds is another proof of Mr. Montagu's want of intimate touch with India. If he had been carefully reading the newspapers, he would have learnt that a large number of even his Bengalee friends do not welcome the changes and 'will not tolerate' the inclusion of certain districts in the new Province of Behar and Orissa. That many Europeans in India disapprove of the policy goes without saying. But the most convincing proof of the dislike with which it is viewed by Muhammadans was afforded by the loudly cheered remarks of the Nawab of Dacca who, as President of the last session of the All-India Muslim League, characterised the undoing of the Partition as a great wrong done to the Muslim community and as a sop to the enemies of British rule. No amount of quibbling can disguise that the reversal of the Partition came at a time when the agitation against it was subsiding. What the ultimate outcome of the policy enunciated in the administrative changes will be it is unsafe to predict. But it is somewhat premature on the part of those responsible for the changes to congratulate themselves upon the results of those changes. They had better not count their eggs before they are hatched."

The Government of India Bill.

11. The following is from the Panjabee (Lahore), of 27th April 1912 :—

"The comment of the Daily News on the new India Bill reveals some knowledge of India, even which the opposition in the House of Commons had not. Its objection that United Provinces are not given an Executive Council before the new Province of Behar is selected for it is no doubt reasonable. But in all probability both the Provinces may be simultaneously given the Council. The other criticism that the Bill has not yet alleviated the antagonism between the Hindus and Muhammadans is unreasonable. It is easy to create a difference and plant an injustice but difficult to deal with the effects of folly. Apart from the annulment of the Partition, the Government have not yet done anything to settle the Hindu-Muhammadan estrangement. The principle, however, has been affirmed and there is also a feeling of considerable delicacy in the matter. But we believe that in a short time this will be done. Of course, nobody as yet says a good word for the Punjab, but its turn for improvement will come when the Government is established at Delhi."

The Times on Indian Autonomy.

12. Under the heading "Dame 'Times' Homily" the Panjabee (Lahore), of 30th April 1912, has the following :—

"The London Times never had up-to-date ideas of India and it never tolerated progress in any country except probably those populated by its favoured races. With regard to the Indian autonomy, about which there is a clear and unmistakeable reference made in the Despatch of August last, that Tory organ has expressed some alram and gives its patent advice, of which we are all familiar. Its affirmations about Asia and the Orient surprise none more than the Asiatics and Orientals. It says :—

"'India and China—and we may add Persia also—can only be held together by the exercise of powerful centralised control. We are all for the judicious widening of the powers of the provincial administrations of India but not for any system which would resemble federalized autonomy. The Government of India are the direct custodians of the whole country and must ever remain so, and they or the Secretary of State will be well-advised to obliterate without any delay the notion that any other principle of administration deserves or is likely to receive a moment's serious thought.'

"No doubt when the Tory Party comes to power there will be plenty of opportunity to do this, and Indians know that in spite of the so-called non-party control of India, the Tory Party can undo what its enemy, the Liberal Party, does. But may we not ask if the present Government of Great Britian and Ireland is not also the 'direct custodian' of the whole country from the memorable times of Charles and James and if the Englishmen do not like the administrative wisdom and principles of their ancestors, why should Indians and Asiatics do? The Times is very apt to forget the history of its own people and still more apt to err in applying great and progressive principles to facts and events that make other people's history."

II.—Afghanistan and Trans-Frontier.

Nil.

III.—Native States.

Hyderabad affairs.

13. Writing under the heading "What sort of officials the Hyderabad State wants," the Paisa Akhbar (Lahore), of the 25th April 1912, complains that most of the men entrusted with the management of the Nizam's dominions hold antiquated views, and know nothing of the trend of the times. It also pains every Muhammadan to see, adds the paper, that his co-religionists are not appreciated in the State, and that non-Musalmans are frequently appointed to higher posts. If outsiders alone are wanted for service in Hyderabad why should not (the Chief's) brethren in faith be imported into the State? The young Nizam has interested himself in the matter, and there are consequently strong hopes of his acting up to this unselfish suggestion.

The Maharaja of Nabha.

14. The following is from the Tribune (Lahore), of 28th April 1912 :—

"We received official intimation, which we published in our issue of the 23rd March, that His Highness the Maharaja of Nabha would be installed on the masnad and invested with full powers by the Political Agent of the Phulkian States and Bahawalpur at a public Durbar at Nabha on the 27th of that month. A month has passed, but we have received no information that the Durbar was held or that the Maharaja was invested with full powers. It seems very unlikely that no intimation of such an event should have been given to the public or the Press when an announcement was duly made of the forthcoming event. Assuming, therefore, that the Durbar was not held and the Maharaja has not yet been invested with powers may we inquire what is the hitch, or why the ceremony has been postponed? It will be remembered that the present Maharaja, when he was the Tikka Sahib, was a member of the Viceroy's Legislative Council, and he created a most favourable impression by his intelligence and independence."

V.—Native Societies and Religious Matters.

The Satyarth Parkash.

15. The Indar (Lahore), of the 19th April 1912, has an article headed "The Satyarth Parkash or (i.e. and) the Mithyarth Parkash." The genuine Satyarth Parkash, it says, is the one which was published at Benares in 1875 in the lifetime of Swami Dayanand under the supervision of Raja Jai Kishen Das, C.S I. After stating that the editor is bringing out an Urdu edition of this book the paper states that it does not contain the chapters on (the faiths of) Christians and Muhammadans that are to be found in the Satyarth Parkash now in circulation. Indeed, it adds, the latter publication deserves to be called Mityarth Parkash, seeing that it is full of falsehoods untraceable in the original edition. Besides, many an excellent thing recorded in the genuine book has not been included in the later edition of the Satyarth Parkash. Writing against the chhut system in the 1875 edition (page 300), Swami Dayanand remarks that it is grossly unfair to observe chhut in respect of Muhammadans and the English, who are good men, while making an exception in favour of prostitutes. Not only, however, has this passage been excluded from the edition published after the Swami's death; but it has been replaced by others speaking of Muhammadans and Christians as Mlechhas, dirty, &c., and directing (Aryas) to give them a wide berth on the score of their semen emitting a bad odour. Again, it is written in Chapter XI of the original Satyarth Parkash (p. 322) that there is more of peace and happiness under British rule than was enjoyed under the old (lit. those) Rajas, for the reason that the British do not interfere in religious matters and carefully preserve all (? religious) books which they find to be good. The extract shows that Swami Dayanand had a very high opinion of the English, and looked upon their rule as a source of happiness (for India). But this passage, too, has been omitted in the existing edition, which also contains attacks on the English that clash with the views of the Swami. Continuing, the paper remarks that some people raised a loud outcry over its having called Muhammad a Maharishi in a recent issue. Next it quotes an extract from page 67 of the 1875 edition of the Satyarth Parkash in which Dayanand says that Prophets appear in all countries and among every people. "But the 'narrow-minded' (and), 'enterprising' or Nationalist Hindus of our country.... who called themselves Aryas," expunged the remark from the Satyarth Parkash now in circulation. They committed this outrage probably from the thought that their "nationalism" would be injured through the inclusion of Muhammad and Christ among Rishis. Next follows a passage from the original edition in which the founder of the Arya Samaj says that Mlechha is no opprobrious epithet, and that it is used only to denote the inhabitants of countries outside India.

This, adds the Indar, shows clearly enough that Swami Dayanand never used the word in a contemptuous or opprobrious sense. In the later edition of the Satyarth Parkash, however, the term has been employed to express the deepest contempt for Muhammadans, Christians, &c., and to promote feelings of hatred against them.

Relations between Hindus and Muhammadans.

16. Under the heading "A mischievous recrudescence" the Tribune (Lahore), of 30th April 1912, has the following :—

"The estrangement of feelings between the Hindus and the Muhammadans during the last few years has been a factor full of anxiety for the future. The King Emperor was grieved to find it and in his parting message to the people of this country, His Imperial Majesty made a solemn appeal to all to sink their personal feelings and jealousies and promote the cause of unity and concord. It was sincerely hoped that the solicitude expressed by His Gracious Majesty would have some effect upon the contending classes and that the latter would make some serious and earnest efforts in the direction indicated by our Sovereign. Thanks to the activities of some anonymous scribblers, such, it appears, is not to be the case in this province. A favourite method of these irresponsible writers, who have of late been a great deal in evidence, is to take in hand one or other Hindu Magistrate and to insinuate, under the pretence of comparison, that the said officer has not been dealing even-handed justice between the different classes. Now such methods of comparison are obviously unfair. Indeed, they only betray some personal grudge or disappointed ambition on the part of the writer, who indulges in them. The criminal law of the country allows the trying magistrates the fullest discretion in awarding sentences. It also differentiates between the cases of first offenders and hardened convicts, and provides altogether different punishments in these cases. Nor is the fact that the sentences have in a few stray instances been modified on appeal go to show that the Magistrate has not been strictly impartial in dealing out sentences. The award of sentences is a matter of discretion, the exercise of which, in the circumstances of the case, is a matter of opinion, and the modification of sentences on appeal does not necessarily cast any reflection on the capacity of the original Court. We are sorry to refer to these things and would have avoided them, had it not been that these scribes, who thus wantonly abuse the privilege of anonymity, get prominence in the columns of some friendly newspapers. We have had enough of these dirty tricks in the past and it is time that they ceased altogether. It is certainly the duty of every responsible journalist to discourage such tactics, the only effect of which is to promote feelings of enmity and hatred between the different classes of his Majesty's subjects."

VI.—Legislation.

Suggestions for modifying Council Regulations.

17. The Panjabee (Lahore), of 27th April 1912, has the following under the heading "Practical majority in Council" :—

"It is said that the Supreme Government are considering the question of modifying the Council Regulations before the elections for the new Council commence in October next. Moreover, the new Bengal Council is yet to be constituted, and the defects of the old regulations are to be removed. Although no radical changes are proposed, it is essential to make a beginning in changing the wrong principle of giving a nominal majority in the Provincial Councils, and of continuing the racial barrier and preference. The baneful effect of racial partiality has already been deplored and, in the Punjab, where the populations are nearly balanced, the franchise ought to be equal and the competition determined on merit only. Non-official members are only in name forming a majority, but if the reform scheme is to be appreciated, practical majority must be secured Non-English speaking worthies in the Council are absolutely out of date and should be eliminated. They may be useful in District Boards and Municipalities, but of what use are they in the Legislative Council? We hope that the proposed modifications will tend to remove some of the glaring anomalies pointed out and to make the reform more real than at present."

VII.—General Administration.

(a)—Judicial.

The case against the Khan of Hoti.

18. The Akhbar-i-'Am (Lahore), of the 12th April 1912, publishes a leader headed "The Khan (lit. Nawab) of Hoti('s case) in the Viceregal (lit. Indian) Legislative Council." The newspaper-reading public, it says, is fully aware of the severe hardships and oppression to which the above well-known and prominent rais has been subjected. It also knows what serious irregularities and "dark" acts of high-handedness the Government of the Frontier Province has committed in connection with the case against him. Next the paper refers to the questions recently asked in the Supreme Council on the subject, and goes on to remark that the District Magistrate of Peshawar will now have to defend his conduct, while the Chief Commissioner will have to explain his inconsiderate treatment of the Khan. Why, it asks, did Sir George Roos-Keppel grossly insult the nobleman in question in his Manual of Pashtu? Again, why did he bring undue pressure, or caused it to be brought to bear, on the latter to give a donation (for the Islamia College, Peshawar)? If the aspersions cast by him on the Khan in the above book are false he ought to be taught a lesson and brought to his senses. Acts like those laid at his door constitute an insult to Government administration, while it is such unworthy doings that cause feelings of discontent in the country. The Government of India should see that the Khan, his peers, and his friends and relations are given no cause to feel disgusted with it. The loyal services rendered by him are well-known, and his reward should not have been what he has received at the Chief Commissioner's hands. After remarking that it has made the above comments in the best interests of both Government and the people, the paper observes that, if the Chief Commissioner had not been a personal enemy of the Khan's, the District Magistrate would not have dared to commit the gross illegalities he did. How, it asks, can the ruled know peace of mind when such responsible and highly placed officers can feed fat their personal grudges in the heartless manner alleged? Again, how can this peace be tasted by the leading residents of a province, the head of which can commit wanton acts of high handedness like those referred to?

The case against the Khan of Hoti.

19. The Zamindar (Lahore), of the 25th April 1912, publishes a communication headed "Removal of a dangerous misunderstanding." The writer—Ghulam Hussaia Sub-Registrar and Honorary Magistrate, Peshawar,—says that a private letter addressed by him to the Khan of Hoti has been published in some newspapers. The epistle asked the Khan to give a donation in aid of the Islamia College proposed to be established at Peshawar, adding that this conduct on his part would win him the respect of, and make him popular with, both the authorities and the Muslim community. This was the writer's personal opinion, but it has been converted into an official view; while the publication of the communication has caused the misunderstanding that the recent prosecution of the Khan was due to the Government of the Frontier Province having been displeased with him owing to his refusal to subscribe towards the funds of the aforesaid college. The correspondent, however, emphatically declares that the letter in question was his own work, and that he did not write it at the instance of any one. This should be evident from the fact that the epistle was addressed at a time when no movement had yet been launched to collect money for the Islamia College. As to the writer's words that a donation from the Khan would please the Chief Commissioner, he used them, not at the instance of Sir George Roos-Keppel or any other highly placed officer, but owing to his conviction that every act of charity meant to promote the public good was viewed with approbation by Government. He also points out that there are several raises in the Frontier Province who have so far given nothing for the College, but who have not had cases trumped up against them.

The paper has also an article headed "False reasoning," in which it deeply sympathises with the Khan of Hoti for his unlawful treatment by the District Magistrate of Peshawar. It cannot, however, refrain from pointing out that the Khan and some newspapers have made a mistake in alleging that the case against him was concocted at the instance of Sir George Roos-Keppel. A perusal of the foregoing letter shows clearly enough that no official pressure was brought to bear on the Khan to subscribe towards the funds of the Islamia College. It is surprising that some papers, especially the Tribune, should have levelled the above charge against the present Chief Commissioner of the Frontier Province. Sir George is wholly above the mean feelings of revenge ascribed to him.

The reform of the Punjab Judiciary.

20. The following is from the Tribune (Lahore), of 30th April 1912 :—

"* * * The scheme is in the nature of a patchwork and is not free from traces of that grudging and grasping spirit, which often take away from the value of real reform. In fact, the new scheme of District and Session Judges for the Province touches only the fringe of the question of the reform of the judiciary. It attempts only at Polishing a part of the machinery, while leave all other parts to flourish in their antiquated form. No attempt, we may point out, has been made to raise the status of the highest tribunal of the province to that of a Chartered High Court. The Hon'ble Rai Bahadur Shadi Lal made pointed reference to this question in his speech at the last Budget discussion in the Provincial Legislative Council but failed to elicit any reply either from the Lieutenant-Governor or any other official member. The question has assumed a much greater importance since the transfer of the seat of the Government of India to Delhi. It would be indeed an anomaly if the highest appellate court exercising jurisdiction over the capital of the Indian Empire were nothing better than an ordinary Chief Court. Since it is not possible to establish a Chartered High Court for the area of about 180 square miles, included in the Imperial enclave, the only possible course is to retain the present judicial jurisdiction of the Punjab Chief Court.

* * * * *

"It will be perhaps uncharitable if we make no reference to the obvious advantages of the new scheme of District and Sessions Judges. They will be readily recognised. It can be at once admitted that the new scheme will facilitate the early hearing and disposal of civil and criminal appeals by the District and Sessions Judge. It will reduce the period in the lock-up of the under-trial prisoners, who are committed to the Sessions. So far as the new scheme goes to avoid and minimise the tedious law's delays, it is welcomed by every right-thinking person. We do not know whether it is in contemplation to withdraw the powers under section 30, Criminal Procedure Code, from the District Magistrates and certain Magistrates of the First Class. If these powers are withdrawn, it will be a distinct and additional gain to the accused persons in cognizable cases. At present, a large number of cases, which would be otherwise committed to the Sessions, are tried and disposed of by Magistrates exercising powers under Section 30. If these powers are withdrawn, these cases will have to be committed to the Sessions to the manifest advantage of the accused. The latter in that case will be able to comprehend exactly the nature of the charge, the character of the evidence against him and thereby will be enabled to enter on his defence with better chances in his favour. Since the fundamental axiom of law is that there is no presumption whatsoever against the accused in criminal cases, this duplicate process is certainly a desirable reform. We are aware that in the Punjab there is some sort of prejudice entertained by the executive against the committal stage and that its elimination was once suggested in the Criminal Administration Report. But the highest judicial officers and eminent Judges have admitted its usefulness and we do not think that any elimination of the committal procedure is in contemplation. At any rate, we should advocate its extension by the withdrawal of the power at present conferred on Magistrates under section 30, Criminal Procedure Code.

"The creation of District and Sessions Judges involves the adjudication of the bigger civil cases by the Subordinate Judges. The most important question therefore naturally is how far our Subordinate Judges or Judicial Assistants are fitted for the discharge of their onerous duties. Unfortunately, the rules of recruitment for the judiciary in this province are anomalous to a degree. * * * *

* The present Subordinate Judges are generally drawn from the ranks of Extra Assistant Commissioners. Now an Extra Assistant Commissioner may have, if he has risen from the ranks of revenue or ministerial officers, considerable experience of revenue matters and office routine, but these cannot make up for the defect in legal qualifications. Sometimes, Subordinate Judges are drawn from the ranks of Munsifs. Now a Munsif in the Punjab has, of course, some experience of civil work but seldom any legal training. So, in every case, the Subordinate Judge in the Punjab, whatever may be his original cadre, does not happen to possess any legal qualification. If a thorough reform of the judiciary is aimed at, this anomalous system must at once cease. Let Subordinate Judges be recruited solely from able and efficient Munsifs, and let the latter be drawn only from the ranks of qualified legal practitioners. Let academic degrees and legal training be a condicio sine qua non for the provincial judicial service. Otherwise, no real reform is possible.

(b)—Police.

Complaint against the Peshawar Police.

21. The Punjab Advocate (Mianwali), of the 25th April 1912, reproduces a communication which recently appeared in the Zamindar from Lambardar Moaz Khan, of Bhana Mari (Frontier Province), who complained of his name having been entered in Register X and of his subsequent ill-treatment by the Peshawar Police. Commenting on the same the Editor tells Muhammadans that this is only the beginning and that "all" will have to sell their property and take up their residence in the Punjab, witness the cases of the above Lambardar and the Khan of Hoti. Next he urges all his "Frontier brethren" to care nothing for the authorities, but to submit memorials to the Viceroy for the amalgamation of the Frontier Province with the Punjab.

Recrudescence of dacoities in the Punjab.

22. Writing about 'More dacoities in the Punjab' the Panjabee (Lahore), of 27th April 1912 remarks:—

"Reports of dacoities from the North-Western districts continue to be received, and both our Jhelum and Attock correspondents have described the painful events. It was, however, lately explained by His Honour the Lieutenant-Governor that, failing to get the Viceroy's permission to arm select villages, Government have asked the District Magistrates to give licenses for keeping arms to respectable people more freely. It is necessary that this facility should be largely availed of and every village and town exposed to plunder must be informed of this fact, and arms secured by all its prominent people. We hope that this news will be communicated to all those who are interested in it. We also hope that the other measures promised by Government are in progress. Dacoities this year are more numerous than in the last year when there were 48 cases. In 1909 there were in all 36 cases of dacoity. In the more important cases, the trans-Frontier Pathans were concerned. In this year also the same persons are active and they spread themselves into all the unprotected places. It is necessary that both the Imperial and Local Governments should try to put an end to this crime before it develops into more formidable proportions. We are afraid detection and punishment is hopeless in a majority of cases and this failure is sure to give further impetus to crime."

Cases of Police torture.

23. The following is from the Panjabee (Lahore), of 30th April 1912:—

"It is encouraging to find that, of late, a larger number of police torture cases are tried in courts and the accused are punished. It shows a welcome change of policy of the department to weed out all the undesirable elements that are responsible for the public complaint. In Hyderabad (Sind) a case has just been decided in which four policemen have been convicted. We hope that the conviction will have a deterrent effect on all. But how will the whole police force come to know of the punishment inflicted on the guilty? What steps does the department take to inform the results of such cases to all the force, so that it may serve as a warning to the black sheep? Lately the Ferozepore Torture Case ended in enhanced punishment and the offenders received their due. Will the authorities take note of the remarks made in the judgment to warn the force against mistakes and errors? We invite the attention of the police authorities to the necessity of sending round circulars giving the results of convictions and warning the force of their irregularities noticed by the Judges and Magistrates reflecting on the police."

(c)—Municipal and Cantonment affairs.

The octroi question.

24. The following is from the Panjabee (Lahore), of 27th April 1912:—

"For some reason or other the people of both the Punjab and the United Provinces seem to be opposed to the abolition of the octroi tax in favour of a direct tax. They find it easier to pay on every article of use brought into the town for sale rather than accept the direct burden of paying for their Municipal benefits. They cannot regulate their life to the requirements of a direct tax, however reasonable it may be. They do not object to the octroi levy because it is to some extent within their power not to pay, if they are unable to pay, by foregoing the use of articles on account of the enhanced price. The poorer classes can regulate their life with greater facility, when indirect taxes are imposed, and this is a strong point in their argument which it is not easy to ignore. The well-to-do classes who can afford to pay more and who, naturally, purchase articles of necessity and luxury suited to their means, bear a proportionate and reasonable burden of taxation. However carefully a direct levy is regulated, it cannot give as much satisfaction to the poorer classes, as the indirect octroi. Especially when this is substituted by a terminal tax on passengers, the equitable distribution of the Municipal burden is at once destroyed. The United Provinces Government have, by an executive order, abolished the system of octroi and driven the Municipalities to the necessity of adopting terminal tax and similar direct burdens We notice that the people have made their protests. But the Government are determined, and from their standpoint they are probably right. The octroi is the most offensive and inquisitorial form of local taxation and it interferes with free trade. According to the Western principles of taxation it cannot probably be appreciated. Moreover, it obstructs the free imports of foreign goods. In the Punjab, however, octroi does not interfere with the free importation of foreign goods and trade is as brisk in this Province as if there was no octroi. It is even doubtful, if octroi were abolished, whether a further impetus would be given to the import trade. This peculiar position is due to the character of the people and their economic condition. In the administration report of the Municipalities in the Punjab, we find that the question of abolition of octroi is discussed and the strong objection of the people also noted. It is not possible, at this stage, to interfere with it. Nor is there any necessity now. But some day, the Government are sure to press the question and do what the United Provinces Government have already done. The question, therefore, should be considered in all its aspects. The Hon'ble Mr. Gokhale has, unexpectedly perhaps, given his support in favour of the octroi. In the last meeting of the Imperial Council he spoke in support of the Municipal octroi and said that it was unwise to abolish it. He did not give his reasons fully, but it is possible he regards it as a very useful source of Municipal finance which can be regulated according to the needs and circumstances, without disturbing the people. It is certainly a powerful instrument of local taxation which can be handled with remarkable facility and, being, moreover, suited to the sentiments of the people, ought not to be set aside by an executive mandate. The question is well worth examination in the Imperial Council and we hope that Mr. Gokhale himself or some member from the United Provinces will bring in a resolution. The Punjab is much more interested in the question, though there is no immediate danger threatening a change. With the advent of economic changes in the people, the necessity to abolish the octroi might arise. Moreover, the Government seem to object to it on principle. At any rate, the subject requires open discussion, especially from the popular standpoint."

Complaint against the Assistant Cantonment Magistrate, Sikandarabad.

25. The Paisa Akhbar (Lahore), of the 25th April 1912, has a note entitled "Punishment of fine for reciting Maulud." It begins by publishing a letter from a Sikandarabad correspondent, who reports that, on the 16th idem the local Assistant Cantonment Magistrate, Captain Buller (?), fined certain persons Rs. 35 for having recited Maulud in a mosque. He adds that the event has caused feelings of deep pain and regret among the Muhammadans of the place.

Commenting on the above the Editor expresses the hope that Government will look into Captain Buller's deplorable and "injurious" order, and will uphold the glorious traditions of British justice by not tolerating punishment for the performance of a harmless religious rite, especially as the occurrence has taken place near the capital of the largest Islamic State in India.

With reference to the above the Observer (Lahore), of 27th April 1912, publishes the following note under the heading "Fine for performance of religious ceremony" :—

"The Paisa Akhbar publishes a communication which, if true, brings to the public notice an outrage on the religious feelings of Muhammadans. It is stated that some Musalmans, who had been reciting the Milad Sharif (verses in praise of the Prophet and dealing with his life) one night in a mosque at Secunderabad, were recently challaned and sentenced by the Assistant Cantonment Magistrate to fines varying from Rs. 20 to Re. 1. We hope the story is not true, but if the report is correct, the affair reflects little credit on those who complained and on the Magistrate who inflicted the punishment, and that in a town which is very near the capital of the premier Muslim State in India. We invite the attention of the military authorities to the matter and hope justice will be done."

(d)—Education.

The teaching of history and the Government.

26. The following is from the Tribune (Lahore), of 1st May 1912 :—

"When the new department of Education under the Government of India was brought into existence, it was felt that education would take some definite step in advance on the road to progress. Whether there are any signs of that expectation being realized in the near future it is difficult to say. But there are undoubtedly some directions in which the uniformity introduced by that department has already done great harm to the progress of education on sound lines. We shall support what we contend for by showing what has happened with respect to the place of history in the curriculum of our schools and colleges. It is well known that both in school and college education these curricula are controlled, regulated, and prescribed by Government. The people per se have no voice in their determination. In the Punjab English history has been taken out of the syallabus in history laid down for the Matriculation Examination. In the B.A. degree examination the syallabus in history is the weakest imaginable. In the Bombay University the Governor fought the Senate for a long time and ultimately had his way in dethroning history from its place in the University curriculum. The more illiberal and narrow-minded among the rulers of India seem to be anxious that young Indians should not read English History at all. Something has now happend in connection with the Calcutta University which shows that the hostility of the bureaucracy is by no means confined to the teaching of English History, but extends equally to the study of Indian History. Our readers will probably remember that the Senate of the University of Calcutta adopted a proposal to found a Regius Professorship of History in order to commemorate the Royal visit to India. The proposal which was in the first instance made with the approval of His Excellency the Viceroy has been vetoed by the Government of India.

"It appears that shortly before the last annual Convocation of the Calcutta University the Vice-Chancellor, Sir Ashutosh Mukerjee, in an interview with His Excellency Lord Hardinge, preferred the request that Government might provide funds for the establishment of two chairs—one for History and antiquities and the other for higher Mathematics. His Excellency promised that the Government would do so. A little later the Private Secretary to the Viceroy wrote a letter to the Vice-Chancellor asking that the question of the two Professorships should be brought before the Senate and a formal request for their establishment made to the Government of India in order that an announcement might be made by His Excellency in the course of his Convocation speech. This we are told was done. The Senate passed the usual resolution and it was sent up to the Government of India in the usual course. It is now announced in the Calcutta papers that it has been vetoed by the Government of India. Towards the end of last month Mr. Sharpe, Secretary to Government in the Department of Education, told the Vice-Chancellor that the scheme for the establishment of a Professorship of Indian History might fall through. He said further that the Government of India might object to such a chair on the ground that its duties would clash with those of the Oriental Research Institute to be established at Delhi. At the end of March an official letter was received by the University containiug their views. The decision has naturally caused considerable disappointment in Calcutta. It is taken to mean that the bureaucracy is so powerful that it can upset an arrangement to which the Viceroy has accorded his consent. We hope the matter will not be allowed to rest here. The Government of India owes it to the Senate of the University as also to the good name of the statesman who is at present its head to issue an explanation. It is not at all clear why the Government of India should be at all hostile to the study of history. Surely the fact that an Oriental Research Institute is going to be started in Delhi is no argument against the establishment of the Regius Professorship of Indian History in connection with the University of Calcutta."

The adoption of Hindi as universal script for the Punjab.

27. The following is from the Panjabee (Lahore), of 30th April 1912:—

"One of the resolutions passed at the last Hindu Educational Conference held at Lahore during the Easter holidays referred to the desirability of introducing a universal script for primary education, and the Government and the people alike were urged to take necessary steps to bring the proposal into effect. No discussion of any kind took place on the subject nor was any paper read nor speech delivered specially emphasising the importance or necessity of a universal script. Lala Hansraj, B.A., who presided over the elementary section, no doubt, referred to Hindi being adopted as the universal script in elementary schools. So far as the Punjab is concerned very little has been done in an organised way to popularise the use of Hindi. With the exception of the D. A.-V. College and the several Anglo-Sanscrit Schools of the province and a few other spasmodic efforts to teach Hindi, nothing has been done to make Hindi the real language of the hearth and home or to popularise the use of Hindi language and Hindi words in the common daily life of the Punjabis. Even after their college and school study, the students make less use of 'Hindi in their talks and letter writing than other languages. As a matter of fact even religious books, such as Ramayana, Mahabharata and others are being translated into Urdu and are being sold at a cheaper price than in Hindi. With such a disgraceful state of affairs it is no wonder that other provinces laugh at the lack of progress betrayed in this province in popularising Hindi. The Hindu Educational Conference ought to have bestowed more attention towards this question than the mere passing of a lame resolution implyiug no action. A sub-committtee ought to have been appointed to thresh the subject wholly and to clear Hindi of the defects referred to by Lala Madan Gopal, M.A. There is no daily or even good weekly newspaper in Hindi, and no systematic literature. The few monthly journals conducted in Hindi are dying for want of proper support. In the face of such discouraging facts, the demand for a universal script, without defining it or helping it with active labour, cannot have any effect on the Government. A trip to the United Provinces and Rajputana would at once show to a Punjabi how poor he stands in the matter of Hindi. If the Hindu Educational Conference or the Hindu public is really earnest about the wide-spread use of Hindi, work on more practical lines will be necessary than hitherto has been the case."

The Gurukula.

28. The Parkash (Lahore), of the 23rd April 1912, publishes a paragraph headed "What will the graduates of the Gurukula do?" It says that this question, which is being generally asked, means that, as the above institution is not recognised by Government, how will its alumni be able to enter the public service? In the first place, adds the paper, it has never been the mission of the Gurukula to fit its students for service under Government. It should not, however, be difficult for this academy to secure public posts for its alumni. If a graduate of the Bengal National College, which also is not affiliated to any University, can be taken into Government service, there is no reason why those of the Gurukula should be differently treated. Continuing, the paper reports that the Government of the United Provinces has sanctioned an annual grant of Rs. 6,000 for the Nadwat-ul-Ulema, which is to Muhammadans what the Gurukula is to Arya Samajists. Next it remarks that, if Government can tender pecuniary help to the said Muslim institution for the promotion of sectarian education there is no reason why the same should be withheld from the Gurukula, which also imparts the education named.

(f)—Railways and communications.

Overcrowding in trains.

29. The following is from the Panjabee (Lahore), of 27th April 1912:—

"Another question of pressing nature is the overcrowding in trains—especially in third class carriages. Poor third class passengers are everywhere hard hit and the Railway authorities are not very particular in seeing even bare justice done them. Every compartment is built to seat a fixed number of passengers and by statute this is limited. But in practice this is not enforced. Too often the guards and other servants put in more passengers than are specified into a carriage and the result is very uncomfortable and annoying. In England it is made penal to enter a compartment already full and any person presisting to enter a carriage already containing the fixed number is liable to a penalty of £2. The person objecting is entitled to keep the intruder out, but he cannot, however, eject the intruder if he has already entered. In a South African case last month an Englishman travelling in a first class compartment ejected a black man and had to pay a fine for it. But in India nothing is done to prevent overcrowding (though section 109, Railway Act, makes it penal) and to provide further facilities for third class passengers. The Railway receipts are increasing year by year and the authorities cannot reasonably refuse to reform third class travelling arrangements."

Railway accidents and compensation for injuries.

30. The Panjabee (Lahore), of 30th April 1912, has the following:—

"The report for 1911 on accidents which occurred on the several railways in India is no pleasant reading. We are told that 55 persons died and 285 were injured on account of accidents to trains and rolling stock, &c. The deaths due to causes other than accidents such as level-crossing, trespassing, suicides, &c., were 1,627 persons killed and 918 injured. The deaths due to accidents to railways' or contractors' servants were 396 killed and 666 injured. An ordinary man in India who may not be quite familiar with the inner efficiency of the railway administration in India, generally looks upon accidents to trains as a heavenly calamity on earth, as great as the sinking of a ship, or the prevalence of a virulent type of plague, or cholera or earthquake, each one of which takes away hundreds of human lives. The number of deaths due to accidents to trains, viz., 55 on all the railways of India during the whole year 1911, will probably appear to be exceptionally small, and, therefore, not requiring particular notice. But as compared with the quiet and careful nature and habits of the Indian people, who never as a rule expose themselves to danger, even this small number is too much and the railway administrations ought to reduce it by providing adequate safeguards.

"Under the law the railways are responsible to make reparation for injuries to passengers due to train accidents or to the neglect of the railway servants. As a matter of fact compensations are paid by railways only to those who claim for them and prove the validity of their claims in courts. What is required is that poor illiterate people who suffer much whenever accidents take place should be paid compensations for the injuries sustained by them. This class of men do not usually know that they are entitled to compensation and hence they never apply or fight for it. There should be some committees, as there are in European countries, to safeguard the interests of the poor and to represent on their behalf. On comparing the results of the year 1911 with those of the year 1910, the total number killed by all sorts of accidents in the former year is shown to be 2,078 killed and 1,869 injured as against 1,857 killed and 1,664 injured during 1910. The year 1911 thus shows an increase of 221 killed and 205 injured. The travelling public, in spite of feeling thankful to the railway in other respects, must feel a little hesitation in calling the year a good one from the point of efficiency in the railway management. The greatest sinner in respect of accidents of the year was the East Indian Railway and the next to that our North-Western State Railway, the number reported in case of the former being 30 and in case of the latter 23 out of a total of 122 accidents."

(g)—Postal matters.

A complaint.

31. The Haq Pasand (Amritsar), of the 21st (received on the 29th) April 1912, takes exception to the recent circular letter from the Director-General, Post Offices, which lays down that every application for enquiries in respect of a V. P. Parcel shall be accompanied by a (postage) stamp of the value of one anna.

(h)—Miscellaneous.

Government and Industries.

32. The following is from the Tribune (Lahore), of the 8th April 1912 :—

"We have more than once in these columns entered emphatic protests against departments of Government carrying on industrial concerns on an elaborate scale and thereby unduly hampering private enterprise. The Upper India Chamber of Commerce not long ago wrote to the Financial Department of the Government of India recommending that the publication of the accounts of Government owned factories should be made compulsory as is the case with Joint Stock Companies * * * We think that the balance-sheet and the accounts in question should be published in the report of the Department to which the factory in question belongs. The publication is sure to have a wholesome effect. It will show how far the industries carried on are remunerative and how far they really encroach upon the sphere of private enterprise. On general grounds there is no reason why the State should carry on any industry. The proper course for the State is to give every possible encouragement that it can to private enterprise. It has no necessity and indeed it is under no obligation to go further than this. Of course industries carried on by private enterprise can be subsidised in a suitable manner, but that comes under the head of encouragement."

The Imperial Capital.

33. The following is from the Panjabee (Lahore), of 30th April 1912 :—

"The Pioneer reminds us that Delhi is the Imperial Capital only for six months in the year and the other six months she is empty, so that the city must be built to suit the requirements of the cold seasons. Summer is to be severely let alone as Simla will be the capital for the other half of the year. This idea robs Delhi of half its recent joy and, so soon after abandoning Calcutta, is almost shocking. On the other hand Delhi must be so built as to fit the summer and cold season requirements of the Government as well as the people with a view to the ultimate abandonment of Simla. The hill-top Government has absolutely no attraction for the people of India and if the Government of India is to adapt itself more and more to the wishes of the people, the abandonment of Simla, and not of Delhi even partially, is the end to be aimed at. For having changed the Capital from Calcutta to Delhi, the Simla season has been shortening and this shortening can be continued until Delhi is completely built to suit summer fairly well and also until Simla trip is confined to a few officers and for a couple of months in the year only. The Pioneer is putting the cart before the horse in advising the town-planners that Delhi need not have to face a summer and it would be enough to provide for the cold season only."

LAHORE:

The 4th May 1912.

C. STEAD,

Assistant to the Deputy Inspector-General of Police, Criminal Investigation Department, Punjab.

Punjab Government Press, Lahore—6-5-12—1[illegible]07—H. I. S.

[ Confidential. ]

[ Vol. XXV. ] [ No. 19. ]

SELECTIONS

FROM THE

NATIVE NEWSPAPERS

PUBLISHED IN THE PUNJAB.

Examined up to 11th May 1912.

---

CONTENTS.

Page.

I.—Politics.

(a) Foreign—

1. The Muslim-Buddhist Peril (Zamindar) ... 351
2. Russia and Persia (Observer) ... ib.
3. Indian indentured labour (Panjabee) ... ib.
4. Indians in South Africa (Ditto) ... 352
5. Indians in German Colonies (Ditto) ... ib.
6. Chinese affairs (Tribune) ... 353
7. The Turco-Italian War (Tribune) ... ib.
8. Detention of Cretan Deputies on H. M. S. Hampshire (Observer) ... ib.

(b) Home—

9. His Majesty the King Emperor (Zamindar) ... 354
10. The situation in India (Jhang Sial) ... ib.
11. Mark Twain on the future of India (Vakil) ... ib.
12. Home Rule for India (Hindustan) ... 355
13. The poverty of India (Hindu) ... ib.
14. Government and Muhammadans (Paisa Akhbar) ib.
15. Government service and Indians (Tribune) ... 356
16. The need of political education in India (Tribune)... ib.
17. The Nicholson Committee (Tribune) ... 357
18. Provincial Autonomy ( Ditto ) ... ib.

II.—Afghanistan and Trans-Frontier.

Nil.

III.—Native States.

Nil.

IV.—Kine-killing.

19. Hindus and cow-killing (Vakil) ... 358
20. The jhatka-halal question (Loyal Gazette) ... ib.

V.—Native Societies and Religious Matters.

21. Hindus and Muhammadans (Hindu) ... 358
22. Ditto (Muin) ... 359
23. The Golden Temple, Amritsar (Loyal Gazette) ... ib.
24. Complaint against Dharampal (Hindustan) ... ib.
25. The Kapurthala Gurdwara and the Panjabee, Lahore (Khalsa Advocate) ... 360
26. Gurdwara at Kapurthala (Tribune) ... ib.
27. The Tribune (Lahore) and the Sikhs (Khalsa Advocate) ... ib.
28. Mr. Wheeler's book—"India under British Rule" (Tribune) ... 361
29. The coming National Congress (Tribune) ... ib.

Page.

VI.—Legislation.

30. The Hindu and Muhammadan Councillors (Zamindar) ... 362
31. Council Proceedings in the Vernacular (Panjabee) ib.
32. Mr. Jinnah's Waqf Bill (Tribune, Panjabee and Observer) ... ib.
33. Council Regulations (Panjabee) ... 363
34. The Viceroy and the Orissa Tenancy Bill (Tribune) 364
35. Restriction of Lawyers (Tribune) ... ib.
36. Arms Act and Dacoities (Panjabee) ... 365

VII.—General Administration.

(a) Judicial—

37. The Khan of Hoti's case (Akhbar-i-'Am) ... 366

(b) Police—

Nil.

(c) Municipal and Cantonment affairs—

Nil.

(d) Education—

38. Hindu and Sikh students of the Alexandra Girls' School, Amritsar (Hindustan) ... ib.
39. Mr. Godley on Primary Education (Panjabee) ... ib.

(e) Agriculture and questions affecting the land—

Nil.

(f) Railways and Communications—

Nil.

(g) Postal matters—

40. Retrenchment Policy in the Postal Department (Tribune) ... 367

(h) Miscellaneous—

41. The Frontier Province (Punjab Advocate) ... ib.
42. Mahammadans of East Bengal and Government Service (Afghan) ... 368
43. The new capital (Tribune) ... ib.
44. The Bengal Chamber of Commerce (Tribune) ... 369
45. Assaults by Europeans on Indians ( Ditto ) ... ib.

LIST OF NEWSPAPERS AND PERIODICALS EXAMINED BY THE SPECIAL BRANCH AS IT STOOD ON THE 11TH MAY 1912.

| No. | Name. | Locality. | Name of Publisher. | Circulation. |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| | ENGLISH. | | | |
| | DAILY. | | | |
| 1 | Tribune ... | Lahore ... | Bihari Lal ... | 1,758 copies. |
| | TRI-WEEKLY. | | | |
| 2 | Panjabee ... | Lahore ... | Mul Chand ... | 2,424 copies. |
| | BI-WEEKLY. | | | |
| 3 | Observer ... | Lahore ... | Nizam-ud-din ... | 1,000 copies. |
| 4 | Punjab Times and Frontier News. | Rawalpindi ... | J. R. Thapur ... | 200 ,, |
| | WEEKLY. | | | |
| 5 | Arya Patrika ... | Lahore ... | Devi Chand ... | 650 copies. |
| 6 | Harbinger ... | Do. ... | Durga Parshad ... | 300 ,, |
| 7 | Khalsa Advocate .. | Amritsar ... | Bahadur Singh ... | 752 ,, |
| | FORTNIGHTLY. | | | |
| 8 | Jijnasu ... | Lahore ... | Ishar Das ... | ... |
| | MONTHLY. | | | |
| 9 | D. A.-V. College Magazine ... | Lahore ... | Saraswati Nath ... | 1,000 copies. |
| 10 | Forman Christian College Notes.* | Do. ... | ... | ... |
| 11 | Practical Medicine* ... | Delhi ... | ... | ... |
| 12 | Punjab Educational Journal | Lahore ... | R. B. Mohan Lal ... | 700 copies. |
| 13 | Punjab Mission News ... | Do. ... | Revd. Wigram ... | 250 ,, |
| 14 | Ravi ... | Do. ... | Mr. B. M. Jones ... | ... |
| 15 | Review of Religions ... | Kadian (Gurdaspur) ... | Sadr Anjuman Ahmadia, Qadian. | 800 copies. |
| 16 | Science Grounded Religion... | Lahore ... | Dev Rattan ... | 25 ,, |
| 17 | Teacher ... | Dinga (Gujrat) ... | Kanhaya Singh ... | 200 ,, |
| | URDU. | | | |
| | DAILY. | | | |
| 18 | Akhbar-i-'Am ... | Lahore ... | Govind Sahai .. | 630 copies. |
| 19 | Paisa Akhbar ... | Do. ... | Abdul Aziz ... | 1,011 ,, |
| 20 | Watan ... | Do. ... | Muhammad Insha Alla ... | ... |
| 21 | Zamindar ... | Do. ... | Zafar Ali Khan, B.A. ... | ... |
| | BI-WEEKLY. | | | |
| 22 | Vakil ... | Amritsar ... | Abdul Aziz ... | 1,970 copies. |
| | WEEKLY. | | | |
| 23 | Afghan ... | Peshawar ... | Saiyid Muhammad Abdulla | 500 copies. |
| 24 | Ahl-i-Hadis ... | Amritsar ... | Sana-ulla ... | 925 ,, |
| 25 | Ahluwalia Gazette ... | Do. ... | Lehna Singh ... | 500 ,, |
| 26 | Al-Moin ... | Do. ... | Mehraj-ud-din ... | ... |
| 27 | Army News ... | Ludhiana ... | Hira Lal & Co. ... | 1,300 copies. |
| 28 | Arorbans Gazette ... | Amritsar ... | Labh Singh ... | ... |
| 29 | Arya Gazette ... | Lahore ... | Bhowani Das ... | 550 copies. |
| 30 | Badar ... | Qadian, Gurdaspur District | Muhammad Sadiq ... | 200 ,, |

* Not received during the month.

LIST OF NEWSPAPERS AND PERIODICALS EXAMINED BY THE SPECIAL BRANCH AS IT STOOD ON THE 11TH MAY 1912—CONTINUED.

| No. | Name. | Locality. | Name of Publisher. | Circulation. |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| | URDU—CONTINUED. | | | |
| | WEEKLY—continued. | | | |
| 31 | Bharat ... | Jullundur ... | Thakur Sheoratan Singh ... | ... |
| 32 | Civil and Military News ... | Ludhiana ... | Saiyid Muhammad ... | 1,325 copies. |
| 33 | Curzon Gazette ... | Delhi ... | Mirza Hairat ... | 111 „ |
| 34 | Delhi Gazette* ... | Do. ... | Sajjad Husain ... | 200 „ |
| 35 | Edward Gazette* ... | Abbott-abad ... | Muhammad Latif ... | 200 „ |
| 36 | Hakim ... | Qadian, Gurdaspur District | Yakub Ali ... | 900 „ |
| 37 | Haq ... | Delhi ... | Kasim Ali ... | 260 „ |
| 38 | Haq Pasand ... | Amritsar ... | Ram Nath ... | 382 „ |
| 39 | Hindu ... | Lahore ... | Hari Lal Sharma ... | ... |
| 40 | Hindustan ... | Do. ... | Ram Saran Dutt ... | 8,070 copies. |
| 41 | Indar ... | Do. ... | Dharm Pal, B.A. ... | ... |
| 42 | Islam ... | Do. ... | Abdul Latif ... | 200 „ |
| 43 | Jhang Sial ... | Jhang ... | Prabh Dyal ... | 2,262 „ |
| 44 | Kapurthala Akhbar ... | Kapurthala ... | Hamid Husain ... | 155 „ |
| 45 | Loyal Gazette ... | Lahore ... | Amar Singh ... | 200 „ |
| 46 | Lytton Gazette ... | Delhi ... | Bulaki Das ... | 1,000 „ |
| 47 | Milap* ... | Lyallpur ... | Jawahar Lal ... | ... |
| 48 | Millat ... | Lahore ... | Shuja Ulla ... | 1,500 copies. |
| 49 | Mister Gazette ... | Do. ... | Ali Bakhsh ... | 150 „ |
| 50 | Munir ... | Jhang ... | Hafiz Khuda Bakhsh ... | 200 „ |
| 51 | Musalman ... | Amritsar ... | Sana-ulla ... | 400 „ |
| 52 | Nur ... | Qadian, Gurdaspur District | Muhammad Yusaf ... | 200 „ |
| 53 | Nur Afshan ... | Ludhiana ... | Revd Dr. E. M. Wherry ... | 600 „ |
| 54 | Paisa Akhbar ... | Lahore ... | Abdul Aziz ... | 8,377 „ |
| 55 | Parkash ... | Do. ... | Krishan ... | 1,723 „ |
| 56 | Punjab Advocate ... | Mianwali ... | Karm Chand, Bahl ... | 1,000 „ |
| 57 | Punjab Samachar ... | Lahore ... | Hira Lal ... | 705 „ |
| 58 | Rajput Gazette ... | Do. ... | Thakur Sukhram Das ... | 650 „ |
| 59 | Municipal Gazette and Sada-i-Hind. | Do. ... | Din Muhammad ... | 500 „ |
| 60 | Sadiq-ul-Akhbar ... | Bahawalpur ... | Maulvi Ata Ullah ... | 392 „ |
| 61 | Ditto ... | Rewari ... | Safdar Hussain ... | 200 „ |
| 62 | Sanatan Dharm Pracharak ... | Amritsar ... | Rulia Ram ... | 200 „ |
| 63 | Shanti ... | Rawalpindi ... | Kishan Chand Mohan ... | 300 „ |
| 64 | Sialkot Paper ... | Sialkot ... | Todar Mal ... | 500 „ |
| 65 | Siraj-ul-Akhbar ... | Jhelum ... | Maulvi Fakir Muhammad | 450 „ |
| 66 | Tahzib-ul-Niswan ... | Lahore ... | Mumtaz Ali ... | 240 „ |

*Not received during the week.

LIST OF NEWSPAPERS AND PERIODICALS EXAMINED BY THE SPECIAL BRANCH AS IT STOOD ON THE 11TH MAY 1912—CONCLUDED.

| No. | Name. | Locality. | Name of Publisher. | Circulation. |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| | URDU—CONCLUDED. | | | |
| | WEEKLY—concluded. | | | |
| 67 | Victoria Paper ... | Sialkot ... | Gian Chand ... | 600 copies. |
| 68 | Wafadar* ... | Lahore ... | Fazal-ud-din ... | 600 „ |
| 69 | Waqt ... | Do. ... | Ali Husain ... | 200 „ |
| 70 | Watan ... | Do. ... | Muhammad Insha Ullah ... | 1,800 „ |
| 71 | Zamindar ... | Do. ... | Zafar Ali Khan, B.A. ... | 750 „ |
| | FORTNIGHTLY. | | | |
| 72 | Biwah Samachar ... | Lahore ... | Ram Chand ... | 300 copies. |
| 73 | Kam Dhenu ... | Ludhiana ... | Daulat Ram ... | 100 „ |
| 74 | Mohyal Gazette ... | Kala, Jhelum District ... | Mehta Sham Das ... | 250 „ |
| | PERSIAN. | | | |
| | FORTNIGHTLY. | | | |
| 75 | Siraj-ul-Akhbar ... | Kabul ... | Abdul Khalik ... | ... |
| | URDU. | | | |
| | MONTHLY. | | | |
| 76 | Arorbans Parkash ... | Lahore ... | Salig Ram ... | 200 copies. |
| 77 | Arya Musafir ... | Jullundur ... | Wazir Chand ... | 1,300 „ |
| 78 | Jaunar ... | Amritsar ... | Muhammad Ismail Khan... | 200 „ |
| 79 | Kakezai Social Reformer ... | Lahore ... | Fazl Din ... | 200 „ |
| 80 | Makhsan ... | Delhi ... | Abdul Kadir ... | 4,000 „ |
| 81 | Rafiq ... | Lahore ... | Charinji Lal ... | 500 „ |
| 82 | Sadhu ... | Do. ... | Sheobart Lal ... | 500 „ |
| 83 | Martand ... | Do. ... | Kanhya Lal ... | 250 „ |
| 84 | Raghbir Patrika ... | Do. ... | Prab Dial ... | 500 „ |
| 85 | Zaban* ... | Delhi ... | Hamid Husain ... | 500 „ |
| | GURMUKHI. | | | |
| | WEEKLY. | | | |
| 86 | Khalsa Sewak ... | Amritsar ... | Jiwan Singh ... | 1,000 copies. |
| 87 | Punjab Reporter* ... | Do. ... | Ganda Singh ... | ... |
| 88 | Punjabi Surma ... | Lahore ... | Gian Chand ... | 1,000 copies. |

* Not received during the week.

I.—Politics.

(a)—Foreign.

The Muslim-Buddhist Peril.

1. The Zamindar (Lahore), of the 27th and 28th April 1912, publishes an article headed "Union of the Muslim and Buddhist." In the course of its remarks the paper asks whether there exists any person who has not heard of the "Islamic Peril," in the name of which European Powers have seized (almost) all the Muslim kingdoms and have been casting avaricious eyes on the rest. Professor Vambery, it adds, has now invented a "Muslim-Buddhist Peril," to which he invites Europe's special attention in his article on the "Union of the Muslim and Buddhist" in the April number of the Ninteenth Century and After. Next it publishes a translation (of a part) of the said writing.

Russia and Persia.

2. The following is from the Observer (Lahore), of 1st May 1912 :—

"A correspondent writes:—When Russia sent troops to Tabriz and Resht she sent about 1,200 men to Meshed also, though there was not the least need for them, and since then they have been seeking for an excuse to fasten their hold on that city. Prince Dabiga, the Russian Consul-General, has been very active in this respect. The formation of a party in Meshed favouring the Ex-Shah has been due to his energy. It will be remembered that the Russian Consul-General was intermediary for transmitting telegrams from the Ex-Shah to the agitators! A man called Yussef Khan Herati was the Russian Consul-General's chief instrument and headed the pro-Ex-Shah movement. These people were induced to take refuge in the shrine of Imam Reza. There they carried on their intrigue in favour of the Ex-Shah encouraged by the secret as well as the open support of the Russian Consul-General. Indeed Yussef Khan Herati was from time to time (whenever he secretly left the shrine) afforded refuge at the Russian Consulate-General. The aim obviously was not to raise an insurrection in favour of the Ex-Shah but to effect an occupation of Meshed. Gradually the agitation grew. Notwithstanding the fact that there was a Governor, and Persian troops from Meyshapour were on their way to strengthen those already in Meshed, the Russian Consul-General proclaimed martial law and asked the Russian General in command of the Russian troops at Meshed to deal with the situation. The comic part of the affair is that the Russians now began hostilities against those very persons whom they had instigated to bring about this state of things. But they took care first to disarm the Persian police and troops. They then attacked the shrine in spite of entreaties from Persian authorities and in spite of their protest against such a profanation. The shrine is the most sacred in Persia and is the holiest place of pilgrimage of the Shia world. From all parts of the Muhammadan world thousands of pilgrims yearly pay their reverence to the shrine. Indeed many pilgrims have been killed during the Russian bombardment while they were in the act of praying and making their devotions. According to an account given by the keeper of shrine (a great personage who represents the person of the Shah at the shrine) as a result of the bombardment the mosque is almost destroyed, the fine gold dome has been almost demolished and all the doors have been destroyed.

"The keeper of the shrine himself was arrested by the Russian Consul-General. The courtyards of the mosque, so sacred in the eyes of the Muhammadans, were filled with Russian Cossacks and soldiers. Indeed courtyards which pilgrims entered with so much reverence and which to the Muhammadans is sacred ground were turned into stables and were filled with the horses of the troops. Many Muhammadan monarchs including Nadir Shah and other notables have at various times presented the shrine with priceless presents. Many of them have been destroyed in the bombardment and many are missing.

"There was a report from St. Pertersburg that the keeper of the shrine at Meshed had thanked the Russian for respecting the shrine. Any child reading this report should know what importance to attach to it. The Russians at Meshed at the point of bayonet have extracted this letter from the keeper of the shrine. But the accounts received of the attack on the mosque and on the shrine, which has been almost demolished, is ample evidence of the nature of the letter extracted from the keeper of the shrine."

3. The Panjabee (Lahore), of 2nd May 1912, has the following about "The glories of indentured labour" :—

Indian indentured labour.

"At the last session of the Imperial Council Mr. Gokhale's proposal to stop indentured Indian labour was not accepted by the Government. Its glories were loudly praised by the Hon'ble Mr. Clark and now Germany threatens to obtain Indian indentured labour and get it into German East Africa. In the Reichstag the Colonial Minister said that the influence of Indian merchants in East Africa was a serious matter. The English Government which itself took measures against Indian immigration, 'could not complain if Germany did likewise.' So free or fair labour is not wanted and indentured slavery is in requisition.

Mr. Montagu in his reply in the House of Commons said that 'Lord Crewe was not disposed to encourage any new scheme of indentured emigration from India to places outside British Empire.' But what difference does it make to the Indians themselves whether they go in or outside the Empire?"

Indians in South Africa.

4. Under the heading "Perils black and white" the Panjabee (Lahore), of 2nd May 1912, publishes the following:—

"The 'black peril' outcry has been raised with greater intensity in Johannesburg and Natal because a number of outrages on white women have been committed by the blacks. One Transvaal member, Mr. Munnik, has proposed that the minimum penalty for such outrages should be hanging. Very good. What is the maximum punishment, then? Perhaps he would suggest lynching. Very good. But then what is the minimum and maximum punishment for the same offence committed on black women by white men? Miss Olieve Schriener has published sufficient facts to show that that is by no means a rare offence. What will Mr. Munnik of the Transvaal recommend to punish that? The punishment of crime should not at all be determined by colour distinctions but it should be severely dealt with, wherever found."

Indians in German Colonies.

5. The following is from the Panjabee (Lahore), of the 4th May 1912:—

"The determination of Germany to treat Indian residents in her Colonies no better than Great Britain, though perfectly logical, introduces a new and anxious phase of the vexed question of the status of the Indians as British citizens. Until now the British Indians who settled down in East African possessions of Germany, had little difficulty of a racial kind. Their qualities of honesty, hard work, frugality and patience had made their path fairly successful and now German settlers feel obliged to take a leaf out of recent British history and try to oust the Indians from their Colonial possessions. It is doubtless very interesting to see what will be the attitude of the Imperial Government and of those who are proud of having India as the brightest and biggest part of the greatest Empire in the world. As for us in India, we have just been rejoicing over the recent visit of Their Majesties who have been impressed with the loyalty and love of the millions of this country to the British Throne. We have administrative reforms promulgated on the basis of securing equality of treatment to all British subjects of equal merit. The future development of India and Indians is decided and our watchwords for the future are hope, contentment and progress. We must, therefore, look forward to times when the legitimate claims of the people of this country will be recognised and granted not only in our own country, but in the whole of the British Empire. We are citizens of the British Empire and our status is theoretically quite equal to that of the European British subjects. And every day efforts are made to make the status equal in practice also, provided that in point of merit the Indian is no inferior. At present education is imperfect, the masses are uneducated and from a sanitary point of view the people are lacking. But the moment the Indians emigrate, they mingle with other colonists and pursue peaceful occupations for themselves. They are entitled to do this and it is the duty of the State to give them adequate protection in the British Colonies. But unfortunately trade and labour jealousies have stepped in to mar the equal progress of the Indians abroad. The British fellow-citizens in the Colonies were the first to look upon the Indian workmen and traders with jealousy and induce their Government to place many restrictions. The history of the South African Indians during the past ten years furnishes ample evidence to show how unjust and cruel the authorities are to the Indians. Both injustice and cruelty, we find, became poignant after the British consolidation of the Colonial Self-Government. The Indians in the Transvaal during the Boer regime were much less subjected to racial jealousy, cruelty and exclusion than after the War. It is a most regrettable and inexplicable change for the worse, and it is impossible for people in this country to reconcile British justice, fairness and protection with the sufferings to which our countrymen are subjected in other parts of the great Empire. The question of racial and colour bar doubtless offers many difficulties to the administrator. He is to satisfy the ambitions and wants of the Europeon subjects who have settled down in the Colonies. He has to be just to all, and impartial to non-English coloured population. But the British rule loses half its prestige and its greatness if it does not uphold justice and righteousness to all the subjects of the Empire, irrespective of colour, race or religions. If the Indians in the Colonies form a small minority, then their legitimate claims should be protected as those of other minorities. They are not to be classed with the aboriginal and uncivilised inhabitants nor with other Asiatics who are not British subjects.

"The main question at issue is what is the status of the British Indians in the British Empire. If this is answered satisfactorily, then the status of the Indians in foreign countries may be easily settled. Of course, in considering the latter, we do not think that some sort of connection between the two questions is implied. The local status of a man may not the quite settled but, at the same time, his status outside is quite clear. In the case of the German Colonies threatening to oust the Indians, Great Britain is bound to afford all the protection it extends to European subjects. There should be no difference between an Indian citizen and a British citizen so far as foreign settlement of status or right is concerned. At home we may be uncertain on this point, but outside there ought to be no room for mistake. But all the same, it looks anomalous that Great Britain should or could insist on securing to Indians a treatment in foreign countries which she herself is unable to extend within her own walls. To the Indians it is perfectly humiliating. It is something like the faithful retainer of a wealthy Lord being thrashed by another and outside Lord for some fault, real or imaginary. The retainer may be entitled to be protected by his own master against the neighbour's kicks, but the defence is, we fancy, 'I kick him no worse than you do.' So long as Indians are treated like alien undesirables in the British Colonies, and subjected to various repressive Acts, by what moral right can they be protected against similar treatment by a neighbour? And yet the question is not free from embarrassment to Great Britain, which is obliged to see thousands of its dusky subjects of the fairest and highly prized part of the Empire humiliated by a rival power to its very face. Technically and practically Great Britain is insulted by its Indian subjects being insulted and declared as undesirables and therefore fit to be sent out by harsh and specially repressive laws. Such a proceeding would not for a moment be brooked if it were directed against Englishmen. The Indian mother-in-law who rebukes her daughter-in-law and never gives her her rightful dues, has her humiliation when a similar treatment is accorded to her victim by the lady next door. The position of the despised daughter-in-law then reaches a critical and unbearable stage and so does that of the Indian emigrant in and outside the British Empire. The question, we are sure, is a complicated one, but it challenges the Government to arrive at a proper solution. We cannot imagine how the British authorities will acquiesce in the decision of Germany and abandon British Indians absolutely unprotected against danger in German Colonies. And yet what else will they be able to do in pursuance of their present policy? There is a certain delicacy in dictating to self-governing Colonies, but there is no delicacy in dictating to a foreign power. If this practical issue is accepted, of which we have some doubt, Great Britain will and can succeed in securing to Indian subjects a far better treatment than she is able to give herself within the Empire. That would be a piece of wonderful work of modern statesmanship. But all this is illusory. Here is a conflict of a remarkable kind—a struggle between righteousness from outside and selfishness from within. It remains to be seen how the difficulty will be overcome—whether the Indians will be left unprotected altogether or whether an attempt will be made to secure fair and just treatment to them in the Colonies. It is a very good opportunity to urge the British Colonies, if they have any Imperial instincts of a high order, to recognise the status of Indians and secure the rightful privileges of British citizenship to them so as to save the Empire from the reproach implied by allowing the action of Germany."

Chinese affairs.

6. Under the heading "A red letter day for China" the Tribune (Lahore), of 3rd May 1912, remarks :—

"Last Saturday the Chinese all over the world celebrated the establishment of the Republic in China with great rejoicing and ceremony. The present generation has been an eye-witness to one of the most momentous changes in the history of the world, and that change has been effected almost without an effort as far as onlookers can judge. The silent years of preparation, the persistent preaching of freedom, the sacrifices of a devoted band of patriots, all these lie below the surface. We have only seen that the despotism of centuries, the autocratic power which seemed invulnerable has been broken like a reed almost in the twinkling of an eye and the mysterious and all powerful Son of Heaven has disappeared like a forgotten incubus. It is still more remarkable that this mighty revolution has been brought about without overwhelming the reigning dynasty, the boy-Emperor, the Dowager Empress and all the Princes being left unharmed. A new era has dawned in the history of China and it has been fittingly celebrated."

The Turco-Italian War.

7. The following is from the Tribune (Lahore), of the 5th May 1912 :—

"* * * * * * The Powers did not interfere when a general appeal was made to them to negotiate a settlement between the two contending countries. Now a stronger appeal has been made through their trade, and it will be interesting to see what they will do. The war was sure to lead to these complications and the Powers would have acted wisely if they had mediated before this contingency arose."

Detention of Cretan Deputies on H. M. S. Hampshire.

8. The recent action of Great Britain in detaining Cretan Deputies on H. M. S. Hampshire is very favourably commented upon by the Provincial Muslim Press. The Observer (Lahore), in its issue of the 1st instant, remarks that this action is characteristically English; and that the British Government have "amply vindicated the best traditions of English law for equity and fair play."

(b)—Home.

His Majesty the King Emperor.

9. The Zamindar (Lahore), of the 27th April 1912, publishes a letter headed "The King of England, a Muhammadan at heart." Adverting to the remarks which have already appeared in the paper under the above heading (vide paragraph 6 of Selections No. 17), the writer, Bakhshi Gopal Das, Station Master, Pathankot, states that the numerical value of (the Persian letters composing) "George the Fifth" is the same as that of (those which make up) Bismillah. Can Muhammadans, he asks, doubt even now that the King Emperor is a follower of Islam at heart ?

The situation in India.

10. The Jhang Sial (Jhang), of the 27th April 1912, publishes an article headed "India and its present condition." There can be no denying the fact, it says, that the British Government is just and cannot be charged with wishing this country ill. It is true that the four years, from 1906 to 1910, gave rise to the suspicion that Government wished to ruin India and could not bear to see her prosperous. This suspicion, which was deepening into a conviction, caused feelings of unrest and uneasiness throughout the length and breadth of the country. It is, however, a matter for thankfulness that things have undergone a change, and the people have now come to realise that British rule is a divine blessing for their land. As to the aforesaid unrest, it was the work of Lord Curzon and certain other servants of the Crown, who wished to rule India in a despotic manner and went to the length of speaking of the Royal Proclamation of 1858 as (waste) paper. The blame for it also attaches to those Englishmen who have stated in different books that the English are a selfish people and should not (therefore) be trusted. Next the paper says that Lord Hardinge's policy and the Royal Visit have banished all unrest from the country, and have made Indians thoroughly loyal to the throne. They have also, it adds, arrested the growth of disunion between Hindus and Muhammadans; and if Government also shows itself sympathetic the two communities will be certain to unite and address themselves to the task of promoting the welfare of their motherland. It then makes the following suggestions for the consideration of His Excellency the Viceroy :—

(1) That the Press Act, which has made things extremely unpleasant for journalists, should be repealed.

(2) That the same treatment should be accorded to the Punjab Alienation of Land Act, which is highly injurious for Hindus and has bred unrest among them.

(3) That the Pre-emption Act should be amended (? in order to remove Hindu objections to it).

(4) That the District authorities should be strongly urged to treat the ruled with sympathy and kindness.

(5) That Government should pay greater attention to (the spread of) education (in the country).

Mark Twain on the future of India.

11. The Vakil (Amritsar), of the 27th April 1912, has a paragraph headed "A dreadful prediction." It states that a novel by Mark Twain is about to be published in which it is proved that the political and economic condition of India will undergo a marked change in 1922. After reproducing a synopsis of the book, as it has appeared in the Daily Mail, it remarks that the Darbar announcements have wrought an immense change in the ideas of Indians. Several political questions, which used to excite very little public interest, have now been invested with importance; while far greater attention has begun to be paid to education, industries and trade than was the case before (the Darbar). Again, eagerness to understand the politics of Government is on the increase and unusual activity and enthusiasm are visible on all sides. This being so, it is not at all unlikely that the change predicted by Mark Twain may actually occur. As to the nationality of the "National Party", which is, according to him, to appear in Delhi, it should be evident from the remark that this party will repeal the laws framed to rescue agriculturists out of the clutches of money-lenders. The prediction that the party will, on coming into power, effect several unpleasant changes is probably based on what has taken place in India during the past six or seven years. Moreover, in view of these happenings, the statement about Russia, Japan, and Germany dreaming of occupying India appears well-founded. Indeed, it is not impossible that the united efforts, which the first two countries have of late been making to secure special concessions from the Chinese Republic, may culminate in an invasion of India. At all events, the existing state of affairs renders it quite likely that the dangers prophesied by the American humorist may actually arise. It should, therefore, be the duty of Government to look at Indian questions from the Eastern standpoint and to grant the people sufficient rights in order to win their entire sympathy and support. It should also abstain from attaching so much importance to agitation by any class of the ruled that that community may become Mark Twain's "National Party" and try to expel British rule from India. The paper considers it needless to add that, if such efforts are ever made (which God forbid !), Muhammadans will prove as loyal to Government as they did in times of intense agitation in the past.

Home Rule for India.

12. The Hindustan (Lahore), of the 26th April 1912, publishes an article headed "India also should have a Parliament of her own." Referring to the Irish Home Rule Bill, the paper says that a passage in the speech made by Mr. Asquith in introducing the measure shows that Scotland and Wales also are to be granted self-government in course of time. Again, the more far-sighted British Statesmen have already begun to predict that Great Britain will one day also confer the same boon on all her colonies. It is not, therefore, unreasonable to surmise that India also will receive a Parliament within a measurable distance of time. In case, however, she is treated differently, she would not like being placed under a Union Parliament (consisting of the representatives of Great Britain and her colonies), for the reason that the members from the colonies, which have been unreasonably treating Indians with severity and contempt, would be certain to trample on the rights of the latter. On the other hand, the feeling of nationality and the sense of self-respect, which have been bred among Indians, would never permit them to put up with such treatment. A Parliament will, therefore, have to be given to India also, her own children being the persons that can best manage her affairs. In short, in view of her political importance it is more necessary to confer Home Rule on her than upon Ireland, Scotland, Wales or the British colonies. In the other event, circumstances would be certain to arise which would cause the most serious and irreparable injury to the interests of both the rulers and the ruled.

The poverty of India.

13. The Hindu (Lahore), of the 25th April 1912, has a note entitled "A child buried alive in consequence of poverty." The paper refers to the case in which a woman in Southern Malabar is reported to have buried her two-year-old child alive owing to her inability to feed it. Commenting on the same it remarks that the incident should serve as an eye-opener to those who are sworn to prove India to be a rich and prosperous country. Is any proof needed, it asks, to demonstrate the poverty of a country in which parents can treat their beloved children in the above manner through their inability to feed them ? Next it regrets that the children of a land, which is the granary of the whole world, should be buried alive in consequence of poverty.

Government and Muhammadans.

14. The Paisa Akhbar (Lahore), of the 27th April 1912, publishes an article headed "Have Muhammadans no rights beyond this ?" In his recent speech on the occasion of the second reading of the Government of India Bill, says the paper, Mr. Montagu was led to remark that the Governor of Bengal would pass a considerable part of the year at Dacca, and that the followers of Islam deserved nothing beyond this. Similarly, it adds, Lord Carmichael considered it necessary to inform the Musalmans of Bengal, in his reply to the address of welcome from the Provincial Muslim League, that he had not to safeguard the interests of any particular community, but wished to do even-handed justice to all. Again, in replying to an address presented to him by the Anjuman-i-Islamia, Monghyr, Sir Charles Bayley, the first Lieutenant-Governor of Behar and Orissa, warned Muhammadans to give up the idea of asking for special favours. It is difficult to understand why every (highly-placed) officer has, since the modification of the Partition, been telling the Prophet's followers that they have no special claims on Government and that no favours can be shown them as against other communities. The advice tastes bitter to every Muslim at the present time, when, according (even) to several British Statesmen and ex-Viceroys, the undoing of the Partition has endangered the advancement of the Muhammadans of Eastern Bengal. Besides, Muhammadans merely desire that their rights may be protected from encroachment, while they ask for only such rights as they are entitled to by virtue of being loyal subjects and as other communities have been enjoying for years past.

Continuing, in its issue, dated the 30th April 1912, the paper says that Lord Curzon's Partition of Bengal enabled the Government at Dacca to safeguard the interests of Muhammadans, who form the great majority of the population of East Bengal, and to rescue them from the abyss of degradation down which they have been grovelling through the selfishness of Hindu Zamindars and the indifference of the authorities. His Lordship, therefore, did only what was perfectly just and in thorough consonance with the British policy in India), while it is incumbent on those who have modified the Partition not to lose sight of the important object he had in view in dividing Bengal. The measures so far adopted to safeguard the interests of the East Bengal Muhammadans are inadequate, and Mr. Montagu is not right in saying that they do not deserve anything beyond this.

Government service and Indians.

15. Commenting on Lord Macdonnell's recent Presidential address at the meeting of the Indian Section of the Royal Society of Arts, the Tribune (Lahore), of May 2nd, 1912, has the following remarks under the heading "The English element in the Indian Government" :—

"* * * The permanent preponderance of the English element in the administration means greater cost to the State, and the suppression of the aspirations of the people. It would be sufficient to maintain that much of the English element as is necessary to keep up the standard, if it is held that Indians have not reached that standard as yet. More than this is neither conducive to the welfare of the Government nor to the people. To keep a large portion of high appointments for Englishmen means the deprivation of Indians from so many opportunities and consequently to make the Government top-heavy and weak. In the interest of good government it is necessary Indians should be appointed to all offices and Englishmen where their services are absolutely necessary."

The need of political education in India.

16. The following is from the Tribune (Lahore), of the 7th May 1912 :—

"The Hon'ble Mr. Gokhale in his speech at the Ripon Club, Bombay, on the 1st instant, pointed out the way in which political work in India should be carried on. The time for informed and vigorous agitation has come. Many important rights have been conceded to us and those rights have to be properly exercised. Much good can be done to the country through the expended Legislative Councils. It is the duty of men of leisure and means to prepare themselves to serve in the Councils. Political work in order to be effective requires a thorough training. Uninformed agitation does more harm than good. The well-wishers of the country should thoroughly study the questions which vitally affect India. Mr. Gokhale has been able to do so much work for the country because he had the advantage of being trained under the late Mr. Ranade, and because he has devoted himself wholeheartedly to his work. He has started the Servants of India Society to train up a band of young men for political work. This Society will do its work in its own way. But something more is necessary. In England people receive their political education in their social life. The whole atmosphere is surcharged with political force. Such an atmosphere has to be created in India. Every one has to be made to feel that he has a duty to society and to the country : he will have to realise the necessity and importance of living for the country and his people. A great deal could be done through the Universities. A thorough knowledge of the system of government, the conditions under which we live, and the causes of the development and decline of different countries might be acquired at the Universities. But there is no such provision in our University curricula. The general knowledge which is gained in the Universities has to be supplemented in other ways. The first step in this direction is the coming forward of young men with leisure and means to make a special study of Indian questions. They will afford society the benefit of their knowledge, and may devise means for disseminating sound political views. When this work has been begun in right earnest the work in the Councils and in the country will greatly improve. It will be hard for the Government to disregard the views of persons who have made a special study of any subject. Their advice at times will become absolutely necessary.

The Nicholson Committee.

17. The following is from the Tribune (Lahore), of the 7th May 1912 :—

"The terms of reference of the Committee appointed to inquire into the Army expenditure add nothing to the knowledge we already possess. The scope of the Committee is very comprehensive. It will inquire into the various circumstances requiring the use of military force, which may arise out of the external or internal situation in India under conditions which now exist, or may probably arise, during the next few years. Then it will consider and report on the number and constitution of the armed force which should be maintained in India to meet these obligations. Lastly, the most important work is to consider and report whether any, and if so what, measures for the reduction of military expenditure are compatible with the efficient maintenance of that force. The entire military organisation will be scrutinised and then suggestions will be made if any changes are necessary. Sir William Nicholson is thoroughly acquainted with the situation in India, and his experience in the Army Office in England, in Military Service in India, and in active service in Egypt and South Africa, will stand him in good stead in dealing with the Indian problem. He knows thoroughly well the needs of modern warfare, and his knowledge of army administration in India as Adjutant-General makes him eminently worthy of the position to which he has been appointed. He will also receive the help of two military and one civilian members of the committee. It is more than doubtful, however, whether any reduction of expenditure will be recommended, but a thorough and comprehensive survey of the situation will prove useful in many ways. In considering the question of efficiency the question of recruitment has to be considered. Indians have a serious complaint in this matter. The Army is not attractive to many sturdy races, and many races have been eliminated from enlistment. Indians do not receive high appointments, and are entirely debarred from commissioned appointments. These are the real improvements needed, but they will not come within the scope of the enquiry."

Provincial Autonomy.

18. In a leader on a recent article in the London Times in which that paper discussed the subject Provincial Autonomy for India and the Government of India's despatch of August 25th, 1911, the Tribune (Lahore), of May 7th, 1912, has the following remarks :—

* * * * * * *

"The meaning of the Government of India's despatch is that the Provinces will be self-contained in all minor affairs, managing their own revenue, developing in the people a sense of responsibility and associating them closer with the administration, devising means for the promotion of education and culture, and preserving the internal peace of the country. The Central Government will maintain the army, and exercise general control over the Provincial administrations. The co-operation of the people in Provincial matters will not only awaken in them a sense of responsibility but it will lead to the ultimate good of the Government. The Government of India have recognised facts which it would have been unstatesmanlike to ignore. A new situation has been created in India. The aspirations that have been aroused are not likely to die or to be suppressed. In the progress of a country and a nation there is no stage where a line can be drawn and it can be said, 'Thus far and no farther.' Dame Partington and her mop could no more keep back the advancing Atlantic than any force can arrest the advance of a nation when it is once awakened. It is not the less irresistible because it is devoid of violence. The Legislative Councils as they now stand are not final. The activities, nascent and manifest, which are going on everywhere are only in their infancy and not in a state of finality. The country is on the eve of an industrial revolution. Earnest attempts at improvement are visible in every direction. Are these facts such as can be overlooked or ignored by a vigilant Government? The despatch of the Government of India merely foresees the near future and provides for it but there is nothing impracticable in the proposals and certainly no danger."

II.—Afghanistan and Trans-Frontier.

Nil.

III—Native States.

Nil.

IV.—Kine-killing.

Hindus and cow-killing.

19. The Vakil (Amritsar), of the 1st May 1912, publishes a communication from "Dharm Vir, of Meerut city" headed "Who is the aggressor in regard to the cow-killing question?" The writer agrees with the Hindu newspaper that the killing of cows is a serious obstacle in the way of Hindus and Muhammadans becoming one. So long, however, he adds, as the former do not leave off opposing the practice and quarrelling with the latter (over it) the controversy can never come to an end. Hindus should know that Muhammadans sacrifice cows, not to wound their feelings, but as an act of worship to God. As it is, they should be able to guess which of the two communities is the aggressor and prevents their union. Continuing, the writer says that, according to the paper already named, Hindus look upon the cow as a mother and deity and as the most sacred (of created beings). It is, however, a falsehood to speak of the animal as sacred; (while as to the application of the epithet "mother" to it,) "a person is himself to blame for calling an ass (his) father." Again, Muhammadans also look upon the cow as "the best thing (in existence)" and sacrifice it to God as such, which should not give offence to the followers of Hinduism. Nay, the latter should feel grateful to Musalmans for regarding the cow as the fittest animal for sacrifice, which is also the view held by the Vedas. After quoting from Manu, the Vedas, Rajendro Lal Mitra's Indo-Aryans, and the Brahmanas in support of the latter statement, the writer asserts that he can adduce no end of proof to show that the ancient Aryas used to eat beef and sacrifice cows. It is, therefore, a matter of regret that Hindu newspapers should carry on a controversy (on the subject of cow-killing). He then goes on to say that Hindus eat flesh in spite of their brazenness in proclaiming that it is the highest religion to abstain from taking life.

The jhatka-halal question.

20. The Loyal Gazette (Lahore), of the 28th April 1912, has a note headed "Let the religious liberty of Sikhs be preserved." The Nur (Qadian), it states, writes that so far as the question of religious liberty is concerned "we are in favour of Sikhs . . . . being permitted to openly sell 'jhatka' meat." Will not the Deputy Commissioner concerned, it asks, order the removal, even now, of the restrictions proposed to be placed on the sale of jhatka in Hoshiarpur? Next the paper regrets that some officers should impose such restrictions at the instance of uneducated Muhammadans. Continuing, it remarks that the Nur calls upon Sikhs to quote explicit orders from the Granth requiring them to eat only jhatka meat (vide paragraph 19 of Selections No. 17). In reply the paper reprints a note from the Khalsa Samachar, which states that it is strictly enjoined on Sikhs at the time of baptism to avoid the use of halal flesh, the consumption of which is also forbidden in the Granth.

V.—Native Societies and Religious Matters.

Hindus and Muhammadans.

21. The Hindu (Lahore), of the 25th April 1912, publishes a communication headed "Hindu-Muhammadan Unity—II." In continuation of his previous remarks on the subject (vide paragraph 17 of Selections No. 17), the writer—Vidyarthi Ram Dayal, B.A., a Mukhtar at Meerut—refers to the proposals laid before the Peace Conference which met at Allahabad in (1910), and says that this farce was intended merely to impress upon Government that, while Musalmans desired a Union between the two communities, the followers of Hinduism were opposed to the idea. The ultimate object in view, he adds, was to ensure the new (i. e., Lord Hardinge's) Government favouring separate and special rights for the followers of Islam. After remarking that, as a consequence, the Conference proved a fiasco, he refers to the cry of Union raised by Muhammadans after the revocation of the Partition; alleging that it was a threat intended to make Government continue placing them above Hindus and conferring special favours on them. Again, they are by no means willing, in spite of this cry, to give up their policy of isolation from Hindus; it being, therefore, difficult to see what sort of union they want with the latter. Proceeding, the writer finds fault with Muhammadans for having got Government to pass the Alienation of Land Act, and also takes exception to their conduct in desiring the admission of incompetent Musalmans into the public service in preference to abler Hindus. Further, he disapproves of their attitude in respect of the Urdu-Hindi question, and pooh-poohs their complaint about the Arya Samaj carrying on a provocative propaganda, arguing that Aryas merely reply to attacks from the Prophet's followers. Musalmans, he adds, desire that they should be free to secure Hindu converts to Islam; but that the Samaj should not have the right to "purify" the firstnamed. They also demand that temple bells and gongs should cease while a Muhammadan procession passes in front of such places, and that Hindu processions should stop all music while filing past mosques. As regards cow-killing, it is an open secret that Muhammadans are not required by the Quran or the Traditions to slaughter kine; but they lay stress on the practice with the sole object of offending Hindus. The latter (only) desire that cows should not be killed in an open and offensive manner; but the influential section of the former is not agreeable and has filled the Muslim masses with such feelings of enmity and hatred for Hindus that just-minded followers of Islam, who desire a union between the two communities, are spoken of as infidels, flatterers of Hindus, aud enemies of their co-religionists. Similarly, Muhammadans returned by mixed electorates and serving the country in a spirit free from (religious) bigotry, are set down as being opposed to the interests of their brethren in faith. Again, a Musalman praising anything connected with the Hindu religion is branded a kafir.

Hindus and Muhammadans.

22. The Muin (Amritsar), of the 25th April 1912, publishes an article headed "How can there be union between Hindus and Muhammadans"? After referring to the cordial relations which existed between Hindus and Muhammadans in the past, particularly in the time of Akbar, the paper deplores the existing estrangement between the two communities. If the present state of affairs, it adds, continues, the followers of Islam and Hinduism are likely to exterminate each other, to the merriment of aliens. Proceeding, it remarks that, if they wish to regain their past greatness, they should promote love and friendship between their communities; arranging a conference of Hindu and Muslim leaders, and establishing district committees, consisting of broad-minded and peaceful men, to bring about this result. In conclusion, it says that the achievement of this end would not only place the Star of Hindus and Muhammadans in the ascendant, but would also so please Government, which wishes to see them fast friends, that "the desires of (their) hearts, would be realised."

The Golden Temple, Amritsar.

23. The Loyal Gazette (Lahore), of April 28th, 1912, complains that Sardar Arur Singh, the present Manager of the Golden Temple, has grown old and is now unable to discharge the responsibilities of his office. After alleging that he also dyes his beard contrary to the principles of Sikhism, it requests Government, on behalf of the entire Sikh community, to replace him by some man who is not past work. It also makes the suggestion that the maximum period of the Manager's office should be fixed at three years, saying that the absence of such a provision leads some incumbents of the post to do whatever they choose.

Complaint against Dharampal.

24. The Hindustan (Lahore), of the 26th April 1912, has a note headed "Dharampal's obscene attack on Hindu goddesses." After having poured gross and obscene abuse on the Arya Samaj, complains the paper, Dharampal has now been impelled by his impure mind to abuse Hindus. After remarking that the vile man named has descended to assailing the chastity of Hindu women, it quotes an extract from the Indar of 19th April, in which he says that, if the charges of immorality which are being preferred against him are well-founded, the only inference deducible therefrom is that the moral condition of Arya or Hindu women is extremely degraded. Commenting on the same it remarks that, according to Dharampal's reasoning, people cannot call any one a man of bad character, because he can reply that their society, and not he, is immoral. It is Dharampal, adds the paper, who has, after the foul mouthed Afghan of Peshawar, dared to assail the chastity of Hindu women. It concludes by expressing a hope that the wide-awake Government will take prompt notice of his writing.

The Kapurthala Gurdwara and the Panjabee, Lahore.

25. The following is from the Khalsa Advocate (Amritsar), of the 1st May 1912 :—

"Our readers are aware that through the laudable efforts of a few well wishers of the community a Gurdwara is proposed to be built in Kapurthala. The need of a Sikh temple in the capital city of that State was felt a long time since and now that the efforts of its promoters are about to take practical shape, it appears to have begun to rankle as a thorn in the side of those who do not wish good of the Sikhs. As proof of this fact the Panjabee of Lahore has in a recent issue, attempted an insinuation which is as mischievous as it is without foundation. Our contemporary says that a complaint has reached it that attempts are made to bring official pressure here and there to induce unwilling Hindus to pay fixed donations (for Gurdwara). But as far as we are aware—and our information is from most reliable sources--no such attempt has been made to bring official pressure to bear in the collection of subscription at least in Kapurthala State.

"But we confess we are at a loss to understand the underlying policy of such mention. For had such been the state of things, the complaint would have appeared in some other Hindu papers of the Province as well. All this shows that the complaint is groundless and is simply meant to injure the feelings of the Sikhs and to serve as a hindrance in the way of the construction of Gurdwara by prejudicing the minds of the people. We understand further that the authorities of the Gurdwara Sub-Committee have enquired of the Panjabee whatever grounds it may have for publishing the note. As soon as they get a reply we hope to throw more light on the subject."

Gurdwara at Kapurthala.

26. The Tribune (Lahore), of 2nd May 1912, has the following :—

"Complaints have reached us of the manner in which funds are being raised for a Gurdwara at Kapurthala. Considerable pressure is being brought to bear upon the people who are reluctantly compelled to subscribe larger sums than their means permit."

The Tribune (Lahore), and the Sikhs.

27. The following is from the Khalsa Advocate (Amritsar), of the 1st May 1912 :—

"Since the momentous Presidential address of (now Hon'ble) Baba Gurbakhsh Singh Bedi at the Multan Hindu Conference, which was decried by the entire Sikh public, the Lahore daily which prunes its feathers on the gift of a Sikh family, lets slip no chance of doing a turn to our people. Not content with the quibbles of Hindu Theology which are enough to absorb the attention of a whole-time ascetic for a quarter of a century, our contemporary has appeared, times out of number, as an oracle on Sikh Theology and polity. Every particle of information calculated to belittle the importance of our community, every bit of news likely to cast discredit upon our cherished movements, every note judged to retard our modern progress, every printed rag meant to cause a split on our ranks is seized upon with avidity and given full publicity with an elaborate benediction and sent out into the world with the press panegyrics (though it may be only to be cast into the mouth of its father).

"A 'patit' like Bakhshi Ram Singh writes a booklet and the Tribune goes into raptures because the views therein, expressed being hatched in a Gurnindak atmosphere, fall in with the desires of the man who has the 'main finger if not the main hand' in the steerage of the paper. Bakhshi Ram Singh's book will, we may safely predict, take its place with the sister productions of B. Awtar Singh Wahiria, so unenviably famous among the Sikhs.

"We may note here a recent side-bit of the Brahmo daily of the Punjab. While noticing the census figures the paper writes in its issue of the 24th April 1912 :—

"'Among the Sikhs opinion is divided, for some consider themselves Hindu while other refuse to do so. * * * *

"'The "Tat Khalsas," the sect which vehemently disowns Hinduism, number 198,454 males and 145,604 females. Such a small number has more to fear from isolation than from assimilation with the larger community.' The writer's mind reflects itself in the above lines. In the first sentence cited, he is nearer the truth. Those who can claim a knowledge of Sikh theology and history believe most sincerely that as a religious entity the Sikhs are as much Hindus as the Christians are Jews, while those whose pockets are in fear of being touched by this propaganda or who are lured by the temptations of numbers or who decipher history very imperfectly, think that they are related to Hindus. It appears that in the very next sentence the paper repents of its rectitude and returns to its old tactics of creating schism among the neighbours and conferring its own epithet, which has been so thankfully declined by the recipients more than once.

"Besides, the statement is a preversion of truth. The majority of the census officials and subordinate were Hindus and it is they who dubbed the Sikhs wherever they could with this title. In the Khalsa Boarding House, Lahore, the Deputy Superintendent of Census exerted himself to his utmost to press the inmates to give him their castes, which the boarders in most cases, refused to do as they believed in none. The small numbers therefore of 198,454 males and 145,604 females which have been flaunted with patriarchal warning represent not the Sikhs who disown Hinduism but those whose caste-column was filled up with the word 'Tat Khalsa' either under a wrong impression or without or with imperfect knowledge of the person or persons concerned. The 'Tat Khalsas' of which the Tribune falls foul include all the Sikhs, who know anything of Sikh history and who are not kept back from an expression of their opinion because of moral cowardice. We hope that ere long all the 30 lakhs will become what are called 'Tat Khalsas.' We include in our hope our Bedis like Baba Gurbakhsh Singh.

"It is thus the party of which luminaries are like our Dayanandi brother Bhagat Ishar Das and not the 'Tat Khalsas' who have to fear isolation."

Mr. Wheeler's book—"India under British Rule."

28. The following is from the Tribune (Lahore), of the 7th May 1912 :—

"The Government have the right of interdicting any publication which is reasonably considered harmful to the interests of the State. Besides seditions and other really objectionable publications, books dealing with authentic historical facts or political incidents have been proscribed. But is it not also the duty of the Government to proscribe books which greatly offend the public or a section of the public? One such book is 'India under British Rule' by J. Talboys Wheeler. The author has written many books on India but we are here concerned with only the book we have named. We shall quote a few passages from this book to show in what spirit it is written. The book as it would appear from its title, is supposed to be history of India under British rule. Whatever theories the historian may like to expound he must adhere to historical facts. But how far this has been done in Mr Wheeler's book will be judged by some statements which relate to the history of the Punjab. We are told 'Guru Gobind was taken prisoner by the Moghuls and executed.' Again, 'An infant, named Dhuleep Singh, said to be the son of Ranjeet Singh, was the nominal sovereign; but the Queen-Mother,' a woman of low origin, and her minister and paramour, were the rulers of the country." What baser calumny and wilful misrepresentation of facts can be conceived? Mr. Wheeler was an Assistant Secretary to the Government of India in the Foreign Department. If such men write such things what about less informed men who will base their books on such libels as these? Nevertheless Mr. Wheeler's book is in circulation and no attempt has been made to withdraw or correct it."

The Coming National Congress.

29. The following is from the Tribune (Lahore), of the 8th May 1912 :—

"A public meeting will be held on the 19th instant at Bankipore in order to form and organize the Reception Committee of the next Session of the Indian National Congress. The Beharee suggests for the Chairmanship of the Reception Committee the name of either the Hon'ble Mr. Mazhar-ul-Haque or the Hon'ble Mr. S. Sinha. Ordinarily the Chairmanship of the Reception Committee would have fallen to Mr. Hasan Imam. His elevation to the High Court Bench deprives the Province of the services of that well tried and distinguished leader. But it would be a mistake to split up votes as suggested by the Beharee by putting in alternative candidates for election. The Chairman should be elected unanimously and all attempts at division abandoned. Mr. Mazhar-ul-Haque can be more helpful to the cause of the Congress if he is spared the responsibilities of the Chairman. For instance, he can undertake like the Hon'ble Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya extensive tours in the Province and find both men and money to ensure the success of the session. His moderation and patriotism eminently fit him for this difficult and delicate task. If along with these duties he can also bear the responsibilities of the Chairman nothing can give us greater pleasure than to see him elected for the Chairmanship. But it seems to us that the work is too much for one man. We therefore venture to suggest that the Hon'ble Mr. S. Sinha be unanimously elected to the Chairmanship and the services of Mr. Mazhar-ul-Haque secured to the Congress as the General Secretary of the Reception Committee."

VI.—Legislation.

Hindu and Muhammadan Councillors.

30. The Zamindar (Lahore), of the 30th April 1912, publishes a communication from "A Musalman" headed "This is what is called representation." The writer refers to the outcry raised by the Hindu press over the expulsion of Lalas Piyare Lal and Devi Dayal from Jullundur cantonment. He also states how the Hon'ble Mr. S. Sinha, Member of the Imperial Legislative Council, brought the expulsion to the notice of Their Excellencies the Viceroy and the Commander-in-Chief. After remarking that, as a consequence, the Lalas have been permitted to return to their homes, he observes that Hindus cannot feel too proud of the Hon'ble gentleman named, who has been doing his best in pleading the cause of his community. Muhammadans, he adds, are, however, more fortunate than the followers of Hinduism, seeing that they put up with every (case of) disregard for their rights and of harsh treatment in the profoundest silence and most patient manner, which are characteristic of their loyalty and consequently of that of their Hon'ble representatives (the remark is ironical). They neither open their own lips in complaint, nor do they make their representatives in the (Legislative) Councils ask question after question. It does not, therefore, matter if graves are dug up and the bodies of Muhammadan women in them taken to some other place for interment, or if poor and unfortunate Musalmans in a Hindu state are sent to jail for performing their religious duties, or if any "national" paper (the reference is to the Zamindar) finds itself in the clutches of the law for no valid reason and without being called upon to furnish an explanation. A critical examination of the questions asked by Hindu and Muhammadan Councillors respectively will show which (of these gentlemen) are doing their duty as representatives of (their respective communities).

Council Proceedings in the Vernacular.

31. The following is from the Panjabee (Lahore), of 2nd May 1912 :—

"The Englishman says that the experiment made by the United Provinces Government in issuing Council Proceedings in the Vernacular Gazette has not been a success. Very few copies are sold and unless the people buy these in larger numbers, the practice will not be continued. The conclusion is unfair either way. In the first place, the Vernacular translations are not made in popular language and do not convey any meaning to the public in most cases. Secondly, the masses of the people do not know anything about the technical details and formalities of Government; and in the whole of the School and College courses there is nothing to instruct people as to the details of the administrative machinery. Thirdly, the Government has at no time been anxious that the masses of India should become political units, understanding their rights and fighting for them. Even the National Congress has confined itself to the initiation of the educated class into the mysteries of Government, ignoring the masses wholly. And, fourthly, there are, of course, no political associations which can, without being harassed by the Criminal Investigation Department and the Police, do any kind of work to secure the co-operation of the people with the Government. Under these circumstances there is no wonder that copies of Council Proceedings are not bought by the public. If the United Provinces Government is anxious that the masses should understand Government and co-operate, then the ban of political interdiction must be first removed from the Indian political organisations and all legitimate movements of political education must be encouraged. The Criminal Investigation Department agents must first be muzzled."

Mr. Jinnah's Waqf Bill.

32. Referring to the acceptance by the Government of the principle of Mr. Jinnah's Waqf Bill the Tribune (Lahore), of 2nd May 1912, remarks that, as far as the Legislative Council constituted under the last Reform Scheme is concerned, this is the first non-official Bill that has so far been accepted by Government. Hitherto, according to the Tribune, Government has presented an "insuperable wall of opposition" to every Bill and Resolution brought forward by non-official members.

The following on the same subject is published by the Panjabee (Lahore), of 2nd May 1912, under the heading "Musalman Waqf Validating Bill" :—

"There is an important question of principle involved in it. Why should an Imperial Council concern itself about a question that affects one community only, and if the dedication of property in any particular way (which does not exclude religion) is sought to be protected by State in the case of the Muhammadans, why should not a similar protection of law be extended to the Hindus and others in the matter of religious endowments? The Hindu religious endowments are at present transferred and mortgaged without any restriction. Proposals to remedy this state of affairs and to protect religious endowments misapplied for purposes other than religious have met with no support whatever from the Government in several places. In Madras, a Bill was passed regulating religious endowments made by Hindus and others by the whole Legislative assembly, but His Excellency the Governor in exercise of his extraordinary powers vetoed it. In the Imperial Council Dr. Rash Behari Ghose introduced a similar Bill and met with Government opposition. Such being the case, there is no special reason why the dedication of property for personal interests with no definite provision for amount and time limit which the Privy Council decision insists—should receive the ardent support of the Government in favour of Muhammadans. Another objection is that in spite of the precaution of registration which Mr. Jinnah provides, there is every liability of the innocent creditors being cheated outright in many ways by the malafides of the endower. On these grounds, therefore, we must oppose the Bill unless similar facilities are extended to all communities."

The following is from the Observer (Lahore), of the 4th May 1912 :—

* * * * * * *

"Indian Musalmans will feel grateful to the Government of India and the Secretary of State for their acceptance of a measure that seeks to redress a genuine Muslim grievance. The judgments of the Privy Council with regard to Waqf-alal-Aulad, while purporting to be in accordance with Muhammadan Law, have been as a matter of fact against the personal law of the Musalmans. Some of our Hindu contemporaries are, however, opposed to the Bill simply because it will benefit the Musalmans. But when every care is to be taken that the measure shall leave no loophole for people to defraud creditors by resorting to Waqf-alal-Aulad, it is hardly reasonable or creditable to object to the principle of the Bill. Our Hindu Sabha contemporary complains that while Government has accepted Mr. Jinnah's Bill, it opposed Dr. Rash Behari Ghose's Endowment Bill which was intended to benefit the Hindus. The Panjabee, however, forgets that Dr. Ghose's Bill was welcomed by the enlightened public opinion of not only the Hindus but also the Musalmans and that the All-India Muslim League has been passing resolutions every year in support of the principle of the Religious Endowments Bill. If Government did not accept the principle of the Bill, it was due only to the opposition manifested against its provisions by a large, though ignorant, portion of the Hindu community. Few Musalmans have objected to Mr. Jinnah's Bill, nor are its provisions contrary to 'public policy' or calculated to injure the Hindus. Muhammadans will offer no opposition to a Bill calculated to benefit the Hindus without injuring the interests of the Musalmans. Under these circumstances, the opposition of the Hindu Sabha organ to the Waqf Bill is anything but reasonable."

Council Regulations.

33. The following is from the Panjabee (Lahore), of the 7th May 1912.

* * * * * * *

"At the time the Regulations were passed the people throughout India expressed their dissatisfaction at them. But as the Government has to carry out a great measure and bridge over a wide gulf, they were content to have the regulations as the first instalment of reform. Lord Minto openly accepted the defects and promised early rectification. But for some reason or other Lord Hardinge has put off the full consideration. Perhaps it is in view of the state of mind of the bulk of the old school of Anglo-Indians who were opposed to reform and the inculcation of the principle of popular co-operation with Government. The recent change of capital and the territorial alterations have raised some opposition from the usually ill-satisfied side. It is perhaps not wise to give another cause for dissatisfaction in extending justice to the people of India by the amendment of the Council Regulations so as to harmonise with the Reform Act. But after three years of experience in the reformed Councils, the mistakes and the evil effects of these have become so glaring that it would be positively dangerous to allow them any longer. The principle of separate and preferential treatment of one or other community has raised a flood of opposition and other smaller communities of people are memorialising the Government also for special representation. In the Punjab the advantages to the minority have not accrued to the Hindus and in the Council we have not that strength we should have in proportion either to the Hindu population, education, wealth, influence or position. There is no nation in the whole of India that has suffered materially and in other ways as the Hindus during the past decade. Their population in Punjab has decreased by over 16 per cent., while others have increased. Their economic position is assailed by such legislative restrictions as the Land Alienation Act. The establishment and recognition of the baneful principle of separatism and preference to the 'politically important' community everywhere have led to incalculable harm to the general population whose domestic peace is disturbed by sectarian rivalry and jealousy. Where brotherhood, toleration and mutual co-operation should have been promoted on non-religious and non-racial lines, we have the bitterest and most injurious form of disunion and religious antagonism. Religious fanaticism of the worst sort has been stirred and no one knows the end of it, if it is not suppressed. We are sure that Government are aware of these evil effects and desire to do all they can to promote mutual harmony and co-operation among the people. They may say that the Council Regulations have nothing whatever to do with these effects. But every one can see that the Hindus are not adequately represented in the Council, that their interests have greatly suffered, and that other communities enjoy a preference everywhere. In Government offices and in bazars too, the spirit of religious and racial rivalry may be seen to a great extent. And no one can deny that by a suitable alteration in the Council Regulations creating electoral Colleges as suggested by Lord Morley by mixed electorates the union of all creeds and races and joint responsibility and public interest can be created. The best way to put down disunion and rivalry is not by giving official recognition to the same in the Statute books, but by insisting on the joint electorates * * * .

"According to the constitution of the Punjab Legislative Council, the membership is divided into three groups: (1) Nominated members, 19, (2) Nominated experts 2, and (3) Elected members 5—total 26, or including the President 27. The first group may be composed of officials and non-officials, but the former are not to exceed 10. That is to say, they may be any number up to 10 and if power of nomination were well used and the number of official members reduced, we can have more elected members than the five at present which includes the University and trades member. In the United Provinces 20 members out of the total of 49 can be elected, at the rate of one for two millions of population. In the East Bengal—the favourite province—the proportion of elected members was one for 1½ millions and in Bengal proper 26 out of 50 members were elected—about one for 2 millions. In Madras 19 elected members are allowed out of nearly double the number of millions of population and in Bombay—which is only equal to the Punjab in population—there have been 21 elected members or nearly one per million. Why should the Punjab be given one member for 4 millions of population is what no one has been able to understand. East Bengal considered to be a full-blossomed Muhammadan province, was given one elected member for 1½ millions of population. Punjab is considered the 'nerve centre' of the Muhammadan population and even considered from this point of view the five elected members here can in no sense be regarded as a fair allotment. We should have not less than ten elected members if we are entitled to be treated in common with other parts of India. And if the total strength of the Council could not be disturbed, the nominated group should be reduced by five members. If this could be done, then we can have ten elected members from the 29 districts, and as the Hindu and Muhammadan populations are fairly balanced, there should be no difficulty in sending a fairly representative body of both the communities. If the Sikhs, however, refuse to mingle with the Hindus and are not elected in the usual way, two or three of them can well be nominated. And besides we have two seats for the specialists, one of which should in fairness be given to the Desi Beopar Mandal or the Indian Chamber of Commerce. In any case we do not think that Punjab will be satisfied unless ten out of 26 seats in the Council are thrown open for election now, and even this is far from establishing the principle of any real non-official majority in this Council. The interests here are so little converging to bring about a defeat of an official measure, that Government need not hesitate to give us the proper strength and treat the people with that fairness to which they are entitled. As it is, the Punjab Council is a travesty of Reform and the most injured community is the Hindu. At a time when to belong to a minority is to have special advantages over and above the majority, it is nothing but gross injustice to rob the Hindus of their privileges, not only of belonging to the helpless minority but even of their minimum claim of being a living and an audible factor. We ask for fairness and consistency. We do not ask for separatism. We do not ask everything on the theory of number of population. We want the just claims of one and that all should be recognised and no unfair preponderance should be allowed.

The Viceroy and the Orissa Tenancy Bill.

34. The following is from the Tribune (Lahore), of the 8th May 1912, on the subject of His Excellency the Viceroy's refusal to assent to the Orissa Tenancy Bill.

"* * * The precedent, as we have already pointed out, is that of the Punjab Colonisation Bill which, after having been passed by the Punjab Legislative Council, was vetoed by Lord Minto and never was the right of veto more wisely exercised.

Restriction of Lawyers.

35. The following is from the Tribune (Lahore), of the 8th May 1912 :—

* * * * * * *

"The very efficiency of the Bar depends on the quality of its being free. It is by the energising friction provided in an atmosphere of free competition that the best lawyers are made. Any arbitrary restriction upon the admission of legal practitioners is sure to adversely affect the efficiency of the legal profession and thereby indirectly impair the administration of justice. It is on this account that such proposals of arbitrary restriction have not found favour with the authorities anywhere in the British Empire, the N.-W. Frontier Province and British Beluchistan alone excepted. In the latter provinces, primitive types of administration of justice are still in vogue, and archaic laws are still administered. The wonder is that the Beluchistan and other trans-Himalayan analogies should be applied in a practical form in this province; the wonder of wonder is that this retrograde innovation should be introduced by an agency no less than our Chief Court.

"Of course, we do not deny that the legal profession in this province has been overstocked. We agree with Mr. Montagu that it is necessary in the best interests of the country that our young men should turn away from the congested ranks of the legal profession and the public service to careers of commerce and industry. But the opportunities for such careers are none to many in this province. Indeed, the absence of such opportunities has been responsible for the overcrowding in the profession of law, which in spite of the waning of its attractions is still sought for by the bulk of our graduates for want of anything better. If these are shut out from the legal profession after they have duly qualified themselves by taking their degree in Law, the result will be the rise of a class of discontented educated young men, who will naturally, be chagrined to find themselves cheated of their legitimate rights by the operation of an arbitrary rule.

"* * * At present, the standard for the LL.B. degree in the Punjab University is quite as high as that obtaining in any other Indian University. As a matter of fact, the prescription of an even higher standard for the admission would have been less arbitrary and less open to reproach than the present retrograde measure. There might have been assemblance of principle had the Chief Court ruled that only graduates getting 60 per cent. of the total marks in LL.B. examination will be entitled to the degree or that only M.As. or M. Scs. would be allowed to go in for Law examinations. Of course, when the standard set here is as high as that of any other University, there is no justification for any raising of the standards to a point higher than that required in provinces where the legal profession is more overcrowded than in the Punjab. Still there would have been less anomaly in the principle of a higher standard, although there is no more justification for it than for the present rule.

"We have not, however, yet exhausted the arbitrary and anomalous features of the present rule. It has been announced that in 1914 only the first thirty students among the successful LL.B. candidates will be admitted as pleaders. It follows that the student, who will stand 31st in the list of successful candidates will be nowhere. The entrance to the legal profession is rigidly fenced against him. His degree is of no value to him. On the other hand, his LL.B. degree is his misfortune. For had he failed, he would have got another chance to appear and thus might have secured a place in the privileged list. But for the crime of having taken his degree, he finds himself excluded from the legal career. Can there be a greater anomaly than this, anything more unjust and arbitrary than the exclusion of men of tested merit in favour of those who failed in the test? Yet this is the obvious result of the rule made by the Chief Court. It is difficult to see why the logical and rational course is not adopted by the Chief Court. Why does it not, we ask, insist on the recruitment of the subordinate judiciary from the Bar? This could, to a considerable extent, have removed the congestion in the legal profession and would at the same time raise the calibre and capacity of the subordinate judiciary, which is at present, barring a few exceptions, notoriously deficient in legal training."

Arms Act and Dacoities.

36. The following is from the Panjabee (Lahore), of 2nd May 1912;—

"The Arms Act has reached the stage of sublime superstition, and instead of being a means to an end, it has become an end in itself. Like the Laws of Manu and the dictum of primeval priests some of our old laws are a source of unhappiness to the people and a block to peace. In the border districts of the Punjab, the people are exposed to frequent dacoities by armed outlaws and besides they themselves are disarmed and unable to protect themselves. The Government whose duty is to protect the disarmed people, send policemen who merely warn the people to keep vigil throughout the night and protect themselves as best as they can. The facts furnished by our Attock correspondent, whose letter we publish elsewhere, are a sorry reading. The dacoits naturally take advantage of this situation and the consequence is a further encouragement to crime. There is no doubt that the Government is earnest in doing all it can to protect the people, but the principle of the Arms Act is always in the way. What is more distressing still is that the wise and practical proposals made by the Local Government are rejected by the Supreme Government. May we ask whether the Arms Act is fixed for all times and all circumstances, unalterable, eternal and immutable—to which all must submit and all must succumb, even though border outlaws profit by it? Are we to sacrifice our life, surrender our honour and throw away our wealth, render life itself a wretchedness under the threats of dacoits?"

VII.—General Administration.

(a)—Judicial.

The Khan of Hoti's case.

37. The Akhbar-i-'Am (Lahore), of the 27th April 1912, has an article headed "Bright hopes of justice." Adverting to the Khan of Hoti's case, the paper expresses satisfaction at the matter having been brought to the notice of Government, and at the promised official enquiry into the same. A question, it adds, has also been asked in Parliament, and the Under-Secretary of State for India also has promised to make enquiries. Next it condemns the treatment which the Chief Commissioner of the Frontier Province is alleged to have accorded to the Khan; and remarks that, in the event of his proving to have really been guilty of the same, Sir George Roos-Keppel will have at least to apologize to the Khan and to expunge from his Manual of Pashtu all passages (offensive to the latter).

(d)—Education.

Hindu and Sikh students of the Alexandra Girls' School, Amritsar.

38. The Hindustan (Lahore), of the 26th April 1912, publishes a communication headed "Daughters of the Hindus and Sikhs of Amritsar under the influence of Christianity." The writer alleges that the Alexandra Girls' School, Amritsar, is proving a source of serious injury to Hindus and Sikhs. Respectable Hindu and Sikh girls, he adds, reading in the school, live in the attached boarding house and do not visit their homes for months together. They have also to attend Church twice a week, wearing "Christian clothes," carrying copies of the Bible in their hands, and singing hymns in praise of Christ and His faith. After stating that every male European is also free to attend the Church, the writer remarks that, to have Hindu and Sikh girls educated in this school is tantamount to placing them in the Christian fold with one's own hands.

Mr. Godley on Primary Education.

39. The following is from the Panjabee (Lahore), of the 7th May 1912:—

"The Punjab Departmental Educational Conference which was held last week at Lahore being not open to the Press, we are not in a position to know what its opinions were and what recommendations it has made. A number of non-officials seem to have been invited to it apparently to give their strength and a popular colour to the departmental representations. What the results are remains to be seen. But if it is true, as we heard it stated, that Mr. Godley, the Director of Public Instruction, was opposed to the popular agitation for extending free mass education we are not very anxious to know his opinions on many other questions on the subject. On this point we must agree to differ and there can be no real co-operation. So long as Mr. Godley thinks that the agitation for free education has a political object and is a 'political nostrum,' or something of that kind, so long he cannot expect nor claim popular co-operation. We hardly know if it is his own personal view or of his department. But it certainly has a discouraging effect and must be regretted. The Punjab Government, in common with most other Provincial Governments, have opposed Mr. Gokhale's Bill. In the Council debates, we saw that the greatest objection raised was one of the finance, not political policy. Government are in favour of free education and will extend it as far as funds permit. But they hesitate to adopt compulsion because it may have the effect of bringing Government agency into unpopularity. In this sense the compulsory scheme may be said to be politically unacceptable. But even the most confirmed opponents of Indian mass education cannot attribute any unfair political motives to those who press for compulsory free education. If Mr. Godley thinks it is a political move or a political nostrum it will certainly surprise many. The Hon'ble Mr. Butler has admitted that compulsion will have to be employed, but not now. Mr. Gokhale thinks that before Lord Hardinge's time is up, the Bill will have been passed in one form or another.

"We do not know why Mr. Godley of the Punjab Education Department connects mass education with political motives. We must take the liberty to remind the learned Director, as Mr. Montagu did Mr. Rees in the House of Commons the other day, that there are two kinds of political motives and agitation, of which one is happily extinct and the other perfectly legitimate. First of all, we deny that compulsory free education has any political aim. No Government officer has ventured to say it openly in any responsible place and we still doubt if Mr. Godley could say it. But in his own departmental circles, and surrounded mostly by his colleagues and subordinates he may have ventured to connect education with politics and with every right to do so. It is certainly not a new idea suggested by the activities of educational department and they are entitled to the benefits of their inventions and discoveries. But from the popular point of view, we must say that there is really no sort of political object—except the all-round benefits that the country derives from a more informed population, literate, active, and sensible. As a result of compulsory education, the first effect would be a rise in the general revenues of the State, rapid extension of trade, custom, railway and stamp returns. Even the excise revenue is likely to be doubled or quadrupled and, certainly, Mr. Godley's department will be the first to be enlarged and benefited in all ways. Such political aims and ambitions are truly not unworthy."

(g)—Postal matters.

Retrenchment Policy in the Postal Department.

40. The following is from the Tribune (Lahore), of the 5th May 1912 :—

" * * * * * As a result of gigantic efforts made the Post Office has no doubt been able to lessen the burden of the tax-payers by 2½ lakhs of rupees annually, but this saving infinitesimally small as it is, falls short of the great expectations which the public had formed of the high dignitaries entrusted with this work. We on our part, however, confess that we are not surprised in the least as we had already predicted that retrenchment is sought for in quarters where there is nothing to retrench and that the line of action adopted besides being injurious to the public interest is not likely to touch even the fringe of the real question.

"There has been a very nominal reduction in the number of lucrative appointments while those which are and have been the preserves of one class have not been touched at all. On the contrary, a deathblow has been struck at the roots of progress and development by closing wholesale the small post offices which used to be worked by outside agencies.

"In the Punjab alone 102 such post offices have been closed during the last six months. Like the Punjab there are other seven more postal circles and if the same policy has been followed in these circles also it means that more than one thousand post offices have been closed within a short period. The extent of the harm done will however be exactly gauged from the figures that will appear in the annual report for the year 1911-12.

"The closure of so many post offices means the corresponding loss likely to be sustained by the department in the income derived from those post offices and the privilege of easy communication enjoyed for years by thousands of people living in those villages.

"The long strides of progress and development mainly achieved through the agency of the post office have now been lost to the people and they will be put to the greatest difficulty. The consequence is that a very awkward position has been created for those who in their zeal for meeting their chief's wishes regardless of the consequences and the public interests involved proposed their abolition in the first instance. The offices are full of applications and representations for opening post offices in localities where they existed before, yet those responsible for this state of affairs cannot dare raise the question again with the fear of stultifying their own action.

"If the Director-General has been pleased to bring into reduction the number of his Personal Assistants by one he has, on the other hand, not been slow by any means in creating a similar birth as a reserve at the same time. If such is the meaning of the retrenchment then the very purpose of effecting it has been defeated and one should not therefcre be surprised to find at no very distant date the huge administrative machinery becoming more than ever cumbrous and expensive."

(h)—Miscellaneous.

The Frontier Province.

41. The Punjab Advocate (Mianwali), of the 2nd May 1912, publishes an article headed "two respectable raises are bidding farewell to the Frontier." The paper remarks that it is beyond the power of the pen to describe the hardships which "our Frontier brothers" have to suffer. For some months past it has been laying stress on the amalgamation of the Frontier Province with the Punjab, for the reason that the lives of the people on the Frontier are in danger. After remarking that the question is one of life and death to these people, it asks whether the Afghan can honestly say that they live in peace or that "one-sided doings by the (local) authorities have not been widening the gulf between Hindus and Muhammadans." Next it endeavours to meet the objections raised by a correspondent of the Peshawar paper against the suggested union of the Punjab and the Frontier Province. Continuing, it remarks that the Frontier Government is always solicitous for the comfort of "the favourite wife", and that the Afghan opposes the amalgamation from the sole thought that the same would cost it the subsidy of Rs. 800 paid to it by the Government named. Muhammadans, it adds, feel that the said journal is engaged in injuring them, but they cannot open their lips through fear of the authorities. It is, however, a matter for thankfulness that some of them (lit. they) have begun to regard the Frontier Province as a dangerous place, and have given out that they intend selling their properties and migrating to the Punjab. One of these men is the Khan of Hoti, to disgrace whom the Frontier authorities did their level best. Another is Lambardar Maaz Khan; and the paper regrets that ill-treatment should have compelled them to leave their ancestral homes. It would, however, advise them not to leave their beloved homes, but to memorialise His Excellency the Viceroy to amalgamate the Frontier Province with the Punjab. In conclusion, it remarks that it should be the duty of all the Frontier people to submit similar memorials.

Muhammadans of East Bengal and Government service.

42. The Afghan (Peshawar), of the 26th April (received on the 7th May 1912, has a note entitled "A favourite (and) fortunate community." It says that the East Bengal and Assam Government Gazette, dated the 6th March last, shows that there are only one and two Muhammadans respectively among the four Deputy Magistrates and fourteen Sub-Deputy Megistrates recently appointed in the said part of the country. Is this the way, asks the paper, in which the rights of the Prophet's followers should be safeguarded? Has the Muslim population of a province, which is inhabited chiefly by Muhammadans, been considered worthy of such unfair treatment? Is Government prepared to assert that able Muhammadan candidates are not forthcoming (in East Bengal)? Should loyalty, fidelity and patience be thus rewarded, and does the "favourite wife" [the epithet applied (to Muhammadans) by the liars of the time (Hindus)] only deserve such treatment? Time will show that "the favourite wife" is "she" who holds the reins of every (Government) department, and whose angry glances make even "the poor husband" (Government) see the expediency of doing everything according to "her" wishes. This should show that the epithet "the favourite wife" is applied to Muhammadans by way of a taunt, and with the sole object of lacerating their hearts. It has, however, been the world's practice from ancient times to ridicule the unsuccessful (the reference is to Muhammadans). The paper then goes on to say that the Muhammadans concerned were assured on the annulment of the Partition of Bengal that everything would be done to safeguard their rights. After remarking that the assurance was intended merely as eye-wash, it observes that in the very first arrangement made the claims of Muhammadans have most heartlessly been trampled upon. It remains to be seen what will happen in future; but if the existing state of things continues the hopes of the Eastern Bengal Musalmans will perhaps turn out to be delusions. Government should, therefore, see that the legitimate rights of the said followers of Islam are not treated with indifference, and that the party which has the upper hand (i e., Hindus) does not succeed in putting the knife to their throat.

The new capital.

43. Discussing a recent article in the Pioneer on the new capital in which that paper advocated buildings planned with a view to winter occupation only, the Tribune (Lahore), of May 4th, 1912, makes the following remarks:—

"* * * We are aware the new capital will be the winter residence of the Government, but what does that matter? Will it not be the capital of the Empire? The Government may go to Simla or to Mount Everest for the greater part of the year, but the great mass of the people will stay there in the burning heat of the summer. The town-planners may not consider the requirements of these people but the growth of the city cannot be prevented. The Pioneer suggests that the city should be laid out and its buildings planned with a view to the winter requirements of the Government of India. We hear for the first time that there may be plans and styles of architecture which are useful only during the winter. We wonder why the Pioneer does not point out the difference between the winter and summer architecture, for it may help the experts."

The Bengal Chamber of Commerce.

44. The following is from the Tribune (Lahore), of the 8th May 1912 :—

"The Bengal Chamber of Commerce has raised issues of great importance. Even as regards the transference of the Capital which is an irrevocable act it presents an aspect of the question which is seemingly forceful and unanswerable. Mr. Shorrock's views, for instance, about the Government of the country being 'autocratic and bureaucratic' and about John Company's commercial mantle having largely descended upon the merchants of Calcutta, and of Bengal and Burma may be considered sound and healthy by a section of the British public. If the Government of the country must be autocratic and bureaucratic, it must be so for all who inhabit the country, not merely for the sons of the soil as the Bengal Chamber of Commerce implies by claiming exemption for the European community. The persistency with which the agitation against the administrative changes is being engineered shows that it is not merely the right of consultation that is claimed but the power to dictate to the Government.

"As regards the commercial mantle of John Company having descended upon Calcutta, Bengal and Burma, the Bengal Chamber of Commerce would seem to attach greater importance to the jute, tea and oil industries of a handful of capitalists than to the extensive British trade with which the whole Empire is concerned. Presumably it is nothing to the Bengal Chamber if the export and import trade of India undergoes a serious diminution provided jute and tea and petroleum would flourish. But we know that the genius of the British nation is not likely to permit the suicidal course recommended by the Bengal Chamber of Commerce. The heroics of Mr. Shorrock that in the event of disaster overtaking India the tea planters and the jute and oil kings would stand by the ship while the export and import traders of Bombay and Karachi would run for their lives are hardly likely to be appreciated by the descendants of John Company who are primarily practical tradesmen and only secondarily investors and speculators. It may not be inappropriate to remind Mr. Shorrock and others of his way of thinking in Calcutta that once upon a time the British slave-holders from John Hawkins downwards had the self-complacency of regarding themselves as empire builders and that the final abolition of slavery did not materially affect the interests of even British slave dealers. Throughout it is the British commerce that has stood for the Empire, not the speculation of individual capitalists. We think it is time that the Bengal Chamber of Commerce ceased to ask for the moon and limited its demands to its own provincial needs."

Assaults by Europeans on Indians.

45. The Tribune (Lahore), of the 7th May 1912, publishes the following letter from a correspondent from Hyderabad Sind under the nom de plume of "One who knows" :—

"Every year we hear of some assault cases by European Officers on Indians without provocation. It is only a few months ago that a Military Officer assaulted the late Hon. Mir Alah Bux Khan for which the Military Officer was punished, but it seems the punishment was too inadequate to act as a deterrent on his brother officers.

"A few days ago Mr. Kundanani, Barrister-at-Law, in company with Rai Bahadur Bulchand Dayaram, President of the Hyderabad Municipality, was passing along the European Gymkhana road when a Military Officer coming out of the Gymkhana compound gave a very hard push to Mr. Kundanani and called him names. The matter came to the notice of Mr. C. A. Beyts, I.C.S., Collector of Hyderabad, who invited Mr. Kundanani and the Military Officer to his bungalow and after a long talk lasting for nearly 2 hours Mr. Kundanani was advised to drop the matter. Mr. Kundanani agreed to do so provided the officer apologised. As no apology was offered to Mr. Kundanani, he has taken the matter to Court. The talk that took place between the gentlemen at the Collector's bungalow is very interesting, but as it is likely that the Collector and the Military Officer will be called as witnesses in the case, its reproduction and comments upon it are not deemed advisable at this stage.

"This same Military Officer not satisfied with this assault on Mr. Kundanani got hold of some six students (4 of whom belong to the D. J. Sind College, Karachi, and 2 to the N. H. Academy, Hyderabad), and asked a police Jamadar to take the boys to the District Superintendent of Police, who, after getting their names and addresses was pleased to let them go. The intention of the Military Officer as well as of the D. S. P. was to file a criminal prosecution against the boys for using the civil lines road. With this end in view the Public Prosecutor, Hyderabad, was sent for and consulted. When it was found that a criminal prosecution would not stand against them, the Principals of the College and the Academy were written to by the Collector of Hyderabad to punish the students for their ungentlemanly conduct. The Principal of the Academy sent for the boys of his school and without getting any explanation from them caned them while the Principal of the College wrote letters to the fathers of the students that he was sorry to hear of the ungentlemanly conduct of their sons and so he would not admit them to his College. What action the fathers of the students intend taking on the conduct of the Principals will be known in a short time. The boys were insulted, wrongfully confined and chastised by their Principals at the instance of the Collector on the one-sided version of the Military Officer without getting a word of explanation from the boys.

"About 2 years ago when Mr. Sale was the Collector of Hyderabad the Rev. Henry Stevens, Chaplain, had assaulted a College student while the latter was passing by his bungalow in company with 3 friends. The College student filed a criminal complaint against the Reverend gentleman. Mr. Sale very wisely intervened in the matter and brought about an amicable settlement by asking the Chaplain to apologise, which being properly done, the matter was dropped."

C. STEAD,

SIMLA :

The 11*th May* 1912. } Assistant to the Deputy Inspector-General of Police, Criminal Investigation Department, Punjab.

Punjab Govt. Branch Press, Simla—16-5-12—No. 1—107—H. L. S.

[ Confidential. ]

[ Vol. XXV. ] [ No. 20. ]

SELECTIONS

FROM THE

NATIVE NEWSPAPERS

PUBLISHED IN THE PUNJAB.

Examined up to 18th May 1912.

---

CONTENTS.

Page.

I.—Politics.

(a) Foreign—

1. Indians and German East Africa (Observer) ... 377
2. Persian affairs (Tribune) ... ib.
3. The Muslim-Buddhist peril (Zamindar) ... ib.
4. The Turco-Italian war ( ditto ) ... 378

(b) Home—

5. The partition of the Punjab (Panjabee) ... ib.
6. The Punjab Muslim League's protest against Mr. Montagu's speech (Panjabee) ... 379
7. Mr. Montagu on Indian Muhammadans (Watan and Paisa Akhbar) ... ib.
8. Muhammadans and Swaraj (Hindustan) ... ib.
9. India's cash balances (Tribune) ... ib.
10. Imperial and Provincial finances (Tribune) ... 380

II.—Afghanistan and Trans-Frontier.

11. Hindus in Afghanistan (Panjabee) ... 380
12. Ditto (Khalsa Advocate) ... ib.

III.—Native States.

13. Hyderabad affairs (Paisa Akhbar) ... 380
14. Nabha affairs (Loyal Gazette) ... 381
15. Faridkot affairs (Hindustan) ... ib.
16. The colonization of Kashmir (Tribune and Rajput Gazette) ... ib.

IV.—Kine-killing.

Nil.

V.—Native Societies and Religious Matters.

17. Muhammadans (Vakil) ... 382
18. The Shuddhi movement (Hindustan) ... ib.
29. Dharampal (Indar) ... ib.
20. The forthcoming Hindu Conference (Hindustan, Hindu and Rajput Gazette) ... ib.
21. Six greatest men of India (Zamindar) ... 384
22. Complaint against neo-Sikhs (Sanatan Dharm Parcharak) ... ib.
23. The Provincial Muslim League (Observer) ... ib.
24. The Hon'ble Mian Muhammad Shafi, Secretary of the Punjab Muslim League (Zamindar) ... 385

Page.

VI.—Legislation.

25. Expanded Legislative Councils (Victoria Paper) .. 386
26. Indian Press Act in the House of Commons (Panjabee) ... ib.

VII.—General Administration.

(a) Judicial—

27. The Khan of Hoti's case (Zamindar) ... 386
28. Ditto (Panjabee) ... 387
29. Complaint against the Magistrate of Backergunj (Shanti) ... ib.

(b) Police—

Nil.

(c) Municipal and Cantonment affairs—

30. Sale of meat in Lucknow (Vakil) ... ib.

(d) Education—

31. Government and the Muslim University (Observer) ib.
32. Government and the Education Department (Tribune) ... 389
33. Education and Missionary methods (Panjabee) ... ib.
34. Separatism in Education ( Ditto ) ... ib.

(e) Agriculture and questions affecting the land—

35. The Fodder problem (Tribune) ... ib.

(f) Railways and Communications—

36. Third class passengers (Munir) ... 390
37. Corridor trains in India (Panjabee) ... ib.

(g) Postal matters—

38. Postal Registration (Tribune) ... ib.

(h) Miscellaneous—

39. The Hindu Press and Sir George Ross-Keppel (Zamindar) ... 391
40. The Khan of Hoti and the "Manual of Pashtu" (Panjabee) ... 392
41. Sikhs and Government service (Loyal Gazette) ... ib.
42. The new Capital of India (Tribune) ... ib.
43. Gambling in India ( Ditto ) ... 393
44. Malaria in the Punjab ( Ditto ) ... ib.

LIST OF NEWSPAPERS AND PERIODICALS EXAMINED BY THE SPECIAL BRANCH AS IT STOOD ON THE 18TH MAY 1912.

| No. | Name. | Locality. | Name of Publisher. | Circulation. |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| | ENGLISH. | | | |
| | DAILY. | | | |
| 1 | Tribune ... | Lahore ... | Bihari Lal ... | 1,758 copies. |
| | TRI-WEEKLY. | | | |
| 2 | Panjabee ... | Lahore ... | Mul Chand ... | 2,424 copies. |
| | BI-WEEKLY. | | | |
| 3 | Observer ... | Lahore ... | Nizam-ud-din ... | 1,000 copies. |
| 4 | Punjab Times and Frontier News. | Rawalpindi ... | J. R. Thapur ... | 200 „ |
| | WEEKLY. | | | |
| 5 | Arya Patrika ... | Lahore ... | Devi Chand ... | 650 copies. |
| 6 | Harbinger ... | Do. ... | Durga Parshad ... | 300 „ |
| 7 | Khalsa Advocate .. | Amritsar ... | Bahadur Singh ... | 752 „ |
| | FORTNIGHTLY. | | | |
| 8 | Jijnasu ... | Lahore ... | Ishar Das ... | ... |
| | MONTHLY. | | | |
| 9 | D. A.-V. College Magazine ... | Lahore ... | Saraswati Nath ... | 1,000 copies. |
| 10 | Forman Christian College Notes.* | Do. ... | ... | ... |
| 11 | Practical Medicine* ... | Delhi ... | ... | ... |
| 12 | Punjab Educational Journal | Lahore ... | R. B. Mohan Lal ... | 700 copies. |
| 13 | Punjab Mission News ... | Do. ... | Revd. Wigram ... | 250 „ |
| 14 | Ravi ... | Do. ... | Mr. B. M. Jones ... | ... |
| 15 | Review of Religions* ... | Kadian (Gurdaspur) .. | Sadr Anjuman Ahmadia, Qadian. | 800 copies. |
| 16 | Science Grounded Religion... | Lahore ... | Dev Rattan ... | 25 „ |
| 17 | Teacher ... | Dinga (Gujrat) ... | Kanhaya Singh .. | 200 „ |
| | URDU. | | | |
| | DAILY. | | | |
| 18 | Akhbar-i-'Am ... | Lahore ... | Govind Sahai .. | 630 copies. |
| 19 | Paisa Akhbar ... | Do. ... | Abdul Aziz ... | 1,011 „ |
| 20 | Watan ... | Do. ... | Muhammad Insha Alla ... | ... |
| 21 | Zamindar ... | Do. ... | Zafar Ali Khan, B.A. ... | ... |
| | BI-WEEKLY. | | | |
| 22 | Vakil ... | Amritsar ... | Abdul Aziz ... | 1,970 copies. |
| | WEEKLY. | | | |
| 23 | Afghan ... | Peshawar ... | Saiyid Muhammad Abdulla | 500 copies. |
| 24 | Ahl-i-Hadis ... | Amritsar ... | Sana-ulla ... | 925 „ |
| 25 | Ahluwalia Gazette ... | Do. ... | Lehna Singh ... | 500 „ |
| 26 | Al-Moin ... | Do. ... | Mehraj-ud-din ... | ... |
| 27 | Army News ... | Ludhiana ... | Hira Lal & Co. ... | 1,300 copies. |
| 28 | Arorbans Gazette ... | Amritsar ... | Labh Singh ... | ... |
| 29 | Arya Gazette ... | Lahore ... | Bhowani Das ... | 550 copies. |
| 30 | Badar ... | Qadian Gurdaspur District | Muhammad Sadiq ... | 200 „ |

* Not received during the month.

LIST OF NEWSPAPERS AND PERIODICALS EXAMINED BY THE SPECIAL BRANCH AS IT STOOD ON THE 18TH MAY 1912—CONTINUED.

| No. | Name. | Locality. | Name of Publisher. | Circulation. |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| | URDU—CONTINUED. | | | |
| | WEEKLY—continued. | | | |
| 31 | Bharat ... | Jullundur ... | Thakur Sheoratan Singh ... | ... |
| 32 | Chaudhwin Sadi ... | Rawalpindi ... | Q. Haj Ahmad ... | ... |
| 33 | Civil and Military News ... | Ludhiana .. | Saiyid Muhammad ... | 1,325 copies. |
| 34 | Curzon Gazette ... | Delhi ... | Mirza Hairat ... | 111 ,, |
| 35 | Delhi Gazette .. | Do. ... | Sajjad Husain ... | 200 ,, |
| 36 | Edward Gazette ... | Abbott-abad ... | Muhammad Latif ... | 200 ,, |
| 37 | Hakim ... | Qadian, Gurdaspur District | Yakub Ali ... | 900 ,, |
| 38 | Haq .. | Delhi ... | Kasim Ali ... | 200 ,, |
| 39 | Haq Pasand ... | Amritsar ... | Ram Nath ... | 382 ,, |
| 40 | Hindu ... | Lahore | Hari Lal Sharma ... | ... |
| 41 | Hindustan ... | Do. ... | Ram Saran Dutt .. | 8,070 copies. |
| 42 | Indar ... | Do. ... | Dharm Pal, B.A. ... | ... |
| 43 | Islam .. | Do ... | Abdul Latif ... | 200 ,, |
| 44 | Jhang Sial ... | Jhang ... | Prabh Dyal ... | 2,262 ,, |
| 45 | Kapurthala Akhbar ... | Kapurthala ... | Hamid Husain .. | 155 ,, |
| 46 | Loyal Gazette ... | Lahore ... | Amar Singh ... | 200 ,, |
| 47 | Lytton Gazette ... | Delhi ... | Bulaki Das ... | 1,000 ,, |
| 48 | Milap* ... | Lyallpur ... | Jawahar Lal ... | ... |
| 49 | Millat ... | Lahore ... | Shuja Ulla ... | 1,500 copies. |
| 50 | Mister Gazette* .. | Do. ... | Ali Bakhsh ... | 150 ,, |
| 51 | Munir ... | Jhang ... | Hafiz Khuda Bakhsh ... | 200 ,, |
| 52 | Musalman ... | Amritsar ... | Sana-ulla ... | 400 ,, |
| 53 | Nur ... | Qadian, Gurdaspur District | Muhammad Yusaf ... | 200 ,, |
| 54 | Nur Afshan ... | Ludhiana ... | Revd. Dr. E. M. Wherry ... | 500 ,, |
| 55 | Paisa Akhbar ... | Lahore ... | Abdul Aziz ... | 8,377 ,, |
| 56 | Parkash ... | Do ... | Krishan ... | 1,723 ,, |
| 57 | Punjab Advocate ... | Mianwali ... | Karm Chand, Bahl ... | 1,000 ,, |
| 58 | Punjab Samachar ... | Lahore .. | Hira Lal ... | 705 ,, |
| 59 | Rajput Gazette ... | Do. ... | Thakur Sukhram Das ... | 650 ,, |
| 60 | Municipal Gazette and Sada-i-Hind. | Do. ... | Din Muhammad ... | 500 ,, |
| 61 | Sadiq-ul-Akhbar .. | Bahawalpur ... | Maulvi Ata Ullah ... | 392 ,, |
| 62 | Ditto ... | Rewari ... | Safdar Hussain ... | 200 ,, |
| 63 | Sanatan Dharm Pracharak ... | Amritsar ... | Rulia Ram ... | 200 ,, |
| 64 | Shanti ... | Rawalpindi ... | Kishan Chand Mohan ... | 300 , |
| 65 | Sialkot Paper ... | Sialkot ... | Todar Mal ... | 500 ,, |
| 66 | Sirtaj-ul-Akhbar ... | Jhelum ... | Maulvi Fakir Muhammad | 450 ,, |
| 67 | Tahzib-ul-Niswan ... | Lahore ... | Mumtaz Ali ... | 240 ,, |

*Not received during the week.

LIST OF NEWSPAPERS AND PERIODICALS EXAMINED BY THE SPECIAL BRANCH AS IT STOOD ON THE 18TH MAY 1912—CONCLUDED.

| No. | Name. | Locality. | Name of Publisher. | Circulation. |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| | URDU—CONCLUDED. | | | |
| | WEEKLY—concluded. | | | |
| 68 | Victoria Paper ... | Sialkot ... | Gian Chand ... | 600 copies. |
| 69 | Waqt ... | Lahore ... | Ali Husain ... | 200 „ |
| 70 | Watan ... | Do. ... | Muhammad Insha Ullah .. | 1,800 „ |
| 71 | Zamindar ... | Do. ... | Zafar Ali Khan, B.A. ... | 750 „ |
| | FORTNIGHTLY. | | | |
| 72 | Biwah Samachar* ... | Lahore ... | Ram Chand ... | 300 copies. |
| 73 | Kam Dhenu ... | Ludhiana ... | Daulat Ram ... | 100 „ |
| 74 | Mohyal Gazette ... | Kala, Jhelum District ... | Mehta Sham Das ... | 250 „ |
| | MONTHLY. | | | |
| 75 | Arorbans Parkash* ... | Lahore ... | Salig Ram ... | 200 copies. |
| 76 | Arya Musafir ... | Jullundur ... | Wazir Chand ... | 1,300 „ |
| 77 | Indar* ... | Lahore ... | Dharm Pal, B.A. ... | 3,000 „ |
| 78 | Jauhar* ... | Amritsar ... | Muhammad Ismail Khan .. | 200 „ |
| 79 | Kakezai Social Reformer ... | Lahore ... | Fazl Din ... | 200 „ |
| 80 | Makhzan ... | Delhi ... | Abdul Kadir ... | 4,000 „ |
| 81 | Rafiq ... | Lahore ... | Charinji Lal ... | 500 „ |
| 82 | Sadhu ... | Do. ... | Sheobart Lal ... | 500 „ |
| 83 | Martand ... | Do. ... | Kanhya Lal ... | 250 „ |
| 84 | Raghbir Patrika ... | Do. ... | Prab Dial ... | 500 „ |
| 85 | Zaban* ... | Delhi ... | Hamid Husain ... | 500 „ |
| | GURMUKHI. | | | |
| | WEEKLY. | | | |
| 86 | Khalsa Sewak ... | Amritsar ... | Jiwan Singh ... | 1,000 copies. |
| 87 | Punjab Reporter* .. | Do. ... | Ganda Singh ... | ... |
| 88 | Punjabi Surma ... | Lahore ... | Gian Chand ... | 1,000 copies. |

* Not received during the week.

I.—Politics.

(a)—Foreign.

Indians and German East Africa.

1. The following is from the Observer (Lahore), of the 8th May 1912 (vide paragraph 5 of Selections No. 19) :—

"* * * * That British Indian subjects will be hard hit by this drastic step goes without saying. But the reason given by the Germans for the undesirability of the presence of Indians in German colonies is a repitition of the cant employed by the colonists in British dominions. How then can it lie in the mouth of the British Government to protest against such action on the part of the Germans? The only remedy possible is the extension of equal treatment to Indians in British colonies. This can be secured only by adopting retaliatory measures towards the inhabitants of all countries which differentiate against Indians. If the British Government only knew the indignation that the degrading treatment of Indians in the colonies arouses in this dependency, it would at once adopt strong measures to put an end to the evil. The fate, however, of Mr. Gokhale's resolution on indentured labour in the last session of the Supreme Council holds out no such hope for the present."

Persian affairs.

2. The following is from the Tribune (Lahore), of the 10th May 1912 :—

"* * * * If the present Ministry does not command its confidence it should bring into existence a Ministry that is capable of retaining its confidence. Failing in this primary duty, it has no right to complain of foreign interference when a result of its own impotence the disorderly elements court such interference by imperilling the life and property of foreign subjects who transact business on its borders. There was a good deal of loose talk on the part of the friends of the Persian Revolutionists when Lord Hardinge announced his intention of opening direct negotiations with the tribes in the disturbed area for the punishment of those who led the attack upon the British convoy. The correspondence now published throws a lurid light on the dark side of the Persian Revolution which short-sighted perversity would try to gloss over. Early in December 1911 a boycott of British goods was declared in Shiraz. It was at first thought that this veto on English trade was not likely to be of long duration, but it continued from week to week producing a deadlock in British trade in South Persia. But long before this boycott an attempt was made to establish a reign of terror."

After detailing cases of outrage on British subjects the article concludes with the following remarks :—

"This being so it is folly to rely on Persia which could not prevent the kidnapping of its own Deputy Governor-General by the tribes. With facts such as these before us it is not surprising that even so pacific a Viceroy as Lord Hardinge should have deemed the attack upon the British convoy as the last straw on the Government's patience and obtained the consent of the Secretary of State to open direct negotiations with the tribes both for the punishment of the ring-leaders and for the future safety of British and Indian caravans passing along the main trade routes in South-Persia."

The Muslim-Buddhist peril.

3. The Zamindar (Lahore), of the 11th May 1912, publishes an article headed "Union of the Muslim and Buddhist." In continuation of its previous remarks on the subject (vide paragraph 1 of Selections No. 19), the paper says that, acccording to Professor Vambery, Muhammadans felt gratified and pleased at Japan's victories over Russia owing to the latter country being the chief representative of European superiority in Asia. This is not, however, true. Russian advance towards the Near East was an act of oppression, while Japan was the aggrieved country. And when the oppressed humbled the oppressor the sympathy of people with the former took the form of joy. Nor was the expression thereof confined to Musalmans and other Asiatic races. It was shared by the English themselves, but for whose moral support to Japan the Muscovites would have fared differently in Manchuria. The paper then goes on to say that the Professor regards the union of the Muslims and Buddhists of China as a danger for Europe. He should, however, know that the union is of a defensive character, and that its object can never be an aggressive one. If the European powers were to content themselves with the untold riches they already possess no Eastern people would in any way interfere with them. In case, however, they do not discontinue their usurping moves, but go on shedding blood in a heartless manner, Asiatic races also will, in spite of their weakness, feel compelled to bestir themselves.

4. The Zamindar (Lahore), of the 9th May 1912, publishes an article headed "Rhodes occupied by Italians." The writing is in the form of a dialogue between two Italian soldiers in Tripoli and opens thus :—

The Turco-Italian war.

"First (soldier)—It is not known why Virgin Mary has been displeased with us and what evil Lord, God's only Son, Who, placing a crown of thorns on (His) head and taking upon Himself the curse (which rested) on sinful man, suffered crucifixion, has detected in us that he has turned his back on us . . . . . In spite of our having entered the Kingdom of God, the fates are according us the treatment which should be meted out to Satan and his accursed spawn.

"Second (soldier)—You have said what is in my heart. If the signs characterising those who enter the Kingdom of God are the same that are to be found in us and our army, we will have none of such a Kingdom."

The interlocutors next dwell on the sufferings of the Italian forces in Tripoli and on the sorry figure the latter have so far cut in the battlefield. They also opine that "the occupation by us of Rhodes and one or two other islands (belonging to Turkey) cannot give us Tripoli" and that "our possession of Rhodes will still further add to our difficulties." Continuing, the second soldier says :—"There is only one way in which we can save ourselves and achieve success . . . . . We should try to convince Europe that, if we fail to occupy Tripoli, (Christian) Europe will be disgraced in Africa and that the results of this loss of prestige will not prove good for France and England, as Muhammadans will raise the standard of jehad against both these powers. Although, therefore, we may be defeated in Tripoli, it is the duty of Europe to stand by us and compel the Turks to hand over Tripoli to us."

"First (soldier) . . . . . There may perhaps be no moral consideration (lit. excuse) to prevent Europe from bringing united pressure to bear on Turkey, still the declaration by the Turks, with angry eyes and sword in hand, that they are prepared to shed their last drop of blood in defence of their lives, property, and rights, is a thing which cannot but affect even the united force of the European powers."

(b)—Home.

The partition of the Punjab.

5. The following is from the Panjabee (Lahore), of the 9th May 1912 :—

"Two weeks ago we pointed out that there was a good case made out for the annulment of the Punjab Partition of 1901,—also a failing of Lord Curzon—and reunite the North-West Frontier Province with the Punjab. His Excellency the Viceroy lately visited the province and we hope that he is convinced of the necessity for a re-union of the provinces. The people, both Hindus and Muhammadans, seem to be in favour of it and lately submitted a largely signed memorial to the Government. Of this a correspondent gives the following particulars. He writes ;—

"An incident happened at Kohat two days before His Excellency the Viceroy's visit to that station which has not drawn sufficient attention of the public yet. A memorial was prepared by the general public of Kohat with over a hundred signatures of the Hindus and Muhammadans and the memorialists intended to present it to the Viceroy. Somehow or other, the Deputy Commissioner came to know of it. He sent for the memorialists and asked them to bring the memorial with them to his house. As in duty bound they obeyed the orders and went to his house. The officer asked them to show him the memorial which they did. The Deputy Commissioner said that they had desired in the memorial that the N.-W. Frontier Province should again be amalgamated with the Punjab as it was separated experimentally and the experiment proved altogether a failure. They should therefore tell him why it was a failure. The memorialists explained to him the reasons for it and referred specially to the increase of dacoities by the Frontier tribes and the distinction that was made in giving Government posts to one sect in preference to another. They were mentioning the complaints when he said that this was a sort of complaint against the Chief Commissioner. They said humbly in reply that it was not a complaint against any particular person and that they desired him to forward the same and put it before the Viceroy. He said this was not an opportune time for it and they should withdraw the memorial."

"The correspondent further tells us that the Deputy Commissioner ultimately prevailed upon them to desist from memorialising and one member of the deputation actually tore up the memorial out of deference to the District ruler, who however, promised to remedy the defects pointed out. We do not know why the Deputy Commissioner thought the time was not opportune. We can hardly think of a more favourable opportunity for this question. Apart from the local complaints of the memorialists, there are weighty administrative and political reasons for the change urged. The progress of the people in the Frontier Province, the settlement of the country, the introduction of arts and industries, extension of trade—all require closer union and not separation. There are fresh openings in Persia, which is going to be settled under the guidance of Great Britain. The political and other interests of India are now extended much beyond the border originally fixed. The sphere of influence has also extended and Afghanistan and Persia are no longer the Buffer States they were before. As the sphere of influence is extended, the people and territories brought within must be assimilated and settled. Moreover, with the capital removed to Delhi, Punjab is to be enlarged and given a higher status, both of administration and justice. All these are matters that ought to be under consideration and we regret the Deputy Commissioner should have dissuaded the people from sending up their earnest memorial. Nevertheless we hope the Government of India have the matter under their consideration."

The Punjab Muslim League's protest against Mr. Montagu's speech.

6. The following is from the Panjabee (Lahore), of the 9th May 1912 :—

* * * * * * *

"* * * No one will deny that the East Bengal Muhammadans have very little in common with the Punjab Muhammadans as regards their customs, manners, medium of speech, and the like. They are mostly descendants of the converts to Islam made at the flash of the sword. They speak, dress, talk and write as Hindu Bengalis do. Again what practical relations have the Punjab Muhammadans with the East Bengal Muhammadans? If it is the privilege of calling each other brethren, why every one can do in India or in the whole world, including Turks and Italians. In theory we are all alike and closely one. But in practice an East Bengal Muslim has no more in common with Punjab Muslim than a Bengal Hindu has with one of the Punjab. Occasionally they can marry from each other's stock but more often know little of each other. Territorial influences are stronger than religious or other ties of sentiment and in matters worldly it is best that territorial divisions of humanity should prevail."

Mr. Montagu on Indian Muhammadans

7. The Watan (Lahore), of the 7th May 1912, has a note entitled "A right objection." Adverting to Mr. Montagu's recent remarks in the Commons about the Muhammadans of India (vide paragraph 10 of Selections No. 18), the paper says that the expression thereof by a responsible officer like the Under-Secretary of State has not only deeply pained Musalmans, but has surprised not a few fair-minded Anglo-Indian newspapers. After quoting an extract from the Englishman in support of the latter assertion, it observes that the silence of Muhammadans in the matter would have proved an insurmountable obstacle in the way of securing their legitimate rights. Next it expresses satisfaction at the Punjab Provincial Muslim League having recently adopted a resolution to contradict Mr. Montagu's views about Muhammadans in a well-reasoned but respectful manner. In conclusion, it calls upon all other Musalman associations in the country to follow the example.

The Paisa Akhbar (Lahore), of the 8th May 1912, also writes to the same effect.

Muhammadans and Swaraj.

8. The Hindustan (Lahore), of the 10th May 1912, has an article headed "Indian Muhammadans and Swaraj." After referring to Muslim opposition to Swaraj, the paper remarks that some Muhammadan leaders also consider self-government not only useful, but highly necessary for India. It adds that Khawaja Ghulam-ul-Saqlain, B.A., LL.B., of Meerut, is one of such Musalmans, and that his views deserve to be shared by all his educated co-religionists. Next it quotes an extract from an article which he recently contributed to a Muhammadan paper and in which he defends the demand for Swaraj for India.

India's cash balances.

9. The following is from the Tribune (Lahore), of the 15th May 1912 :—

"Mr. Montagu in reply to a question in the House of Commons said that the last balance held by the Secretary of State for India apart from the Gold Standard Reserve amounted on the 6th instant to £17,568,485, of which £6,915,000 was deposited in seven banks without security, £10,100,000 on security to approved borrowers, and £553,485 on current account at the Bank of England. The rates of interest varied from 2½ per cent. to 3½ per cent. per annum according to the period of deposit. Compare with this statement the following news which Reuter cabled on the 18th April last :—'The Evening Standard states that active preparations are being made for the offer of three million sterling Indian 3½ per cent. stock at 93.' It is to be remembered that besides the cash balance there was the Gold Standard Reserve of over £13,000,000. In spite of this thirty million pounds sterling of India's money being at the disposal of the Secretary of State an Indian loan of three millions could not be successfully floated. From these facts can there be any doubt that the financial policy of India requires a thorough revision?"

Imperial and Provincial Finances.

10. The following is from the Tribune (Lahore), of the 10th May 1912 :—

"The statement that the Government of India are about to issue a Resolution defining the future financial relations between the Imperial and Provincial Governments will be recognized as of great importance. Sir James Meston was engaged upon the question for the greater part of the past two years. The object in view is the placing of the Provincial contracts on a permanent basis and it is expected that the Resolution will mark an important step in the direction of Provincial autonomy in financial affairs. It is to be hoped that the Times will not take alarm at this announcement and proclaim it as the first step towards the dismemberment of the Empire. The Provincial contracts have hitherto been most unsatisfactory and have retarded the development of the different Provinces. Many schemes of improvement are either at a standstill or have made very little headway for lack of funds. The first essential of Provincial autonomy is financial independence and it is to be sincerely hoped that this will be secured by the Resolution about to be published."

II.—Afghanistan and Trans-Frontier.

Hindus in Afghanistan.

11. The following is from the Panjabee (Lahore), of 14th May 1912 :—

"There are various rumours set afloat that the Hindus living in the Afghan territory have now been suffering from injustice and cruelty at the hands of the people. Vernacular papers publish certain accounts of 'eye-witnesses' who give a sad account of their troubles. It is not easy to find out what special reason there is for this sudden change of attitude towards the Hindus in a Moslem State. But the matter has excited some comment. There are about 50,000 Hindus and Sikhs living in the Amir's territory and they were hitherto treated with fairness, though a special tax was levied on them which was not levied on Muhammadans. It is alleged that not only are Hindus not allowed to build fresh places of religious worship but even the old temples are demolished. Complaints of tyrannical conduct and cruelty, it is alleged, are not heard. In one place a place of worship was confiscated to the State and in another a Dharmsala was closed arbitrarily. Two others in Jalalabad are said to have been pulled down. The Hindus cannot blow their conch in their temples and to crown all the following sensational news is published :—

"A Hindu woman who had quarrelled with her husband was coming to her mother. She was accompanied by a Sikh gentleman who was also coming to the same place on business. Near the city of Kazh they met a Muhammadan who at once came up to the woman and said that she had promised to marry him. The Muhammadan then dragged the woman to a mosque by force and married her there. She protested and cried and made a tremendous noise. Her mother cried herself to death. Her husband joined with all the other Hindus and sent a strong representation to the Amir Sahib. But no notice was taken of it and no reply was ever given."

"If these allegations are true they disclose an insufferable state of affairs requiring the interference of the Government of India. The Hindus are not a noisy race and with patience they bear many wrongs but only complain when it is not in their power to bear any longer. But the matter requires enquiry. The Amir of Afghanistan was known for his fair treatment of Hindus and when he visited India he went so far as to ask the Muhammadans not to wound the feelings of the Hindus by killing cows during the Bakr-Id. It is unaccountable, if a change of policy has been considered necessary."

Id.

12. The following is from the Khalsa Advocate (Amritsar), of the 8th May 1912 :—

* * * * * * *

"But we have a plain duty in the matter. If we can extend our sympathy to the suffering of our fellowcountrymen in South Africa, we ought to be able to extend our sympathy to our co-religionists in Afghanistan which was once an integral part of India. Let the Chief Khalsa Diwan and other Singh Sabhas interest themselves in the matter, and devise suitable measures to protect the interests of our brothers in faith in the territories of Afghanistan."

III.—Native States.

Hyderabad affairs.

13. The Paisa Akhbar (Lahore), of the 9th May 1912, has a letter headed "Hyderabad Gup." After remarking that the welfare of a people is closely connected with the revenue administration, the writer complains that, although the subjects of Hyderabad have to pay less in taxes than people in British territory, still they are comparatively worse off than the latter. The sole reason for this is that the Revenue officials in the State are incompetent and that due consideration is not paid to ability and claims in making appointments. Not infrequently sons of rich and influential persons are appointed Taluqdars of the third grade simultaneously with their leaving school, with the result that the work entrusted to them cannot be satisfactorily done. Were they, however, first required to learn (revenue) work, to act as probationers in different districts or to pass an examination in (revenue) law, their appointment would not perhaps prove as injurious (as it now does).

Nabha affairs.

14. The Loyal Gazette (Lahore), of the 5th May 1912, has a paragraph headed "Government itself should solve this riddle." Referring to the Tribune's note about the postponement of the installation of the Maharaja of Nabha (vide paragraph 14 of Selection No. 18), the paper expresses its inability to divine any reason for the occurrence, which, it says, has sorely disappointed the Sikh community (lit. Sikh societies). After remarking that the Maharaja has frequently afforded strong proof of his being an able and educated man, it remarks that, when even Native Chiefs of common parts are installed as soon as they have attained majority, why should the installation of an enlightened and just-minded prince be delayed for a long time? It is to be hoped that the kind Government will itself "solve this riddle" and reassure the public by giving out why the (installation) Darbar was postponed and when it is now to be held.

Faridkot affairs.

15. The Hindustan (Lahore), of the 10th May 1912, publishes a letter headed "An extremely improper action on the part of the Faridkot State." The writer—one Muhammad Yusaf, Patwari of Bhatinda—complains that the authorities of the State named have, with the sole object of adding to its income, promulgated an order requiring all sales and purchases to be made in the State markets alone. It is grossly unjust, he adds, that people living in villages at great distances from the above markets should be prevented from patronising a market, such as that at Bhatinda, much nearer to their homes.

Another correspondent, "A Traveller," makes similar remarks, and reports that about 40 villages have been ordered to patronise only the market at Goniana.

The colonization of Kashmir.

16. The following is from the Tribune (Lahore), of the 10th May 1912:—

"On the strength of a statement appearing in the Imperial Gazetteer of India, the Modern Review thinks that the Government intends to make Kashmir a British colony.

* * * * * * *

"It is true that Englishmen have not yet largely settled in India due to the climatic drawbacks and that Kashmir has frequently been thought of as an ideal British colony. It has an ideal climate and the loveliest scenery in the world. But Kashmir is not British territory and the Government cannot make it a British colony. So far Europeans have not been allowed to settled in Kashmir. No European is allowed to hold any landed property in the State. If colonization is once allowed there will be no end of European settlers. Kashmir will be full of Europeans and the Kashmiris will be soon deprived of all the privileges which they have hitherto enjoyed. A parallel may be cited. A few Europeans have settled in the Kulu Valley. We have nothing to say against them and some of them are very friendly to the people, but a large colony of Europeans is nowhere desirable in India for their own sake. We do not think the idea of a European colony in India need be seriously considered, at least for the present."

Writing on the same subject the Rajput Gazette (Lahore), of the 11th May 1912, has a note entitled "Proposal to convert Kashmir into an English colony." The paper remarks that the English entertain the intention of colonising the Happy Valley. The question was raised several years ago, but had to be dropped owing to opposition from the Bengali press. A passage in the Imperial Gazetteer has now led a certain paper to the conclusion that the Government of India wishes to convert Kashmir into an English colony. After reproducing the passage, the Editor remarks that the appearance of the same in an official publication leaves no room for doubt in the matter. Next he contends that Government has no right to settle white people in Kashmir, and that its treaty obligations and its policy towards Native States also prevent it from doing so.

V.—Native Societies and Religious Matters.

Muhammadans.

17. The Vakil (Amritsar), of the 4th (received on the 13th) May 1912, has an article headed "It is a shame that a bird like thee should be a captive in the cage." The paper begins by referring to the struggles of the Arabs, Oliver Cromwell, George Washington and the Dutch to secure liberty for their respective countries. Continuing, it says:—"Innumerable instances of this kind are preserved in history. Read them and reflect over the sacrifices which progressive nations have made to shake themselves free from oppressive Governments." It then goes on to remark that the British Government has of itself conferred this liberty on "us," and that under it "we" have the right to better "our" condition and remove the weaknesses to be found in "our" community. If "we" continue inert even in "our" present condition of shameful degradation and wretchedness "we" shall assuredly be involved in utter ruin. "We" have lost the sceptre and have no share in education, riches and industries, while zamindaris are passing out of "our" hands. The worst of it, however, is that "we" have parted with ("our") religion and do not understand, or act up to, its teachings. "Our" sole need is that "we" should become true Muhammadans. "We" have come into the world to be at the head of all. It is high time that "we" profited by these days of freedom and justice to knock off "our" shackles of ignorance, irreligiousness, and immorality.

The Shuddhi movement.

18. The Hindustan (Lahore), of the 10th May 1912, publishes an article headed "Is it a question of life and death for Indian Muhammadans?" The efforts of the Arya Samaj, it says, to reclaim "the untouchables" and to bring into the Hindu fold those Muhammadans, who bear Muslim names but are Hindus in all other respects, have caused feelings of uneasiness in the Musalman Camp. Some Islamic Societies, it adds, have also started a movement to keep nominal Muhammadans like the above among the followers of the Prophet. After remarking that the propaganda has derived strength from the visit to India of Sayad Rashid Riza, the Egyptian journalist who presided at the recent session of the Nadwat-ul-Ulma, it quotes an extract from an article which recently appeared in the Muslim Gazette (Lucknow), and in which the question is spoken of as being one of life and death for Musalmans.

Dharmpal.

19. The Indar (Lahore), of the 3rd May 1912, has a note headed "Our account with the Holy God." The Editor states that during the preceding week he received several letters from his Arya Samajist brothers. These communications are to the effect that, as he places Christ and Muhammad above Swami Dayanand, he should openly sever his connection with the Arya Samaj. He is not, however, prepared to do so, because he knows that he is a prophet sent by God to reform Arya Samajists (lit. this following). He will never disobey God (especially) as he knows that the children of those persons, who are now engaged in abusing him, will think it a privilege to untie his shoe latchets and will mention his name with feelings of great pride and respect.

The forthcoming Hindu Conference.

20. The Hindustan (Lahore), of the 10th May 1912, publishes an article headed "Who should preside over the coming Hindu Conference?" After stating that the names of Lala Shadi Lal, Lala Lajpat Rai and Pandit Rambhaj Dat have been suggested for the purpose, the paper remarks that the Pandit is the most suitable man to act as President of the Conference. Proceeding, it contends that Lala Shadi Lal has rendered no services to Hindu society and that he has so far performed not a single act of sacrifice. As regards Lala Lajpat Rai, it alleges that, towards the end of 1909, when about a dozen cases of sedition were being tried at Lahore by Mr. Harrison, feelings of alarm were prevalent among Arya Samajists in particular. The Lala was under the impression or had been given to understand that Government intended prosecuting him also for his life of Mazzini. He was, therefore, constantly apprehensive of arrest, while the fact of his being an Arya still further added to his fears. He was assured by his friends (at this time) that Government looked upon him as the life and soul of the Panjabee, and would feel pleased with him if he changed that paper's policy or handed it over to people who would effect the desired change. Lala Lajpat Rai saw Mr. Butler, the then Deputy Commissioner of Lahore, and a single threat from that officer was sufficient to strike terror into his heart. He could think only of committing political kari kari in order to remove the stains which, he thought, covered his name in the eyes of Government. In short, he sacrificed the Panjabee to save himself. The Editor considers the present policy of that paper beneficial for both Government and the "nation." What he wishes to impress on the public is that the Lala deliberately changed, or (lit. and) allowed a change to be effected, in that policy which he regarded as correct and advantageous for the country. Can he assert that the journal named was sold, not by himself, but by Lala Jaswant Rai (its first proprietor) ? Pitiable is the condition of a public leader whom a single threat from a Deputy Commissioner can induce to part with the life he has been leading for years, and who can lay down his arms at the sight of the latter's angry eyes. The paper does not mean to say that "the leaders of the nation" should care nothing for, or should go against, the wishes of the authorities. He desires only to convey that they should have the courage to open their hearts to the authorities, and should not throw their long-settled principles overboard with the sole object of pleasing the latter. It firmly believes that the authorities respect only the leader whom they regard as being a man of principle. For instance, Mr. Butler, who "rent Lala Lajpat Rai's political moon in twain," used to respect Pandit Rambhaj Dat and to attach the greatest weight to his words. He knew that the Pandit said only what was in his heart and that his acts agreed with his professions After remarking that he cleared the position of the Arya Samaj to Mr. Butler, Sir Archdale Earle and Sir Guy Fleetwood Wilson to such good purpose that the lastnamed became a sincere admirer of the Samaj, the paper says that Pandit Rambhaj Dat has never hesitated to set the Arya Samaj right with the authorities. Nor has he ever tried to flatter the latter, who respect him for his sincerity and whom he has converted into so many admirers of the Samaj. There has never been an occasion on which he either unduly flattered the authorities from motives of personal gain or tried to save his skin by laying down his arms at a threat from some English officer. As to his learning and selfless services to the country, they are fully known to the public.

The Hindu (Lahore), of the 9th May 1912, publishes the letter from Lala Jaswant Rai in which the above explanation has been demanded from Pandit Rambhaj Dat.

The paper has also an article in which it contends that the Pandit has done nothing to deserve the honour proposed for him by the Hindustan.

The Rajput Gazette (Lahore), of the 11th May 1912, says that Pandit Rambhaj Dat has absolutely no claims to the Presidential chair at the ensuing Hindu Conference. After remarking that, for the present, it wishes to discuss only one trait in his character, the paper repeats the question put to him by Lala Jaswant Rai, first Proprietor of the Panjabee, in the columns of the Hindu as to what he has done with the following sums of money :—

(1) Rs. 1,000 realised by him from the public on account of subscription to the English Hindustan.

(2) Rs. 2,500 collected by him from the public in ( ? postage) stamps (tikton ka) in respect of the issue of the Hindustan which was to have consisted of one lakh of copies.

What right, as Lala Jaswant Rai enquires, had the Pandit to pocket the above amount ? Again, he has not as yet fulfilled his promise to give his first wife's ornaments with a sum of Rs. 500 for the establishment of a Girls' School and the construction of a room at the Gurukula in memory of the deceased lady. Continuing, the paper says that Pandit Rambhaj Dat may indulge in tall talk, but that those in the know are fully aware that he is perhaps the greatest coward in existence. This should be evident from the fact that the speech made by him under the auspices of the Bharat Mata (Society) was repudiated by him in the columns of the Rajput Gazette and an Anglo-Indian paper (the Civil and Military Gazette).

Six greatest men of India.

21. The Zamindar (Lahore), of the 10th May 1912, publishes a leaderette headed "Six great men of India." In 1907, says the paper, the local Hindustan asked its readers to name six greatest men of India, the palm being awarded to the following Indians :—

(1) Mr. Dadabhoy Naoroji.

(2) Mr. Tilak.

(3) The Maharaja of Baroda.

(4) Babu Surendra Nath (Banerji).

(5) Mr. Gokhale.

(6) Lala Lajpat Rai.

After remarking that the Parkash has now put the same question to its readers, the paper expresses its inability to see any reason for this. Why should the "great" men of 1907, it asks, be hurled down from the pedestal on which they were placed five years back? Should Mr Tilak be so treated because he has been sent to jail over one of his principles? Should Lala Lajpat Rai suffer because he had to be deported to Mandalay through back-biting by "some traitors to the nation fond of fame?" If this is so, the Editor will have to greatly change his view about the hero-worship of Hindus. Next he enquires why Muhammadans should be kept out of the field of selection.

Complaint against neo-Sikhs.

22. The Sanatan Dharm Parcharak (Amritsar), of the 1st May 1912, publishes a letter headed "Interference with religious societies." The writer—one Bhawani Shankar Jotshi—states that for some time past religious discussions have been held at the Sanatan Dharam Debating Club, Amritsar, between Orthodox Hindus and those people (i.e., neo-Sikhs) who profess to follow Guru Nanak, but, in reality, repudiate his teachings. The former, he adds, put and answer questions in a gentlemanly way, but the latter conduct themselves in an unbecoming manner. Should neo-Sikhs be unable to reply to any question, they descend to abuse and refuse to resume their seats. As an instance, the correspondent reports that, at the debate held on the 21st ultimo, under his presidency, one Bhai Moti Singh openly remarked that he cared for nobody and would not stop. In conclusion, he says that, if neo-Sikhs do not mend their ways, the matter will have to be laid before the Lieutenant-Governor, through the Deputy Commissioner of Amritsar.

The Provincial Muslim League.

23. The Observer (Lahore), of the 11th May 1912 publishes the following from a correspondent under the nom de plume of "Frank."

"After the portentous sleep of nearly 18 months, the Provincial Muslim League has once more begun to show signs of awakening. During the early days of its existence, the organisation did some very good work, and its General Secretary earned the well-deserved encomiums of Musalman India for his commendable activity. But its pace grew slower and slower just when its services were most needed. Some three years ago The Observer was obliged to call attention to the lethargy exhibited by the body with regard to the question of the constitution of Provincial Legislative Councils under the Reform Scheme. Soon after that the League showed signs of vitality and took an energetic part in the matter of Council elections. When, however, the elections were over, it went to sleep again. During the last 18 months or so not one general meeting of the Punjab League has been held. Even the anniversary for the last year did not take place. A few meetings of the Executive Committee were perhaps convened. These, however, were generally held not for the purpose of discussing any burning question of the day or voicing Muslim feelings on topics exercising the community, but with a view, in the main, to passing resolutions of congratulation or condolence. Publicists belonging to another community have been attacking the Land Alienation Act. But the League has kept silent. They have been animadverting on the Council Regulations. The League has, however, remained unmoved.

The Partition of Bengal has been revoked without eliciting any protest from the Association. The administrative changes, so stupendous in their character and so far-reaching in their potentialities, have been passed by in utter silence. Turkey has been raided by Italy without provoking any expression of opinion on its part. The massacres in Persia, the desecration of the Meshed mosque by Russia, have failed to move it. Not one meeting has been held as long as the Elementary Education Bill was on the anvil. And now when the election of the office-bearers is again in sight, we are told that a general meeting will be held on the 26th instant.

"That protests against the apathy of the League have been made from more quarters than one is a well known fact; while it is equally obvious that the Punjab Musalmans are no longer prepared to silently acquiesce in everything that may be done by their 'leaders' on their behalf without consulting them. It is being openly proclaimed that the days of autoracy by the 'leaders' are gone, never to return.

"Chaudhri Shahab-ud-Din, Pleader, Lahore, it will be remembered, wrote 'an open letter' to the Hon. Mian Muhammad Shafi, accusing the latter of having repeatedly acted in an unconstitutional manner as General Secretary of the Provincial Muslim League. The Hon. Mian thereupon rendered his resignation. No meeting of the Executive Committee, however, was held for months, to consider the resignation and it was only on Sunday last that the matter came up for consideration. On the agenda paper were two important resolutions and the question of the General Secretary's resignation was to come after them. But for obvious reasons, it was suggested that the resolutions about Mr. Montagu's speech (published elsewhere) should not be discussed first, and that the place of honours should be given to a consideration of the resignation of the Hon. Mian Muhammad Shafi. The meeting paid no heed to the fact that the resolutions were far more important and forthwith accepted the suggestion. Thereupon a unanimous vote of confidence in Mian Muhammand Shafi was passed and he was requested to withdraw his resignation. The Hon. Mian very kindly accepted the request and, the meeting being held in his own bungalow, was called to the meeting, and moved the next resolution. It was after this that Chaudhri Shahab-ud-Din came. Now it is asserted by some that the sole object of the meeting was to pass a vote of confidence in the Hon'ble Mian and thus prepare the way for his re-election as General Secretary on the 26th instant; that the resolutions were for mere show and intended to mislead. We do not say that all these assertions are right. But it would have been far better if the order of the subjects on the agenda had not been changed and the resignation discussed in the presence of the writer of the 'open letter'.

"The Punjab League has begun to wake up again, but the first signs of its awakening are hardly auspicious. What is required is a reform of not only of its constituent body, but a change in its attitude towards the Muslim public. An admission on its own part that it has some defects and an honest attempt to remove them will tend to raise it in the public estimation. May we hope that it will try to do so?"

24. The Zamindar (Lahore), of the 10th May 1919, publishes a leader headed "Invaluable services." It begins by referring to the resolution which the Executive Committee of the Punjab Muslim League recently adopted to express its hearty appreciation of the invaluable services rendered to Muhammadans by the Khan Bahadur Mian Muhammad Shafi. After remarking that Mian has used his personal influence to make certain persons adopt this vote of confidence in him, the paper observes that the members of the aforesaid Committee are free to panegyrise him in hyperbolic language. They have, however, no right "to gratuitously place the heavy burden of his 'invaluable services' on the back (lit head) of all Muhammadans," who should, moreover, be enlightened as to the nature of these services. Continuing, the Zamindar reports that the resolution referred to constitutes a vote of censure on Chawdhri Shahab-ud-Din, who contributed an open letter to the paper in February last to find fault with the conduct of Mian Muhammad Shafi in his capacity of Secretary of the Punjab Muslim League. After reporting that the Chawdhri has consequently severed his connection with the League, it says that he stated—and that openly—only what was true; that no reply being forthcoming to it the same has been treated with indifference; and that a vote of confidence has been passed for the Mian in place of his having been called to account. (This shows that) Muhammadans are still wanting in that moral courage of which they stand in sore need. "The strong hand of time" will, however, teach them the necessary lesson, while, in the event of their not learning it they will assuredly be exterminated.

The Hon'ble Mian Muhammad Shafi, Secretary of the Punjab Muslim League.

VI.—Legislation.

Expanded Legislative Councils.

25. Writing under the heading "Advantages of Expanded Councils," the Victoria Paper (Sialkot), of the 1st (received on the 11th) May 1912, says that a careful perusal of the questions asked in the above Councils and of the (official) replies made to them leaves no room for doubt that the bodies named render very great help in widening the knowledge of both the people and Government. The questions asked in the Supreme and Provincial Councils are not invariably important, still the replies from Government disclose "the true facts" and thereby remove any misunderstanding that may have been caused. Again, the replies returned to all the questions which have so far been put make it quite clear that Government is sincerely desirous of reforming the law and administration in the interests of the people. After remarking that the Hon'ble Members should have "local agencies" to keep themselves informed of the happenings in all districts, the paper suggests that Provincial Councils should have representatives from every district.

Indian Press Act in the House of Commons.

26. The following is from the Panjabee (Lahore), of the 14th May 1912 :—

"At last the Punjab workers and interpreters of the Press Act of 1910 have got the distinction of having their decisions questioned in the House of Commons. The security demanded from one Lahore paper formed the subject of a question by Mr. O'Grady last mail week and he asked if the action of the Lahore Magistrate was not ultra vires.

* * * * * * *

"Now the new Press Act, as worked in this Province, is, we are afraid, faulty. In the first place the Act itself is so severe that it excludes judicial investigation in deciding an 'offence.' A journalist or a paper is branded as having offended by an executive mandate. What is more astounding is that the 'offence' itself is not explained and the 'offender' has to pay security once-twice-thrice if need be without ever having an idea of his 'offence' so that he might try to avoid the same. Moreover, the demand for security a second time without absorbing the first amount is clearly ultra vires. Even the Draconian Law of 1910 does not contemplate it. Thirdly, security for merely changing the locality of presses already established was not thought of by the Legislators, but the Punjab authorities have introduced it. There is no Province where the Press Law is worked as harshly as in the Punjab and there is nothing like uniformity or definiteness about its operation in all parts of India—except that it is the only law in which 'offences' are established and 'offenders' languish without a word being ever said in their favour to explain their side of the case."

VII.—General Administration.

(a)—Judicial.

The Khan of Hoti's case.

27. The Zamindar (Lahore), of the 1st May 1912, publishes a letter headed "Sir George Roos-Keppel and his critics." The writer—Ghulam Hasan, Sub-Registrar, Peshawar—remarks that the criticism which Hindu papers have passed on the Khan of Hoti's case pre-supposes the following things :—

(1) That Sir George was the originator of the proposal to establish an Islamia College at Peshawar.

(2) That the first steps to give effect to the proposal were taken in his time.

(3) That the Khan of Hoti declined to give a donation for the College.

(4) That the correspondent's letter to the Khan (to ask the latter to give money in aid of the College) was written in the time, and at the instance, of the present Chief Commissioner.

As regards (1) and (2), it may be stated that the proposal originated with the educated Muhammadans of the Frontier Province, and that it began to assume a practical shape in the time of Mr. Merk. There is also no truth in (3) ; no deputation having ever waited upon the Khan of Hoti to request him to subscribe towards the funds of the College. The fourth assumption is also unfounded ; and, consequently, the attacks made on Sir George Ross-Keppel are of a similar character.

The Khan of Hoti's case.

28. The following is from the Panjabee (Lahore), of the 9th May 1912 :—

"It is nearly three months since the sensational incidents in the Hoti Mardan Case challenged the attention of everybody and since its conclusion the House of Commons has been flooded with questions and the Indian Council has been approached with at least one question. So far beyond a verbal promise of enquiry, the public are not given to understand that the Government regards the case with any seriousness. Yesterday Mr. Keir Hardie asked another question in the House of Commons and Mr. Montagu again spoke of his ignorance of facts. The case seems to have become more mysterious and everything hinges on the entire want of information in these days of cablegrams and wireless messages. Is it not a great defect that cases of this magnitude fail to move the Government of India, whereas a fishing question in Labrador or the retirement of an Army Captain before his time interest Home ministers who settle such questions then and there. If any such outrage as the Hoti Mardan's occurred in the United Kingdom, surely there would be no lack of information for something like three months. The Viceroy lately visited the Frontier Province and had a talk with its ruler. We are anxious to know why a case of this kind does not call for prompt action or why the Government do not show the same anxiety that the people do in their desire to worship the Goddess of Justice."

Complaint against the Magistrate of Backergunj.

29. The Shanti (Rawalpindi), of the 27th April (received on the 8th May) 1912, has a paragraph headed "Ill-treatment of women during railway journeys." Some railway officials, it says, do not hesitate to outrage solitary female passengers, knowing as they do that no evidence can be discovered (against them). Next it states that recently a Railway Guard (at Backergunj) "attempted to forcibly dishonour" a native woman travelling by rail. The Magistrate, who tried the case, found on enquiry that the woman was a widow, and had attained her majority, upon which he recorded in his judgment that she was a consenting party. After remarking that the Guard has been acquitted, the paper asks why such just Magistrates do not permit the accused (in such cases) to prosecute the complainants for perjury, so that no case may be instituted against railway servants in future.

(c)—Municipal and cantonment affairs.

Sale of meat in Lucknow.

30. The Vakil (Amritsar), of the 4th (received on the 13th) May 1912, has a note headed "Prohibition to sell meat in the bazars of Lucknow. It complains that the Lucknow Municipality has recently issued an order to the above effect, restricting the sale of flesh to the Sander's Market alone. This place, it adds, lies at a very great distance from the city and the order in question is, therefore, calculated to entail considerable inconvenience on meat-eaters. It is a matter of great surprise to the paper that thousands of Muhammadans and Christians should be inconvenienced for the sake of the few Hindus who avoid the use of the flesh.

(d)—Education.

Government and the Muslim University.

31. The following is from the Observer (Lahore), of the 8th May 1912 :—

"A study of the attitude of Government towards the proposed Muslim University and the changes which that attitude appears to have undergone is highly instructive. The scheme was launched under the most happy auspices. A leader of the commanding influence of His Highness the Aga Khan stood sponsor to it. Government officials gave it their benediction. Some of them presided over meetings held in its support and a few even went the length of openly subscribing towards its funds. The speeches delivered by the leaders of the movement induced a general belief that the University would be practically independent of official control and free to affiliate duly qualified Islamia high schools and colleges in any part of India, free to prescribe proper text books and free to appoint suitable Professors. The only control that Government would exercise on the University, it was popularly imagined, would be to veto text-books or ban Professors that were likely to breed sedition.

"The publication, however, of the draft of the Bill, as prepared by the Constitution Committee, shattered these fond hopes. It was discovered that those responsible for the draft would place many restrictions upon the powers of the University. It was then that many people, who had given their enthusiastic support to the scheme and promised liberal donations, learnt for the first time that the proposed Muslim University would be about as much under official control as the existing Universities; that even when qualified Indians and Muslims could be had as Professors, the University College would have to keep a certain number of Professors of European descent on its staff; and that the University would 'affiliate such institutions only as shall be conducted on the residential system, on the principle and model of the University College, Aligarh.' But great as was the disappointment caused in Muslim circles by these revelations, many sober people were of opinion that Government would grant a charter on these conditions only. The stream of subscriptions towards the Muslim University Fund grew torpid at first, but the leaders of Muslim thought in India eventually succeeded in winning back public confidence in a great measure and thereby accelerated the rate of the flow.

"The Hindu University scheme was now brought forward by Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya. This project, while it improved the attitude of Hindu publicists towards the Muslim University, has coincided, though accidently only, with a modification of the official attitude towards denominational Universities. Many Anglo-Indian journals, which up till now had kept reticent or even blessed the Muslim University, began to denounce the schemes of what they were pleased to call 'sectarian' Universities and openly hinted that they were engineered for sinister political purposes. A circular order was also issued, prohibiting Government officials from actively taking part in meetings held in support of either scheme. And the Muslim University deputation, which waited upon Sir Harcourt Butler, though treated with great courtesy, was given distinctly to understand that a charter would be obtained only on the condition of still further increasing special control over the University and of amassing a sum larger than that originally estimated as capital of the proposed institution. The Government of India wanted, it transpired, first, that the Muslims should provide a capital of at least 35 lakhs of rupees; second, that no man should be appointed Professor without the previous sanction of the Chancellor (schools and colleges affiliated to existing Universities are not subject to such a condition); third, that no text-book should be prescribed without the previous sanction of the Viceroy (though the draft Bill permitted the Chancellor to veto any undesirable book); and lastly, that the University should affiliate no institution outside the University town of Aligarh. Many attempts were made to keep these things strictly confidential. But, to quote the Persian poet, how can a secret to which a large number of men are party be kept unrevealed? In spite of the efforts of many to revive public confidence, some Musalmans have lost all enthusiasm over the scheme and decline to pay up their subscriptions. Nawab Viqar-ul-Mulk, that venerable leader of the Muslim community, assured his co-religionists that Government might still be expected to change its attitude towards the question of affiliation. But articles published in Anglo-Indian journals have tended to discount the assurance; while it is now stated that the Secretary of State has withheld his assent to the grant of powers of affiliation outside Aligarh.

"We hope the report is incorrect or, at least, the powers-that-be are still open to conviction. The leaders of the Muslim University movement are prepared to agree that only those institutions should be affiliated to the University which follow a residential system, impart religious teaching and are otherwise run on the model of the Aligarh College, and, as a further concession to official opinion, are regarded as fit for affiliation by the Chancellor. If Government remained inflexible even now, it would be disastrous to the interests of the University. Some people would, in the event of the Secretary of State persisting in his present attitude towards the question of affiliation, regard the scheme as of little utility to the Musalmans. Already proposals have emanated from certain quarters that if the donations realised towards the University Fund be diverted towards the establishment of a Muhammadan technical and industrial college or used for sending abroad suitable candidates to foreign countries in order to learn modern arts and industries, they would yield far better results than their investment in an emasculated teaching and residential University confined to a single town. It is true that Oxford and Cambridge have got Universities of this description. But there exists not a single University of this kind in India. Why should then Government impose conditions on private Universities from which its own Universities are free in this country? The projected Dacca University may follow the Oxford mode. But the schemes of Muslim and Hindu Universities are of older standing. They may serve as a link between the examining Universities already maintained by Government and the teaching and residential institutions contemplated by the Government. Now that the sum stipulated for by Government is within an ace of being realised, we trust Government will see their way to grant the privilege of affiliation to the University and thereby assuage Muhammadan apprehensions. As such action will mean the concession of a similar favour to the Hindu University, it will give satisfaction to practically all sections of His Majesty's Indian subjects. Otherwise, there will be many who will not be favourably inclined to the idea of establishing a Muslim or a Hindu University that would not enjoy the powers of affiliation. For such an institution will be too costly a luxury, especially for the poor Musalmans, who cannot afford to have what will practically be an improved Aligarh College at the enormous expense which it will entail, instead of a central institution located at Aligarh but not confined in its beneficient results to one city or province and serving as the pivot round which the entire educational fulcrum of Muslim India would turn. If this be not acceptable to Government, we shall have to seriously consider whether it will not be more advantageous to the community as a whole to abandon the idea of such a lifeless University and instead divert the money so far collected to the establishment of a Provincial College in every Indian Province, fed by a number of High Schools, this chain of Provincial colleges and local schools serving the best educational interests of the community all over the country much better than a teaching University that would confine its activities to the residents of the town where it may be located."

Government and the Education Department.

32. The following is from the Tribune (Lahore), of the 10th May 1912 :—

"* * * * In many directions education has made scarcely any progress and technical education is in its infancy. The Indian Educational Service itself is a misnomer. It practically excludes all Indians, yet it is called the Indian Service. The figures obtained by the Hon'ble Mr. B. N. Basu show that practically there is no room for Indians in the Indian Educational Service. The future of education in India lies with Indian educationists who will bring enthusiasm and devotion to their work."

Education and Missionary methods.

33. The following is from the Panjabee (Lahore), of the 11th May 1912 :—

"It is sometimes given out by the missionary societies and the institutions controlled and conducted by them that their object is more of a philanthropic nature than that of direct proselytism. But such does not appear to be actually the case always. By slow and gradual steps ways are adopted by these missionaries to bring about direct or indirect pressure upon those who can, in any way, be influenced. At a public meeting of Hindus and Muhammadans, which was held at Benares on the 7th instant and which was largely attended by members of both the communities, strong disapproval and dissatisfaction was expressed at the missionary tractics. A resolution was passed at that meeting saying that the citizens of Benares, while admitting the help rendered to the people of the town by educational and other charitable institutions conducted by the different missionary societies, view with strong disapproval a tendency in some of these societies to obtain converts by ways which creat suspicion and dissatisfaction in the public mind, and in view of this tendency which is calculated to arouse religious feelings and by way of protest the meeting requested the public to be careful of such institutions. The request of the Benares meeting deserves the careful attention of both the Hindus and Muhammadans."

Separatism in Education.

34. The following is from the Panjabee (Lahore), of the 11th May 1912 :—

"We have already got so many troubles as a result of separatism of the Moslems that we must object to the principle being adopted in regard to educational benefits. The Hon'ble Mr. Bhurgri's Sind Cess Bill, though a well-meaning one, is a severely sectional and separatist legislation which leaves the Hindus and others backward. It is on this ground we object to the Bill, and our feelings will perhaps be better understood if we propose that Mr. Gokhale's Bill be passed for Hindus only leaving Muhammadans out of account. Mr. Shaffi and other Moslem leaders stated that the Moslems do not want compulsory education. But the Hindus want it. What would be the effect of passing Mr. Gokhale's Bill so far as the Hindus are concerned who are in favour of it by financing the scheme in some such way as Mr. Bhurgri proposes? The Muhammadans will be left miles behind the Hindus in progress and all other advantages and they are sure to suffer. If Mr. Bhurgri's Bill were accepted, it will compel the Hindus to adopt even a more effective plan of sectional scheme of education and Government will have to adopt the same in fairness. What will such separatist and rival plans of progress lead to?"

(e)—Agriculture and questions affecting the land.

The Fodder problem.

35. The following is from the Tribune (Lahore), of the 11th May 1912 :—

"In Bombay His Excellency the Governor in Council has approved of the action of the Director of Agriculture in postponing experiments in bull-breeding in favour of the experiments in the growing and storing of fodder. The fodder question certainly lies at the root of all agricultural questions. This is especially so where the number of plough cattle has increased without a corresponding increase in the area of grazing grounds. It is therefore essential that cultivators should be properly educated in the methods of conserving the supply of fodder. We very much wish that the Punjab Government followed the example of Bombay in this respect and spared itself the anxiety incidental to finding fodder in times of scarcity. In Pusa experiments were being made in ensilage three years ago. But nothing conclusive has been published about the results of those experiments. We learned from the Madras Forest Report that that Government is carrying on its own experiments in the conservation of the fodder supply. In the Punjab the fodder problem is as acute as ever it was. But our officials have a very adjustable frame of mind and forget their past troubles in good seasons. It is quite time that an effort were made to educate cultivators in the modern methods of conservation."

(f)—Railways and Communications.

Third class passengers.

36. The Munir (Jhang), of the 8th May 1912, has a note headed "Every one is partial to the rich." After stating that electric light and fans have been supplied in 1st and 2nd class carriages in the North-Western Railway, the paper remarks that justice demands that the authorities concerned should first have thought of the comfort of third class passengers, who contribute the bulk of the revenues of the railway named. Next it refers to the hardships suffered by these passengers during their journeys by rail.

Corridor trains in India.

37. The following is from the Panjabee (Lahore), of the 14th May 1912 :—

"The Bombay-Baroda and Central India Railway has recently introduced corridor mail trains between Bombay and Peshawar. Corridor trains have been introduced partly in Bombay and Madras. People in the Punjab have perhaps no idea what these trains are like. In Bombay the carriages in a corridor train are connected by a common passage which runs from one end of the train to the other. The passengers can enter the train from the door of any one carriage without much anxiety or needless hurry in finding out seats and after boarding the carriage can find seats for themselves conveniently in the carriages of the class for which they hold tickets. No inconvenience is caused to a passenger in either getting in or getting out of a corridor train. Besides there is hardly any congestion, especially for 3rd class seats, because a passenger having free access from one carriage to another carriage inside the train can easily know where he can find suitable accommodation and can occupy the vacant seat without trouble. Another advantage of a corridor train is that thefts and attacks on women or men are impossible, because no theft or attack on women's modesty can be committed in the presence of the passengers of a whole train seated in view of each other. Therefore it is apparent that a corridor train has several advantages over other trains as regards equitable adjustment of accommodation and the avoidance of overcrowding, &c. All these are well-adapted to Indian conditions. In corridor trains a refreshment bazar is usually kept and passengers can be served at their seats if they like while the train is in motion. But we see that Anglo-Indians who love privacy and exclusiveness are against the introduction of corridor trains in India. The Lahore Anglo-Indian daily has come out with an article condemning the extention of corridor train in India, but it is difficult to see how they are put to any inconvenience unless they wish to avoid all contact with Indians. We are afraid it is a failing of Anglo-Indians but they will, in course of time, realise the many advantages. But as more than nine-tenths of the Railway passenger income is derived from the Indian passengers, the Railway administrations are to give effect to what conduces to their comfort and safety. And we hope that the Railway Board will ask all the Railway companies to adopt corridor trains and introduce the corridor system as early as practicable.

(g)—Postal matters.

Postal Registration.

38. The following is from the Tribune (Lahore), of the 14th May 1912 :—

"A postal article may be registered or insured or both. In case of insurance which also includes registration the postal authorities accept liability for the safety of the article and pay compensation in case of loss or damage to the article. But in registration no such liability is admitted by the Post Office. It appears that the only object of registration is to make the transmission of an article more secure, as it passes through the hands of special postal officers. It is clear that the Post Office, as written in the sender's receipt, is not responsible for its loss or damage. But what is the equivalent to the public for the registration fee charged? The only privilege the sender gets is to receive a receipt for the article registered, but if it does not enable him to claim anything in case of loss or damage, what is the use of such a receipt? And again the sender does not receive any acknowledgment from the addressee as in the case of postal money order. The sender of a registered article is however entitled to obtain an acknowledgment of its delivery bearing the signature of the addressee on payment of an additional fee of one anna at the time of registration. It is apparent that there is a good deal of inconsistency in this procedure, for when an article is registered its delivery should at least be ensured and the demand for the extra fee seems quite unreasonable. If the sender does not get any advantage by registering the article why should there be any registration at all? A widespread movement is on foot to reduce postage, cable rates and charges for deferred telegrams in Europe. If similar measures are adopted here in the Postal Department it would mean an increase of income to the Department and would ensure greater safety. Both the registration and insurance fees may be reduced so that people may be encouraged to register and insure their articles more frequently. If it were possible that all registered parcels would be insured at a lower fee it would be the best thing. The liabilities of the Post Office in that case will increase, no doubt, but we think there will be at the same time an increase in the income of the Post Office which will compensate for the increased responsibility.

(h)—Miscellaneous.

The Hindu Press and Sir George Roos-Keppel.

39. The Zamindar (Lahore), of the 4th May 1912, publishes an article headed "Sir George Roos-Keppel's Heap of Sins." It says that, if one were to prepare a list of the sins which a section of the Hindu press has of late been surprisingly zealous in laying at the door of Sir George, it would probably be found that the blackest part of his sinfulness is connected with the interest which he has been evincing in the establishment of the Islamia College at Peshawar. The Hindu papers in question repeatedly raise the outcry that the officer named forcibly collected money from the (Muslim) inhabitants of the Frontier Province for the College; visiting his displeasure on those who refused to render pecuniary help to that institution. The Editor also can take a hand in blackening Sir George's reputation, provided he is first told whether or not, in the event of the charge levelled against the latter proving well-founded, a similar accusation could be preferred against even those Tahsildars, Deputy Commissioners, Commissioners, Lieutenant-Governors, Governors and Governors-General, who realised subscriptions for the King Edward and Queeen Victoria Memorial Funds. Did not the authorities, he asks, resort to every intimidating inducement in collecting lakhs of rupees in aid of these funds? And, if it is urged that "this Forced Charity" was intended to serve a good purpose, why should not the object of the (proposed) Islamia College, Peshawar, be also regarded as noble? Apparently there is no reason for looking on the latter end as being other than laudable, excepting that the word "Islamia" forms part of the name of the College. Continuing, the Zamindar remarks that, according to the Punjab Advocate, another of Sir George Roos-Keppel's sins is that he confers special favours on the Prophet's followers. Hindu newspapers lay several other sins also at his door, and one of these is that Hindus alone have suffered from dacoities in his time, although dacoits have not even spared Muhammadans. Again, they feel very indignant at a certain rais (the Khan of Hoti) having resolved to leave the Frontier Province through the (so-called) misdeeds of Sir George; while they display such warmth in espousing his cause as to indulge in threats of having the Chief Commissioner sent about his business; witness the Panjabee of the 2nd May. When, however, the Khan of Agror was exiled for no fault in the time of one of Sir George's predecessors none of these journals thought it worth while to shout in the former's favour. After saying that the complaints of Hindus against the present ruler of the Frontier Province are of an imaginary character, the Editor alleges that the rights of Muhammadans have been trampled upon (in several cases), but that there is no paper or Councillor to espouse their cause. This is why it has not as yet come to the knowledge of the public (lit. any one) that the jirgah system is proving a source of serious injury to them; that, thanks to the machinations of some treacherous and honours-hunting persons, their associations (e g., the Anjuman-i-Islamia, Hazara,) are a thorn in the side of certain short-sighted officers of low rank, merely because they inculcate the principle of pan-Islamic love and brotherhood; and that the Muhammadans of a town in which a Hindu's house may, perchance, be plundered, are made responsible for the safety of the lives and property of their Hindu neighbours.

The Khan of Hoti and the "Manual of Pashtu."

40. The following is from the Panjabee (Lahore), of the 11th May 1912 :—

"We are sure that the name of Sir George Roos-Keppel, Chief Commissioner of the Frontier Province, has been unnecessarily dragged in in connection with certain quotations from the 'Manual of Pashtu' in which the Khan of Hoti Mardan is said to have been referred to in very uncivil terms. The Manual in question is compiled by Sir George with the assistance of two Muhammadan officers and consists of three parts—I, the Grammar, II, series of lessons and exercises, and III, colloquial sentences. It is in Part III that some of the offensive sentences are quoted, but we find that the whole of this part is composed of papers set at Higher Standard Pashtu examination from 1886 to 1892 with their translations. Thus the Khan of Hoti complains of sentences given for translation in pages 202, 213, 217 and 231. On reference to the 'Manual of Pushtu' we find that questions 8 and 12 on page 202 are from the examination papers of the year 1889 and questions on page 213 are of 1890; those on page 217 are of 1891 and those on page 221 of 1892. During these years Sir George was not in the Frontier Province and he had nothing whatever to do with the setting of those examination papers, for which a Board of Examiners are responsible. Part III of his book contains exercises for translation taken from these examination papers in regular order and not by any set design to print anything reflecting on any one in particular. In fairness to the Chief Commissioner we must say that his name has been unnecessarily dragged in and represented as though he purposely maligned the Khan. It is a different question however as to why such sentences were selected for examination by the Board of Examiners, but we shall deal with this question subsequently.

Sikhs and Government service.

41. The Loyal Gazette (Lahore), of the 5th May 1912, has a note entitled "Sikhs and Government service." It is an open secret, says the paper, that, unlike Muhammadans, Sikhs are granted a share of public posts and seats on representative bodies from considerations neither of political importance, historical greatness nor of numerical strength. After observing that they should be adequately represented in every department, it remarks that, so far they have utterly failed to secure (their share of) the public service, and that they are not likely to fare any better in the future. Why should they not, then, try to stand on their own legs, i.e., cease thinking of Government service and take to arts and industries? Next the Editor asks his co-religionists to establish industrial schools for their sons, as also to send Sikh) youths to foreign lands (to acquire technical education). To have Sikh boys, he adds, taught at the existing schools is tantamount to making them fond of service under Government, which is, however, almost impossible for them to secure.

The new Capital of India.

42. The following is from the Tribune (Lahore), of the 9th May 1912 :—

"So more light has been thrown on the trio who will fashion the Delhi of tomorrow. One is admittedly a layman, the other a dreamer and the third an engineer with no practical knowledge of the Indian soil. It is not a very promising combination. The building of a new capital is not an easy affair. The work is a most responsible one and requires the co-operation of men of experience. Here in India we have several Europeans and Indians who have both practical knowledge and ability. Why were not they entrusted with the responsible task of town-planning and what was the necessity of importing the triumvirate of so-called experts? Are foreign laymen better than indigenous experts? The Government do not say anything as to what the new capital will be like and what share the people of the country are likely to get of the work. All that is known about Captain Swinton and others is that they are waiting for the monsoon after which the site of the new capital is likely to be fixed. In the meantime they are exploring the surroundings of Delhi in motor cars and on elephants. The howdah is said to be a seat of vantage from which the town-planners get a better view of the surrounding country. And by means of this Imperialist survey they are said to have already spotted out one place, Okla, which is destined to be the future Barrackpore of the new Capital. Does it not sound inconsistent that before the site of the capital is fixed, the country retreat of the Viceroy has been settled? It is curious that no details are forthcoming from the Government regarding the making of the Capital. It is a great mistake to keep the public in the dark as to what the Government proposes to do. No policy, however mature it may be, is perfectly sound. And it is desirable that every scheme of the Government should be offered to the public for approval and criticism. By the adoption of this course the Government will be able to secure public sanction to a well reasoned and considered scheme."

Gambling in India.

43. The following is from the Tribune (Lahore), of the 14th May 1912 :—

"It cannot be said that the vice of gambling has been recently introduced in India for it is at least as old as the Mahabharata which relates how King Yudhisthira, the incarnation of truth, was so passionately addicted to gambling that he lost everything, including his kingdom and even his wife, by it. But gambling on the turf is new in India and Sir George Clarke has rendered an important service to the cause of public morality by trying to minimise its evils. It is welcome news that after much opposition the Race Course Licensing Bill has been passed. The Bombay Presidency will gratefully remember Sir George Clarke's earnest and persistent efforts to reduce the evil of gambling. We wish the action of the Bombay Legislative Council will be recognised as an important precedent and will prompt the other provincial Legislative Councils to adopt similar measures and to reduce the evil effects of reckless gambling. Calcutta and Lucknow are big centres of gambling and recently fresh developments have appeared in Calcutta. A new craze for gambling on American cotton figures and Indian opium figures has set in and its evil consequences are in evidence in the Calcutta papers and the police courts. In Upper India gambling is largely and publicly indulged in during the Dewali. Gambling in any form is objectionable and should never be encouraged. Large fortunes and promising men are hopelessly ruined by games of chance. Appeals have been made from the pulpit against the prevalence of gambling and a serious and concerted endeavour should be made to suppress it."

Malaria in the Punjab.

44. In his recent speech summarising the Punjab Budget debate His Honour the Lieutenant-Governor quoted facts and figures showing the intimate relation between periodical floodings and epidemics of malaria ; the existence of this relation having been queried by the Tribune (Lahore), in its issue of the 17th February last. Adverting to Sir Louis Dane's above mentioned speech the Tribune, in its issue of May 14th, 1912, writes as follows :—

"Our grateful acknowledgments are due to His Honour the Lieutenant-Governor for this frank and full statement. In the Tribune of the 17th February there was only a single sentence enquiring whether periodical flooding had not been a constant feature in the Punjab and whether there was anything like malaria on the present scale twenty years ago. The Punjab Government is now doing its best to avert epidemics of Malaria, but we are not aware what measures, if any, were taken for that purpose between, say, 1881 and 1908.

SIMLA :

The 18th May 1912.

C. STEAD,

Assistant to the Deputy Inspector-General of Police, Criminal Investigation Department, Punjab.

Punjab Govt. Branch Press, Simla—23-5-12—No. 2—107—H. L. S.

RECD
8 JUN 1912
INDIA OFFICE

[ Confidential. ]

[ Vol. XXV. ] [ No. 21. ]

SELECTIONS

FROM THE

NATIVE NEWSPAPERS

PUBLISHED IN THE PUNJAB.

Examined up to 25th May 1912.

---

CONTENTS.

Page.

I.—Politics.

(a) Foreign—

1. Ill-treatment of Sikhs in Canada (Loyal Gazette) 401
2. The Turco-Italian war (Vakil) ... ib.
3. Ditto (Observer) ... ib.
4. Ditto (Zamindar) ... 402
5. Moroccan affairs (Vakil) ... ib.
6. Sir Walter Lawrence on Lascars (Panjabee) ... ib.
7. Turkey and Persia (Panjabee) ... ib.
8. Russian bombardment of the Mashed Shrine (Paisa Akhbar) ... ib.
9. The Turco-Italian war and England (Observer) ... 403
10. Muhammadans and Constantinople ( Ditto ) ... 404
11. Great Britain and the Turco-Italian war (Tribune) ib.

(b) Home—

12. The Nicholson Committee (Jhang Sial) ... 404
13. Muhammadans and political agitation (Chaudhwin Sadi) ... ib.
14. The Aligarh Institute Gazette on Bengal affairs (Chaudhwin Sadi) ... 405
15. The Punjab Partition (Panjabee) ... 406
16. Rumoured transfer of the Saharanpur district to the Punjab (Tribune) ... ib.

II.—Afghanistan and Trans-Frontier.

Nil.

III.—Native States.

17. Muhammadans in Bikaner (Observer) ... 406
18. Public service in Kashmir State (Observer) ... 407

IV.—Kine-killing.

Nil.

V.—Native Societies and Religious Matters.

19. The Arya Samaj and Muhammadans (Indar) ... 407
20. Christianity and Hinduism (Jhang Sial) ... 408
21. Christian Missions in India (Parkash) ... ib.
22. Poor Muhammadans and pilgrimage to the Hedjaz (Paisa Akhbar) ... 409
23. A complaint (Jhang Sial) ... ib.
24. The Anglo-Indian Defence Association and the Eurasian community (Vakil) ... ib.

Page.

VI.—Legislation.

25. Protection of minor girls (Panjabee and Tribune) 410
26. Revision of Council Regulations (Tribune) ... ib.

VII.—General Administration.

(a) Judicial—

27. Restricting the number of legal practitioners in the Punjab (Zamindar) ... 411
28. The Tennasarim case (Zamindar) ... ib.

(b) Police—

Nil.

(c) Municipal and Cantonment affairs—

Nil.

(d) Education—

29. Education in the Punjab (Observer) ... 411

(e) Agriculture and questions affecting the land—

Nil.

(f) Railways and Communications—

Nil.

(g) Postal matters—

Nil.

(h) Miscellaneous—

30. Ill-treatment of Indians by Europeans (Jhang Sial) ... 412
31. Security from the Vakil Press (Zamindar) ... ib.
32. The office of the Accountant-General, Punjab (Observer) ... 414
33. The Khan of Hoti's case (Observer) ... ib.

LIST OF NEWSPAPERS AND PERIODICALS EXAMINED BY THE SPECIAL BRANCH AS IT STOOD ON THE 25TH MAY 1912.

| No. | Name. | Locality. | Name of Publisher. | Circulation. |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| | ENGLISH. | | | |
| | DAILY. | | | |
| 1 | Tribune ... | Lahore ... | Bihari Lal ... | 1,758 copies. |
| | TRI-WEEKLY. | | | |
| 2 | Panjabee ... | Lahore ... | Mul Chand ... | 2,424 copies. |
| | BI-WEEKLY. | | | |
| 3 | Observer ... | Lahore ... | Nizam-ud-din ... | 1,000 copies. |
| 4 | Punjab Times and Frontier News. | Rawalpindi ... | J. R. Thapur ... | 200 „ |
| | WEEKLY. | | | |
| 5 | Arya Patrika ... | Lahore ... | Devi Chand ... | 650 copies. |
| 6 | Harbinger ... | Do. ... | Durga Parshad ... | 300 „ |
| 7 | Khalsa Advocate .. | Amritsar ... | Bahadur Singh ... | 752 „ |
| | FORTNIGHTLY. | | | |
| 8 | Jijnasu ... | Lahore ... | Ishar Das ... | ... |
| | MONTHLY. | | | |
| 9 | D. A.-V. College Magazine ... | Lahore ... | Saraswati Nath ... | 1,000 copies. |
| 10 | Forman Christian College Notes.* | Do. ... | ... | ... |
| 11 | Practical Medicine ... | Delhi ... | ... | ... |
| 12 | Punjab Educational Journal | Lahore ... | R. B. Mohan Lal ... | 700 copies. |
| 13 | Punjab Mission News ... | Do. ... | Revd. Wigram ... | 250 , |
| 14 | Ravi ... | Do. ... | Mr. B. M. Jones ... | ... |
| 15 | Review of Religions ... | Kadian (Gurdaspur) ... | Sadr Anjuman Ahmadia, Qadian. | 800 copies. |
| 16 | Science Grounded Religion... | Lahore ... | Dev Rattan ... | 25 „ |
| 17 | Teacher ... | Dinga (Gujrat) ... | Kanhaya Singh ... | 200 „ |
| | URDU. | | | |
| | DAILY. | | | |
| 18 | Akhbar-i-'Am ... | Lahore ... | Govind Sahai ... | 630 copies. |
| 19 | Paisa Akhbar ... | Do. ... | Abdul Aziz ... | 1,011 „ |
| 20 | Watan ... | Do. ... | Muhammad Insha Alla ... | ... |
| 21 | Zamindar ... | Do. ... | Zafar Ali Khan, B.A. ... | ... |
| | BI-WEEKLY. | | | |
| 22 | Vakil ... | Amritsar ... | Abdul Aziz ... | 1,970 copies. |
| | WEEKLY. | | | |
| 23 | Afghan ... | Peshawar ... | Saiyid Muhammad Abdulla | 500 copies. |
| 24 | Ahl-i-Hadis ... | Amritsar ... | Sana-ulla ... | 925 „ |
| 25 | Ahluwalia Gazette ... | Do. ... | Lehna Singh ... | 500 „ |
| 26 | Al-Moin ... | Do. ... | Mehraj-ud-din ... | ... |
| 27 | Army News ... | Ludhiana ... | Hira Lal & Co. ... | 1,300 copies. |
| 28 | Arorbans Gazette ... | Amritsar ... | Labh Singh ... | ... |
| 29 | Arya Gazette ... | Lahore ... | Bhowani Das ... | 550 copies. |
| 30 | Badar ... | Qadian, Gurdaspur District | Muhammad Sadiq ... | 200 „ |

* Not received during the month.

LIST OF NEWSPAPERS AND PERIODICALS EXAMINED BY THE SPECIAL BRANCH AS IT STOOD ON THE 25TH MAY 1912—CONTINUED.

| No. | Name. | Locality. | Name of Publisher. | Circulation. |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| | URDU—CONTINUED. | | | |
| | WEEKLY—continued. | | | |
| 31 | Bharat ... | Jullundur ... | Thakur Sheoratan Singh ... | ... |
| 32 | Chaudhwin Sadi ... | Rawalpindi ... | Haji Ahmad ... | ... |
| 33 | Civil and Military News ... | Ludhiana .. | Saiyid Muhammad ... | 1,325 copies. |
| 34 | Curzon Gazette ... | Delhi ... | Mirza Hairat ... | 111 „ |
| 35 | Delhi Gazette* ... | Do. ... | Sajjad Husain ... | 200 „ |
| 36 | Hakim ... | Qadian, Gurdaspur District | Yakub Ali ... | 900 „ |
| 37 | Haq ... | Delhi ... | Kasim Ali ... | 200 „ |
| 38 | Haq Pasand ... | Amritsar ... | Ram Nath ... | 382 „ |
| 39 | Hindu ... | Lahore .. | Hari Lal Sharma ... | ... |
| 40 | Hindustan ... | Do. ... | Ram Saran Dutt .. | 8,070 copies. |
| 41 | Indar ... | Do. ... | Dharm Pal, B.A. ... | ... |
| 42 | Islam ... | Do. ... | Abdul Latif ... | 200 copies. |
| 43 | Jhang Sial ... | Jhang ... | Prabh Dyal ... | 2,262 „ |
| 44 | Kapurthala Akhbar ... | Kapurthala ... | Hamid Husain .. | 155 „ |
| 45 | Loyal Gazette ... | Lahore ... | Amar Singh ... | 200 „ |
| 46 | Lytton Gazette ... | Delhi ... | Bulaki Das ... | 1,000 „ |
| 47 | Milap* ... | Lyallpur ... | Jawahar Lal ... | ... |
| 48 | Millat ... | Lahore ... | Shuja Ulla ... | 1,500 copies. |
| 49 | Mister Gazette ... | Do. ... | Ali Bakhsh ... | 150 „ |
| 50 | Munir ... | Jhang ... | Hafiz Khuda Bakhsh ... | 200 „ |
| 51 | Musalman ... | Amritsar ... | Sana-ulla ... | 400 „ |
| 52 | Nur ... | Qadian, Gurdaspur District | Muhammad Yusaf ... | 200 „ |
| 53 | Nur Afshan ... | Ludhiana ... | Revd. Dr. E. M. Wherry ... | 500 „ |
| 54 | Paisa Akhbar ... | Lahore ... | Abdul Aziz ... | 8,377 „ |
| 55 | Parkash ... | Do. ... | Krishan ... | 1,723 „ |
| 56 | Punjab Advocate ... | Mianwali ... | Karm Chand, Bahl ... | 1,000 „ |
| 57 | Punjab Samachar ... | Lahore ... | Hira Lal ... | 705 „ |
| 58 | Rajput Gazette ... | Do. ... | Thakur Sukhram Das ... | 650 „ |
| 59 | Municipal Gazette and Sada-i-Hind. | Do. ... | Din Muhammad ... | 500 „ |
| 60 | Sadiq-ul-Akhbar ... | Bahawalpur ... | Maulvi Ata Ullah ... | 392 „ |
| 61 | Ditto ... | Rewari ... | Safdar Hussain ... | 200 „ |
| 62 | Sanatan Dharm Pracharak ... | Amritsar ... | Rulia Ram ... | 200 „ |
| 63 | Shanti ... | Rawalpindi ... | Kishan Chand Mohan ... | 300 „ |
| 64 | Sialkot Paper ... | Sialkot ... | Todar Mal ... | 500 „ |
| 65 | Siraj-ul-Akhbar ... | Jhelum ... | Maulvi Fakir Muhammad | 450 „ |
| 66 | Tahzib-ul-Niswan ... | Lahore ... | Mumtaz Ali ... | 240 „ |
| 67 | Victoria Paper ... | Sialkot ... | Gian Chand ... | 600 „ |

*Not [illegible]

LIST OF NEWSPAPERS AND PERIODICALS EXAMINED BY THE SPECIAL BRANCH AS IT STOOD ON THE 25TH MAY 1912—CONCLUDED.

| No. | Name. | Locality. | Name of Publisher. | Circulation. |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| | URDU—CONCLUDED. | | | |
| | WEEKLY—concluded. | | | |
| 68 | Waqt ... | Lahore ... | Ali Husain ... | 200 copies. |
| 69 | Watan ... | Do. ... | Muhammad Insha Ullah .. | 1,800 „ |
| 70 | Zamindar ... | Do. ... | Zafar Ali Khan, B.A. ... | 750 „ |
| | FORTNIGHTLY. | | | |
| 71 | Biwah Samachar ... | Lahore ... | Ram Chand ... | 300 copies. |
| 72 | Kam Dhenu ... | Ludhiana ... | Daulat Ram ... | 100 „ |
| 73 | Mohyal Gazette ... | Kala, Jhelum District ... | Mehta Sham Das ... | 250 „ |
| | PERSIAN. | | | |
| | FORTNIGHTLY. | | | |
| 74 | Siraj-ul-Akhbar ... | Kabul ... | Abdul Khalik ... | ... |
| | URDU. | | | |
| | MONTHLY. | | | |
| 75 | Arorbans Parkash ... | Lahore ... | Salig Ram ... | 200 copies. |
| 76 | Arya Musafir ... | Jullundur ... | Wazir Chand ... | 1,300 „ |
| 77 | Jauhar ... | Amritsar ... | Muhammad Ismail Khan .. | 200 „ |
| 78 | Kakezai Social Reformer ... | Lahore ... | Fazl Din ... | 200 „ |
| 79 | Makhzan ... | Delhi ... | Abdul Kadir ... | 4,000 „ |
| 80 | Rafiq ... | Lahore ... | Charinji Lal ... | 500 „ |
| 81 | Sadhu ... | Do. ... | Sheobart Lal ... | 500 „ |
| 82 | Martand ... | Do. ... | Kanhya Lal ... | 250 „ |
| 83 | Raghbir Patrika ... | Do. ... | Prab Dial ... | 500 „ |
| 84 | Zaban* ... | Delhi ... | Hamid Husain ... | 500 „ |
| | GURMUKHI. | | | |
| | WEEKLY. | | | |
| 85 | Khalsa Sewak ... | Amritsar ... | Jiwan Singh ... | 1,000 copies. |
| 86 | Punjab Reporter* ... | Do. ... | Ganda Singh ... | ... |
| 87 | Punjabi Surma ... | Lahore ... | Gian Chand ... | 1,000 copies. |

* Not received during the week.

I.—Politics.

(a)—Foreign.

Ill-treatment of Sikhs in Canada.

1. Writing under the heading "Difficulties of Sikhs in Canada," the Loyal Gazette (Lahore), of the 12th May 1912, complains that the Inspector of Buildings, Victoria (Canada), has prohibited the local Sikhs from building a Gurdwara. After asking whether this is the civilisation of which the white races feel proud, the paper remarks that it is unlikely that grosser oppression is practised in either Russia or Afghanistan. Continuing, it considers it a matter for the deepest regret and shame that Sikh ladies should be accorded a grossly unjust and unbecoming treatment in Vancouver. In support of this assertion it refers to the recent expulsion of some Sikh women from the place, and goes on to remark that Sikhs shed rivers of blood in 1857 in order to preserve British rule in India. The bravery, loyalty, and fidelity, moreover, which they have since displayed on every battlefield, are also known to all. It is, therefore, to be regretted that they should have, in spite of being (loyal) British subjects, to suffer hardships like the above in America. After asking the Government of India to have their grievances redressed, the Loyal Gazette suggests that all Singh Sabhas ought to hold meetings to condemn the Canadian Government's oppressive treatment of Sikhs and to appeal to the just British Government to look into the matter.

The Turco-Italian war.

2. The Vakil (Amritsar), of the 11th May 1912, has an article headed "The Island of Rhodes." Referring to the occupation of Rhodes by Italy the paper says that the facts connected with the event should create in every Muhammadan the feeling that the ( ? Christian) world has completed its preparations for ending the days of Musalmans. After remarking that the Christian (lit. European) form of Government has supplanted the rule of the Quran in Morocco and that "northern and southern tempests ( ? Russia and England) have long been bent on the ruin of Persia," it states that preparations are being made to invade even Afghanistan, and that the independence of that country also is in danger. Should, then, the Islamic world tolerate that the Muhammadans of Rhodes should, like their co-religionists of Tripoli, suffer oppression from the Italians; that the mosques (in the said island) should be converted into stables; that the leaves of the Quran should be used for fuel (there); that respectable Muhammadan women should be dishonoured; that the youth should be put to the sword; that the old and children should be baptised by force; that crosses should be erected on the mehrab and pulpit; and that unitarian Musalmans should be forced to worship Jesus and Mary? Muhammadans should bear in mind that these things are certain to come to pass in Rhodes: they took place in Tripoli only a few months back. Have they become so inert that they can keep silent at the ruin of the sacred land which constitutes a memorial of the conquests of the Caliphs and which the Prophet's companions won to Islam with their life-blood? If "we" had not kept silent over the ruin of Morocco the calamities which have overtaken Persia would not have been witnessed. (Again) if "we" had raised a systematic outcry on behalf of the latter country, Tripoli would not have fallen on evil days. If, however, "we" cannot feel sorry at this island having passed out of "our" hands the time should not be considered distant when Mecca and Medina will be bombarded, the Black stone will be removed to Europe, and European officers will be appointed to look after the Prophet's tomb."

The Turco-Italian war.

3. The following is from the Observer (Lahore), of the 15th May 1912:—

"Having refused point-blank to interfere when their intervention would have avoided a bloody war, the European Powers expressed the readiness to mediate only when Italy had lost all hope of conquering Tripoli. As was to the expected, Turkey has gently but firmly refused these offers unless Ottoman sovereignty over Tripoli is guaranteed. There cannot be the slightest doubt that the war would not have taken place unless Italy had had hope of the moral support of at least some of the Powers. This it has enjoyed, and these Powers cannot be acquitted of all responsibility for the Italian raid. When a war is waged, nonbelligerent trade cannot but suffer. The Italian attack on the Dardanelles has naturally led to the closing of the Dardanelles by the Turks. But instead of compelling Italy not to repeat an attack on the Dardanelles, pressure has been put on the Porte to re-open the Straits for the benefit of the trade of Russia and other Powers. No guarantee is given that the Dardanelles will not be attacked in the event of its being re-opened. The demand of such a guarantee from Italy has been represented as an action that would constitute a violation of international law. But the demand of re-opening the Dardanelles is not regarded as an infringement of international morality!"

The Turco-Italian war.

4. Commenting on the cablegrams about the recent Italian occupation of some islands belonging to Turkey, the Zamindar (Lahore), of the 15th May 1912, says that the powers keep silently looking on, and that none of the civilised European Kings enquire from Italy why she does not keep her promise to confine the war to Tripoli. But why should they, asks the paper, take this trouble when they are all of one mind? Continuing, it remarks that evidently the world is soon to witness a sanguinary war, after which statesmen will have to prepare a new Geography.

Moroccan affairs.

5. The Vakil (Amritsar), of the 11th May 1912, has a note entitled "Morocco in her last gasps." Writing about the establishment of the French protectorate in Morocco, the paper remarks that the event means that the only independent Islamic Kingdom in Africa has passed out of the hands of Muhammadans for ever. After observing that Europe, which feels no shame in breaking treaties concluded by it, keeps silent even on the present occasion, it complains that the treaty entered into between England and France on the 8th April 1904, as also the Algeciras treaty concluded on the 7th April 1906, has been broken without any hesitation. It was the duty of England to stop French machinations in order to preserve the integrity and independence of Morocco.

Sir Walter Lawrence on Lascars.

6. The following is from the Panjabee (Lahore), of the 21st May 1912:—

"On the 25th April, Sir Walter Lawrence presided at the 55th annual meeting of the Stranger's Home for Asiatics, West India Dock Road, London. A number of distinguished Anglo-Indians were present and the report showed that 1,341 Asiatics were admitted—500 more than in the previous year. Of these 222 were destitute and on them £ 147 were spent. 'The Asiatics,' said Sir Walter, 'are not here to amass fortunes or indulge in selfish pleasure, but as humble but most essential workers in the great Imperial trade on which the very life-blood of the country depends.' He then praised the Lascars and admired their bravery at sea. Yet the fact is plain that the jealousy of others is only kept down by the humble nature of the work allotted to the Asiatics. If they begin to 'amass wealth' or 'indulge in selfish pleasures' they are to be turned out. For that is clearly not the function of Asiatics but of others. With such great maxims should Imperialism thrive."

Turkey and Persia.

7. The following is from the Panjabee (Lahore), of the 21st May 1912:—

"The troubles of Turkey and Persia are increasing and the situation is becoming more complicated. The attempts to end the hostilities between Italy and Turkey were immediately followed by the seizure of Rhodes and other Aegean islands. The Turkish garrison in Rhodes has surrendered and the Italians are jubilant. Russia is said to be intriguing to restore the throne of Persia to the ex-King and mediating in favour of Italy. England is believed to be opposed to these plans and apparently wants a more honourable course of action. In the meanwhile, Russian mobilisation in the Caucasus is renewed and the British Prime Minister is conferring with Lord Kitchener at Mata. The London Moslem League has protested against the extension of hostilities to the Dardenelles and it says that the Muhammadans in Indian States will organise a system of volunteering for the assistance of Turkey. We do not know where all these will lead to, but it is curious to note how Moslem volunteering in India will induce British interference in favour of Turkey. The occasion has been taken advantage of by Salar-ud-Doulah who has issued a manifesto saying that he is marching with 200,000 Persians towards Teheran. None of these bring any hope of peace to the Moslem world and the situation looks very grave indeed."

Russian bombardment of the Mashed shrine.

8. The Paisa Akhbar (Lahore), of the 14th May 1912, publishes a letter from its special correspondent, one Sayad Abdulla Husain, who gives an account of the bombardment of the Mashed shrine, saying that hundreds of pilgrims from distant places were killed on that occasion; that the Russians (also) plundered the shops of all the merchants (in Mashed); that they carried away from the shrine property worth crores of rupees; and that Russian cavalrymen and foot soldiers are encamped in the compound of the shrine. Nevertheless, he adds, the Muscovites issued a proclamation (which is reproduced) to the effect that not the least damage has been done to the sacred place in question.

The Turco-Italian war and England.

9. The following is from the Observer (Lahore), of the 22nd May 1912.

"We do not wish to fasten any responsibility on England, which her own statesmen are loath to accept; nor have we any right to do so. Those who are to-day at the helm of affairs in England and who control the destinies of her empire must have a broader outlook than any section of the subject races can have; nor is there any doubting the keenness of their sense of duty; while they are best able to look after the interests of Greater Britain and of the many peoples committed to their charge. The heads that planned the British Empire, are, we are convinced, still possessed of sufficient wisdom, and the arms that completed the conquest of its component parts, of sufficient strength to keep the empire intact. But that does not mean that we, who pride ourselves on forming an integral part of the mighty British empire, should not place our innermost wishes before our rulers in a manner at once loyal and constitutional or hesitate to explain our point of view, not with the object of imposing our will on His Imperial Majesty the King Emperor and his advisers but to beseech a careful and sympathetic consideration of our prayers. Doubtless, Englishmen alone are and can be the framers of true Imperial policy; but the Musalmans of India, or for the matter of that every other section of British subjects, are vitally interested in the effects of that policy and are thus entitled to influence it whenever such a result can be achieved with loyal adherence to the ideals of the empire, with an eye to the good of the Paramount Power and without in the least jeopardising the general Imperial interests of Great Britain and her empire. That is a claim which England has ever conceded generously to her dependencies and her past and present treatment of subject races is a convincing proof of the deep solicitude which her statesmen have invariably shown in respecting the cherished sentiments of the ruled. In this lies the unique strength of British rule and its ever-lasting glory. And relying on the traditional policy of their rulers and encouraged by their constant solicitude for the feelings of the ruled, the Indian Musalmans have freely and frankly opened out their hearts to their Sovereign and his advisers. They have seen great wrongs attempted in Tripoli and Persia and they have appealed to England's sense of equity and humanity to intervene in the war between Turkey and Italy and in the troubles between Persia and Russia. The Musalmans, whose hearts had been greatly perturbed by recent events, are not unaware of what has been already accomplished by England's staying hand in Persia and of the active steps which she has taken to put a brake on Russian and Italian aggression. For this they are grateful beyond expression; and they are deeply gratified to note that their prayers have been duly heeded. The recent article in the Daily Telegraph, a short summary of which was wired by Reuter yesterday, furnishes one more evidence of English solicitude for Muslim feeling, of which we are speaking. The Daily Telegraph, discussing Great Britain's position in regard to the Turco-Italian war, declares that while Great Britain is desirous of remaining on friendly terms with Italy, she is bound as a Muhammadan Power to consider the desires of the vast population of India. She cannot without embarrassment see the curtailment of Ottoman authority. Great Britain, the journal adds, has recently become more popular with Turkey, because it has been felt that she is bound to defend Muhammadan interests. Noble words these, and we trust they will not fail to materially influence the attitude of England in the present war between Turkey and Italy.

"It may be noted here, by the way, that Sir Edward Grey has failed in preventing Italy and Russia from throwing themselves into the arms of Germany. The report of Russia now striving after a rapprochement with Germany and being desirous of mediation in favour of Italy should convince the London Cabinet that no reliance can be reposed on the Colossus of the North. In view of this staggering blow to Sir Edward Grey's efforts to bring about a rapprochement between English and Russia, it is to be hoped that he will be convinced of the far-sightedness of the Beaconsfield policy towards the lands of Islam, and that he will stand firm in the face of European demands for the usurpation of Muslim countries. As a result of this not only would the Musalman territories remain independent, but Great Britain would also have behind her back the solid phalanx of Muslim support throughout the world without the expenditure of any blood or treasure in defence of the Musalmans. With conciliated Turkey and a friendly Muslim world at her beck and call, England will be able to defy the united strength of Germany and Russia and will be not only the mistress of the seas, as she is, but the mistress of the whole world as well."

Muhammadans and Constantinople.

10. The following is from the Observer (Lahore), of the 22nd May 1912 :—

"The London Muslim League has rendered a distinct service by urging that the extension of hostilities to the Dardanelles is calculated to incite the warlike elements in the neighbouring States and in India to organise a system of volunteering for the assistance of Turkey. Though it is not the religious capital of Islam, few Europeans can realise the importance which is popularly attached to Constantinople by the Muslim throughout the world. We admit that feelings were not manifested in a very prominent fashion during the Russo-Turkish War, when in 1878 Russia threatened Constantinople. But much water has flowed under the bridges since 1878. That the last Russo-Turkish War did agitate the Muhammadans of India there can be no dispute. Now, however, the Musalmans read the newspapers with far greater avidity and the report of every unjust raid on Muslim territory becomes current in a few days throughout Asia. The Muhammadans know that Italy gave a definite understanding to the Powers that the war would be confined to the Tripolitaine, that at all events it would not be carried to the Turkish possessions in Europe. They know that Italy has broken the pledge and that no one has as much as formally reminded her of her pledge. They know that, so far from enforcing the promise, Russia, that arch-enemy of Islam, wants to put pressure upon Turkey instead and that it has behind it the support of Austria. Thus Muslim rule in Europe, predicted by the Prophet many years before it was consummated, is threatened with extinction. Can there be any wonder that they should sympathise with Turkey in her troubles and that the London League should invite the attention of the Government to this matter?"

Great Britain and the Turco-Italian war.

11. The following is from the Tribune (Lahore), of the 24th May 1912 :—

"So far the attempts made by the Moslem League and Muhammadan leaders to secure the diplomatic intervention of Great Britain in the war between Italy and Turkey have proved vain. Nothing else was to be expected, for international neutrality cannot be lightly violated and England has no interest in either of the belligerents. But the note struck by the Daily Telegraph shows that there is a growing feeling in Conservative circles that the wishes of the Muhammadans of India cannot be entirely disregarded. Great Britain is the largest Muhammadan Power in the world and she cannot without embarrassment see the curtailment of Ottoman authority. But what can she do? A rupture with Italy is out of the question and she may resent even diplomatic representations. On the other hand, anything that may be done to bring this miserable war to an end will be welcomed not only by Muhammadans but all the nations of the world. Whatever else she may have done Italy has not certainly covered herself with glory by this brigandage."

(b)—Home.

The Nicholson Committee.

12. The Jhang Sial (Jhang), of the 11th May 1912, has a note headed "Changes in the Military Department of India." Lord Hardinge, it says, wishes to again place the Military administration of this country on the lines followed before Lord Kitchener's reorganisation scheme.

Muhammadans and political agitation.

13. The Chaudhwin Sadi (Rawalpindi), of the 1st (received on the 16th) May 1912, publishes an article headed "Fear of misguidance and ruin." It criticises two articles which Maulvi Shibli contributed to the Muslim Gazette of Lucknow soon after the reversal of the Partition of Bengal advising his co-religionists to resort to political agitation, which is, however, regarded by the paper as spelling ruin for the Muslim community. It examines and condemns the sentiments expressed by the Maulvi in the above writings, observing in the course of its remarks that, according to him, the Aligarh College has produced, among other worthies, a brave man like Zafar Ali (the Zamindar's Editor); that he looks upon the anarchist outrages committed by Bengalis as brave deeds; that his use of the late Sir Sayad's independent criticism of the Punjab University at the time of its establishment shows that he can see no difference between education and politics; that the views embodied by him in the aforesaid articles reveal that he favoured the participation of Muhammadans in politics even previous to the annulment of the Partition; that he forgets that the existence of Indian Musalmans is bound up with that of British rule in this conntry, and that Government has conferred different favours on them in recent years owing simply to their having eschewed political agitation. Next it quotes extracts from different speeches by the late Sir Sayad Ahmad Khan, in which the deceased Knight of Aligarh advised the Prophet's followers to win Government's confidence and to abstain from joining Hindus in carrying on political agitation. In one of these quotations it was also remarked by Sir Savad that Muhammadan students of the Aligarh College would never oppose Government, but would rightly understand its policy. Commenting on the observation the paper says that, in at least two instances, the expectation has not been realised, otherwise (the editors of) the Comrade and Zamindar would have expressed views about the reversal of the Partition different from those which they have been airing. Proceeding, it refers to the Nawab Vicar-ul-Mulk's words in his well known article in the Aligarh Institute Gazette, dated the 20th December last, that it is useless to advise Musalmans to repose trust in Government. Some foolish Muhammadans, it adds, who were bent on opposing Government grossly exaggerated the significance of these words, with the result that the seed of a great evil was sown. After observing that Maulvi Shibli has been manuring and watering this seed, the paper remarks that Muhammadans are now in a far more critical condition than they were in 1887 (when Sir Sayad Ahmad advised them to have nothing to do with the National Congress). Half-educated young men among them have largely increased in number, and it is natural for such minds "to become inflamed and to take to complaining against the national party." It was the bounden duty of the leaders of the Muslim community to tell their co-religionists that the modification of the Partition of Bengal had caused them no injury. Continuing, the Chaudhvin Sidi enquires whether Government can go on reposing its old confidence in Musalmans after the use of the aforesaid words by the Secretary of the Aligarh College. And, as if this were not enough, the most highly-placed official of the Nadwat-ul-Ulema has been fearlessly telling Government that he is about to establish a Muhammadan Gurukula at Lucknow. As to the papers which are spoken of as "national," the Comrade "occupies the old metropolis" and the Muslim Gazette has established its head-quarters at Lucknow; while the Zamindar reigns at Lahore and has, in addition to having undertaken to guide the Musalman youth of the Punjab, burdened itself with the political training of the students of the Islamia College which the Anjuman-i-Himayat-i-Islam also considers a good arrangement. As regards the Aligarh Institute Gazette, it can do more harm than good; and it would be a pity if the Editors of these papers wrought the ruin of their co-religionists. In conclusion, the paper urges the Muhammadan community to follow the lead of men like Sir Agha Khan, Nawab, Haji Ismail Khan and Sahibzada Aftab Ahmad Khan; saying that the leaders of the type of Sir Salimulla Khan, the Nawab Vicar-ul-Mulk, and Maulvi Shibli have lowered it in the estimation of Government.

The Aligarh Institute Gazette on Bengal affairs.

14. The Chaudhvin Sadi (Rawalpindi), of the 23rd April (received on the 16th May 1912), says that the Aligarh Institute Gazette remarks that the Bengalis have not been satisfied even with the recent administrative change, and that they have lost no time in setting up another agitation. After observing that this agitation is based on the concessions made in favour of Muhammadans, viz., the proposal to establish a University at Dacca and the appointment of a Muhammadan to the Executive Council of Bengal, the paper opines that it is inherent in the Bengali to agitate. Continuing, it says that the Editor of the Aligarh Institute Gazette, who seems to be a politician of the Vikar-ul-Mulk school, complains that Government has not so far announced on what lines the above University is to be run, or how long the Governor of Bengal will reside at Dacca each year; adding that this raises the question whether Government intends redeeming its promises to safeguard the rights of (East Bengal) Musalmans. The latter point, adds the Chaudhvin Sadi, has already been settled, while the journalist referred to may depend upon hearing about the University also before long. Would the late Sir Syed Ahmad Khan, it asks, have doubted Government's word merely because the Dacca University had not been established in twinkling of an eye? In conclusion, it remarks that, if the Aligarh Institute Gazette is to be converted into a political paper, it should have no connection with the M. A.-O. College.

The Punjab Partition.

15. The following is from the Panjabee (Lahore), of the 23rd May 1912 :—

"There is a growing feeling in the people of the Punjab and the North-West Frontier Province that the latter should be re-united with the Punjab and should no longer be kept as a separate Muhammadan Province. The same reasons, more or less, that applied to the re-union of Eastern Bengal apply to the re-union of the North-West Frontier Province. And the additional reason is that during the last 11 years the districts have been settled and their further progress require closer and direct associations with the Punjab people. We are afraid the people will be disappointed to read the following from the Empire of Calcutta :—

"We learn that 'the Government of India have informed certain signatories of a memorial praying for the re-transfer to the Punjab of the settled districts of the North-West Frontier Province, that Government see no reason to alter arrangements which were made after full consideration only some 10 years ago'. Evidently these principles do not apply to the North-East Frontier of Bengal, or to the arrangements made there considerably less than 10 years ago!

"The last remark of our contemporary is pithy and telling. It is difficult to see in what respect the principles of re-union differ between East Bengal and the North-West Frontier Province. We hope that this reply is not final and that the troubles created by dacoities will enable the Government of India to reconsider the question on another and early opportunity."

Rumoured transfer of the Saharanpur district to the Punjab.

16. The following is from the Tribune (Lahore), of the 21st May 1912 :—

"We do not known whether there is any truth in the rumour which appears in some of the Calcutta papers that the Saharanpur District will be transferred to the Punjab to compensate for the slice of the Delhi enclave pared away from the Punjab. The only reason for which we are inclined to give this rumour any credence is that the proposed arrangement will provide the Punjab Government with a separate hill station. If there is any truth in the revival of the rumour that the Punjab Government is to be ousted from Simla we think it is time that that Government made an attempt to assert itself. Its meekness and docility have done it great harm. First the Frontier Province was taken away, then followed the Delhi enclave and now it is said to be Simla though the report is contradicted by the Pioneer. The one substantial compensation to the Punjab would be the amalgamation of Sind with this Province, but nothing has been heard on this subject after the newspaper agitation which seems to have fizzled out."

III.—Native States.

Muhammadans in Bikaner.

17. The following is from the Observer (Lahore), of the 18th May 1912 :—

"His Highness the Maharaja of Bikaner is known as an enlightened ruler, free from racial and religious prejudices. A small proportion of the population of the State are Musalmans, the rest being all Hindus; but the relations between the two have generally been of a most cordial character. A correspondent, however, sends up reports which, if true, show clearly that anti-Muslim influences are being introduced even in Bikaner. It appears that about a year and-a-half ago, an ox was beaten so cruelly by some person or persons in the village of Choru that it died from the effects of the injuries. The State Police, most of them Hindus, did their best to trace the culprits. Many Musalmans were thrown into jail merely on suspicion, though the place in which the injured ox was found was inhabited by Hindus as well as by Muslims and in spite of the fact that the Hindus, as the blows showered on oxen found eating wheat out of the Hindu grain-sellers' stores will show, seldom hesitate to punish offending oxen. Rewards were offered for the arrest of the culprit, but without avail. In March last the Maharaja, in the course of his tour, visited Choru and sent for the Musalmans. His Highness accused the Muslims of having killed the ox, told them to produce the offender within a month and threatened them in default with a monthly fine of Rs. 300 dating from the death of the ox. The Maharaja reminded the Musalmans that they were treated on an equal footing in his State with the Hindus and enjoyed full religious liberty. His Highness further told the Muslims that the Hindus were subjected to degrading disabilities in Muslim Native States; that they were not allowed to sound their gongs for religious worship, and had their feet cut if they slept with their lower extremities facing the Kiblah. After repeating these myths, His Highness accused his Muslim subjects of having become unruly and demanded a speedy discovery of the 'murderer' of the ox. The Musalmans did their best to find out the culprit, but they were as unsuccessful as the Police. On the expiry of a month after the visit of the Maharaja, the Tahsildar of Choru reported that the culprit had not yet been run to earth. The Darbar thereupon ordered that a fine at the monthly rate of Rs. 300 should be levied upon the Musalmans from the date of the death of the ox. It need hardly be stated that Bikaner is in the grip of a famine and that the poor Musalmans are unable to pay a fine of Rs. 6,000. Moreover, even if it be just to punish a whole class for the offence of an individual, it should be first proved that the culprit was really a Muslim. And even if he were a Musalman, it does not necessarily follow that the Muhammadans should be successful where the State Police with their vast powers have failed. The result of this order has been that many Musalmans have fled from the village and others are making preparations to leave. But it cannot be expected that all the Muslims, numbering about 4,000 out of a population of 16,000, will be able to abandon their hearths and homes. Some of them are being instigated to name a particular person who is in the bad books of the authorities. Who knows that they may try to save their skins by falling into the trap ?

"We do not vouch for the truth of the above story as sent to us by a correspondent who happened to visit Choru."

The paper then proceeds to give details of another Choru case which is alleged to have resulted in the unrighteous expulsion from the State of a Muhammadan named Qazi Zikr-ud-din ; and concludes with the following remarks :—

"The accounts speak for themselves and if true, they show that the poor Musalmans of Bikaner are subjected to indignities and troubles at the hands of State officials. The mere fact that such complaints should have arisen in Bikaner is very deplorable. Will not His Highness order a thorough and impartial investigation into the complaints and pour balm over the lacerated feelings of his Musalman subjects ?"

Public service in Kashmir State.

18. The following is from the Observer (Lahore), of the 22nd May 1912 :—

"The Vakil quotes facts and figures giving the proportion of Muslim employees in the different departments of the public service in Kashmir, which ought to set the Maharaja athinking Though forming ninety per cent. of His Highness' subjects, Musalmans are stated to form a microscopic minority in the Office of the Maharaja himself and in that of the Chief Minister. The Judicial Department of Kashmir, the Sessions Judge, all the Sub-Judges, two of the Munsifs and the Public Prosecutor are Hindus, while there is only one Muslim Munsif, a Muhammadan Sub-Registrar and a Musalman Judge of Small Cause Court. There is not a single Muslim Judge to settle cases pertaining to Muhammadan Law, and Muslim employees of even old standing are being dismissed from the office of the High Court. As for Jammu, it has one Sessions Judge, three Sub-Judges three Munsifs, two Public Prosecutors and two Sub-Registrars. But not one of these high officials is a Muhammadan, the Muslim element being kept at arm's length in that Province ; so that there is not even a Reader or Superintendent of Office. Moreover, Judges of the High Courts in both Kashmir and Jammu are Hindus. The most extravagant apologist of Hindu rule in Kashmir cannot defend these things on the score of justice or fairplay. To say that the Musalmans of Kashmir are not educated enough to fill high posts is merely begging the question. When they are denied the educational facilities granted to the Hindus, how can they be expected to come abreast of the Hindus? Moreover, when most of the Hindu high officials in the service of the Maharaja are British subjects, cannot the Darbar import British Indian Muhammadans to redress the balance ? We understand that it is now proposed to increase the number of high judicial posts in the State. Let us hope that in selecting incumbents for the new posts an effort will be made to do justice to the Musalmans."

V.—Native Societies and Religious Matters.

The Arya Samaj and Muhammadans.

19. The Indar (Lahore), of the 17th May 1912, published an article headed "The mission of the Arya Samaj and universal peace—III." In continuation of its previous remarks on the subject (vide paragraph 15 of Selections No. 18) the paper says that the existing estrangement between Muhammadans and the Arya Samaj is ascribable to Chapter XIV of the Satyarth Parkash now in circulation. After observing that this part of the book is calculated to lacerate the hearts of Musalmans, it complains that the criticism passed in it on the Quran and the believers therein is an offensive collection of foolish abuse and nonsensical absurdities. Next it endeavours to substantiate this assertion by quoting and ridiculing some passages from the book, and says that the extracts should show what sort of justice "the Mithyartha Parkash" has done to Muhammadans and their scriptures. Still more severe and disgusting, it adds, is the criticism indulged in regarding the Prophet, with the result that the aforesaid chapter in the book under reference has proved greatly instrumental in parting Musalmans and the Arya Samaj. The estrangement is also due to the shuddhi movement, which is of a political character and which is clearly meant by the Arya Samaj to increase the political strength of Hindus. Arya papers have been saying that the Hindu community, being threatened with death, requires the aforesaid movement to keep it alive. Besides, what meaning can there be in "purifying" Muhammadans, who do not worship idols and are not, therefore, an "unclean" people? It is Hindus who stand in need of "purification," seeing that, according to Swami Dayanand, they are steeped in "the depravity of idol worship." The paper then goes on to say that the launching of the above movement in the name of religion to end "the national existence" of Muhammadans had the effect of placing them on their guard and holding themselves aloof from Arya Samajists. For some time the latter "kept this political weapon covered with the cloth of religion, but this cloth was so thin" that the cat was soon out of the bag. Upon this they openly attached this propaganda to the National Congress. It is no offence for a movement to be political in character, adds the Indar, but it is deceitful to run political propaganda in the name of religion. Next the paper expresses the opinion that, in order to save the Arya Samaj, it is highly necessary that a line should be drawn between that body and the shuddhi movement, and that every Arya taking part in it should be expelled from the Samaj, and every Samaj actively interesting itself therein should be disaffiliated from the Pratinidhi Sabha. This, it asserts, would effect considerable improvement in the relations between Aryas and Muhammadans.

Christianity and Hinduism.

20. The Jhang Sial (Jhang), of the 18th May 1912, publishes a note headed "White ants." For the past five thousand (!) years, says the paper, the Hindu community has been attacked by these ants, i.e., Musalmans and Christians, who convert a large number of Hindus every day. After remarking that the followers of Hinduism care nothing for this, it writes "Let alone Muhammadans who, during their reign, parted lakhs of Hindus from their co-religionists at the point of the sword, look at Christians, who have been smiting with a sugared knife, which Hindus gladly drive into their own breasts!" Next the paper publishes a statement to show the increase effected in the number of Christians in India during the last decade. Continuing, it quotes an extract from the Arya Gazette, which says that, if Christians continue increasing at the present pace, the whole country will one day embrace Christianity. The Gazette also calls upon the people concerned to save the Hindu community from the great danger with which it is threatened. Commenting on the quotation the Jhang Sial says that the Arya Samaj alone can avert this danger, and that Hindus are too shameless to be affected by the same.

Christian Missions in India.

21. The Parkash (Lahore), of the 14th May 1912, has an article headed "Failure of the Christian Mission in India: Sensational reports by a Christian Committee." The Christian Mission, it says, has now been working in India for a long time, during which it has been supported by the might, not only of religion, but also of the sceptre. There can be no doubt, it adds, that Government follows a policy of religious neutrality in this country, and has always held the scales even in connection with all conflicts of faiths. It cannot be denied, nevertheless, that a portion of the cost of the Christian Mission in India is found by the Government exchequer. After remarking that this money comes out of the pockets chiefly of Hindus and Musalmans, the paper says that the fact of Government being Christian also exercises a powerful influence on the minds of innumerable persons, and that numerous low-class people, who change their religious convictions in order to raise their worldly position, cannot but succumb to this influence. Proceeding, it observes that "the doors of higher castes have almost been closed in the face of Christianity," and that Christian Missionaries have now began to work among lower classes. They undoubtedly deserve praise for this noble work, still one cannot ignore the fact that they have taken it up (only) in their despair of securing high-caste converts. And, as their work is being gradually confined to the lower classes alone, the Christian Mission's standard of morality (lit. of moral condition) is (also) being lowered. In support of this assertion it quotes extracts from a report by a Committee which was recently appointed by the International Bible Students' Association of America to ascertain what success had been achieved by Christianity in Japan, China, the Phillipine islands, and India. Commenting on the same it remarks that they show that, among other things, the failure of Christianity in India is ascribable to its defective teachings.

Poor Muhammadans and pilgrimage to the Hedjaz.

22. Writing under the heading "Return of destitute Indian pilgrims," the Paisa Akhbar (Lahore), of the 15th May 1912, reports that a Bombay friend of the Editor's writes to say that the British Consul concerned has informed the Government of Bombay that 1,000 Indian pilgrims are lying at Jeddah in a state of extreme destitution. After stating that last year also 413 pilgrims returned to Bombay in similar circumstances, the paper remarks that it is highly undesirable that Indian pilgrims (to the Hedjaz) should every year cause trouble to the Government department concerned, as also to Muhammadans of Bombay, and that thousands of persons should suffer physical and mental discomfort, which injuriously affects their health and sometimes results even in loss of life. After observing that this has the effect of lowering Islam and India in the estimation of "others," the paper states that only Mussalmans of means are required to undertake a pilgrimage (to the Hedjaz). It is, therefore, a matter of surprise that ulemas (in the country) should not prevent poor Muhammadans from starting on the pilgrimage.

A complaint.

23. The Jhang Sial (Jhang), of the 18th May 1912, publishes an article headed "The dignity of the Hindustan newspaper. May God save the Hindu community from such friends!" The paper says that it is through the conjugal fidelity of Hindu women that their community still remains, in spite of its having been subjected to unbearable oppression. If (Hindu) women also, it adds, had, like the men, favoured Western civilisation the Hindu religion would long have ceased to exist in India. Next it regrets that the Hindustan, which professes to be the only genuine organ of Hindus, should have advised Hindu women to part with conjugal fidelity. Continuing, it reprints a note headed "separation from (her) husband for the good of her sisters," in which the latter paper reports that an American lady has severed her connection with her husband in order to agitate for political rights for women. The Hindustan also prays that Indian women also may be fired with the same feelings for raising their sex as exist among their European and American sisters. Commenting on the extract the Editor condemns this "shameful" conduct on the part of the paper named, and says that, although he is not opposed to female education, he can never tolerate that Hindu women should, like those of the West, divorce their husbands over trivial differences or should separate themselves from the latter in order to render imaginary public services.

The Anglo-Indian Defence Association and the Eurasian community.

24. The Vakil (Amritsar), of the 15th May 1912, has a note entitled "It is a difficult tale that I am telling." The question, it says, has recently been raised whether Eurasians also can become members of the Anglo-Indian Defence Association. Next it quotes an extract from the last number of the Indian Review in which a Mr. A. P. Smith replies to the question in the negative, and declares that Eurasians should cast in their lot with Indians. "Look at this narrow-mindedness in the English," adds the paper: "with what contempt they regard even their co-religionists!" They neither allow Eurasians to sit at the same table with them nor will they have any "personal" relations with the latter. They cannot bring themselves even to talk with Eurasians, who dare not, moreover, step into the former's churches. Indeed, some (Anglo-Indians) have been so constituted by nature that they go mad at the mere sight of a non-European. Next the paper dwells on the Islamic spirit of equality, and enquires why, when Englishmen wish Eurasians to mix with Indians, should they place them (Eurasians) over the children of the soil? Why, it further asks, have special rights been conferred on Eurasians, why are they treated with partiality in every respect, and why have posts been ear-marked for them in Government Departments? Again, why has a Conference been established for their education at a cost of 2½ lakhs of pounds?

VI.—Legislation.

Protection of minor girls.

25. The following is from the Punjabee (Lahore), of the 16th May 1912:—

"The Government of India have given permission to the Hon'ble Mr. Dadabhoy to introduce a private Bill for the better protection of unprotected women and minor girls. The nature and scope of the Bill are not known at present, but every publicist in India knows that the position of women and girls at present is greatly exposed throughout India. Although Hindu tradition and civilisation have, wherever they are understood and practised, secured almost a reverential place for women, yet owing to the degradation of the people, their ignorance and changes in the social ideals, women are treated generally in an inhuman manner—particularly among the lower orders. Yet these form the bulk of the population and no rational being can deny that they need better protection. Moreover, Islamic culture and methods of life have introduced almost a vulgar ideal of the aims and purposes of women and nowhere is woman the greater sufferer than in the Punjab and Eastern Bengal—two places of Muhammadan domination. Offences against women are so numerous in these provinces, that one shudders to think of the consequences of removing Purdah restrictions in these places. Still it is doubtful if mere legislation will do much without the general elevation of the masses, their education and recognisation of higher social ideals. Women are practically sold and bought from man to man and they are outraged with impunity. Nowhere is legislation more urgently required than in these provinces. Nevertheless we cannot express an opinion in the absence of details and hope that the Bill may be acceptable in every way."

Writing on the same subject the Tribune (Lahore), of the 16th May 1912, has the following:—

"While awaiting the details of the Bill which will be introduced by the Hon'ble Mr. Dadabhoy for the protection of minor girls we feel confident that it will be heartily supported throughout the country. If Mr. Dadabhoy succeeds in getting his Bill passed the importance of the service that he will have rendered to the country can scarcely be exaggerated. The element of doubt consists in the attitude of Local Governments and that section of the orthodox community which persists in defending immoral customs in the name of religion. It may be remembered that Sir George Clarke who has so boldly and so successfully grappled with the evil of gambling on the turf failed to suppress the dedication of murlis because he found himself opposed by some persons whose names were not disclosed. It is an outrage on the Hindu religion to say that it sanctions immoral practices, though it is equally undeniable that some of the most important places of Hindu pilgrimage are hotbeds of vice and immorality. Public opinion should whole-heartedly support any measure for the protection of minor girls and against their dedication to a life of shame in the name of religion."

Revision of Council Regulations.

26. The following is from the Tribune (Lahore), of the 23rd May 1912:—

"The period of three years for which Councillors were elected and nominated to the various Legislative Councils under the new Act will terminate about the end of this year when fresh elections and nominations will have to be made. Meanwhile it is understood that a sub-committee of the Governor-General's Executive Council is engaged in revising the regulations. No hope however need be entertained that any considerable or important modifications will be made in the existing regulations as it has been already given out that no great changes will be made. Changes are badly needed in the regulations of the Provincial Legislative Councils. In the Punjab specially the existing arrangements are most unsatisfactory. The important Hindu community is practically unrepresented as are several other important interests, while intelligence, culture and capacity are severely left out in the cold. Is there any likelihood that the Punjab regulations will be so revised as to admit of a better representation in future and to raise the dignity and influence of the Council? We notice that conferences are being held in Bengal with the sanction of the Bengal Government, for considering the regulations. A conference of landholders met at Government House, Darjeeling, and its deliberations will be subsequently brought forward in the Provincial Legislative Council. In the Punjab the Local Government has not as yet consulted any public body nor has any such body taken the initiative in the matter or made any representation to the Government. There is yet time to arrange for a conference whose recommendations may be afterwards brought before the Legislative Council."

VII.—General Administration.

(a)—Judicial.

Restricting the number of legal practitioners in the Punjab.

27. The Zamindar (Lahore), of the 16th May 1912, has an article headed "The doors of pleadership shut in the face of Muhammadans." After remarking that Musalmans have fallen on strangely evil days, the paper complains that if they remain illiterate in the belief that their inborn loyalty will prompt Government to supply their wants, they are told by the latter to acquire ability and that it does not want loyal blockheads. In the event, however, of their acquiring ability they are given to understand that they will be appreciated (only) if they surpass others in this respect. But if they bow their heads to this order also and prepare themselves for the competition, they are discouraged by being treated with contemptuous indifference. The paper then goes on to say that it had long been felt that the number of Muhammadan lawyers in the Punjab was insufficient to supply the legal wants of their co-religionists in the province. Musalman youths, therefore, took to legal education, and, if obstacles had not been thrown in their way, the above want would have been supplied at no distant time. The Chief Court has now issued a circular letter restricting the number of pleaders (to be annually enrolled by it) on some administrative grounds, which its learned judges alone can fully understand. It is not a matter of concern to these officers that this may lead to there being not a single Muhammadan among the thirty successful candidates to be enrolled in the year 1914. The paper cannot refrain from saying that the Chief Court has dealt very harshly with the entire population of the Punjab in general, and with the Muhammadan section thereof in particular. Several of the Panjabi students of the Aligarh College, it adds, obtain the LL.B. degrees of the Allahabad University or pass the Vakil's examination prescribed by the Allahabad High Court. They have hitherto been allowed to practise in the Punjab after undergoing a special test; but the letter in question makes this impossible in the future. This means that, henceforth, such students should regard themselves as exiles from their native province, so far as practising at the bar is concerned. Next the Zamindar summarises a memorial which the law students of the Aligarh have submitted to the Punjab Chief Court on the subject, and enquires whether His Honour Sir Louis Dane will look into the matter and remove a great hardship.

The Tennasarim case.

28. The Zamindar (Lahore), of the 14th May 1912, has an article headed "The quintessence of British gentlemanliness." Every one desirous of knowing the secret of England's present greatness, it says, should carefully read the article which Mr. C. Arnold has recently published in his paper, the Burma Critic, under the heading "British justice murdered." The writer deals with "the shameful Tennasarim case" and is in defence of the unfortunate and destitute Muhammadan family concerned. So long, adds the paper, as there exist Englishmen of Mr. Arnold's independence of opinion and sense of justice and truthfulness there can be no fear of the greatness of England passing away. After remarking that the journalist named has laid Indians in general and Muhammadans in particular under a deep debt of gratitute, it observes that, if other Anglo-Indian papers also were to follow in the footsteps of the Burma Critic, the life of British rule in India would be extended by 500 years. Next it urges the Imperial Government to look into the case and inflict exemplary punishment on those officers who made an invidious distinction between whites and blacks (in connection therewith.)

(d)—Education.

Education in the Punjab.

29. The following is from the Observer (Lahore), of the 15th May 1912 :—

• • • • • • •

"District Boards in the Punjab were formerly required to spend at least 25 per cent. of their revenues on education. This standard has been abolished, and although it may be perfectly true that the standard was never enforced, the decrease in expenditure of the boards in the Lahore, Jullundur and Rawalpindi Divisions, which has followed in the track of this abolition, is very significant. No amount of quibbling can disguise the fact that the smaller expenditure on education is partly due to this fact; while the increasing tendency of the Punjab Education Department to provide a smaller and smaller share of the expenditure on secondary and higher education is also an important factor in this connection. Fees are being raised in such a way as to prevent poor people from attending secondary and higher education and make it a luxury for the rich alone. Even in a wealthy country like England it is estimated that at least a half of the genius of the nation belongs to the poor. How large then should be the proportion in an essentially poor country like India? All British economists of standing advocate the provision of far greater facilities for the education of the poor in England. But here it is expected that those who acquire secondary and higher education must materially pay for it.

"As for technical education, it is in as bad a state as it could be. Strictly speaking the Lyallpur Agricultural College is not a technical institution. And even though it be regarded as such and may have received high praise from experts, what the laity know is the fact that very few students are prepared to utilise it. Beside the Agricultural College, there is not one Technical College in the Punjab, the proposed Engineering College at Rasul being still in the course of construction.

"The want of a carefully prepared scheme by the Education Department has also stood a great deal in the way of extending education. For the last few years the Education Department has been unable to expend even the small amounts allotted to it for distribution and the spectacle has been witnessed of the Punjab lagging year by year behind other Provinces in education. The Local Government and the Education Department should now fully realise the situation. May we hope that earnest efforts will henceforth be made to make up for lost time and bring the Punjab abreast of the best educationally advanced provinces in India? If His Honour Sir Louis Dane and the Hon'ble Mr. Godley leave such a legacy behind them, they will earn the gratitude of even generations yet unborn in the Punjab."

(h)—Miscellaneous.

Ill-treatment of Indians by Europeans.

30. The Jhang Sial (Jhang), of the 18th May 1912, has a note headed "Haughtiness of Europeans." Adverting to the assault which a European military officer in Hyderabad (Sind) is said to have recently committed on a local Indian Barrister (vide paragraph 45 of Selections No. 19), the paper regrets that some European officers should wantonly ill-treat respectable Indians, and that some such incident should be reported every week from one or another part of the country. There is a great fear, it adds, of these occurrences prejudicing the children of the soil against the entire European community. Next it expresses the opinion that, so long as offending Europeans are not strongly reprimanded by Government or (lit. and) are not severely punished on their being found guilty in court, it is impossible for those European officers, who take pride in ill-treating Indians, to mend their ways.

Security from the Vakil Press.

31. The Zamindar (Lahore), of the 15th May 1912, publishes an article headed "Security from the Vakil." (District) Magistrates, says the paper, are invested with "the powers" of interpreting the Press Act of 1910. They, however, exercise these powers in such an arbitrary spirit as characterises, perhaps, the Czar of Russia alone. The palace of the greatness of the British Government rests on the foundations of justice, liberty, and equality, and this is why the people wish to carry their hearts' feelings to this palace through the press. But the gate-keeper, viz., the (District) Magistrate, strips them of their clothes, makes them wear (only) a loin cloth, and gags them at the same time; so that they may neither reach the (Royal) court nor raise an outcry from a distance. The cup of the severities to which some (District) Magistrates in the Punjab have—by putting their own interpretation, which even the Chief Court cannot revise, on the Press Act—recently presented to (lit. subjected) Urdu Journalism (in this province), has been filled to the brim. It is, therefore, high time that all Urdu Journalists joined hands and submitted a representation to enquire from Government whether it desires native papers to live an independent existence. In the event of the reply to this question being in the negative, Government should be asked to issue a circular letter to the effect that all papers voicing the peoples' feelings in an independent manner should cease publication. As it is,

Government follows the "impossible" policy of claiming that the press in India is free, and at the same time of keeping no eye on the conduct of (District) Magistrates, for which poor journalists have to suffer in the form of furnishing heavy securities. After remarking that this policy does not become Great Britain's representatives (in India), the Editor says that Government has certainly made "us" free, but that its agents, i.e., (District) Magistrates, treat "us" like criminal tribes; feeling angry with "us" at every turn and demanding securities from "us" at every step. The Proprietors and Editors of Anglo-Indian papers are treated in a way which perhaps engenders feelings of envy in the minds even of Rajas and Nawabs. Native pressmen, however, are (treated) worse than coolies and criminals; while their ability, their respectability their vigorous writing, their championship of truth, and their true loyalty to Government are all (regarded as) reprehensible and lay them open to a demand for security. Next the paper refers to the recent demand of security from the Rose Bazar Steam Press, Amritsar, and goes on to say that 18 years ago the late Shaikh Ghulam Muhammad began to issue the Vakil from that press in order to serve Government and his community. As long as he lived, it adds, he neither printed at his press any book contravening the law, nor did he allow objectionable articles to appear in his paper. When, however, on his recent death, the new publisher filed a declaration, he was required by the (District) Magistrate to furnish a security of Rs. 1,000. This amount has been deposited by the father of the late Shaikh Ghulam Muhammad who sacrificed his valuable life for his country and community, i.e., in a way for Government. The Shaikh's reward for the services rendered by him to his country, community, and Government is that the last named has harrowed his spirit by demanding security from his father in respect of his only spiritual child, viz., the Vakil press. It would have been a different thing if the demand had been lawful; but the worst of it is that (District) Magistrates in the Punjab are determined to act in contravention of the provisions of the Press Act, listening to (remonstances from) no one in the matter. The Vakil press has been in existence for the past quarter of a century; and, under section 3 (2) of the said Act, the District Magistrate had no power to demand security from it. After contending that the Local Government alone could have made the demand, the Editor remarks that, when the Press Act was on the Legislative anvil, the general impression in regard to it was that it aimed only at putting down seditious writings. In these days of peace, however, District Magistrates have converted it into a means of emptying the pockets of poor journalists. This can make no substantial addition to Government's exchequer: all that it can do is to close the mouths of the people for some time just as the Inquisition did in Spain. This Act is a dangerous weapon in the hands of short-sighted and ignorant-of-Urdu (District) Magistrates, with which they can attack journalists at all times. They cannot inflict a fine of more than Rs. 1,000 even in the most serious criminal cases, but the Press Act empowers them to demand a security of Rs. 2,000 from an unfortunate journalist for the sole offence of removing from one district to another (the reference is to the demand of security from the Dial Press). Can there be a severer hardship for those unfortunate interpreters of ill-starred people, viz., the Editors of the newspapers? The press in question has been called upon to furnish security perhaps because it issues the Vakil newspaper, the greatest offence of which can be that it has been sympathising with Tripoli, Morocco, and Persia, and has been acquainting Government with the real feelings of Indian Muhammadans (regarding the recent happenings in these countries). But all sensible Englishmen must have come to know by this time that it is natural for the said Musalmans to feel sympathy for their co-religionists out of India, and that this instinct cannot be suppressed by demands of security, or by imprisonment or hanging. The right way to cope with the situation consists in changing the Imperial policy in relation to the Muslim world. If the Liberal Government were to exert itself to protect (the) Islamic Kingdoms (concerned) against the gross oppression which Russia, Italy, and France have been practising on them in pursuance of a policy of aggression, and if it were to sincerely make up its mind to end the destruction which "these savage dacoits" have been working, the shedding of rivers of blood in Morocco, Tripoli, and Mashed would forthwith be stopped; while the Muslim press (in India) would cease publishing the sort of articles which have been prompting (District) Magistrates to demand security (from its members) and have been causing the Local Governments to conduct themselves in a childish way. "If, however, the disease continues and the Doctors also continue to be men like (District) Magistrates in the Punjab. ..... the patient will have to most sorrowfully exclaim with the poet 'you cannot cure me and I cannot be cured.'" It is possible for him to entertain feelings of love for "the world's Messiah, i.e., the Imperial Government," but he cannot make himself a slave even of the Imperial Government's foolish friends, viz., District Magistrates. The doings of some short-sighted officers have caused among the people the complaint that British Officers (in India) are not now as high-souled and broad-minded as they used to be 20 or 25 years ago. Perfect liberty of writing and speech is an invaluable blessing of British rule; but some foolish officers wish to put down this liberty, and are trying to muzzle the people before they open their lips. The Editor regards such tyrannical doings by these officers as highly injurious for the British Government, to which he is loyal in the extreme. No seditious paper is now published in the country, and there is consequently no special necessity for enforcing the Press Act of 1910. This piece of legislation should now be consigned "to the Almirahs containing those antiquated (lit. decayed) laws which have died a natural death owing to their having been suitable (only) for a barbarous Government."

The Office of the Accountant-General, Punjab.

32. The Observer (Lahore), of the 18th May 1912, publishes an article on the case of one Lala Chaman Lal, a Superintendent in the Office of the Accountant-General, Punjab, who is alleged to have been superseded by a Mr. Clark of the Local Fund Branch. According to the Observer this case is typical of the want of observance of any proper principle in settling the question of promotion in this office.

The Khan of Hoti's case.

33. The following is from the Observer (Lahore), of the 18th May 1912 :—

"The vituperative writings of a section of the press, have, in spite of ourselves, compelled us to find room in another column for a letter on the case of the Khan of Hoti, the first of a series of communications which explain facts and clearly show that Sir George Roos-Keppel had no hand in the legal proceedings started against the Khan of Hoti. All right-thinking minds will have every sympathy with the latter in his troubles and we cannot but congratulate him on his coming honourably out of an awkward predicament. That, however, has nothing to do with the other point, we mean the guilt or innocence of the Chief Commissioner of the Frontier Province. As our well-informed correspondent proves, Sir George had no connection with the case and the usual legal routine was followed, with the results of which the public is so well aware. But any stick is good enough with which to beat the friend of the Muslim community, and the representative organs of our Hindu fellow countrymen who moved heaven and earth to get the Partition of Bengal annulled, because the partition promised to free the Muhammadans from Hindu thraldom, who are now vehemently declaiming against the establishment of a University at Dacca as such an institution may benefit the Musalmans, who are violently denouncing Lord Hardinge for the idea of appointing a special educational officer for Eastern Bengal to secure continuity in the educational activity of the Muslim population in the eastern districts of Bengal, these representative organs could not brook the hateful notion of an Islamia College being started at Peshawar and their Musalman neighbours being helped by the power—that-be in their endeavours to improve their lot. Sir George's sole offence is that he is working out a scheme to enable one section of His Imperial Majesty's subjects, that has lagged behind in the race of life, to come abreast of the times and to take advantage of the educational programme of the Government which has proved of such incalculable good to the Hindus. For this he is a sore in the eyes of these 'patriots,' who have pounced upon a flimsy and false pretext to abuse and vilify the originator of the scheme of the Peshawar Islamia College. His name has been dragged in the mire of abusive criticism and under the guise of defending individual rights, these worthies are indulging in wanton abuse of the Chief Commissioner. But it is to be trusted that the attempt will deceive no one. Seated on the bed-rock of fact Sir George may treat with deserved contempt the base effusions of envious slanderers and persevere in the course of wise and generous statesmanship which he has chalked out for himself. When his vilifiers will be dead and forgotten, future generations will fondly cherish his memory and bless his name for the beneficient scheme that is to dispell the darkness of ignorance and superstition and radiate the light of learning and knowledge throughout the North-Western borders of India."

The same paper in its issue of the 22nd May, publishes the following :—

"We are not any great admirers of the way in which justice is sometimes administered in the Frontier Province. But after all things said, it is a Frontier Province and many things which will be looked upon with serious objection on this side of Attock are perhaps sanctioned by the system of law and regulation, a system which we may not look upon with much approval. When the recent sensational case of abduction against the Khan of Hoti was the subject of newspaper comments, we thought that perhaps this was another instance of the kind where the administration of law is entrusted in the hands of inexperienced officers. It was chiefly for this reason that we did not take much interest in the case at the time. But latterly the view of the case as presented to the credulous Indian public by the Jingo press here, and by the agents of this press in the House of Commons in their interpellations, assumed rather a serious aspect, inasmuch as the contention is that this unfortunate case was the outcome of the motive for revenge by Sir George Roos-Keppel and that because the Khan had refused to contribute towards the Islamia College. It was further implied by the conduct of these advocates of the Khan's grievances that undue official pressure was being exerted in the collection of funds for the College. As the honesty of our leaders in the Frontier Province who were working at this scheme day and night, a scheme which we can safely assert is eminently meant for the regeneration of our community there, was at stake, we considered it our duty to make an independent enquiry into this matter, and the facts which we have been able to ascertain conclusively absolve Sir George of all blame. Indeed, the net result of our enquiries has proved to us clearly that after all this was the outcome of the heated imagination of the Hindu press, for whom an Islamia College at Peshawar and Government sympathy for it were too big a pill to quietly swallow, and that in this case of the Khan they have found an opportunity to pour out their poison by mercilessly distorting real facts or rather suppressing facts. From the facts in our possession we can safely assert that in the matter of this College Sir George is entirely free from all these unfounded and unjustified blames and slurs. In fact in the matter of subscriptions he has studiously stood apart, and has allowed the community to work out their salvation. There is no doubt that in this scheme of ours he has shown us his sincere, genuine, and broad-minded sympathy and has ever been ready to ungrudgingly give us sound and most valuable advice. He has shown that nobility of mind and that sincere anxiety for the well being of His Majesty's subjects committed to his charge, which have been the distinguishing marks all through his administration. Beyond that he has done nothing and, as we tried to show in a previous issue, he has been unjustifiably made the target of cruel attacks on the part of those who cannot cherish the idea of a scheme devised for the good of the Muslim, and who are striving hard to throttle it in its incipient stage. As regards this particular case, we see that the procedure of the Frontier courts has for once been strictly in accordance with the strict letter of law."

SIMLA :

The 25th May 1912.

C. STEAD,

Assistant to the Deputy Inspector-General of Police,
Criminal Investigation Department, Punjab.

Punjab Govt. Branch Press, Simla—30-5-12—No. 14—107—H. V. S.

[ Confidential. ]

[Vol. XXV. ] [ No. 22. ]

SELECTIONS

FROM THE

NATIVE NEWSPAPERS

PUBLISHED IN THE PUNJAB.

Examined up to 1st June 1912.

---

CONTENTS.

| | | Page. |
|---|---|---|
| I.—Politics. | | |
| (a) Foreign— | | |
| 1. | England and Turkey (Zamindar) ... | 423 |
| 2. | The Turco-Italian war ( Ditto ) ... | ib. |
| 3. | Ditto ( Ditto ) ... | ib. |
| 4. | The Islamic world (Curzon Gazette) ... | 424 |
| 5. | The Turco-Italian war and England (Tribune) ... | 425 |
| (b) Home— | | |
| 6. | Bengali influence in Delhi (Akhbar-i-' Am) ... | 425 |
| 7. | Muhammadans and Government (Millat) ... | ib. |
| 8. | The Punjab partition (Observer) ... | 426 |
| 9. | Rights of Indian Muhammadans (Observer) ... | ib. |
| 10. | Punjab Musalmans (Panjabee) ... | ib. |
| 11. | Military economies ( Ditto ) ... | 429 |
| II.—Afghanistan and Trans-Frontier. | | |
| | Nil. | |
| III.—Native States. | | |
| 12. | Hyderabad affairs (Paisa Akhbar) ... | 429 |
| IV.—Kine-killing. | | |
| | Nil. | |
| V.—Native Societies and Religious Matters. | | |
| 13. | The forthcoming Hindu conference (Hindustan) ... | 429 |
| 14. | The Zamindar and the Hon'ble Mian Muhammad Shafi (Chaudhwin Sadi) ... | 431 |
| 15. | Degradation of women and Islam (Observer) ... | 432 |
| VI.—Legislation. | | |
| | Nil. | |
| VII.—General Administration. | | |
| (a) Judicial— | | |
| 16. | Ministry of Justice (Panjabee) ... | 432 |
| 17. | Complaint against the Assistant Cantonment Magistrate, Secunderabad (Observer) ... | ib. |
| (b) Police— | | |
| 18. | Complaint in connection with the quartering of Punitive Police in some villages in the Frontier Province (Afghan) ... | 433 |
| 19. | Police torture in Calcutta (Panjabee) ... | ib. |
| (c) Municipal and Cantonment affairs— | | |
| 20. | Municipal taxation (Panjabee) ... | 433 |
| (d) Education— | | |
| | Nil. | |
| (e) Agriculture and questions affecting the land— | | |
| 21. | Provincial Settlements (Tribune) ... | 434 |
| (f) Railways and Communications— | | |
| | Nil. | |
| (g) Postal matters— | | |
| | Nil. | |
| (h) Miscellaneous— | | |
| 22. | The Khan of Hoti's case (Panjab Advocate) ... | 435 |
| 23. | Ditto (Afghan) ... | ib. |
| 24. | Ditto (Akhbar-i-' Am) ... | 436 |
| 25. | Security from newspapers (Millat) ... | ib. |
| 26. | Security from the Vakil Press (Afghan and Civil and Military News) ... | 437 |
| 27. | Experts for India (Tribune and Panjabee) ... | ib. |
| 28. | The Office of Accountant-General, Punjab (Observer) ... | 438 |
| 29. | The new capital of India and experts (Tribune ) ... | ib. |
| 30. | Shooting of dogs by soldiers ( Ditto ) ... | 440 |
| 31. | European colonists in India ( Ditto ) ... | ib. |

LIST OF NEWSPAPERS AND PERIODICALS EXAMINED BY THE SPECIAL BRANCH AS IT STOOD ON THE 1ST JUNE 1912.

| No. | Name. | Locality. | Name of Publisher. | Circulation. |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| | ENGLISH. | | | |
| | DAILY. | | | |
| 1 | Tribune ... | Lahore ... | Bihari Lal ... | 1,758 copies. |
| | TRI-WEEKLY. | | | |
| 2 | Panjabee ... | Lahore ... | Mul Chand ... | 2,424 copies. |
| | BI-WEEKLY. | | | |
| 3 | Observer ... | Lahore ... | Nizam-ud-din ... | 1,000 copies. |
| 4 | Punjab Times and Frontier News. | Rawalpindi ... | J. R. Thapur ... | 200 „ |
| | WEEKLY. | | | |
| 5 | Arya Patrika ... | Lahore ... | Devi Chand ... | 650 copies. |
| 6 | Harbinger ... | Do. ... | Durga Parshad ... | 300 „ |
| 7 | Khalsa Advocate .. | Amritsar .. | Bahadur Singh .. | 752 „ |
| | FORTNIGHTLY. | | | |
| 8 | Jijnasu ... | Lahore ... | Ishar Das ... | ... |
| | MONTHLY. | | | |
| 9 | D. A.-V. College Magazine ... | Lahore ... | Saraswati Nath ... | 1,000 copies. |
| 10 | Forman Christian College Notes.* | Do. ... | ... | ... |
| 11 | Practical Medicine* ... | Delhi ... | ... | ... |
| 12 | Punjab Educational Journal | Lahore ... | R. B. Mohan Lal ... | 700 copies. |
| 13 | Punjab Mission News ... | Do. ... | Revd. Wigram ... | 250 „ |
| 14 | Ravi ... | Do. ... | Mr. B. M. Jones ... | ... |
| 15 | Review of Religions* ... | Kadian (Gurdaspur) ... | Sadr Anjuman Ahmadia, Qadian. | 800 copies. |
| 16 | Science Grounded Religion... | Lahore ... | Dev Rattan ... | 25 „ |
| 17 | Teacher ... | Dinga (Gujrat) ... | Kanhaya Singh ... | 200 „ |
| | URDU. | | | |
| | DAILY. | | | |
| 18 | Akhbar-i-'Am ... | Lahore ... | Govind Sahai ... | 630 copies. |
| 19 | Paisa Akhbar ... | Do. ... | Abdul Aziz ... | 1,011 „ |
| 20 | Watan ... | Do. ... | Muhammad Insha Alla ... | ... |
| 21 | Zamindar ... | Do. ... | Zafar Ali Khan, B.A. ... | ... |
| | BI-WEEKLY. | | | |
| 22 | Vakil ... | Amritsar ... | Abdul Aziz ... | 1,970 copies. |
| | WEEKLY. | | | |
| 23 | Afghan ... | Peshawar ... | Saiyid Muhammad Abdulla | 500 copies. |
| 24 | Ahl-i-Hadis ... | Amritsar ... | Sana-ulla ... | 925 „ |
| 25 | Ahluwalia Gazette ... | Do. ... | Lehna Singh ... | 500 „ |
| 26 | Al-Moin ... | Do. ... | Mehraj-ud-din ... | ... |
| 27 | Army News ... | Ludhiana ... | Hira Lal & Co. ... | 1,300 copies. |
| 28 | Arorbans Gazette ... | Amritsar ... | Labh Singh ... | ... |
| 29 | Arya Gazette ... | Lahore ... | Bhowani Das ... | 550 copies. |
| 30 | Badar ... | Qadian, Gurdaspur District | Muhammad Sadiq ... | 200 „ |

* Not received during the month.

LIST OF NEWSPAPERS AND PERIODICALS EXAMINED BY THE SPECIAL BRANCH AS IT STOOD ON THE 1ST JUNE 1912—CONTINUED.

| No. | Name. | Locality. | Name of Publisher. | Circulation. |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| | URDU—CONTINUED. | | | |
| | WEEKLY—continued. | | | |
| 31 | Bharat ... | Jullundur ... | Thakur Sheoratan Singh ... | ... |
| 32 | Chaudhwin Sadi ... | Rawalpindi ... | Haji Ahmad ... | ... |
| 33 | Civil and Military News ... | Ludhiana ... | Saiyid Muhammad ... | 1,325 copies. |
| 34 | Curzon Gazette ... | Delhi ... | Mirza Hairat ... | 111 „ |
| 35 | Delhi Gazette* ... | Do. ... | Sajjad Husain ... | 200 „ |
| 36 | Hakim ... | Qadian, Gurdaspur District | Yakub Ali ... | 900 „ |
| 37 | Haq ... | Delhi ... | Kasim Ali ... | 200 „ |
| 38 | Haq Pasand ... | Amritsar ... | Ram Nath ... | 382 „ |
| 39 | Hindu ... | Lahore ... | Hari Lal Sharma ... | ... |
| 40 | Hindustan ... | Do. ... | Ram Saran Dutt ... | 8,070 copies. |
| 41 | Indar ... | Do. ... | Dharm Pal, B.A. ... | ... |
| 42 | Islam ... | Do. ... | Abdul Latif ... | 200 copies. |
| 43 | Jhang Sial ... | Jhang ... | Prabh Dyal ... | 2,262 „ |
| 44 | Kapurthala Akhbar ... | Kapurthala ... | Hamid Husain ... | 155 „ |
| 45 | Loyal Gazette ... | Lahore ... | Amar Singh ... | 200 „ |
| 46 | Lytton Gazette ... | Delhi ... | Bulaki Das ... | 1,000 „ |
| 47 | Milap* ... | Lyallpur ... | Jawahar Lal ... | ... |
| 48 | Millat ... | Lahore ... | Shuja Ulla ... | 1,500 copies. |
| 49 | Mister Gazette ... | Do. ... | Ali Bakhsh ... | 150 „ |
| 50 | Munir ... | Jhang ... | Hafiz Khuda Bakhsh ... | 200 „ |
| 51 | Musalman ... | Amritsar ... | Sana-ulla ... | 400 „ |
| 52 | Nur ... | Qadian, Gurdaspur District | Muhammad Yusaf ... | 200 „ |
| 53 | Nur Afshan ... | Ludhiana ... | Revd. Dr. E. M. Wherry ... | 500 „ |
| 54 | Paisa Akhbar ... | Lahore ... | Abdul Aziz ... | 8,377 „ |
| 55 | Parkash ... | Do. ... | Krishan ... | 1,723 „ |
| 56 | Punjab Advocate ... | Mianwali ... | Karm Chand, Bahl ... | 1,000 „ |
| 57 | Punjab Samachar ... | Lahore ... | Hira Lal ... | 705 „ |
| 58 | Rajput Gazette ... | Do. ... | Thakur Sukhram Das ... | 650 „ |
| 59 | Municipal Gazette and Sada-i-Hind. | Do. ... | Din Muhammad ... | 500 „ |
| 60 | Sadiq-ul-Akhbar ... | Bahawalpur ... | Maulvi Ata Ullah ... | 392 „ |
| 61 | Ditto ... | Rewari ... | Safdar Hussain ... | 200 „ |
| 62 | Sanatan Dharm Pracharak ... | Amritsar ... | Rulia Ram ... | 200 „ |
| 63 | Shanti ... | Rawalpindi ... | Kishan Chand Mohan ... | 300 „ |
| 64 | Sialkot Paper ... | Sialkot ... | Todar Mal ... | 500 „ |
| 65 | Siraj-ul-Akhbar ... | Jhelum ... | Maulvi Fakir Muhammad | 450 „ |
| 66 | Tahzib-ul-Niswan ... | Lahore ... | Mumtaz Ali ... | 240 „ |
| 67 | Victoria Paper ... | Sialkot ... | Gian Chand ... | 600 „ |

*Not received during the week.

LIST OF NEWSPAPERS AND PERIODICALS EXAMINED BY THE SPECIAL BRANCH AS IT STOOD ON THE 1ST JUNE 1912—CONCLUDED.

| No. | Name. | Locality. | Name of Publisher. | Circulation. |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| | URDU—CONCLUDED. | | | |
| | WEEKLY—concluded. | | | |
| 68 | Waqt ... | Lahore ... | Ali Husain ... | 200 copies. |
| 69 | Watan ... | Do. ... | Muhammad Insha Ullah ... | 1,800 „ |
| 70 | Zamindar ... | Do. ... | Zafar Ali Khan, B.A. ... | 750 „ |
| | FORTNIGHTLY. | | | |
| 71 | Biwah Samachar* ... | Lahore ... | Ram Chand ... | 300 copies. |
| 72 | Kam Dhenu ... | Ludhiana ... | Daulat Ram ... | 100 „ |
| 73 | Mohyal Gazette ... | Kala, Jhelum District ... | Mehta Sham Das ... | 250 „ |
| | MONTHLY. | | | |
| 74 | Arorbans Parkash* ... | Lahore ... | Salig Ram ... | 200 copies. |
| 75 | Arya Musafir ... | Jullundur ... | Wazir Chand ... | 1,300 „ |
| 76 | Jauhar* ... | Amritsar ... | Muhammad Ismail Khan ... | 200 „ |
| 77 | Kakezai Social Reformer ... | Lahore ... | Fazl Din ... | 200 „ |
| 78 | Makhzan ... | Delhi ... | Abdul Kadir ... | 4,000 „ |
| 79 | Rafiq ... | Lahore ... | Charinji Lal ... | 500 „ |
| 80 | Sadhu ... | Do. ... | Sheobart Lal ... | 500 „ |
| 81 | Martand ... | Do. ... | Kanhya Lal ... | 250 „ |
| 82 | Raghbir Patrika ... | Do. ... | Prab Dial ... | 500 „ |
| 83 | Zaban* ... | Delhi ... | Hamid Husain ... | 500 „ |
| | GURMUKHI. | | | |
| | WEEKLY. | | | |
| 84 | Khalsa Sewak ... | Amritsar ... | Jiwan Singh ... | 1,000 copies. |
| 85 | Punjab Reporter* ... | Do. ... | Ganda Singh ... | ... |
| 86 | Punjabi Surma ... | Lahore ... | Gian Chand ... | 1,000 copies. |

* Not received during the week.

I.—Politics.

(a)—Foreign.

England and Turkey.

1. The Zamindar (Lahore), of the 24th May 1912, has an article headed "Alliance between Great Britain and Turkey." The desire for the above alliance, it says, which has always been cherished by every Muhammadan, seems about to be fulfilled. It is a matter for thankfulness, adds the paper, that Sir Edward Grey and his colleagues have at last realised the great truth that an alliance between England and Turkey can be the only guarantee of the maintenance of the world's peace. Turkey is held in esteem and reverence by the entire Muslim world, and Muhammadans will regard as their friend any power having friendly relations with her. It would have been better if the aforesaid British Statesman had listened to the cries of Indian Musalmans at the very outset, so that the streams of blood which have so far been shed might have been spared. The cruel treatment which they have been according to Turkey since 1908 may perhaps have been justified by them on the (mistaken) ground that she can prove of no use to them on land. Now, however, when the Turks have made things hot for a great European Power in a distant place like Tripoli and have, with their keen sword, pitted themselves against the whole world, the eyes of British Statesmen have been opened and they have come to realise that it is not disadvantageous to cultivate the friendship of Turkey. This is why the London Times, which used to pat Italy on the back till yesterday, has now begun to look angrily at her, while the Daily Telegraph says that England, who is a Muslim power, cannot tolerate any curtailment of the Turkish influence, as, otherwise, she would hurt the feelings of the crores of her Muhammadan subjects. In conclusion, the paper remarks that nothing can please the Prophet's followers better than an alliance between England and Turkey.

The Turko-Italian war.

2. The Zamindar (Lahore), of the 19th May 1912, has an article headed "Worshippers at the Kaaba and the pujaris of Somnat." Some materialists, it says, ridiculed the prayers offered by the Islamic world at the commencement of the Turco-Italian war (for success to the Ottoman arms). Some Non-Muslim papers in India also imitated the example, while the Hindu press compared these prayers with the unavailing appeals offered by the pujaris of Somnat in connection with Mahmud of Ghazni's attack on that temple. The prayers of Musalmans, however, came from the heart, and have not, therefore, failed to hit the mark. God prompted the Arabs to join forces with the Turks to fight Italy, and has made undrilled Arab fighters inflict crushing defeats on the trained Italian forces. He has heard the prayers of His Muhammadans and has wrought such wonders in Tripoli (in favour of Turkey) as to open the eyes of materialists. The result is that not a few Non-Muslim papers of Europe and India have begun to openly acknowledge that the prayers of Muhammadans have proved efficacious. After requesting his co-religionists to continue praying to God (for victory to Turkey), the Editor quotes an extract from the Jhang Sial, which says that, although the war has now been in progress for over six months, the Italian forces have not been able to occupy even an inch of soil (in Tripoli), and that "this spirit (!) in the followers of Islam has proved to the world that Muhammadans are a living people and that the nation, which wishes to extirpate them, is itself about to disappear."

The Turco-Italian war.

3. The Zamindar (Lahore), of the 19th May 1912, has an article headed "Love of Ali out of spite against Mu'awiya." It says that Italy has been bewildered at the rain of blows from shoes which has descended on her head in Tripoli. After remarking that she is now raising a commotion in different Seas in order to save her face, it states that recently she occupied Rhodes and some other small islands, and is beside herself with joy at her success. The manner, however, it adds, in which European papers have conducted themselves on the occasion betokens an agreeable change (in the policy which they have hitherto been following in regard to the war). Apparently the occupation of the above islands by Italy compromises the dignity of Turkey, but strangely enough European, especially English, newspapers, have branded Italy's conduct as childish, and have been expressing sympathy with Turkey, although at the commencement of hostilities they "most zealously performed their sacred duty of ridiculing and insulting Turkey over everything." After quoting extracts from the Pioneer and the Civil and Military Gazette in support of its assertion, the paper says that this sudden change in the attitude of the noted and leading Anglo-Indian journals (named) needs to be considered with a little care. The fact of the matter is that the Italian occupation of Rhodes, &c., is a thorn in the side of those European powers which are opposed to the Triple Alliance. These powers can never tolerate that Italy should increase the centres of her naval power by taking possession, in Europe or Asia, of islands or of cities lying on the sea-coast. An addition to the naval strength of any of the parties to the Triple Alliance weakens the power (on sea) of England and her allies. If England has any rival, who is and can be a menace to her world-wide (naval) supremacy, it is Germany, who has been investing crores of rupees in war-ships every year with the sole thought of humiliating the English, and has allied itself to Italy only in the hope of being able to employ the Italian fleet against England in the Mediterranean Sea in the hour of need. It should, therefore, be evident that the Italian occupation of Rhodes, &c., cannot be regarded with equanimity by British statesmen. This is why English newspapers have been upset at the event and are taunting the Italians. They are indulging in these taunts not because "the savage Turk" has suddenly been "civilised," but because they apprehend Italian aggression. "At all events, we thank God for this change of tone (in them) to whatever cause it may be due. The object of the Civil and Military Gazette and the Pioneer is identical with ours." They desire the permanence of, and honour for, Great Britain, and so do "we." The only difference is that while they desire that England should become illustrious through Turkey and other Islamic Kingdoms losing in authority, "we" wish that she should secure this grandeur by linking herself with the Islamic world.

The Islamic world.

4. The Curzon Gazette (Delhi), of the 15th (received on the 28th) May 1912, has an article headed "Islam's bloody robe." It says that the Islamic world is in the throes of death: the whole of North Africa has been convulsed and the believers in the Kalima have been involved in a calamity of which they cannot get rid in a hurry. The fire kindled in Tripoli has spread to Tunis, Algiers, Morocco, Persia, Afghanistan, Arabia, Turkey, Syria and China. If Muslim children and women are being butchered in Tripoli, Muhammadan ladies are weltering in (their own) blood in Tabrez and Fez also. Musalmans have at last been driven to self-defence, their old bravery has begun to revive in them, and they have come to prefer death to a life of disgrace. They have determined to wage a sanguinary war against their enemy, who wishes to make slaves of them and to exterminate their religion. The result of this determination may prove disastrous even for the other races of the world, and if the existing danger grows worse a collision between the East and the West is a certainty. (Indeed,) the present state of affairs does not deserve to be viewed with indifference, North Africa, which is full of warlike Arabs, is being convulsed and a movement has been revived which had been non-existent for centuries past. The said African Muhammadans are admitted to be brave and intrepid; but no one could have dreamt that they would (ever) gather together under one flag, whereas this spectacle may now be witnessed (in Tripoli). God's hand is visible behind the movement, which cannot, therefore, be put down by any human power. It has been deriving strength from certain favourable causes, and is spreading at a rapid pace. It has overspread the whole of North Africa, and is now making for Tunis, Algiers, and Morocco. The paper then goes on to say that, in the coming conflict in Morocco, lakhs of Muhammadans will be killed by the French and that many children and young women will be made orphans and widows respectively. Thousands of handsome young men, it adds, will meet death for the offence of defending their sacred land against France. All this bloodshed, which will harrow the spirits even of Cyrus, Halaku, Timur, and Nadir, is shortly to be witnessed in the Muhammadan world. The Moroccans are not blind: they have long been cognisant of the oppression which the French have been practising in Tunis and Algiers. It has been brought home to them that they cannot save their religion and country without making sacrifices. After remarking that they wish to die or kill the enemy, the Curzon Gazette remarks that the mosques and (other) places of worship in the Islamic world are being demolished, and that the honour of its denizens is being grossly assailed. If the aforesaid movement, it adds, continues gaining strength, there should be no doubt as to the safety of the honour, lives, and property of Muhammadans. Proceeding, it says that France, Italy, Germany, and Russia have come to an understanding to wipe Musalmans off the face of the earth. Next it remarks that the first two countries will find Morocco and Tripoli, respectively, very hard nuts to crack, and goes on to ask Indian Muhammadans to remember their co-religionists in other lands in their prayers; saying that God will listen to them and end the suffering of their brethren in faith. In conclusion, it prays God to stand by Muhammadans and to destroy their enemies.

The Turco-Italian war and England.

5. The following is from the Tribune (Lahore), of the 29th May 1912:—

"The sympathy that is felt for Turkey in the present war is not confined to Muhammadans but is practically world-wide. It is felt, however, that there is no justification for any other Power to violate the law of neutrality and it is impossible for any Power to intervene between the belligerents until they show themselves willing to come to terms. The Moslem League has made repeated representations to the British Government to intercede, but this is out of the question. The latest representation is about the extension of hostilities to the Dardanelles and other places and is addressed to the Secretary of States for India. Lord Crewe, while appreciating the motives of the representation, says he cannot enter into a discussion of the policy of His Majesty's Government or that of the other Governments concerned. He recommends Indian Moslems to observe strict neutrality. Moslem leaders are shrewd men and it is rather surprising that they do not yet realise the utter futility of addressing remonstrances to the British Government against Italy. Italy may be carrying on a wanton and unjustifiable war, but how does that concern England unless her interests are threatened? To expect that England will take the quixotic course of rushing to the help of Turkey is to expect a miracle, and miracles, in the words of Matthew Arnold, do not happen, at least in this material age."

(b)—Home.

Bengali influence in Delhi.

6. The Akhbar-i-'Am (Lahore), of the 20th May 1912, has an article headed "The question of Bengali influence in Delhi." After praising Bengalis for their manifold excellences of head and heart, the paper says that a noted Bengali has made the suggestion that at least one lakh of persons of his nationality should settle in Delhi and spread Bengali influence all over Northern India. He adds that they should have marital and all other social relations with their co-religionists of that place and that one hundred thousand Bengalis should also take up their residence in Ranchi and Patna, the same number migrating to Dibrugarh (and) Gohatti. He opines that Bengalis would thereby spread to all parts of India, and that the Government of India would not escape Bengali influence even at Delhi. After remarking that he has not taken linguistic difficulties into account, the paper says that the Hindus and Muhammadans of other provinces also may profit by the suggestion. This would widen the circle of every brotherhood and place the formation of an Indian nation on strong foundations. Not only political, but even social, moral, material, and spiritual benefits are certain to accrue from the adoption of the proposal.

Muhammadans and Government.

7. The Millat (Lahore), of the 17th May 1912, says that some Musalmans have come to think that their co-religionists should display severity in demanding (sakhti se mangne chahien) their rights from Government. The idea, it adds, has gained such strength in some quarters that no ear is lent to any argument or advice. Their religion, however, forbids Muhammadans to agitate and to transgress the bounds of moderation. They should continue to ask for their rights in a respectful manner.

The Punjab partition.

8. The following is from the Observer (Lahore), of the 25th May 1912 :—

"The Government of India have done well to refuse the prayer of certain signatories of a memorial desiring the re-transfer to the Punjab of the settled districts of the North-West Frontier Province. The memorial could in no sense be regarded as one representing the opinions of the people of the Province. It was hardly signed by any member of the community which forms an overwhelming majority of the population of the Frontier. Again, those who affixed their signatures to it belong to two districts only. Hindus of other districts having abstained from imitating the example of their co-religionists of Dera Ismail Khan. Moreover, the number of even Hindu memorialists who signed the petition was very small and apparently did not represent the views of the majority of their brethren in the two districts. Besides the suggestion met with the strong opposition of some Muhammadans in the Frontier Province. Under these circumstances the Government of India could not but reject the prayer. If the Hindus regard the separation of the settled districts of the Frontier Province as prejudicial to the best interest of India, they should first convert the Muhammadans of the province to their views."

Rights of Indian Muhammadans.

9. The Observer (Lahore), of May 25th, 1912, reproduces a letter that Saiyid Wazir Hasan, Secretary of the All-India Muslim League, has sent to the Press on the subject of Mr. Montagu's recent remarks regarding the claims of the Muhammadans of Eastern Bengal. After discussing Mr. Montagu and his views at great length, the writer closes his letter with the following remarks :—

"It now suits Mr. Montagu to deny to the Muhammadans of India the characteristic of a homegeneous nationality and to separate the Musalmans of Eastern Bengal from the rest of their co-religionists by a line drawn on the basis of administrative expediency.

"But of the greatest significance and political importance is the rallying point on which the Musalmans of India from one end to the other have united together, forced by the recent events in the political history of India. It is just little more than half a century since the Musalmans of India lost their last vestige of a ruling class in this country, when the most unfortunate and the last of that long chain of the Muhammadan Kings of India became a prisoner in the hands of the British in the year 1857 and when the sovereignty of India formally passed from the hands of the Musalmans into the more deserving hands of the English people.

"Thanks to the wise counsel of our great leader, Sir Syed Ahmad Khan of revered memory we have realised in the greatest measure how our progress as a nation, even our existence, is bound up with the supremacy of the rule of our successors in the country. That the Musalmans of India have united together with one voice in their loyalty to the British Crown need no demonstration and that they have further united to safeguard their interests against the rapidly growing Hindu domination is also obvious. This aspect of our political situation in India to-day constitutes, therefore, our strongest bond of union. We have lost our Kingdom of India because we ceased to be worthy of it, but we trust we have not lost that dynamic force which is our heritage handed to us by our past history and traditions. And it is that force which will prove the strongest bulwark for the British supremacy against the rising tide of Hindu ascendency.

"It is extremely short-sighted statesmanship to take no reckoning of the sentiments and the special attributes of the Musalman community in India in shaping the means and ways of governing the country. Any vital change in the administrative machinery of the Government of India which may have the effect to quote His Highness the Agha Khan with little alteration in the language, of leaving 'one large and important section of the people disappointed . . . . and another section exultant and trimphant because they have been permitted to attain their cherished object is doomed to failure.'

"But the annulment of the partition of Bengal is a settled fact now, and however galling it might have been to the Muhammadans, we are exerting our utmost to accept the position with complacence. Why then add injury to insult and indulge in gratuitous flings at our nationality and our rights?

"Let us alone, we have learnt enough to rely upon our own strength and resources in future."

Punjab Musalmans.

10. The following is from the Panjabee (Lahore), of the 30th May 1912 :—

"Our brethern and fellow-country-men, the Musalmans, are preaching a new gospel. They mean to say that people living in the same country, following the same customs and manners and recognizing the authority of the same Sovereign power can have separate political rights and privileges. From the last four or five years we are hearing that the Musalmans are a politically important community. They say that they were the rulers of the country immediately preceding the introduction of British Sovereignty. Some of them claim that they are an Imperial race and that if there rights are not recognized their dear and near ones in Arabia, Turkey, Persia and Afghanistan will give much trouble to Britain. Others say that since they are a peculiarly separate body, since their institutions, customs and manners are different from those of the Hindus, and since their needs are peculiar, they require a special treatment in the constitution of the Government. To-day it is not our purpose to discuss whether or not they are a politically important community. Their Imperial race outside India is in a very sad plight. Morocco is snatched by France. Tripoli is claimed by Italy, Egypt practically forms part of the British Empire. Turkey is caught in the grip of serious embarrassments, internal as well as external; Persia is threatened with total annihilation and Afghanistan internationally speaking is a vassal of the Sovereign of India. In India itself our historians tell us that the English took the country not from the Muhammadans but from the Hindus. So it is not inaccurate to say that the theory of a Muhammadan Imperial race is sufficiently exploded.

"Let us now examine the second position of their being a peculiarly separate community having special needs of their own. Let us look at the Census Reports and find out how the Musalman community is constituted. We will to-day examine the constitution of the Punjab Musalmans. The total population of the British territory in the province according to the census of 1901 was 203 lakhs. Out of this Musalmans claim 108 lakhs, i.e., 53 per cent. of the total population. The very first thing that strikes the eye is that among Musalmans also like the Hindus there are some 219 castes. The biggest castes among them are Jats, Rajputs, Awans and Arains. Jats, Rajputs, Awans count 35 lakhs. The artisan castes like Carpenters, Oil Pressers, Barbers, Washermen, Water Carriers, Fishermen, Weavers, Potters and Mirasis claim 27 lakhs. Arains, Gujars, Khojas, Sheikhs and Kashmiris together take up another 21 lakhs, while the depressed classes like Mochis, Chuhras, Faqirs and Musali number 9 lakhs. Minor castes take up come 5 lakhs more. This brings up the total to 97 lakhs, i.e., 90 per cent. of the total Musalman population in the Province. All the above mentioned castes have even to this day their representatives in the Hindu community. These very castes among the Hindus number 53 lakhs i.e., more than 60 per cent. of the total Hindu population.

"Now let us examine the figures for those Musalman tribes that may be termed foreign settlers in the Province. The figures stand thus:—Beloch 4,00,510, Pathans 2,63,897, Sayyad 2,38,227, Moghuls 98,277, Qureshis 52,949, Ulemas 33,301, Kakkezais 10,633, Turks 662, Qazalbash 294 and Arabs 32. All these tribes form 11 lakhs, i.e., 10 per cent. of the total Musalman population. The figures quoted above explain very eloquently the real state of affairs. They show that more than 90 per cent. of the Musalmans in the Province are the kith and kin of the Hindus. They show also that half of the foreign settlers possessed no political power in the country in any age; for Biloches are not known to have played any political part in the history of India. Ulemas, Kakkezais, Qazalbashes, and Arabs were also most probably peaceful settlers in the country. Therefore the people that had any political power in the land were Pathans, Sayyad, Moghuls and Turks. But their descendants do not number more than 6 lakhs souls, i.e., 55 per cent. of the total Musalman population. On the other hand, the descendants of those Sikhs who were the rulers of the country before the advent of the British Sovereignty, i.e., Jats, Aroras, Khatries and Rajputs, exceed 11 lakhs. In the presence of these figures may our Musalman friends be asked to tell us who are the politically important community in the Punjab?

"I have by means of census figures shown that more than 90 per cent. of the Musalmans and 60 per cent. of the Hindus belong to the same castes. Now what are these castes? Modern writers hold that these castes are either ethnological entities representing the successive waves of foreign settlers in India, or they are classes following professions by heredity. Jats, Rajputs Chuhras, Awans, &c., are ethnological units. Hence all the members of these castes or tribes, whether they are Hindus or Musalmans, must naturally follow the same customs, the same manners and they must have the same institutions. This is exactly what we practically find. The Rajputs though now embracing Islam still follow and respect the customs and traditions of their Hindu ancestors. Though Islam does not recognize any restrictions in contracting marriages, yet ask any Rajput to marry in a Beloch or Pathan family. He would never do it. Let a Rajput or a Jat Musalman get into trouble. He will at once run to a Jyotishi with as great a faith as that of a Hindu. Look at the customary law of the Province. It is the same for a Hindu as well as a Musalman Jat or Rajput. A Musalman Jat or Rajput will have as strong a faith in the doctrine of Karma as his Hindu brother. The superstitions of these people are also alike. Joint family system holds its sway among the Musalman castes with as equal force as among the Hindus. The same we find in the professional classes. Take for instance any class, carpenters, weavers or potters. Can any one say that there is any difference between a Hindu and a Musalman Carpenter, whether socially or morally? Both follow their castes rules that are alike. Both are endogamous. They would not marry out of their caste. Both of them follow the same trade rules, same social rules and are influenced by exactly the same moral views. Their dress, their method of eating, drinking and talking are exactly the same. Their entertainments, pleasures and plays also are the same. So where lies the difference? More than 90 per cent. of the Musalmans and 60 per cent. of the Hindus are chips of the same block. Now let us examine the Musalman settlers in the Province. We find that the Beloches, Pathans, Sayyads, Mughals, &c., have also adopted the caste system, at least so far as inter-marriages are concerned. All these tribes have practically become endogamous. They have also adopted the dress and the language of the country in which their ancestors settled. Their moral and religious views have also been considerably modified from those of their original ancestors. In face of these facts and figures if any one comes forward and says that Musalmans are a peculiarly distinct nation, he is a very bold man indeed.

"Our Musalman friends might say the Hindus keep aloof from the Musalmans in matters of eating and drinking and therefore they are justified in including themselves in a separate nation. It is true, a Hindu will not eat and drink a thing touched by a Musalman. But at the same time need it be pointed out that, if asked a Bania will not take his meals in the kitchen of a Khatri? A Kayastha would not take his meals in the house of a Bania or a Khatri and vice versâ. A Khatri would not smoke from the huqa of a Brahman and a Brahman would not smoke from the huqa of an Arora. Has any one heard a Khatri complaining that he has been insulted in being not offered a huqa by a Brahman? These are social rules. They may be right or wrong; but they cannot form grounds of complaint. If Hindus cannot accept wet or cooked articles of food from the Musalmans, dry things, fruits and other hundred and one articles are acceptable. If they leave beef-eating, I think, the day would not be far off when even water would be acceptable from the hands of Musalmans.

"Again, it may be urged that Islamic religion is such a force, as to be capable of drawing out people from all sources and welding them into one nationality, distinct from all the rest. This position also is hardly tenable. Theological beliefs and ideas can never divide people, for the simple reason that religion is always an individual concern, useful for the salvation of an individual soul. Theological beliefs have nothing to do in the formation of a nationality. There is no country in the world where all the members of a nation hold the same views on theological questions. It is impossible. Islam in India has failed to break caste. It could not but assimilate many of the customs and manners of the Hindus. Their social fabric is practically the same as that of the Hindus. For this very reason Hinduism has been very liberal in allowing people to hold any theological beliefs they like. Hinduism contains Idolators, Polytheists Pantheists, Monotheists, Agnostics, Atheists, Eclectic-theists and many other sorts of people. The only restriction that Hinduism lays down are certain social laws, which are rightly or wrongly considered to better the society. All these social laws, except those concerning inter-dining, have more or less been adopted by the Musalmans. But in this respect also they are not peculiarly separate. Brahmos and Aryas have like the Muhammadans no scruples in the matters of eating and drinking. Hindus already possess 101 theological sects. Let Islam too form 102nd one. Our theological needs may be different. But that is not a new thing, for the needs of an Arya, a Brahmo, a Sikh, a Jain, a Buddhist, a Shaiva, a Vaishnava, or a Vedantine are not identical. It must be borne in mind that our social and political needs are not different. Our national weaknesses are common. The causes of our weaknesses and defects are the same, and therefore our remedies must also be identical. Let the true leaders of the Musalman community come forward. Let the crude notions of Pan-Islamism, political importance and distinct nationality be thrown away as injurious obstacles in the path of national progress. Let the bread and butter policy inaugurated by selfish title-hunter be discarded, for the simple reason that the policy was meant not so much for the advancement of Musalman community as for the personal aggrandizement of the so-called leaders. Let the Musalmans discard this begging policy of seeking favours and privileges and learn to stand upon their own legs. Too much begging brings comtempt and God helps those who help themselves. Let it be thoroughly understood that the Turks or the Arabs or the Persian cannot help their Indian co-religionists, for the simple reason that religion is not a sufficiently strong tie to affect modern national policies. Indian Musalmans should bear in mind that they are Indians by birth, that their bones after death will remain in India and that their descendants also have to live in India in fellowship with the Hindus. A Musalman becomes Indian from the very moment of his birth. But he becomes a Musalman only when he had sufficiently grown up to understand and accept the religion of Muhammad. It is essential therefore for Musalmans to know that they are Indians first and Musalmans afterwards. Let the Musalmans understand that the Hindus by religion and heredity are generous and liberal. They never desire to encroach upon the right of others. When the wrong notions of Pan-Islamism, political importance and distinct nationality are thrown away the Musalmans will find their joy that Hindus are more than brothers to them. They will find Hindus fighting their battles as they did in the time of Akbar and they will see that their needs, whatever they may be, are fully taken care of. Separatist policy cannot serve any useful purpose, for it is based on selfishness and narrow-mindedness."

Military economies.

11. The following is from the Panjabee (Lahore), of the 30th May 1912 :—

"The Nicholson Commission just sitting to consider Indian military economies, have three subjects to enquire and report on. They are—(1) to determine the military liabilities of India now and for the next few years, (2) to consider what forces are necessary for the purpose of meeting those liabilities, and (3) having regard to (1) and (2), whether any reductions in military expenditure are possible. It is considered that the situation in Persia, Turkey and other Muslim countries and also the Chinese political affairs will considerably add to the difficulties of the problem. The Committee will doubtless be able to find whether, and if so what, India has to pay for eventualities that are entirely beyond its control. But in any case internal economies can and must be effected. The Civil and Military Gazette makes a few suggestions to this end. Our Anglo-Indian contemporary writes :

"In the realm of natural history there are known, we believe, certain species which when cut in two or three immediately become two or three complete specimens of their class. So it has proved with the Military Accounts Department. A few years ago there were, we believe, four Controllers, one for each of the four Commands. These were subsequently reduced in number. Now, however, there still remain four Controllers, and, in addition, ten Deputy Controllers have attached themselves to the headquarters of the ten divisions, each, apparently, accompanied by a large office. All this bloated establishment seeks to justify its existence by the multiplication of work until the life of the regimental officer is made a burden to him.

"The way in which Civil establishments have grown during the past 20 years has been pointed out in the Councils, and Military establishments, not being open to discussion, must be examined with greater care, and the enquiry is likely to furnish valuable materials concerning Military expenditure."

III.—Native States.

Hyderabad affairs.

12. The Paisa Akhbar (Lahore), of the 21st May 1912, publishes a letter from (Nawab) Abdulla Khan, of Kasmandi, headed "Discovery of the Hyderabad intrigue." The writer, who has been turned out of Hyderabad over this intrigue, asserts that he has done nothing to deserve this treatment by the Nizam at the instance of His Highness's Private Secretary, Maulvi Ahmad Husain. He also alleges that the Maulvi's unbecoming conduct has caused feelings of serious uneasiness in the State.

V.—Native Societies and Religious Matters.

The forthcoming Hindu conference.

13. The Hindustan (Lahore), of the 17th (received on the 27th) May 1912, has an article headed "Lala Jaswant Rai's letter." The local Hindu, it says, has published a letter from the Lala, who charges Pandit Rambhaj Dat with having misappropriated two sums of Rs. 1,000 and Rs. 25,000 (vide paragraph 20 of Selections No. 20). After stating that Lala Lajpat Rai is believed to be the real author of the letter, the paper endeavours to prove that there is no truth in the accusation. Continuing, it remarks that a sum of about Rs. 25,000 was subscribed towards the Panjabee Defence Fund, which was started to meet the cost of the case instituted by Government against the journal named. The Fund was also intended to be used in defending the accused in the political cases which, it was thought, were to be launched in this province after the Panjabee's prosecution. Only a small part of the amount collected was, however, spent for the paper in question, while a sum of Rs. 500 was paid to a certain person, who was convicted of a political offence. The balance is still with Lala Jaswant Rai, who has no right to pocket the same. Again, it was announced by the Lala in the Panjabee that he would spend only Rs. 75 a month on himself out of the paper's income, devoting the rest to works of public utility. But when he sold the Panjabee on pressure from his (political) guru, Lala Lajpat Rai, he did not hand over to the public or the paper's new proprietors the sum of at least Rs. 24,000 which he had with him on account of subscriptions. He also pocketed a large amount on account of the good will of the journal. In short, he, as well as his guru, worships "public money" and has been profiting by it. Proceeding, the Hindustan says that, at first the couple were staunch supporters of the swadeshi and boycott movements. Now, however, the guru has joined the disciple in working an import and export agency. Can such unprincipled persons, asks the paper, be called public men or deserve any honour at "the nation's" hands? Again, before his deportation it was frequently declared by Lala Lajpat Rai that it was the highest ambition of his life to serve the public, and that it would mean death for him to part with that vocation. On his return from Mandalay, however, he left off serving the public of his own accord, and still belongs to the land of the living. Previous to his deportation, moreover, he was a lion and a leader; but since his release he has degenerated into a jackal and has been seeking safety in retirement. He came to so shirk public work that he got his father to publish a letter to the following effect:—"We are banias. Our business consists in trade. We do not come of a warlike race that we should pit ourselves against Government." On the contrary, Pandit Rambhaj Dat "has openly and loudly proclaimed his brave spirit even in the most difficult times." It may be added that in 1908, when misunderstandings led political workers in the Punjab merely to suspect that the authorities were displeased with them, Lala Lajpat Rai had the cowardice to flee to England; while he so dreaded Government's imaginary displeasure that he did not make a single speech in that free country, although the requirements of the times demanded that the Indian leaders then in England should have appeared on the public platform in order to strengthen the hands of a well-wisher of India like Lord Morley. The Pandit, however, displayed courage on the occasion and delivered learned and powerful speeches calculated to prove a source of strength to the Secretary of State for India. Nor is this all. Lala Lajpat Rai was at Rawalpindi when five respectable lawyers of the place were arrested in connection with the riots of 1907. He was so frightened at the arrests that he left for Lahore in hot haste, without having attended to the business which had taken him to Rawalpindi. Again, the Indian Association, Lahore, proposed adopting a resolution to sympathise with the above lawyers, but the Lala, who was the President of the said body, did not allow a meeting to be held for the purpose. He had convinced himself that, if such a meeting had been convened, he, as President, would be made short work of by Government. Next the paper accuses him of having gone back on his political creed and of having abandoned Mr. Tilak, his confederate and (political) guide, on the occasion of the abortive Surat Congress. After remarking that he did so merely with the selfish object of saving his skin, it observes that, in certain letters which appeared in the Tribune last year, Lala Lajpat Rai was guilty of the exposure of a public body's (the Arya Samaj's) secrets, as also of laying the blame for his own doings at the door of others. Besides, when, after his return from Mandalay, a highly-placed Government official (? Rai Mul Raj) told him to leave either his politics or the Arya Samaj and also expressed the opinion that in the other event he would be given no high office in that body, he flew into a rage and threatened to divulge the said officer's "secret" to Government and to have the latter dismissed in five minutes. This should show that Lala Lajpat Rai can divulge a secret over a mere trifle; and such a person can never deserve to be trusted by the public. The paper then goes on to say that, shortly after the Kangra earthquake, the Lala collected a large sum of money in aid of the sufferers, but that it is not known how the amount was spent, no statement of receipts and expenditure having so far been published. The same, it adds, is true of the collections made by him after his return from Mandalay for the relief of the famine-stricken (in the United Provinces of Agra and Oudh). After remarking that he makes use of the (unspent) money to "patronise" those who follow his opinions, it observes that he has been bent on self-aggrandisement instead of trying to raise the position of the Arya Samaj. When, moreover, on his restoration to liberty, he was advised to sever his connection with the D. A.-V. College in the interests of that institution, he "became ready to rebel against the College authorities and (even) against the College itself." Continuing, the Hindustan says that the Editor of the Hindu has now thrown Lala Shadi Lal overboard and is wielding the cudgels on behalf of Lala Lajpat Rai. Is this due, it asks, to his palms not having been greased by the former gentleman, and to his having been helped out of the Panjabee Defence Fund? Will he, besides, say whether, on stopping the publication of his Doaba and Subah, he refunded to the subscribers the money due to them? What has, moreover, become of the money which Lala Lajpat

Rai recovered from the Englishman and the London Times (? Globe) and which he promised to spend on works of public utility ? In conclusion, the paper contends that Pandit Rambhaj Dat is the best man to preside over the coming Hindu conference.

The paper also publishes a letter from one Amar Nath Sufi of Lahore, who, too, levels against Lala Jaswant Rai the charges preferred in the foregoing article.

Pandit Rambhaj Dat also contributes a letter in which he deeply regrets that some short-sighted Hindus should hold the opinion that the best interests of their community demand that they should range themselves on the side of their own heroes, reducing other servants of the community to impotence by crushing them or making them out to be disreputable and untrustworthy persons. Continuing, he says that the articles published in the Hindu are intended, not to find out truth, but to disgrace him and to wound his feelings. Next he writes :—" For God's sake, give the presidential chair to any one—the Maharaja of Jammu, Rai Bahadur Lala Ram Saran Das or 'a Tom, Jack or Harry' (lit. a black thief)." He, for one, does not want it : the sight of his community being in its last gasps (the picture does not leave him even for one minute) has long made him indifferent to such honours. In conclusion, he requests the Editor to end the controversy as soon as practicable.

Commenting on the above, the latter asserts that Pandit Rambhaj Dat is the best leader for the Hindu community, which can depend on him even in the most difficult times and undertakings. He does not seek the honour of presiding over the Hindu conference, but this very fact constitutes strong proof of his being in every way entitled to the distinction. Next the paper appeals to the Hindu community to have him elected president of the conference.

The Zamindar and the Hon'ble Mian Muhammad Shafi.

14. The Chaudhwin Sadi (Rawalpindi), of the 15th (received on the 24th) May 1912, publishes an article headed " Let the Lahore people reflect." The Muhammadans of the Punjab, it says, were once noted for their sympathy with their community and for living in union and accord. Of late, however, their feelings of love and affection for one another have been changing into those of envy and malice. They are also parting with sentiments of mutual respect, and it is becoming a confirmed trait of their character to feel ungrateful and to express distrust of the servants of their community. After asking what this deplorable state of affairs is due to and since when it has come into existence, the paper remarks that the answer is furnished by words like " The times have now changed ; Muhammadans have now begun to distinguish between their bogus and real leaders," which are published in almost every issue of the Zamindar. That paper takes pride in the fact that this unpleasant change has been wrought by it ; but it is for Musalmans themselves to decide whether the same is an elixir of life or a deadly poison. It was an evil day for the Prophet's followers in the Punjab when the Editor of the Zamindar was expelled from Hyderabad and this province had to take back the bad shilling it gave to the Nizam's dominions. The Chaudhwin Sadi then goes on to say that, commenting on the vote of confidence in the Hon'ble Mian Muhammad Shafi, recently passed by the Punjab Muslim League, the journalist named observes that the Mian has been seeking his own good under the guise of wishing his community well. Even if this is granted to be true, the conduct of the above Hon'ble gentleman is a thousand times more praiseworthy than that of the man (the Zamindar's Editor) who has been, and still is, determined to ruin the Muhammadan community for his personal gain, and who has been emptying the pockets of his co-religionists and is teaching them in return what is certain to prove their undoing. Another charge preferred against Mian Muhammad Shafi is that he burns incense at the alter of Government, and that whatever be puts his hands to he does it (only) to please (lit. flatter) Government. If, however, flattery in Muhammadans means anything done to please Government, it should be borne in mind that their welfare depends upon pleasing the powers that be.

Besides, since when has the Editor of the Zamindar begun to hate the idea of seeking to please Government and to win its good will? After replying that this probably occurred a long time after his removal to Lahore, the paper states that he is under obligation to Mian Muhammad Shafi for more than one act of kindness, and that every true Musalman feels grateful to the Mian for that gentleman's services to his community.

Degradation of women and Islam.

15. The following is from the Observer (Lahore), of the 29th May 1912 :—

"The Hon'ble Mr. Dadabhoy has been permitted to submit to the Supreme Legislative Council a Bill for the protection of women and girls. Detailed provisions of the Bill have not yet been made public, but it is well known that they are directed against the custom of dedicating girls to temples, who generally lead immoral lives. Prominent Hindu gentlemen of Southern India have strongly animadverted against this pernicious custom. But seeing that it was rife even when Mahmud of Ghazni invaded Somnath, no one has dreamt of accusing Islam for this degradation of women. It has, however, been left to the Panjabee to discover 'that Islamic culture and methods of life have introduced almost a vulgar ideal of the aims and purposes of women and nowhere is woman the greater sufferer than in the Punjab and Easten Bengal—two places of Muhammadan domination.' One wonders at the impudence of writer in making this defamatory and lying statement. Instead of confessing with shame that the custom of having Devadasis is a purely Hindu institution, the paper accuses Islam of lowering the ideal of womanhood. Does it not know that there are only two countries in the world—India and Egypt—where people leading lives of shame have from times immemorial formed a caste unto themselves? So far as the Punjab is concerned, will the Panjabee enlighten us whether the Wammargis are Hindus or non-Hindus and if Hindus, what their ideal of womanhood is? Again, is the immorality fearfully prevalent in the Hill States due to the influence of Islam or any other cause? Will not same contributor to the Panjabee visit Chamba, Bilaspur, Suket and the Simla Hills and provide its readers with the necessary information? Are these unprovoked attacks on Islam to be the first fruits of the proposed Indian Journalists Association of Lahore?"

VII.—General Administration.

(a)—Judicial.

Ministry of Justice.

16. The following is from the Panjabee (Lahore), of the 28th May 1912 :—

"We publish elsewhere what the News of India writes about the creation of a Ministry of Justice in India and to free the Executive Government from the responsibilities of the administration of the department in any way. The suggestion is a highly important one, and we know that Indian opinion will welcome it. We have shown that the people of this country value nothing more than the British system of administering impartial justice, irrespective of race, rank and wealth of individuals concerned, and at present the executive control of the High and Chief Courts has afforded occasions for deploring the link. The confidence of the people in the integrity of British justice is to be maintained. In England, the Judgeships are in the gift of the Lord Chancellor and appointments are made by H. H. the King on his advice. We have no Lord Chancellor in India and his duties are performed by the Home Minister who also controls the police and various other executive departments for whose integrity he is responsible. This is certainly an anomaly. It would place the Indian Judiciary on a higher pedestal to have a judicial Ministry to whom the whole of the judicial matters must be submitted and their high integrity free from executive connections maintained. We do not think the cost would be an obstacle as the Indian judiciary can afford to meet the cost of the Ministers. The matter is worthy of serious consideration and we hope the various Bar Associations throughout the country will submit their views to the Government."

Complaint against the Assistant Cantonment Magistrate, Secunderabad.

17. The following is from the Observer (Lahore), of the 29th May 1912 :—

"A paragraph is going round the vernacular press; but nothing has so far transpired to show whether any step has been taken by the military authorities in respect to the alleged high-handed proceedings of a Magistrate in Secunderabad. Though a British military station, Secunderabad is situated in Hyderabad, Deccan, and is as a matter of fact included in the estate of Nawab Sir Salar Junj. In compliance with the rules of the cantonment, the Musalmans of Secunderabad, it is stated, notified the military authorities on March 5 that they intended to recite the Milad on the night of March 7. As no orders prohibiting the same were issued, the religious ceremony was begun as usual. But at 2 A.M. before the recitations were finished, the Assistant Cantonment Magistrate, attended by a posse of police, entered the mosque, and stopped the recitations and took down the names of all who were taking part in the ceremony. Summons were then issued against these persons and the self-same Magistrate summarily imposed fines on those who had been engaged in the rites. It will be seen from the above that the Milad was held after previous notification and thus no offence was committed. But even if an offence had been committed, the Magistrate was hardly competent to try a case in which he was himself a witness, if not a complainant. The Imam of the Mosque has filed an appeal, but to add insult to injury, so the report goes, the application for appeal has disappeared from the file. The poor Imam is said to be dazed and knows not what to do. We, however, hope the military authorities know their own duty and will not tolerate such high-handedness in the State of the premier ruling prince of India. The matter requires a sifting public enquiry. No efforts should, therefore, be spared to satisfy the aggrieved Musalmans of Secunderabad."

(b)—Police.

Complaint in connection with the quartering of Punitive Police in some villages in the Frontier Province.

18. The Afghan (Peshawar), of the 19th (received on the 28th) May 1912, publishes a note headed "Punitive police and the cry of the people of Tehkal Bala and other villages." After stating that punitive police have been quartered in Tehkal Bala and thirteen other villages in the Frontier Province, the paper reports that the people concerned feel greatly exercised over the step, and are preparing to submit a memorial against it. The proceeding has been taken in consequence of a white soldier having been wounded in the neighbourhood of Tehkal Bala; but, when the authorities know that the assailant was an Afridi why should the poor agriculturists and labourers of the said villages be fined instead of the culprit being arrested and punished? They are said to have had punitive police quartered in their villages for not having prevented the above assault. But how could these poor fellows have done so when Government itself, who rules their ilaqa and is very powerful, was unable to avert the outrage?

Police torture in Calcutta.

19. The following is from the Panjabee (Lahore), of the 25th May 1912:—

"It is a singular fact that ever since the well-known prohibition of Mr. Mackarness. pamphlet on the defects of the Indian police, torture cases have become the order of the day. Of course, it is due to the change in the policy of the Government and greater vigilance on the part of the authorities in weeding out the undesirable elements in the police force. The public are undoubtedly grateful to the authorities for this reform and we hope it will continue until a wholesome change is brought about. The case of torture which was being heard by the Chief Justice of the Calcutta High Court against Sub-Inspector Heelis and three others has ended in conviction. The former is sentenced to 6 months and the three latter to 9, 6 and 9 months imprisonment respectively. His Lordship the Chief Justice warned the culprits that the punishment meted out was very lenient in comparison with the seriousness of their offence. The remarks of the highest Court in the land will infuse great confidence throughout the country, and we hope, will have a chastening effect on the black sheep in the department. No other department is entitled to greater gratitude of the people than the police. Yet here and there instances of police oppression crop up and create untold suffering and distrust. During the last twelve months more cases of torture have been brought to light and the offenders punished than perhaps during many years in the past. Almost every day we read of some defect and exposure of police subordinates in some part of the country or other and all these show that the department yet contains many undesirable persons and the Government is determined to get them punished and removed. We have already suggested that the department should issue circulars to all its subordinates whenever a case of police malpractice is unearthed and conviction is secured, giving the details of the case. Such a systematic method of warning cannot fail to keep the inferior forces in order and prevent them from straying into unlawful paths."

(c)—Municipal and cantonment affairs.

Municipal taxation.

20. The following is from the Panjabee (Lahore), of the 25th May 1912:—

"Local self-government in India has great difficulties to overcome. The beginner in the course of learning self-government is confronted by experts on all sides who pick faults and insist on high efficiency. It is said that the child must learn to be a youth and a boy a full grown man, with power, wit, resources and everything. If the child and the youth stumble and fall, they are unfit and they can never learn self-government. Such, we confess, is the development of local self-governing institutions. Those who have learnt to govern themselves by over-governing others have little patience for those who have done neither. In Upper India the struggle between direct and indirect taxation in Municipalities is a keen one. Of course, arguments may be advanced on both sides, but the chief fact is that the growth of cities and towns is far more rapid than the economic improvement in the people admits. The demands for increased income and the inability of the people to bear increased taxation are manifest everywhere. A typical case is presented by Agra where, according to a correspondent, the people are put to much trouble:—

"At the last meeting of the Municipal Board the chairman read a letter from the Local Government which suggested for the board's consideration, in view of its present financial condition, the advisability of imposing a house-tax to secure an additional income of about Rs. 40,000. The proposal was strongly opposed by the members on the ground that the people of Agra could not afford any extra taxation, and after a spirited debate it was 'resolved' that indirect taxation is to be preferred to direct taxation, as the latter would be extremely unpopular, and in any case before imposing such taxation the board would prefer to see the result of the imposition of a terminal tax and to consider the possibility of increasing the rates of such terminal tax.

"The people cannot avoid fresh taxation though they prefer indirect burdens to direct ones in their trouble. In such cases Government ought to come to their rescue by liberal grants, seeing that in these days of high prices with no corresponding rise in earnings people cannot bear either a direct or an indirect tax. Training in self-government on these impossible lines is training with a vengeance."

(e)—Agriculture and questions affecting the land

Provincial Settlements.

21. The following is from the Tribune (Lahore), of the 25th May 1912 :—

"The Resolution of the Government of India on Provincial Settlements should be carefully studied by students of Indian finance. Its importance consists not, indeed, in the decisions which are seemingly disappointing in some respects, but in the reasons which have been given for adopting the decisions. Further, the Resolution emanates from a Government over which Lord Hardinge presides and proceeds directly from two such popular officials as Sir Fleetwood Wilson and Sir James Meston. It should therefore be read along with the recommendations of the Decentralization Commission and the despatches from time to time issued by Lord Morley suggesting the principles which should govern the administration of finances in this country. If read in this manner it will be found that as compared with some of the pronouncements of the Government in the recent past the present treatment of the question is unquestionably liberal and encouraging but is still dominated by the bureaucratic spirit and falls far short of even the studiedly moderate ideal of the Hobhouse Commission.

"Take, for instance, the considerations to which the Hobhouse Commission subordinated the reform in decentralization. At the outset they postulated that the want of an independent body possessing the power to check and sanction the expenditure of the Imperial and Local Governments rendered obligatory the outside control and supervision now exercised by the Secretary of State and the Government of India respectively. They further laid stress on the fact that the members of the Government of India held office for a short period of five years and had consequently 'but a fleeting personal responsibility for the growth of expenditure or taxation.' It was under this sense of irresponsibility that Lord Curzon committed the country to a policy of heavy taxation and lavish expenditure. In vain do we look in the lengthy resolution now issued for the Government's approval of the views of the Commission as to the raison d'etre of the existing outside control.

"In more than one place the Commission has referred to this outside control falling to a Parliament in other countries and in the British Colonies. In paragraph 72 it goes further and suggests the transfer of this power to the Legislative Councils. 'We recognise,' it says, 'that the grant to the Local Legislative Councils of material control over Provincial Finance may make it necessary to do away, as far as possible, with the present divided heads, and to place some entirely within the purview of the Provincial, and others within that of the Imperial, Government.' In the present Resolution of Government there is no affirmation of this elementary principle. On the contrary, a beginning has been made in provincialising Excise and Forest Revenues without giving to the Local Legislative Councils any 'material control' of the kind suggested such as checking and sanctioning expenditure. We recognise the improvement in the tone and spirit of the Resolution and thank the Government for not yielding to the clamour of the Bombay Government for absolutism. But we regret the absence of all reference to the future policy of the Government.

"The only reference made to the future of Indian finance is that which is found in paragraph 11 under Provincial taxation. After complimenting the 'studied caution' of the Royal Commission the Government of India writes: 'They thought however that if in the future there should come about a clear separation between Imperial and Provincial finance, with a more effective control over the latter by Legislative Councils, it might become practicable and necessary to allow Local Governments to levy provincial taxation if they wished to increase their scale of provincial expenditure. They did not propose to relax the present statutory safeguards of legislation without which no taxation can become effective. The Government of India are once again in general agreement with the Commission.' This in no sense amounts to an approval of the principles of decentralization with regard to checking and sanctioning expenditure laid down by the Royal Commission. As regards provincial taxation the Government of India has good reason for declining to state the conditions under which it can give effect to theoretical considerations which commend to it. Apparently it does not want to give a handle to howlers who are even now condemning the favourable reference to provincial autonomy in the recent despatch of the Government of India. But as regards the enhanced powers already conferred and proposed to be conferred on Local Governments it does not refer even to the theoretical obligation of transferring the powers of checking and sanctioning to Legislative Councils. There is, of course, no mention of the inadequacy of the powers of the Local Legislative Councils to obviate the control of the Government of India.

"Nevertheless the Resolution is of value. It is a masterly exposition of the history of Indian finance and lays down the principles of provincial settlement. The Government of India rightly says that the institution of provincial settlement represents an attempt to solve a problem which must always arise where there exists a Local Government in complete or partial subordination to a central authority. This problem is as inevitable in a federation of separate States as in any scheme of devolution and decentralization devised for a highly centralized form of Government. Much of the value of solution obviously depends upon the width of the outlook which the central authority generally keeps. But without entering into considerations of future policy the Government says :—

"Certain classes of expenditure must obviously be left to the subordinate authority while other servicen can be satisfactorily administered by the central Government alone. Both these bodies require to be kept is funds In India where the great bulk of the revenue of the country is collected in, and credited to the accounts of the various provinces the problem resolves itself into the question how the central Government can best be supplied with resources to meet the charges of the services which it must, of necessity, administer. The provincial settlements represent a method of attaining this object, which has been evolved by diverse and protracted experiments. To meet its own expenditure the Government of India retains, in the first place, the entire profits of the commercial departments and, secondly, all the revenue whose locale is no guide to its true incidence, such as the net receipts from Customs, Salt and Opium. The income derived from these sources is, however, insufficient to cover the cost of the Imperial Services, and an arrangement had therefore to be made by which the other sources of revenue should be distributed between the central and the various provincial Governments.'

"Here the Government of India admits that the bulk of the revenue is collected in the provinces and credited to the accounts of the provinces. That is to say, the revenue is paid by the people of the provinces. Now if both the central authority and the Provincial Governments are to be supplied with funds from the taxes paid by the people in the provinces, the question arises to whom does the surplus belong after satisfying the demands of the two great spending authorities? The Government of India has failed to indicate this, but inferentially conveys the impression both in the passage quoted and throughout the resolution that it can annex it to the Imperial Treasury to be spent in whatever manner it likes. If, as Edward Law once stated and the Royal Commission on Decentralization subsequently affirmed, there is no wisdom in allowing full play to the absolutism of Provincial satraps, it is certainly the duty of the central authority to fill the role of trustee to safeguard the interests of the tax-prayers in the provinces till such time as they can effectively control the Executive Government. In vain do we look in the Resolution for the enunciation of any such principle of provincial settlement."

(h)—Miscellaneous.

The Khan of Hoti's case.

22. The Punjab Advocate (Mianwali), of the 16th (received on the 28th) May 1912, has an article headed "The Khan of Hoti's case." It begins by referring to the letter which Honorary Magistrate Ghulam Husain, of Peshawar, wrote to the Khan of Hoti to ask the latter to give a donation for the Islamia College proposed to be established in the city named. Continuing, it says that the impression was that, if the Khan did not make the contribution, he would have to suffer trouble. Next it quotes an extract from the (Indian) Daily News (Calcutta), of the 17th February last, in which that paper remarks that the case against the Khan was a false one, and that his refusal to give money in aid of the above College had very much to do with his prosecution. In conclusion, it gives an account of his family and refers to the services rendered by his father on different occasions. (To be continued.)

The Khan of Hoti's case.

23. The Afghan (Peshawar), of the 19th (received on the 28th) May 1912, publishes a leader headed "True facts of the Khan of Hoti's case—I." The mis-statements it, says, which the Hindu press has made about this case are known to all. After remarking that the said press has proved itself "fully worthy of the Khan's salt," it contends that the proceedings taken in connection with this case in the Frontier Province were thoroughly legal. If the local authorities, it adds, had really been inimically disposed towards the Khan it would have been extremely easy for them to have had him tried at Peshawar. As it is, he was shown the special favour of having his case heard at Bombay.

The Khan of Hoti's case.

24. The Akhbar-i-'Am (Lahore), of the 25th May 1912, publishes a leader headed "The Khan of Hoti's case." After remarking that some of its contemporaries have girt up their loins to defend the Chief Commissioner, the paper condemns the irregularities which are alleged to have been committed in connection with the above case. Next it says that the Khan of Hoti has been grossly insulted in the Manual of Pashtu and that this book is from the pen of Sir George Ross-Keppel. Again, it is in the time of the author of the Manual that the Khan has been treated with tyrannical severity. After asking whether this is (only) a coincidence, the paper observes that the Khan has proved that the Chief Commissioner was displeased with him and that it was to end this displeasure that a donation (for the Islamia College) was demanded from the former. It is, however, prepared to grant that Sir George had no direct concern with the oppression and hardships which the Khan of Hoti has had to suffer. But in that case it will have to be explained why the District Magistrate of Peshawar issued a warrant of arrest against a prominent rais in his jurisdiction in the absence of any complaint against the latter. What was the plot due to if the Chief Commissioner did not visit his enmity and anger on the Khan and did the head of the Frontier Province take any notice of this shameful oppression? Did he call upon the District Magistrate to explain his high-handed conduct, and what did he do to reassure the Khan? Again, if it is untrue that he did not send word to the Khan to give money (for the aforesaid College) how has he punished the improper and objectionable, nay, dangerous conduct of those worthies who tried to realise a donation from the Khan in his name, which was used both as a threat and a bail? It is no defence that an oppressed nobleman should still further be sat upon and his cries should be pooh-poohed.

Security from newspapers.

25. Writing under the heading "Security," the Millat (Lahore), of the 17th May 1912, says that it is opposed to the practice of Government demanding security from newspapers. Have those members of the press, it asks, from which security has so far been required, given up their wrong policy and dangerous conduct or did they experience any difficulty in depositing the specified amounts? Government is perhaps unaware that "some short-sighted (journalists)" descend into the arena of wrong-doing only after providing against all contingencies. These enemies of "the country and the nation" win the sympathies of many by publishing mischievous articles and posing as patriots and servants of their community. They bring under their influence young men and the lower classes in particular, while they so impose on some rich men in secret that the last named readily help them with money in the hour of need. The Millat knows full well that, when a fiery Muslim paper (the reference is to the Zamindar) was (recently) called upon to furnish security "a certain Hindu gentleman placed (currency) notes for Rs. 1,500 before its Editor (lit. it)." Other people also rendered him (pecuniary) help, and the paper is of opinion that he has privately been helped with several thousands of rupees. (Again) some simple-minded Musalmans collected thousands and have obtained a machine (press) and a large stock of paper for him. After remarking that the circulation of his paper has also increased, it enquires whether he has been a gainer or a loser through being called upon to furnish security. In short, to demand security from political wrong-doers is to increase their influence with the public. They get talked about and are helped with money far exceeding the amount of the security; contributions from ordinary people being acknowledged in the papers and large amounts from rich persons being pocketed in silence. Another defect in the existing arrangements is that Government demands security (from an offending paper) after the latter has secured many sympathisers. Besides, the demand results in the dissemination of objectionable literature, the articles complained of being spiced and reprinted by the paper. They are also reproduced or referred to by sympathising journals, which induce their readers to peruse the same. In this way, the object which Government has in view in demanding a security is defeated. The Editor would, therefore, suggest that securities, if demanded at all, should be asked for confidentially, and that the papers concerned should be prohibited from writing on the subject. It would, however, be better still to warn offending newspapers in the first instance and to have their Editors changed in the event of their not mending their ways. If they continue to misbehave themselves even then, their Proprietors and Editors should be bound down to be of good behaviour, and should also be forbidden to speak at public meetings ; while they should be kept under police surveillance for several years.

Security from the Vakil Press.

26. The Afghan (Peshawar), of the 19th (received on the 28th) May 1912, has a note entitled "Security from our contemporary the Vakil." It has deeply grieved the paper to learn from the Paisa Akhbar that the Vakil of Amritsar has been called upon to deposit a security of Rs. 1,000. After regretting that "innocent Muhammadan newspapers should be hunted down in the name of the Press Act," it makes bold to say that the Vakil is a most sober paper, and that its tone is highly moderate and inoffensive. To demand security from such a journal, it adds, is nothing short of insulting the law.

The Civil and Military News (Ludhiana), of May 20th, 1912, also writes in a similar strain.

Experts for India.

27. The following is from the Tribune (Lahore), of the 26th May 1912 :—

"Experts and specialists have become by-words in the Indian Press now-a-days. We hear of the Delhi experts every now and then sometimes in Delhi and sometimes in Simla, sometimes touring the country in motor cars and sometimes enjoying the hitherto unknown experience of the howdah. At first we were led to believe that Captain Swinton and his two colleagues would form a complete triumvirate. But a fourth wheel to the carriage has since been added and another expert has been appointed, who will be designated consulting expert. One wonders what is actually meant by a consulting expert and what is the difference between an 'expert' and a 'consulting expert.' Whatever that may be it is quite evident that the Delhi experts want consulting experts to help them and consulting experts are considered to be indispensable to a committee presided over by an 'expert layman.' But the worst of this 'expert' business is that it seem to threaten other Indian problems also. With reference to the construction of grain elevators in the wheat producing districts of the Punjab, Upper India and specially at Karachi, the Pioneer suggests the engagement of a few experts from Canada or the United States to 'simplify matter. Whether this will simplify matters or make them worse need not be discussed here. What we strongly object to is an invasion of foreign experts. Are there no Indians who can do the work which foreigners are called upon to do? There are several Indian engineers who have received both Indian and European education. Why should not they be given a chance? If a European layman is entitled to a present of £500 Indians already engaged in service can certainly demand some such consideration. There is an elevator and granary at Faridkot. May we enquire how many American experts were needed to erect it? And even if any special knowledge of modern methods and appliances is required for erecting elevators why should European and Americans be imported? Indians may be deputed to go to foreign countries at the expense of the Government and get first hand information which may be required for a particular purpose. The expenditure will be necessarily less while it will be a proper recognition of the claims of the people. But even if it is absolutely necessary to consult European engineers it may be done without incurring additional heavy expense. One of the Delhi experts is said to be an expert engineer and if he were invited to make suggestions with reference to grain-elevators in Karachi instead of enjoying the Himalayan breeze at Simla he might give the necessary advice. Referring to the departure of Captain Swinton for Simla an Anglo-Indian paper observes :—'Captain Swinton, the Delhi specialist, has gone to Simla. He is credited with being an expert at traffic managing. Could he be induced to come to Calcutta and set our chaotic streets in order? He would find almost as big a task here as finding a decent site for the new Delhi.' He might be also asked to facilitate the grain traffic at Karachi. Experts are few, but the things to which they can turn and the suggestions they can make are thick as the leaves of Vallombrosa."

Commenting on the above the Panjabee (Lahore), of the 28th May 1912, says that—

"The Lahore Tribune pours contempt and ridicule over the town-planning experts who have been invited to plan the new Delhi, because they are not Indians. Our contemporary is getting sick of the 'expert business' and in one of its editorial notes says:—

"What we strongly object to is an invasion of foreign experts. Are there no Indians who can do the work which foreigners are called upon to do? There are several Indian engineers who have received both Indian and European education. Why should not they be given a chance?

"We cannot understand what objection there is to foreign experts being consulted in a matter like town-planning. How many Indians are experts in town-planning? How many Indian cities have been built and planned by them? We can understand a plea made in favour of Indian architectural designs, and Indian arts and handicrafts being utilised. But town-planning is practically unknown to our people and it is unfair to decry the services of English experts merely because they happen to be 'foreigners.' To our own advantage and our progress, we must adopt improvements and ideals of city building from all sources, especially when we are very defective. Our own feelings are that we are glad that well-known town-planning experts are invited from England and we are anxious that they should consult Indian and other engineers with a view to find out Indian peculiarities and adopt their plans so far as may be possible to suit Indian requirements, tastes and conditions. It is unfair and ungenerous to condemn experts because they happen to be 'foreigners,' and we never understood the policy of the Tribune to be such.'

The Office of Accountant-General, Punjab.

28. Continuing its remarks on the subject of promotion in the Office of the Accountant-General, Punjab (vide paragraph 32 of Selections No. 21) the Observer (Lahore), of May 25th, 1912, quotes the cases of Ram Lal Wadhava, Sundar Singh, and Lala Ram Lal, in promoting whom, it is alleged, the Accountant-General has ignored "the claims of seniority as well as of better qualifications."

The new capital of India and experts.

29. The Tribune (Lahore), of the 29th May 1912, publishes the following under the heading "Romulus Redivivus":—

"If the announcement of the transfer of the capital of the Indian Empire from Calcutta to Delhi was a surprise, the selection of the Committee for the planning of the new capital was still more astonishing. Within a very short time of the announcement of the change we heard of English experts being appointed to plan the new city. No one knew what the exceptional qualifications were which gave them rank in the Order of Experts, but when questions were asked about them in the House of Commons some light was thrown on the subject and the affair aroused the interest of the public here and that section of the community in England which is interesred in questions relating to India. Mr. Montagu's disclosures regarding the town-planners were remarkable and particularly interesting. It was stated that Captain Swinton, an admitted layman, would be the President of the Committee. What Captain Swinton's claims were for this office we were never told. The only consideration, if it may be called so, in his favour was that he was A.-D.-C. to Lord Lansdowne in India and had served the London County Council for eleven years which is supposed to have given him some administrative experience. It remains an enigma how an ornamental service and a little experience in a County Council can possibly make one an 'expert' in dealing with Indian administrative questions. And it seems still more unaccountable that the offer of service on the committee was made to Captain Swinton at the express request of the Government of India. We are told that the Secretary of State has taken full responsibility for the appointment. But at the same time it is noteworthy that no light is thrown on the nature of the work that Captain Swinton is expected to do. The other members of the Committee announced at that time were Messrs. Brodie and Lutyens. Of these Mr. Brodie is an engineer of the Corporation of Liverpool, evidently having no experience whatsoever of the Indian climate and soil. In Mr. Lutyens we find an architect, an artist, a poet and a dreamer. He has artistic thoughts and ways. 'Artist' is written all over him and he is also a Theosophist. He is said to be capable of dreaming dreams of edifices as wonderful as in the Arabian Nights. But whether his dreams are ever capable of being realised or whether they ignore financial difficulties is yet unknown. These three personages constitute the committee of so-called experts. Other members are also being imported but we are not yet furnished with full particulars about them.

"Captain Swinton and his two lieutenants have been entrusted with the planning of the new city of Delhi. They have been engaged for a period of five months only but it has not been explicitly announced whether this period includes the period of the voyage. If it does the duration of their stay in India will be hardly sixteen weeks, otherwise it will be tweenty-one weeks. For this period, be it sixteen or twenty-one weeks, Captain Swinton will be paid 500 guineas, Mr. Brodie 1,750 guineas and Mr. Lutyens 1,500 guineas over and above their travelling and living expenses which will not be a small amount. In addition to this the Secretary of State has undertaken to refund to the Corporation of Liverpool the amount of Mr. Brodie's salary for the period of his absence. What this amount would come to we are not told, but we may assume that it will not be a small or negligible amount as otherwise Mr. Brodie could not possibly have been offered 1,750 guineas in India. Captain Swinton and others landed in India more than six weeks ago and arrived at Delhi on the 15th of April. It was reported that while staying in Bombay they unanimously said they were entirely in the dark as to the nature and amount of the work they were expected to do. Assuming this report to be correct it becomes quite evident that the Secretary of State who deputed these gentlemen had also no idea of what was to be done. And yet Mr. Montagu asserted that the Secretary of State took the entire responsibility. Of course he meant only as regards the appointments. Once in Delhi Captain Swinton and Messrs. Brodie and Lutyens were very busy in inspecting various probable sites for the new capital; but another announcement was made almost simultaneously that they would be going to Simla very soon. Many interesting reports went the round of the Press giving graphic accounts of the peregrinations of the town-planners. They began by exploring the vicinity of Delhi in motor cars, but as there were not many good roads they gave up the cars and tried elephants. It was stated that the 'experts' thought that the howdah being higher than a motor car or a seat on horse-back it was a better place of vantage. But this seat of vantage too did not help them to select the best site for the new capital. All that the Delhi experts did was to fix on Okla as the future country retreat of the Viceroy. The experts and laymen unanimously agreed that no site of the new city could be selected before the monsoon after which they expected to make their recommendations to the Government. In the meantime they have agreed to keep an open mind and they have now gone to Simla to wait for the monsoon and perhaps to watch the ground of Delhi from a higher and better place of vantage than the seat on the back of an elephant!

"Out of the period of five months for which the town-planners have been engaged more than six weeks have already passed apparently without any tangible results. It has been said that they will wait for the monsoon. The real monsoon will take another six weeks to be fully established in Delhi. So that the town-planners cannot in any case begin their work in right earnest before the middle of July, when they will have only eight weeks, if not less, at their disposal. It is quite evident that unless the site of the new city is finally approved by the Government of India no plans can be made. But is the planning of a new capital so light and easy a task that it can be done within six or eight weeks? If so, why were not the town-planners engaged for a shorter period? The monsoon comes at a fixed time in the year. The Secretary of State and the Government of India could not possibly have been ignorant of the fact that a site for an Indian city in an alluvial plain could not be selected before the monsoon. Why then were not the town-planners sent just at the time when they could have easily fixed the site instead of waiting for the monsoon for more than three months? Then again the appearance of the monsoon is uncertain and the rainfall also fluctuates. It is just possible that there may not be heavy rain in Delhi this year or the monsoon may be delayed. It is all a matter of chance and nothing can be foretold with certainty. What will the town-planners do if the rains fail or if they are not heavy enough to show the natural drainage to advantage? It would have been consistent with wisdom if the surroundings of Delhi were thoroughly surveyed, the nature of the grounds and natural drainage definitely ascertained by local engineers and then the experts were invited Mr. Brodie should have appeared on the scene with this knowledge in his possession. Mr. Lutyens, the architect, should visit different Indian cities and study Indian architecture instead of spending his time at Simla. Captain Swinton, the modern Romulus, should make thorough enquiries as to the materials and other indigeneous commodities which are likely to be used in the making of the new capital.

"Up to this time no substantial work has been done by the town-planners and in their own words no actual work can be begun before the monsoon. What they will be doing during the intervening period in Simla no one knows. If for the greater part of their stay they are to remain outside Delhi what was the necessity of their coming out so long in advance?

"They have come for a definite purpose. They have to be in communication with the Government of India, but that does not mean that the major portion of their time is to be spent at Simla. Their office should be at Delhi, the seat of operations. The work in connection with the temporary capital has already begun. Temporary though it will be it will certainly be occupied for some years before the permanent capital is built. The construction will require the help of engineers and architects. Cannot Mr. Brodie be induced to suggest anything in connection with the temporary capital to show what he is capable of doing? Mr. Montagu said in the House of Commons that the employment of Indian architects rested with the Government of India. Lord Hardinge expressed his wish of adopting the Indian style of architecture for the Government buildings in the new city. We understand the temporary capital will be but a bungalow and tent colony. But could not Mr. Lutyens be induced to build something for the temporary capital, small though it may be, something like a model to show what he is really worth? Taking into consideration the short period at their disposal, a considerable portion of which has already been and will be wasted, it may be said with certainty that they will be able to do only a small part of the work with which they have been entrusted. All that will be possible for them to do will be to make suggestions without any practical work. If this was all that the Government of India wanted the town-planners to do, they might have been engaged for a month and begun and finished their work in August or September."

Shooting of dogs by soldiers.

30. The following is from the Tribune (Lahore), of the 29th May 1912 :—

"Without expressing any opinion on the case in which a soldier named Peskett has been arrested for causing the death of a villager near Meean Mir we may point out the danger of employing soldiers to shoot stray dogs. In villages there are very few ownerless dogs, while villagers cannot afford to put collars round the necks of their dogs. Soldiers cannot distinguish between real pariah dogs and ordinary village dogs which have owners. Shooting dogs in a village is itself dangerous for a bullet may go astray and may hit a man. In many cases soldiers are not to be trusted. We remember one case in which a terrier, with a collar round its neck, belonging to Dr. Satish Chandra Banerji of Allahabad, was deliberately shot by a soldier just outside the house. The servants caught the man and brought him to the house and the only explanation he had to give was that he had made a mistake. If accidents and crimes are to be avoided the shooting of dogs by soldiers should be peremptorily forbidden."

European colonists in India.

31. The following is from the Tribune (Lahore), of the 30th May 1912 :—

"A valued correspondent writes :—There is no need for any apprehension that the few European settlers in the Indian hills will grow into a large colony. Look at Kangra. At one time there were over 70 European planters; there are not 7 left now. Again within the last 2,000 years and more how many millions of white races, men, women and children, have swarmed down into the Punjab, Sind and Gujrat in Western India, and where are they now? They form part of the Indian population and are indistinguishable from the native Indian population. How about the colonists from Gujrat, Calinga and the Punjab, who conquered Cambodia, Java, &c. Where are they now?"

SIMLA :

The 1st June 1912.

C. STEAD,

Assistant to the Deputy Inspector-General of Police, Criminal Investigation Department, Punjab.

24 JUN 1912
INDIA OFFICE.

Punjab Govt. Branch Press, Simla—6-6-12—No. 16—107—H. L. S.

[ Confidential. ]

[ Vol. XXV. ] [ No. 23. ]

SELECTIONS

FROM THE

NATIVE NEWSPAPERS

PUBLISHED IN THE PUNJAB.

Examined up to 8th June 1912.

---

CONTENTS.

Page.

I.—Politics.

(a) Foreign—

1. Trans-Persian Railway (Civil and Military News) 447
2. The South African Immigration Bill (Panjabee) ... ib.
3. Muhammadan wives in South Africa ( Ditto ) ... ib.

(b) Home—

4. Provincial autonomy in India (Rajput Gazette) ... 447
5. Muslim politics (Chaudhvin Sadi) ... 448
6. Ditto ( Ditto ) ... ib.

II.—Afghanistan and Trans-Frontier.

Nil.

III.—Native States.

7. The Viceroy's visit to Kashmir (Panjabee) ... 449

IV.—Kine-killing.

8. Hindus and cow-killing (Paisa Akhbar) ... 449
9. The Muslim press and cow-killing (Hindu) ... ib.
10. Cow-killing in India (Parkash) ... 450

V.—Native Societies and Religious Matters.

11. The forthcoming Hindu Conference (Shanti, Hindustan and Hindu) ... 450
12. The Afghan and Hindus (Jhang Sial) ... 452
13. A national song of Muhammadans (Zamindar) ... 453
14. The Arya Samaj (Arjan) ... ib.
15. Excise Revenue and Temperance (Panjabee) ... ib.
16. A complaint (Khalsa Sewak) ... 454

VI.—Legislation.

17. Lord Crewe and Indian Press Law (Panjabee) ... 454

Page.

VII.—General Administration.

(a) Judicial—

Nil.

(b) Police—

18. Compensation for police torture (Panjabee) ... 455
19. The Ludhiana Rape Case (Panjabee) ... ib.

(c) Municipal and Cantonment affairs—

20. Complaint against the Assistant Cantonment Magistrate, Secunderabad (Paisa Akhbar) ... 455

(d) Education—

21. The Muslim University (Vakil) ... 456
22. Constitution of the Muslim University (Observer) ... ib.

(e) Agriculture and questions affecting the land—

Nil.

(f) Railways and Communications—

23. Grievances of the Indian employés of the Oudh and Rohilkhand Railway (Hindu) ... 457
24. Appointment of Assistant Traffic Superintendents for State Railways (Tribune) ... 458

(g) Postal matters—

Nil.

(h) Miscellaneous—

25. His Honour Sir Louis Dane (Victoria Paper) ... 458
26. Security from the Vakil Press (Vakil) ... ib.
27. The Jhang Sial (Jhang Sial) ... 459
28. The Khan of Hoti's case (Afghan, Millat and Hindustan) ... ib.
29. Health Officers for India (Panjabee) ... 460

LIST OF NEWSPAPERS AND PERIODICALS EXAMINED BY THE SPECIAL BRANCH AS IT STOOD ON THE 8TH JUNE 1912.

| No. | Name. | Locality. | Name of Publisher. | Circulation. |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| | ENGLISH. | | | |
| | DAILY. | | | |
| 1 | Tribune ... | Lahore ... | Bihari Lal ... | 1,758 copies. |
| | TRI-WEEKLY. | | | |
| 2 | Panjabee ... | Lahore ... | Mul Chand ... | 2,424 copies. |
| | BI-WEEKLY. | | | |
| 3 | Observer ... | Lahore ... | Nizam-ud-din ... | 1,000 copies. |
| 4 | Punjab Times and Frontier News. | Rawalpindi ... | J. R. Thapur ... | 200 „ |
| | WEEKLY. | | | |
| 5 | Arya Patrika ... | Lahore ... | Devi Chand ... | 650 copies. |
| 6 | Harbinger ... | Do. ... | Durga Parshad ... | 300 „ |
| 7 | Khalsa Advocate ... | Amritsar ... | Bahadur Singh ... | 752 „ |
| | FORTNIGHTLY. | | | |
| 8 | Jijnasu ... | Lahore ... | Ishar Das ... | ... |
| | MONTHLY. | | | |
| 9 | D. A.-V. College Magazine ... | Lahore ... | Saraswati Nath ... | 1,000 copies. |
| 10 | Forman Christian College Notes.* | Do. ... | ... | ... |
| 11 | Practical Medicine* ... | Delhi ... | ... | ... |
| 12 | Punjab Educational Journal | Lahore ... | R. B. Mohan Lal ... | 700 copies. |
| 13 | Punjab Mission News ... | Do. ... | Revd. Wigram ... | 250 „ |
| 14 | Ravi ... | Do. ... | Mr. B. M. Jones ... | ... |
| 15 | Review of Religions* ... | Kadian (Gurdaspur) ... | Sadr Anjuman Ahmadia, Qadian. | 800 copies. |
| 16 | Science Grounded Religion... | Lahore ... | Dev Rattan ... | 25 „ |
| 17 | Teacher ... | Dinga (Gujrat) ... | Kanhaya Singh ... | 200 „ |
| | URDU. | | | |
| | DAILY. | | | |
| 18 | Akhbar-i-'Am ... | Lahore ... | Govind Sahai ... | 630 copies. |
| 19 | Paisa Akhbar ... | Do. ... | Abdul Aziz ... | 1,011 „ |
| 20 | Watan ... | Do. ... | Muhammad Insha Alla ... | ... |
| 21 | Zamindar ... | Do. ... | Zafar Ali Khan, B.A. ... | ... |
| | BI-WEEKLY. | | | |
| 22 | Vakil ... | Amritsar ... | Abdul Aziz ... | 1,970 copies. |
| | WEEKLY. | | | |
| 23 | Afghan ... | Peshawar ... | Saiyid Muhammad Abdulla | 500 copies. |
| 24 | Ahl-i-Hadis ... | Amritsar ... | Sana-ulla ... | 925 „ |
| 25 | Ahluwalia Gazette ... | Do. ... | Lehna Singh ... | 500 „ |
| 26 | Al-Moin ... | Do. ... | Mehraj-ud-din ... | ... |
| 27 | Army News ... | Ludhiana ... | Hira Lal & Co. ... | 1,300 copies. |
| 28 | Arorbans Gazette ... | Amritsar ... | Labh Singh ... | ... |
| 29 | Arya Gazette ... | Lahore ... | Bhowani Das ... | 550 copies. |
| 30 | Badar ... | Qadian, Gurdaspur District | Muhammad Sadiq ... | 200 „ |

* Not received during the month.

LIST OF NEWSPAPERS AND PERIODICALS EXAMINED BY THE SPECIAL BRANCH AS IT STOOD ON THE 8TH JUNE 1912—CONTINUED.

| No. | Name. | Locality. | Name of Publisher. | Circulation. |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| | URDU—CONTINUED. | | | |
| | WEEKLY—continued. | | | |
| 31 | Bharat ... | Jullundur ... | Thakur Sheoratan Singh ... | ... |
| 32 | Chaudhwin Sadi ... | Rawalpindi ... | Haji Ahmad ... | ... |
| 33 | Civil and Military News ... | Ludhiana ... | Saiyid Muhammad ... | 1,325 copies. |
| 34 | Curzon Gazette ... | Delhi ... | Mirza Hairat ... | 111 „ |
| 35 | Delhi Gazette* ... | Do. ... | Sajjad Husain ... | 200 „ |
| 36 | Hakim ... | Qadian, Gurdaspur District | Yakub Ali ... | 900 „ |
| 37 | Haq ... | Delhi ... | Kasim Ali ... | 200 „ |
| 38 | Haq Pasand ... | Amritsar ... | Ram Nath ... | 382 „ |
| 39 | Hindu ... | Lahore ... | Hari Lal Sharma ... | ... |
| 40 | Hindustan ... | Do. ... | Ram Saran Dutt ... | 8,070 copies. |
| 41 | Indar ... | Do. ... | Dharm Pal, B.A. ... | ... |
| 42 | Islam ... | Do. ... | Abdul Latif ... | 200 copies. |
| 43 | Jhang Sial ... | Jhang ... | Prabh Dyal ... | 2,262 „ |
| 44 | Kapurthala Akhbar ... | Kapurthala ... | Hamid Husain ... | 155 „ |
| 45 | Loyal Gazette ... | Lahore ... | Amar Singh ... | 200 „ |
| 46 | Lytton Gazette ... | Delhi ... | Bulaki Das ... | 1,000 „ |
| 47 | Milap* ... | Lyallpur ... | Jawahar Lal ... | ... |
| 48 | Millat ... | Lahore ... | Shuja Ulla ... | 1,500 copies. |
| 49 | Mister Gazette ... | Do. ... | Ali Bakhsh ... | 150 „ |
| 50 | Munir ... | Jhang ... | Hafiz Khuda Bakhsh ... | 200 „ |
| 51 | Musalman ... | Amritsar ... | Sana-ulla ... | 400 „ |
| 52 | Nur ... | Qadian, Gurdaspur District | Muhammad Yusaf ... | 200 „ |
| 53 | Nur Afshan ... | Ludhiana ... | Revd. Dr. E. M. Wherry ... | 500 „ |
| 54 | Paisa Akhbar ... | Lahore ... | Abdul Aziz ... | 8,377 „ |
| 55 | Parkash ... | Do. ... | Krishan ... | 1,723 „ |
| 56 | Punjab Advocate ... | Mianwali ... | Karm Chand, Bahl ... | 1,000 „ |
| 57 | Punjab Samachar ... | Lahore ... | Hira Lal ... | 705 „ |
| 58 | Rajput Gazette ... | Do. ... | Thakur Sukhram Das ... | 650 „ |
| 59 | Municipal Gazette and Sada-i-Hind. | Do. ... | Din Muhammad ... | 500 „ |
| 60 | Sadiq-ul-Akhbar ... | Bahawalpur ... | Maulvi Ata Ullah ... | 392 „ |
| 61 | Ditto ... | Rewari ... | Safdar Hussain ... | 200 „ |
| 62 | Sanatan Dharm Pracharak ... | Amritsar ... | Rulia Ram ... | 200 „ |
| 63 | Shanti ... | Rawalpindi ... | Kishan Chand Mohan ... | 300 „ |
| 64 | Sialkot Paper ... | Sialkot ... | Todar Mal ... | 500 „ |
| 65 | Siraj-ul-Akhbar ... | Jhelum ... | Maulvi Fakir Muhammad | 450 „ |
| 66 | Tahzib-ul-Niswan ... | Lahore ... | Mumtaz Ali ... | 240 „ |
| 67 | Victoria Paper ... | Sialkot ... | Gian Chand ... | 600 „ |

*Not received during the week.

LIST OF NEWSPAPERS AND PERIODICALS EXAMINED BY THE SPECIAL BRANCH AS IT STOOD ON THE 8TH JUNE 1912—CONCLUDED.

| No. | Name. | Locality. | Name of Publisher. | Circulation. |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| | URDU—CONCLUDED. | | | |
| | WEEKLY—concluded. | | | |
| 68 | Waqt ... | Lahore ... | Ali Husain ... | 200 copies. |
| 69 | Watan ... | Do. ... | Muhammad Insha Ullah ... | 1,800 „ |
| 70 | Zamindar ... | Do. ... | Zafar Ali Khan, B.A. ... | 750 „ |
| | FORTNIGHTLY. | | | |
| 71 | Biwah Samachar ... | Lahore ... | Ram Chand ... | 300 copies. |
| 72 | Kam Dhenu ... | Ludhiana ... | Daulat Ram ... | 100 „ |
| 73 | Mohyal Gazette ... | Kala, Jhelum District ... | Mehta Sham Das ... | 250 „ |
| | MONTHLY. | | | |
| 74 | Arorbans Parkash* ... | Lahore ... | Salig Ram ... | 200 copies. |
| 75 | Arya Musafir ... | Jullundur ... | Wazir Chand ... | 1,300 „ |
| 76 | Jauhar ... | Amritsar ... | Muhammad Ismail Khan ... | 200 „ |
| 77 | Kakezai Social Reformer ... | Lahore ... | Fazl Din ... | 200 „ |
| 78 | Makhzan ... | Delhi ... | Abdul Kadir ... | 4,000 „ |
| 79 | Rafiq ... | Lahore ... | Charinji Lal ... | 500 „ |
| 80 | Sadhu ... | Do. ... | Sheobart Lal ... | 500 „ |
| 81 | Martand ... | Do. ... | Kanhya Lal ... | 250 „ |
| 82 | Raghbir Patrika ... | Do. ... | Prab Dial ... | 500 „ |
| 83 | Zaban* ... | Delhi ... | Hamid Husain ... | 500 „ |
| | GURMUKHI. | | | |
| | WEEKLY. | | | |
| 84 | Khalsa Sewak ... | Amritsar ... | Jiwan Singh ... | 1,000 copies. |
| 85 | Punjab Reporter* ... | Do. ... | Ganda Singh ... | ... |
| 86 | Punjabi Surma ... | Lahore ... | Gian Chand ... | 1,000 copies. |

* Not received during the week.

I.—Politics.

(a)—Foreign.

Trans-Persian Railway.

1. The Civil and Military News (Ludhiana), of the 27th May 1912, has an article headed "Indo-Persian Railway." Writing about the Trans-Persian Railway project, the paper remarks that the construction of the proposed line will necessitate a revision of the Anglo-Russian convention. It is also of opinion that the Railway will immensely add to the trade between England and India.

The South African Immigration Bill.

2. The following is from the Panjabee (Lahore), of the 4th June 1912:—

"Indians are very much interested in the question of their rights as British subjects at Home and in the Colonies. In the latter they are practically treated as undesirable aliens and are classed among non-British Asiatics. The colour prejudice and economic jealousy count for much. The struggle at present is most keen in South Africa. The grievances of Sikh settlers in British Canada are well-known and the most recent form of these is the expulsion of two Sikh ladies, the wives of some settlers there. An appeal has been presented and we have yet to know whether justice will be done to the Indian subjects of His Majesty. In South Africa Reuter's message says that the second reading of the new Immigration Bill was read by Mr. Smutts on Thursday and he stated that the suggestions of the Colonial Office were adopted in it. He also observed that the Government of India supported the introduction of the Australian education test to immigrants. But Mr. Smutts took care to add that under this test it was possible to 'encourage whites and exclude Asiatics.' This Australian test is the most severe one and any intending immigrant will be asked to write a few sentences to dictation in any one of the European languages. Although this test seems to be a reasonable one, yet we know that the Immigration Officer can make the test so severe that even Matriculates can be rejected. We hope that Mr. Smutts will see that South Africa will not really exclude the fairly literate Asiatics and the test is no more severe than an average English or other European immigrant can pass. Otherwise the Indians will have their grievances. The Imperial and Indian Governments are stated to have seen the Bill and been anxious to see it passed. We must, however, reserve our remarks till we see the full text of the Bill, but we may say that so long as exclusion is the end kept in view but not fair treatment to Indian subjects of the British Empire, so long will petty makeshifts fail to give satisfaction."

Muhammadan wives in South Africa.

3. The following is from the Panjabee (Lahore), of the 1st June 1912:—

"The Magistrate of Johannesburg in South Africa lately prohibited the admission of the second wife of a Muhammadan Indian emigrant.

* * * * * * *

"The decision is doubtless just though it goes against the poor Muhammadan and the best thing is to get admission for her by passing an education test. We learn that the Government are not going to recognise polygamous marriages, and we are afraid it is unfair to ask for it. The Indians who go out of India have to leave behind some of their primitive habits and customs which are not recognised by others."

(b)—Home.

Provincial autonomy in India.

4. The Rajput Gazette (Lahore), of the 18th May (received on the 1st June) 1912, publishes a leader headed "Provincial autonomy in India." Writing on the above subject, the paper observes that Government will have to confer self-government on every part of India sooner and later. Next it refers to the grant of autonomy to South Africa, as also to the Irish Home Rule Bill, and goes on to ask whether it is possible to give self-government to other British possessions while withholding it from this country. The adoption of the contrary course would lead to consequences injurious for both the British Government and its Indian dependency. The paper would, therefore, appeal to Government to lose no time in conferring provincial autonomy on India.

Muslim politi .

5. The Chaudhwin Sadi (Rawalpindi), of the 23rd May (received on the 4th June) 1912, publishes a communication headed "The British Government and Muslim newspapers." The leaders of the Muslim community, says the writer, continue to follow the late Sir Sayad Ahmed Khan's policy towards Government. Some members of the Islamic press, however, have begun to favour public agitation, this being the case with the Zamindar in particular. Their moderate Muslim contemporaries in the Punjab are generally opposed to this policy, while the Chaudhwin Sadi seems to have reappeared with the special object of condemning the same. Next the writer finds fault with Maulvi Zafar Ali for favouring public agitation and trying to hurl down the present leaders of Muhammadans from their pedestal. If the Maulvi, he adds, wishes to place the Zamindar on this pedestal instead "rest assured that the (Muslim) community will in a few days be required to furnish security." Continuing he says that Zafar Ali's writings are so pungent that young students read the same with great relish. The present Editor of the Zamindar is a great satirist, while in the matter of language his paper is undoubtedly superior to all its Punjab contemporaries. This is why the Zamindar has become popular, but the question is how does it affect the interests of the Muhammadan community. The following two points deserve consideration in this connection :—

(1) That when abuse is poured on European nations in general a share of it naturally falls to the lot of Great Britain also, while an undesirable ferment is caused in the minds of the masses, especially young students. Government does not prevent Muhammadans from extending legitimate sympathy to the Turks and Arabs, but political considerations can never allow it to tolerate the indiscriminate heaping of obscene abuse on all European nations.

(2) That writings of the above description exercise an undesirable effect on the morals of common Muhammadans, especially school boys.

In conclusion, the writer observes that, in view of the special political condition of Musalmans, public agitation is calculated to prove extremely injurious for them. He also expresses the opinion that the Muslim press should be moderate in tone, and should avoid abusive writings.

Muslim politics.

6. The Chaudhwin Sadi (Rawalpindi), of the 23rd May (received on the 4th June) 1912, has a letter headed "What should be the policy of Muhammadans in regard to political matters at the present time?" The writer—Nazir Ahmad (Alig)—refers to the article which appeared in the Zamindar, dated the 8th April last, under the heading "Liberal party," inviting special attention to the remarks about the want of moral courage in the leaders of the Muhammadan conservative party (vide paragraph 9 of Selections No. 16). Commenting on these observations he says that the truth, which has not been told by the paper named, is that so far there is very little character among Musalmans as a community; that they cannot boast of wealth, power or public opinion, which play a most important part in political matters; and that there is no strong party to appreciate those who may render political services to them in a spirit of courage and moderation. He is, however, of opinion that time, which is the best of teachers, has been gradually impressing on the Prophet's followers that they should know their leaders and that they should, after understanding Government's policy and bearing in mind the loyalty they owe it, carry on agitation in a constitutional manner and lay their claims and wishes before Government in a courageous but temperate way. Next he takes exception to the Zamindar's assertion that the Muslim League voices the sentiments of conservative Muhammadans, and goes on to remark that the imaginary things said in the article under reference are likely to deal a severe blow to Muhammadan public opinion. In conclusion, he asks Zafar Ali to publish, at an early date, the names of the members of the Muslim liberal party, as also the scheme of politics drawn up by them, so that the (Muhammadan) community may be able to come to a decision and place itself in the right path.

III.—Native States.

The Viceroy's visit to Kashmir.

7. The following is from the Panjabee (Lahore), of the 4th June 1912 :—

"If His Excellency the Viceroy has abandoned the idea of a visit to Burma in the ensuing Autumn, His Excellency's visit to Kashmir may be taken as a settled fact. Both His Highness the Maharaja Sahib and Mr. Stuart Fraser, the British Resident, are keen about the visit. Of course, next to Kashmir, Rajputana will engage His Excellency's attention. Its historic importance richly deserves the precedence proposed to be given to it over other and larger States in the South."

IV.—Kine-killing.

Hindus and cow-killing.

8. The Paisa Akhbar (Lahore), of the 24th May 1912, has a letter headed "Who is the aggressor in regard to the cow-killing question?" The writer Khadim Hussain, Khadim, of Bhera—says that a fair-minded Hindu of Meerut recently contributed an article to the Vakil to prove that Hindus formed the aggressive party (vide paragraph 19 of Selections No. 19). It is to be wished, he adds, that the writing had been thankfully reproduced by every other Muhammadan paper and that it had also been separately printed by Musalmans in every part of the country in all well known vernaculars. This would have brought about a reduction in the number of disturbances which are caused—and that solely through misapprehension—every year on the occasion of the Bakr 'Id. Proceeding, the writer remarks that the generality of Hindus, who are ignorant of the usages of their forefathers as also of the teachings of the Vedas, the Hindu Law, &c, cannot assuredly be blamed for the Hindu community's aggressive attitude in regard to cow-killing. He can, however, discover no excuse in the case of those educated Hindus who know full well that, for thousands of years before the advent of Muhammadans in India, the killing and sacrificing of cows was far more prevalent in this country than among the followers of the Prophet. Next he quotes extracts from the Ramayan and Rajindar Lal Mitra's Indo-Aryan, and observes that the same show that the use of the flesh of cows was general in ancient India (among all) from the lowly to the (religious) leaders of Hindus. He adds that, while Hinduism favours sacrifices and (the consumption of) beef even more than Islam, Muhammadans kill cows only on the Bakr 'Id day in obedience to a religious ordinance; some poor members of the community doing so on the occasion (even) of marriages. Nevertheless, Hindus raise an outcry over this, tell their ignorant co-religionists that the practice goes against the (Hindu) religion, observe hartals in order to "obtain justice from the British authorities," cause memorials to be submitted (to Government) and get poor Muhammadans arrested, fined and imprisoned. "Now say" the writer asks in conclusion, "which community can be held guilty of aggression?"

The Muslim Press and cow-killing.

9. The Hindu (Lahore), of the 23rd May (received on the 4th June) 1912, has a note headed "How long will Government refrain from attending to (this)"? After referring to the feelings of reverence with which Hindus regard the cow, the paper says that there can be nothing more offensive to Hindus or more insulting to them as a community than to openly discuss the cow-killing question, nay, to endeavour to prove that the ancestors of Hindus used to sacrifice kine and eat beef. "Take up the file of any Muhammadan paper (and you will see that) it makes it a point of supporting the killing of cows and of preferring against Hindus the offensive and false charge that cow-killing is lawful for them" Hindus are a patient people, but patience (in them) is not such an offence as to require Muhammadans (lit. others) to be given such a long rope that they can openly insult the feelings and beliefs of the former and inflict wound after wound on their hearts. If religious freedom means that Government should not interfere, howsoever deeply a scurrilous community may wound the susceptibilities of a patient people, then Hindus would be justified in begging to be spared such a liberty. In the other event, it behoves the responsible authorities to muzzle papers which are given to discussing the cow-killing question.

Cow-killing in India.

10. The Parkash (Lahore), of the 28th May 1912, publishes a letter headed "If the boat sinks you will all get drowned: a cry from a woman." The writer—Sada Kaur, daughter of Sardar Mahan Singh, of Rasulpur, Bahraich, district (Oudh), states that she has dedicated the rest of her life to affording protection to kine. Next she refers to the great rise which has of late taken place in the price of cows and oxen, as also to the dearth of milk and ghi in the country. She ascribes both these events to cow-killing, saying that between forty and sixty thousand cows and oxen are alleged to be daily killed in India, and that, if the existing state of affairs continues, the (Indian) world will be annihilated within the next 50 years. Continuing, she states how cow-killing injuriously affects the country in different ways, one of which is that, owing to the dearth of oxen, sufficiently large areas of land cannot be cultivated and the people have consequently to starve and suffer from frequent famines. She then goes on to say that, if the killing of cows and oxen were discontinued, much more grain would be raised in India than is now possible, which would benefit both this country and foreign lands. After remarking that this would also add to the revenues of Government, she urges all classes of Indians to protect the cow, saying that they are all in the same boat.

V.—Native Societies and Religious Matters.

The forthcoming Hindu Conference.

11. The Shanti (Rawalpindi), of the 18th (received on the 30th) May 1912, has an article headed "The wretched condition of Hindu leaders in the Punjab: The Light of Pandit Rambhaj Dat's presidency." A nation, it says, the members of which are (ever) ready to crush its well-wishers and defame their devoted servants, can never achieve progress and disgraces itself in the eyes of the civilised world. Continuing, the paper remarks that Hindus have fallen so low that those (among them) whose claims to be well-wishers of their country and community are purely imaginary are engaged in creating suspicion against the devoted servants of the land and the followers of Hinduism. Every Hindu, it adds, who is gifted with brains and has the least love for his co-religionists, will declare without a moment's hesitation that Lalas Lajpat Rai, Hansraj and Shadi Lal are the ornaments of the community. Next it asks Hindus to value their aforesaid true lovers and to enshrine them in their hearts. The Shanti then goes on to complain that the Hindustan, in panegyrising its proprietor Pandit Rambhaj Dat, has been throwing mud at the servants of the Hindu community. It has a shrewd suspicion that the question of the presidency (of the Hindu Conference) is a mere pretext with that paper for bringing the well-wishers of Hindus into bad odour. Proceeding, it refers to the Hindustan's unbecoming conduct in having suggested that the Pandit, i.e., its proprietor, should occupy the presidential chair at the Conference. It also questions his fitness for the task and asks its contemporaries to close the controversy.

The paper also publishes a communication from "a Hindu student of 'the College'," who regards the controversy as unpleasant. He feels a little gratified also at it, for the reason that it is essential for the continued existence of the Hindu Sabha that, now when Lala Lal Chand is dead, the question of the guidance of the Sabha should be properly decided. He has no doubt that (the character of) the future of the body named depends, to a large extent, on (the occupant of) the presidential chair (at the Hindu Conference) this year. Next he regrets that Pandit Rambhaj Dat should be abused (merely) because he is the proprietor of the Hindustan, and that that paper should be spoken ill of for being in the (Editorial) charge of a Muhammadan. He cannot but admit that the said Muslim journalist has wounded the feelings not only of Lala Lajpat Rai, but also of Panjabi Hindus, nay, of all true Indians, by preferring unfounded charges against the Lala. The writer also deprecates Munshi Munawwar Khan's conduct in having made unfair attacks on Mr. Shadi Lal, and goes on to contend that Lala Lajpat Rai is no longer regarded with suspicion by the authorities. Continuing, he asserts that the Lala is the most intrepid patriot in India, and that if the Hindu Sabha were to secure a warm supporter in him the Hindu community should feel highly gratified. This would (undoubtedly) lead some Extra Assistant Commissioners and Rai Sahibs to sever their connection with the Sabha, "but we stand in no great need of such men." Lala Lajpat Rai is highly valued wherever he may go, and if he were to join the Hindu Sabha new life would be breathed into that society. Again, all (? Hindu) sects (in the Punjab) regard him with the same eye, while he is the most popular man with the educated community. After stating that he has also rendered many services to his country and community, the writer institutes a comparison between Pandit Rambhaj Dat and Rai Bahadur Shadi Lal, awarding the palm to the latter gentleman.

Writing on the same subject the Hindustan (Lahore), of the 24th May 1912, says that it did not attack any Hindu leader in the article in which it first suggested Pandit Rambhaj Dat's name for the honour. Such attacks were made by it only after the Hindu opposed its suggestion—and that also in a most unpleasant way—and instituted a mischievous comparison (between the Pandit and some other Hindu leaders). After remarking that that paper even preferred some false charges against him, it states that one of the accusations is that Pandit Rambhaj Dat bought the Hindustan paper and press from sordid motives. Continuing, it says, that in 1907 a Muhammadan rais of Karnal published a book called the Shorash-i-Hind (the Indian unrest), in which he contended that the real authors of the unrest (which then prevailed in the Punjab) were the Pandit and his Bengali wife. Again, the police had been submitting report after report to say that the actual founder and leader of the "Bharat Mata," i.e., the Ajit Singh party, was Rambhaj Dat, and that it was also he who had been supplying it with money and "food." It was in those days of suspicion, when (even) most fearless people and some political workers, among whom were certain legal practitioners, did not go to Pandit Rambhaj Dat's house through fear of endangering their izzat and lives, that the Pandit bought the Hindustan in spite of his having been aware that the paper's publication was likely to be stopped from the next week. He was also told by his friends and relations that his purchase of the Hindustan would involve him in manifold troubles, and that Government would assuredly deport him or at least institute a political case against him ; while some were of opinion that both the paper and the press were certain to be confiscated by Government. After remarking that the press was actually confiscated a few days later, the Editor reproduces some passages in a letter which Pandit Rambhaj Dat contributed to the Hindustan, dated the 26th July 1907, to explain his reasons for having bought the paper (vide paragraph 26 of Selections No. 29 of 1907). The extracts, it adds, should show with what true loyalty but provoking fearlessness he cleared his own position and that of his paper, nay, of the entire Hindu community, to Government. Next it eontends that the idea of the establishment of the Hindu Sabha originated with him, and regrets that such a far-sighted and intrepid servant of his community should be subjected to insults. Proceeding, it reports that shortly after he had bought the Hindustan, i.e., in the beginning of August 1907, Pandit Rambhaj Dat went to appear in a case pending in the Chief Court. He was at once assailed by all his friends (in the bar room), who took exception to his conduct in having bought the paper and its press without the Chief Court's permission, saying that he could be deprived of his pleader's license. Upon this he saw the Chief Judge, Sir William Clarke, and stated everything to the latter, who was very angry in consequence. The Pandit is in the habit of saying that "this was the only occasion (in his life) on which he felt a space of four or five seconds to be extremely intolerable," for the reason that Sir William had helped him out of a serious difficulty only a few days previously "and when the entire police, &c., and several officers had been exerting themselves to have him prosecuted." The Chief Judge enquired from him in a most angry tone why he had bought the Hindustan, and he stated in plain language (in reply) that the Hindustan was the most important Hindu organ ; that several misunderstandings had been caused about the Hindu community ; that it, therefore, stood in some need of the paper ; that the journal could not be run by the younger brother of Dina Nath ; and that if it had not been bought by him (the Pandit) it would have ceased to exist in a week or two, which he could not bear to see. It would fill a large volume to state what Pandit Rambhaj Dat had to suffer after this, and at whose hands, while this would necessitate the revelation of numberless secrets, which he is on no account prepared to divulge. Again, hundreds of Patwaris, Lambardars, Zaildars and other Government servants discontinued subscribing to the Hindustan through fear (? of Government); while the Pandit was defrauded by several employés of the paper and the press, and for over a year suffered a loss of about Rs. 400 a month. He had also to bear a loss of Rs. 10,000 in a land transaction in consequence of the purchase by him of the Hindustan newspaper. A piece of land near the Chief Court bought by him was wanted by the Municipality, but he saw the Municipal Secretary, Mr. Tapp, and it was decided by the latter and the Deputy Commissioner, Mr. Mant, that he should be given a certain plot outside the Shahalmi Gate in exchange on payment of Rs. 1,750. In the meanwhile, however, he bought the Hindustan, which set "all the officers and people" against him and led to reports being submitted. The result was that his land was acquired under the Land Acquisition Act in his absence in England, only Rs. 2,300 having been paid for it, although it was valued by him at Rs. 8,000. He tried, on his return to Lahore, to have the case re-opened, but he was told that the question of exchange had been shelved on the day on which he (re) appointed Dina Nath, Editor of the Hindustan. He had thus to suffer a loss of Rs. 10,000 (?), but this was as nothing compared with the heart-shaking and dispiriting rumour, which used to gain currency every third or fourth day, that Government had sanctioned his prosecution and that of his wife. All this should show that there is absolutely no truth in the charge preferred by the Hindu against him.

The Hindu (Lahore), of the 23rd May (received on the 4th June) 1912, publishes an open letter to Pandit Rambhaj Dat. The writer—Diwan Chand Sharma, lately Manager of the Rishi Kumar Ashram, Lahore—ironically remarks that he had been greatly discouraged by the letter in the Hindustan in which the Pandit says that he did not desire the presidency of the Conference. It is undoubtedly true, he adds, that, with the exception of the Hindustan, the entire Hindu Press, as also the Hindu public, is opposed to the suggestion that Rambhaj Dat should preside at the Conference. Nevertheless, the Pandit's conduct means gross disgrace not only for himself, but also for "us, his well-wishers" as well as for the Hindustan and its present Editor. Indeed, some people have already begun to speak of sour grapes; although the writer cannot guarantee that even if Pandit Rambhaj Dat is elected President "you, I and Saghar" will cease to be (adversely) criticised by the world. Even if one should attain success, people are wont to refer to the (Panjabi) adage about thieves and pilferers being headmen and a whore acting as president. Continuing his satirical remarks, the writer observes that no one can object to the methods which the Pandit is employing to secure the presidential chair (at the coming Hindu Conference), but that some busy bodies are of opinion that he is looking too high. Next the correspondent admires his moral courage in having admitted to "a graduate journalist" that he supplies the material for the articles published in the Hindustan in his favour. Proceeding, he observes that Rambhaj Dat may or may not have been successful in rebutting the charges levelled against him by Jaswant Rai, but that he has laid far more serious accusations at the door of his critic. People argue that it is no defence for a thief to accuse another person of theft, but their logic does not commend itself to the writer.

12. The Jhang Sial (Lahore), of the 30th May 1912, has a paragraph headed "New piece of mischief by the Afghan." It was the Afghan, it complains, which called Hindus Dhoti Parshads and charged them with taking their women to the authorities. That paper is a personification of mischief-making, and works mischief in each and every issue. The Government of India has rejected the memorial which the Hindus of Dera Ismail Khan recently submitted praying for the re-amalgamation of the Frontier Province with the Punjab. The event has furnished the Afghan with another opportunity of heaping abuse on the followers of Hinduism. It has announced the news in a special supplement printed in golden letters, in which Hindus have been called bad names—seditious, mischievous, &c. The incident shows that it can write at Peshawar whatever it likes, and that there is no one there to interfere with it. Will not the Government of India take notice of the mischievous doings of the Afghan ?

The Afghan and Hindus.

A national song of Muhammadans.

13. The Zamindar (Lahore), of the 28th May 1912, publishes a "*Tazmin on Iqbal's song" from the pen of Sahibzada Muhammad Mustafa Ali Khan, Sharrar, Home Secretary to His Highness the Nawab of Rampur. The writer adds three lines to each couplet in the above song on the past greatnees of Islam (vide paragraph 33 of Selections No. 14 of 1911) to emphasise the sentiments contained therein. The last couplet, which refers to the awakening of Muhammadans, has been thus amplified :—

"The star of Islam will again be in the ascendant,

"You will see, in a couple of days, if God (so) wills.

"Bear this in mind, these are Sharrar's words :

"The song of Iqbal is as the sound of a bell,

"Our caravan again starts on the road."

The Arya Samaj.

14. The Arjun (Lahore), of the 21st May (received on the 4th June) 1912, has an article from Dharmpal headed "Is the existing Arya Samaj a religious movement still" ? The writer replies to the question in the negative and asserts that the Samaj is being converted into an anti-Muslim (and) anti-Christian (body), nay, into a Hindu National Congress, although a thin veneer of religion still seems to cover it. That this is so, he adds, should be evident from the fact that, when he laid stress on all Aryas signing a pledge to participate in no political movement but to always remain loyal to Government, they not only did not act upon his suggestion, but also struck off his name from the rolls of the Arya Samaj. The more intelligent persons among them say, although not in writing, that their conduct in signing the pledge would be tantamount to a declaration that they were previously disloyal to their Government. The argument is, however, absurd and renders their intentions (in regard to Government) still more suspicious : if their consciences had really been clear they would not have hesitated to affix their signatures to the pledge-sheet. "The signing of this pledge does not mean that we wish to please Government : it signifies that we wish to prevent the Arya Samaj from going into the path the end of which is always ruin, destruction, bloodshed and strife, for the reason that the final results of all political moments which have been launched into the world in the name of religion have invariably proved injurious to mankind." Next Dharmpal quotes an extract from a letter recently addressed by him to the Superintendent, Census Department, Punjab, on the subject of the Arya Samaj recently established by him at Lahore. The quotation is to the effect that, unlike the "Anarkali" and "Wachhowali" Arya Samajes, his Samaj requires all its members to sign the above pledge, does not look upon non-Hindus as unclean people, and also differs from the other two Samajes in the matter of beliefs.

Excise Revenue and Temperance.

15. The following is from the Panjabee (Lahore), of the 6th June 1912 :—

* * * * * * *

"One remarkable feature in the campaign against intemperance is the unanimous support of the Indian opinion. In connection with the Imperial Temperance Conference some valuable information was supplied disclosing three broad facts, viz., (1) that in pre-British days the habit of drinking intoxicating liquors was confined to small sections of the population ; (2) that intemperance is a vice of modern growth, which is yearly affecting an increasing number of inhabitants ; and (3) that whereas under the old 'regime' the sale of drink was irregular and unrecognised, it is to-day one of the most lucrative revenue-collecting agencies of the State. This is a matter which the department must always keep

---

* Inserting or introducing a verse or two of another poet into one's own poem to complete or corroborate the meaning intended.

in mind when it is tempted to lay the blame on the ignorant people. Moreover, the religious prejudices against the use of alcohol are not so strong now as they were before. Respectable people and those belonging to the higher castes drink secretly and when discovered, will endeavour to conceal their vices. No respectable Indian can openly drink in ever so small quantities and yet claim to be respected by his neighbours. Nevertheless drinking in secret has become a matter so formidable that religious and social restraints have been powerless to reform the men.

"That the excise revenue in the whole of India continues to rise in spite of the measures taken to raise the price and close the worthless shops, is patent to all who have watched the course of excise policy in the Provinces. The figures for the current quinquennium are as follows (gross revenue):—

| | |
|---|---|
| 1908-09 ... ... ... ... | £6,589,627 |
| 1909-10 ... ... ... ... | £6,537,853 |
| 1910-11 ... ... ... ... | £7,030,314 |
| 1911-12 (revised) ... ... ... | £7,502,666 |
| 1912-13 (budget) ... ... ... | £7,762,000 |

"For a comparative view of the growth of the liquor revenue from 1900 to 1912 we may present the following figures:—

| | |
|---|---|
| Bengal ... ... ... ... | 24 per cent. |
| United Provinces ... ... ... | 51 „ „ |
| Punjab ... ... ... ... | 120 „ „ |
| Central Provinces ... ... ... | 80 „ „ |
| Eastern Bengal and Assam ... ... | 44 „ „ |
| Madras ... ... ... ... | 120 „ „ |
| Bombay ... ... ... ... | 90 „ „ |

* * * * *

"The position that the Punjab has taken in this fierce competition for revenue, ranking with Madras which has nearly double our population, is an inexcusable blunder. We do not know what justification is there for this enormous increase of 120 per cent. in a province which is considered to be the most virile. Moreover, this is the only province where there is a majority of the Moslem population, and the Islamic texts severely condemn drinking as the Hindu scriptures. It is a question worth considering whether drastic measures should not be taken to arrest the spread of drinking in this province."

A complaint.

16. The Khalsa Sewak (Amritsar), of the 8th May (received on the 4th June) 1912, says that some worshippers of Rama have placed a gold image of his deity in the parkarman (a way round a temple) of the Baba Attal Gurdwara at Amritsar. Hindus, it adds, have begun to make the same moves in regard to Sikh gurdwaras as they did in order to obtain possession of Buddhist and Jain temples. If Mahants and Pujaris of these gurdwaras do not attend to the evil they will have to rue their conduct at no distant date.

VI.—Legislation.

Lord Crewe and Indian Press Law.

17. The following is from the Panjabee (Lahore), of the 1st June 1912:—

"The recent statement made by Lord Crewe that the scope and purposes of the Indian Press Acts are not confined to the suppression of sedition and treasonable conspiracy has roused the attention of the senior members of the Indian Press in Calcutta. The Bengalee takes a serious view of the situation and says that there can be no reason now for the law to remain in force. Nor was there any reason at any time before, but Government considered that at a difficult time such an enactment was necessary, and since those circumstances have changed, there is good reason for asking that the menacing enactment be repealed. We are glad that the Empire also takes the same view and comes with the welcome suggestion that the Indian and Anglo-Indian newspapers should join hands and make a unanimous representation on the subject to the Government and have the Act repealed. For it is impossible to maintain the Indian press in a state of efficiency, independence and as a righteous power in the land with a menacing law which seeks to regulate the 'tone' of criticism by executive mandates. The 'tone' and 'taste' are matters of settlement between the conductors of papers and their patrons and we fail to see why the State should trouble itself about such trivialities—so long as the papers are loyal and offer useful criticisms without degenerating into license. In this connection a distinction is also made between the Anglo-Indian press, the Indo-English press and the Vernacular press. The quality and usefulness of these, no doubt, vary and in no sense can the bulk of the Vernacular papers, which are conducted mostly by untrained and ill-educated persons, be classed with the other two and a general law passed to muzzle all.

* * * * * * *

"But the more important question is the severity of the law and its unknown dangers. And as the Empire says, the Indian and Anglo-Indian papers should join hands in getting it repealed—at any rate, defined in more acceptable manner. Many changes are effected in the administration and policies on the basis of improvement in the times and there is no reason why the Press Act, which was passed during the troublesome period to overcome particular evils, should be retained now."

VII.—General Administration.

(b)—Police.

Compensation for police torture.

18. The following is from the Panjabee (Lahore), of the 6th June 1912 :—

"Our Ferozepore correspondent says that a sum of Rs. 500 has been awarded as compensation to the wife of the deceased in the Zira police torture case. He adds that this is in addition to the fine which, if recovered from the prisoners, will go to the woman. This is the first case of the kind in which the Government have awarded compensation to the victims of its malevolent agents after judicial proof and we must congratulate the authorities on inaugurating this commendable way of showing their sympathy. The Zira torture case, as we all know, is one of the most horrible and deliberate offences of the kind disclosed to the public. The system of compensating the injured is the outcome of recent agitation in the matter and we hope it will be kept up as a means of prevention and caution in matters of this kind."

The Ludhiana Rape Case.

19. The following is from the Panjabee (Lahore), of the 1st June 1912 :—

"We are glad to read that the Bengal Government have preferred an appeal in a recent Railway outrage case in which the magisterial decision was found generally inadequate. The appeal will be heard in the High Court. The facts of the case are that on the Bengal Assam Railway a guard by name Gomez put two women into an intermediate compartment near the brake-van and in the dead of night entered the compartment himself and molested the women. The District Magistrate fined the accused Rs. 75 and made the curious remark that as the woman was hardly pretty she could not have suffered any indignity. We would like to know why the Punjab Government have not yet appealed against the decision in the Ludhiana outrage case and whether they are perfectly satisfied with the decision of the Sessions Judge who acquitted all the accused. This is a case of unparalleled violence to a female and has excited the greatest indignation of the public. It is a case that is fit for an appeal and we think the Punjab Government is not justified in letting the matter drop. We hope that some association or other will bring the matter to the notice of His Honour the Lieutenant-Governor."

(c)—Municipal and Cantonment affairs.

Complaint against the Assistant Cantonment Magistrate, Secundrabad.

20. The Paisa Akhbar (Lahore), of the 21st May 1912, publishes a letter headed "Fine for reciting maulud at Secunderabad." Adverting to the above event (vide paragraph 25 of Selections No. 18) the writer complains that the same not only deals a severe blow to the izzat and propularity of Islam, but also constitutes a breach of law. Continuing, he states that it was not customary to obtain permission for the performance of any religious rite in the mosque concerned, but that the maulud meeting held last year was dispersed by the police at mid-night. The imam was also summoned to appear before Captain Buller, Cantonment Magistrate, who ordered him not to allow the maulud to be recited or a sermon to be preached in the mosque after mid-night without the local authorities (lit. Government) being first informed. Accordingly, an application for permission to hold a maulud gathering was submitted on the 5th March last, and as no prohibitory order was received (in reply) the recitations commenced at the appointed time on the night of the 7th. At 2 A. M., however, Captain Buller, who resides at a very great distance from the mosque, appeared on the scene accompanied by the police and had the meeting dispersed. Two Brigadier-Generals, a military doctor, the Superintendent of Police and some other officers live close to the mosque, but none of them has so far had any complaint to make. It was also utterly illegal that the Captain, "who was himself the objector," should have inflicted fines after summary enquiries.

Commenting on the above the Editor says that all Muhammadan papers have been regretting that such severity should have been practised on the Musalmans of "a British possession in the largest Native State in India" (i.e., Hyderabad) in consequence, merely, of the performance of a religious rite. The Muhammadans concerned, he adds, submitted a formal petition to inform (? the Cantonment Magistrate) of (their intention to hold) the meeting in question, and no prohibitory order was issued on the receipt thereof. Besides, the meeting was not calculated to disturb people or to lead to a breach of the peace ; and it is not, therefore, easy to understand why it was interfered with by the Police. Next the paper deplores the silence of the Hyderabad press in the matter and expresses a hope that Government will make a thorough enquiry into the conduct of the authorities of Secunderabad and will assure the Prophet's followers that, in future, religious rites will be allowed to be freely performed there.

(d)—Education.

The Muslim University.

21. The Vakil (Amritsar), of the 22nd (received on the 30th) May 1912, publishes a note headed "The Muslim University and public opinion." Adverting to the meeting of the Constitution Committee to be held in the first week of June, the paper remarks that the (Muhammadan) community will never approve of a University which does not fully respect their expectations and demands and the management of which is largely in the hand of non-Musalmans. It concedes the necessity and importance of Government supervision (over the University), but says that the followers of Islam can in no case tolerate an institution that is not "national" in the true sense of the term.

Constitution of the Muslim University.

22. The following is from the Observer (Lahore), of the 1st June 1912 :—

"A grave responsibility rests on the shoulders of those who will attend on Sunday and Monday, 2nd and 3rd June, at Lucknow, the meetings which are to finally discuss the constitution of the proposed Muslim University. * * * * It is a matter for extreme regret that the unfortunate illness of Nawab Viqar-ul-Mulk should absolutely prevent him from attending the meetings. He of all our leaders commands the greatest influence among us and that justly. He has always stood out for the correct Muslim view in face of immense odds. No amount of opposition has deterred him from speaking out and his voice has generally been raised on the side of truth and honesty and righteousness.

* * * * * * *

"What has aroused the gravest apprehensions in the minds of the Musalmans is the secrecy which has been observed in connection with the draft Regulations. We shall not impute motives. But one fails to understand why the proposed Regulations have not been published in the same way as was done with the draft of the Statutes. Surely it cannot be claimed, with any show of reason, that while the Muslim public was able to understand the Statutes, it is too obtuse to comprehend the Regulations. Nor can the plea of want of time be considered as at all convincing. In spite of all reports to the contrary, five lakhs are yet to be collected for the University, and unless and until the full sum of 35 lakhs has been realised, the Muslim University Bill cannot be introduced. Again, why have the Regulations been not translated into Urdu, thus grievously handicapping Urdu-knowing Trustees, and others? There is also the complaint, as voiced by the Watan of Lahore, that in some instances copies of the draft Regulations have been sent too late for careful perusal. All these facts have engendered an impression hardly favourable to the promoters of the scheme. The uncharitable innuendo has already been made that the Regulations have not been published broadcast from a fear that they would provoke a storm of public disapproval and that when passed, popular apprehensions may be calmed by the ready assurances of some prominent members of the community.

"That the Regulations are exceedingly faulty Nawab Viqar-ul-Mulk's article on the subject has made abundantly clear. By way of illustration, we may quote the draft Regulation 8 about the Matriculation Examination.

* * * * * * *

"It would appear from the above that, unless the Regulation is amended, candidates for the Matriculation Examination shall have to pass in 7 subjects! But even if the Regulation fixes 5 compulsory subjects, and the other 2 are to be optional and not elective, then it should be remembered that in the Punjab University there are only 4 compulsory subjects for the same test. Again, the Regulation about the Previous (or F. A.) Examination of the Muslim University requires candidates to pass in three compulsory and two elective or 5 subjects, while the Punjab University is content with only 4. Moreover, theology is not included in these 5 subjects. Does it mean that passing an examination in theology will not be compulsory for the F. A. and B. A. crndidates? If it does that, it will be in contravention of the distinct pledge that theology would be a compulsory subject for all the examinations held under the auspices of the Muslim University. And although theology does not figure even as an elective subject for the F. A. or B. A. tests, Mathematics, which is an elective subject for the F. A. Examination of all the Universities of at least Northern India and which presents special difficulties to Muhammadans, it should be noted, is to be a compulsory subject for candidates of the Previous Examination of the Muslim University. This one example will make it abundantly clear how faulty the draft Regulations are. If therefore the Regulations are not materially modified, the Muslim University will be far from proving a blessing to the community.

"Without going into the details of the constitution, we may broadly indicate the lines on which we think change is necessary. And let it be remembered that in emphasising this point, we are not guided by any motives of distrust of the British Government and our rulers in India or of the staff that will be required to work the University. Our national policy is a guarantee that we, as a community, have always placed the most implicit confidence in the Viceroy and other representatives in India of His Imperial Majesty the King Emperor; while we have never hesitated to seek the fullest co-operation of European educational experts in working out our own educational problems. In spite of this, we feel that if the proposed University is to do any good to the Indian Musalmans, its administrative control should be solely in their hands, subject to reasonable safeguards that would make it impossible for the University to needlessly lower its standard or be utilized as an instrument for the propagation of dangerous social and political doctrines. Barring these points, on which we are bound to provide the Viceroy with full powers of veto, there is no earthly reason why matters of internal routine and general administration should not be left solely in Muslim hands and why their representatives should be distrusted. We should therefore ask the gentlemen who will attend the Lucknow meetings to bear the following points in mind and to arrange a workable compromise in such a way as to leave ample powers of interference in the hands of the Viceroy in cases of grave emergency, if the authorities of the University may be ever found imparting unhealthy education through its means, without in any way making it a half-starved weakling, dependent on official favour for all initiative and denied the right to work out the problem of Muslim education on Muslim lines. By way of illustration, we may urge that the Chancellor of the Muslim University should, in no case, have greater powers than those enjoyed by the Chancellors of existing Indian Universities. If the Quran is not to be taught without the previous sanction of the Chancellor, if no Professor is to be appointed without the previous premission of the same authority, if the Chancellor is to be invested with larger powers than veto in these matters, all we can say is that the University had better not be established. Moreover, people have subscribed to the University Fund under the impression that the University will be permitted to recognise schools and affiliate colleges situated outside Aligarh. This pledge should not be departed from under any plea. Again, the Regulations should not make the examinations conducted by the Muslim University much harder than those held by other Indian University. And, last but not least, the staff should not be given so large powers as to be possibly able to override the wishes of the community. The servants should not become the masters, nor the educational experts the arbiters of the educational destiny of the nation. If due regard is paid to the above suggestion in the final framing of the constitution, however long it may take in the framing, the University will meet with universal appreciation; but not otherwise."

(f)—Railways and Communications.

Grievances of the Indian employés of the Oudh and Rohilkhand Railway.

23. The Hindu (Lahore), of the 23rd May (received on the 4th June) 1912, publishes a note headed "Distinction of colour in the Railway service." A sort of unrest, it says, prevails among the Indian employés of the Oudh and Rohilkhand Railway. They have some complaints against the authorities of the said Railway on the score of the latter differentiating (between white and black officials). Should they, however, try to lay these complaints before their official superiors a deaf ear is turned to them, nay, efforts are made to injure them. One of their complaints is that Indians are not appointed as Station Masters of the first four grades. Again, while European (lit. English) guards are paid up Rs. 250 their Indian confréres cannot get more than Rs. 150, their uniform also being of a material inferior to that used in the former's uniform. Nor is this all. Although Inspectors are ordered to be paid not less than Rs. 40, they receive only Rs. 30 or 35.

Appointment of Assistant Traffic Superintendents for State Railways.

24. The following is from the Tribune (Lahore), of the 6th June 1912 :—

"It has been announced that the following gentlemen have been selected by the Railway Board for appointment as Assistant Traffic Superintendents, State Railways :—Mr. J. W. Henderson, Syed Ali Hamid and Sheikh Moiz-ud-Din. This means that one European or Anglo-Indian and two Indians have been appointed and that both the latter are Muhammadans. The appointment of two Muhammadans is quite inexplicable. The Muhammadans do not form more than one sixth of the total population of India and their legitimate share of such appointments ought not to exceed one-sixth even if it is accepted that appointments in the public service have to be apportioned according to the numerical strength of the various sections of the population of India. If, however, the number of qualified men is taken into consideration, Muhammadans cannot claim even one-sixth. * * By totally excluding the Hindus from selection the President and the members of the Railway Board have done an act of gross injustice and put an undeserved slur on the Hindu community. Is it too much to expect that Lord Hardinge will call upon the Railway Board to explain the grounds on which they have made the present selection?"

(h)—Miscellaneous.

His Honour Sir Louis Dane.

25. The Victoria Paper (Sialkot), of the 24th May (received on the 5th June) 1912, publishes a letter headed "Period of Sir Louis Dane's Lieutenant-Governorship." Several great things, it says, have been accomplished in His Honour's time to promote the well-being of the people of the Punjab. His Honour has, from time to time, paid great attention to the industrial and agricultural advancement of this province. His policy consists in devising means to benefit the people committed to his charge, and the Punjabis are very fortunate in having a sympathetic and wide-awake Lieutenant-Governor. Next the paper asks His Honour to attend to the following matters :—

(1) The raising of the Punjab Chief Court to the status of a High Court, which would constitute a lasting memorial of his Lieutenant-Governorship.

(2) The raising of the strength of the Punjab Legislative Council to that of the United Provinces Council. There should, on an average, be one non-official member to every district ; while in nominating members preference should be given to gentlemen who display deep interest in public affairs.

(3) The holding of an annual conference at Lahore of Commissioners and Deputy Commissioners under the Presidency of His Honour the Lieutenant-Governor. This conference should discuss matters affecting the administration of districts and the well-being of the people. The invitation to it of some experienced and leading official and non-official Indian gentlemen would prove of very great help "in obtaining opinions about administrative affairs."

Security from the Vakil Press.

26. The Vakil (Amritsar), of the 22nd (received on the 30th) May 1912, has a note headed "Security has not been demanded from the Vakil." The paper says that the news is going the round of its contemporaries that it has been made to deposit security. As a matter of fact, however, security has been demanded from the Rose Bazar Steam Press, at which it is printed along with several other papers and magazines. It is a different question, adds the paper, whether the demand is legal or unlawful.

27. The Jhang Sial (Lahore), of the 30th May 1912, has an article headed "The Jhang Sial in Lahore." The editor states that people considered it an impossibility for him to remove to Lahore. After remarking that God's grace can remove any obstacles, he says that he did not abandon his idea of shifting to Lahore on the District Magistrate illegally demanding from him a security of Rs. 2,000, the maximum amount prescribed by the Press Act. He then goes on to say that he will continue to follow his old policy of plain speaking: his paper will stick to truth and fight manfully for it. No party in Lahore should, therefore, expect unfair help from him, nor should any leader look for uudeserved praise at his hands. He will be a friend only to those who follow the right path and consider it a duty to honestly serve the public. The Hindustan hinted in a recent issue that he had defended a certain leader in return for a good turn done him by the latter. He wishes, therefore, to openly declare that it was with borrowed money that he deposited the above security and paid off some of his creditors at Jhang. In conclusion, he remarks that he will try to make the Jhang Sial the most interesting paper; and that it is not unlikely that God, Who has brought him to Lahore, may raise his journal to a position which has not as yet been attained by any other member of the (Punjab) press.

The Jhang Sial.

28. The Afghan (Peshawar), of the 26th May 1912, has an article headed "True facts of the Khan of Hoti's case—II." In continuation of its previous remarks on the subject (vide paragraph 23 of Selections No. 22), the paper observes that the sole object of the Hindu press in befriending the Khan consists in injuring the Islamia College proposed to be established at Peshawar. After remarking that there is no truth in the unfounded charges preferred by the said press against Sir George Roos-Keppel in connection with the College, and that the Chief Commissioner takes no hand in the collection of funds for the institution, it reproduces from the Advocate of India an account of the case which was recently instituted against the Khan of Hoti. Commenting on the same it opines that, primâ facie, there was a serious charge against both King and the Khan.

The Khan of Hoti's case.

Writing under the heading "Sir (George) Roos-Keppel," the Millat (Lahore), of the 24th May (received on the 4th June) 1912, complains that a certain section of the Hindu press has used the Khan of Hoti's case to make mean attacks on a just and popular officer like the present Chief Commissioner of the Frontier Province. After contending that Sir George had no hand in the case, the paper says that certain members of Parliament, who know nothing of Indian affairs, are under the thumb of Hindus and that they unburthen themselves (in Parliament) according to instructions. This, it adds, not only encourages the enemies of this country, but also disheartens popular officers, creates difficulties for Government, and throws obstacles in the way of the administration.

The Hindustan (Lahore), of the 24th May (received on the 4th June) 1912, publishes a letter from "A fair-minded Hindu" who finds fault with the Khan of Hoti for having published, after his acquittal, a pamphlet to prove Sir George Roos-Keppel to have been at the bottom of his prosecution. Next he mentions that the passages relating to the Khan in the Manual of Pashtu were taken from old examination papers.

Commenting on the above the Editor remarks that a perusal of the letter should show that the Khan has caused native newspapers to deal very unjustly by Sir George Roos-Keppel. After regretting that most of these papers should be members of the Hindu press, he observes that, whatever hardships the Khan may have had to suffer, the public must be acquainted with the truth that his prosecution was in no way ascribable to Sir George Roos-Keppel and that the name of that officer has been dragged in from purely selfish motives.

29. The Panjabee (Lahore), of June 4th, 1912, has the following comments on the recent Resolution of the Government of India on the appointment of Health Officers :—

Health officers for India.

"Nothing has been mentioned as to the principle which Local Governments should follow in the selection of these officers. It would have been welcome if Government had said that Indian officers should be given preference provided their qualifications are satisfactory.

"As regards the constitution of Sanitary Boards, Local Governments are given entire discretion. Here again there is a want of uniform and sound principle indicated. For instance, we cannot understand why one or two non-officials could not be taken to the Board or a minimum proportion of Indian members named. The important principle has been altogether lost sight of that to improve Indian sanitation, the active co-operation of Indians, with knowledge of Indian life and conditions is absolutely necessary. Sanitary Boards, if they have to be efficient, ought to contain a minimum number of Indian members apart from experts and also a number of non-officials. Of course, Local Governments are given discretion, but in our opinion the principle should have been indicated in the body of the resolution for the guidance of Local Governments.

* * * * * * *

"A salary of Rs. 300-20-500, is considered enough for first class Health Officers and Rs. 150-10-300 for the second class, and we hope these will be reserved for Indians only, because a knowledge of Indian life, habits, religious and social practices and beliefs is necessary in a Health Officer if he has to do any substantial work. But we miss the instruction in the resolution. It is for the Local Governments to give effect to the scheme in a manner satisfactory to lead to real success.

"As regards creating provincial services of Health Officers or leaving the appointments in the hands of Municipalities, the Government of India do not decide the point. It is again a matter for Local Government, but the decision to supplement the cost of these officers by Government grants practically settles the issue more completely than words can. The resolution also suggests the appointment of trained Sanitary Inspectors, but on the whole, it seems that the resolution is not either as thoughtful, as complete, and informing as the importance of the subject demands. For the long time that the Government of India took in chalking out a scheme of reform, we expected they would lay down important principles that should guide the settlement of many detailed plans which are now left to the discretion of Local Governments."

SIMLA :

The 8th June 1912.

C. STEAD,

Assistant to the Deputy Inspector-General of Police, Criminal Investigation Department, Punjab.

Punjab Govt. Branch Press, Simla—13-6-12—No. 19—107—H, L, S.

[ Confidential. ]

[ Vol. XXV. ] [ No. 24. ]

SELECTIONS

FROM THE

NATIVE NEWSPAPERS

PUBLISHED IN THE PUNJAB.

Examined up to 15th June 1912.

---

CONTENTS.

Page.

I.—Politics.

(a) Foreign—

1. Ill-treatment of Indians in Canada (Hindu) ... 467
2. Ill-treatment of Indians in Australia (Hindustan) ib.
3. The Islamic world (Vakil) ... ... ib.
4. Ditto (Zamindar) ... ... ib.
5. Affairs in Tibet (Tribune) ... ... 468

(b) Home—

6. India and self-government (Arjun) ... ... 468
7. Muslim politics (Paisa Akhbar) ... ... ib.
8. Indian Muhammadans and the reversal of the Partition of Bengal (Zamindar) ... .. ib.
9. The Muslim League and the Muhammadans (Tribune) ... ... ... ... ib.
10. Sedition in England, Russia and India (Panjabee) 469
11. The Nicholson Commission (Tribune) ... ib.

II.—Afghanistan and Trans-Frontier.

12. Tribal raids into British territory (Punjab Advocate) ... ... ... ... 470

III.—Native States.

13. Hyderabad affairs (Paisa Akhbar) ... ... 470

IV.—Kine-killing.

Nil.

V.—Native Societies and Religious Matters.

14. Dharmpal (Indar) ... ... ... 470
15. The Quran (Arya Musafir) ... ... 471
16. Propagation of Christianity in India (Arya Gazette) ib.
17. The Satyarth Parkash and Christ (Indar) ... 472
18. Dharampal on Muhammad and Dayanand (Indar) ib.
19. The forthcoming Hindu conference (Hindu and Hindustan) ... ... ... ... 473
20. The Arya Samaj (Arjun) ... ... ... 474

VI.—Legislation.

21. The Punjab Council regulations and political activity in the Punjab (Tribune) ... ... 474

Page.

VII.—General Administration.

(a) Judicial—

Nil.

(b) Police—

22. Offences against women in the Punjab (Panjabee) 475

(c) Municipal and Cantonment affairs—

23. The Nowshera market (Punjab Advocate) ... 476

(d) Education—

24. Indians and the Provincial Educational Service (Tribune) ... ... ... 476
25. The Muslim University (Zamindar) ... ... 477
26. Ditto ( Ditto ) ... ib.
27. Ditto (Paisa Akhbar) ... 478
28. Ditto (Tribune) ... ... ib.
29. The Hindu University (Parkash) ... ... ib.
30. Constitution of the Muslim University (Observer) ib.

(e) Agriculture and questions affecting the land—

Nil.

(f) Railways and Communications—

Nil.

(g) Postal matters—

Nil.

(h) Miscellaneous—

31. The Frontier Province (Punjab Advocate) ... 479
32. Suggestion to establish a United Association of the Indian Press (Punjab Samachar) ... ... ib.
33. The new capital of India (Panjabee) ... ... ib.
34. The foundation stones of the new Delhi (Tribune) ib.
35. Delhi and the Punjab Chief Court (Panjabee) ... ib.
36. Industrial progress in the Punjab ( Ditto ) ... 480

LIST OF NEWSPAPERS AND PERIODICALS EXAMINED BY THE SPECIAL BRANCH AS IT STOOD ON THE 15TH JUNE 1912.

| No. | Name. | Locality. | Name of Publisher. | Circulation. |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| | ENGLISH. | | | |
| | DAILY. | | | |
| 1 | Tribune ... | Lahore ... | Bihari Lal ... | 1,758 copies. |
| | TRI-WEEKLY. | | | |
| 2 | Panjabee ... | Lahore ... | Mul Chand ... | 2,424 copies. |
| | BI-WEEKLY. | | | |
| 3 | Observer ... | Lahore ... | Nizam-ud-din ... | 1,000 copies. |
| 4 | Punjab Times and Frontier News. | Rawalpindi ... | J. R. Thapur ... | 200 „ |
| | WEEKLY. | | | |
| 5 | Arya Patrika ... | Lahore ... | Devi Chand ... | 650 copies. |
| 6 | Harbinger ... | Do. ... | Durga Parshad ... | 300 „ |
| 7 | Khalsa Advocate ... | Amritsar ... | Bahadur Singh ... | 752 „ |
| | FORTNIGHTLY. | | | |
| 8 | Jijnasu ... | Lahore ... | Ishar Das ... | ... |
| | MONTHLY. | | | |
| 9 | D A.-V. College Magazine ... | Lahore ... | Saraswati Nath ... | 1,000 copies. |
| 10 | Forman Christian College Notes.* | Do. ... | ... | ... |
| 11 | Practical Medicine ... | Delhi ... | ... | ... |
| 12 | Punjab Educational Journal | Lahore ... | R. B. Mohan Lal ... | 700 copies. |
| 13 | Punjab Mission News ... | Do. ... | Revd. Wigram ... | 250 „ |
| 14 | Ravi ... | Do. ... | Mr. B. M. Jones ... | ... |
| 15 | Review of Religions ... | Kadian (Gurdaspur) ... | Sadr Anjuman Ahmadia, Qadian. | 800 copies. |
| 16 | Science Grounded Religion... | Lahore ... | Dev Rattan ... | 25 „ |
| 17 | Teacher ... | Dinga (Gujrat) ... | Kanhaya Singh ... | 200 „ |
| | URDU. | | | |
| | DAILY. | | | |
| 18 | Akhbar-i-'Am ... | Lahore ... | Govind Sahai ... | 630 copies. |
| 19 | Paisa Akhbar ... | Do. ... | Abdul Aziz ... | 1,011 „ |
| 20 | Watan ... | Do. ... | Muhammad Insha Alla ... | ... |
| 21 | Zamindar ... | Do. ... | Zafar Ali Khan, B.A. ... | ... |
| | BI-WEEKLY. | | | |
| 22 | Vakil ... | Amritsar ... | Abdul Aziz ... | 1,970 copies. |
| | WEEKLY. | | | |
| 23 | Afghan ... | Peshawar ... | Saiyid Muhammad Abdulla | 500 copies. |
| 24 | Ahl-i-Hadis ... | Amritsar ... | Sana-ulla ... | 925 „ |
| 25 | Ahluwalia Gazette ... | Do. ... | Lehna Singh ... | 500 „ |
| 26 | Al-Moin ... | Do. ... | Mehraj-ud-din ... | ... |
| 27 | Army News ... | Ludhiana ... | Hira Lal & Co. ... | 1,300 copies. |
| 28 | Arorbans Gazette ... | Amritsar ... | Labh Singh ... | ... |
| 29 | Arya Gazette ... | Lahore ... | Bhowani Das ... | 550 copies. |
| 30 | Badar ... | Qadian, Gurdaspur District | Muhammad Sadiq ... | 200 „ |

* Not received during the month.

LIST OF NEWSPAPERS AND PERIODICALS EXAMINED BY THE SPECIAL BRANCH AS IT STOOD ON THE 15TH JUNE 1912—CONTINUED.

| No. | Name. | Locality. | Name of Publisher. | Circulation. |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| | URDU—CONTINUED. | | | |
| | WEEKLY—continued. | | | |
| 31 | Bharat ... | Jullundur ... | Thakur Sheoratan Singh ... | ... |
| 32 | Chaudhwin Sadi ... | Rawalpindi ... | Haji Ahmad ... | ... |
| 33 | Civil and Military News ... | Ludhiana .. | Saiyid Muhammad ... | 1,325 copies. |
| 34 | Curzon Gazette ... | Delhi ... | Mirza Hairat ... | 111 „ |
| 35 | Delhi Gazette* ... | Do. ... | Sajjad Husain ... | 200 „ |
| 36 | Hakim ... | Qadian, Gurdaspur District | Yakub Ali ... | 900 „ |
| 37 | Haq ... | Delhi ... | Kasim Ali ... | 200 „ |
| 38 | Haq Pasand ... | Amritsar ... | Ram Nath ... | 382 „ |
| 39 | Hindu ... | Lahore ... | Hari Lal Sharma ... | ... |
| 40 | Hindustan ... | Do. ... | Ram Saran Dutt ... | 8,070 copies. |
| 41 | Indar ... | Do. ... | Dharm Pal, B.A. ... | ... |
| 42 | Islam ... | Do. ... | Abdul Latif ... | 200 copies. |
| 43 | Jhang Sial ... | Jhang ... | Prabh Dyal ... | 2,262 „ |
| 44 | Kapurthala Akhbar ... | Kapurthala ... | Hamid Husain .. | 155 „ |
| 45 | Loyal Gazette ... | Lahore ... | Amar Singh ... | 200 „ |
| 46 | Lytton Gazette ... | Delhi ... | Bulaki Das ... | 1,000 „ |
| 47 | Milap* ... | Lyallpur ... | Jawahar Lal ... | ... |
| 48 | Millat ... | Lahore ... | Shuja Ulla ... | 1,500 copies. |
| 49 | Mister Gazette ... | Do. ... | Ali Bakhsh ... | 150 „ |
| 50 | Munir ... | Jhang ... | Hafiz Khuda Bakhsh ... | 200 „ |
| 51 | Musalman ... | Amritsar ... | Sana-ulla ... | 400 „ |
| 52 | Nur ... | Qadian, Gurdaspur District | Muhammad Yusaf ... | 200 „ |
| 53 | Nur Afshan ... | Ludhiana ... | Revd. Dr. E. M. Wherry ... | 500 „ |
| 54 | Paisa Akhbar ... | Lahore ... | Abdul Aziz ... | 8,377 „ |
| 55 | Parkash ... | Do. ... | Krishan ... | 1,723 „ |
| 56 | Punjab Advocate ... | Mianwali ... | Karm Chand, Bahl ... | 1,000 „ |
| 57 | Punjab Samachar ... | Lahore ... | Hira Lal ... | 705 „ |
| 58 | Rajput Gazette ... | Do. ... | Thakur Sukhram Das ... | 650 „ |
| 59 | Municipal Gazette and Sada-i-Hind.* | Do. ... | Din Muhammad ... | 500 „ |
| 60 | Sadiq-ul-Akhbar ... | Bahawalpur ... | Maulvi Ata Ullah ... | 392 |
| 61 | Ditto ... | Rewari ... | Safdar Hussain ... | 200 |
| 62 | Sanatan Dharm Pracharak ... | Amritsar ... | Rulia Ram ... | 200 |
| 63 | Shanti ... | Rawalpindi ... | Kishan Chand Mohan ... | 300 |
| 64 | Sialkot Paper ... | Sialkot ... | Todar Mal ... | 500 |
| 65 | Siraj-ul-Akhbar ... | Jhelum ... | Maulvi Fakir Muhammad | 450 |
| 66 | Tahzib-ul-Niswan ... | Lahore ... | Mumtaz Ali ... | 240 „ |
| 67 | Victoria Paper ... | Sialkot ... | Gian Chand ... | 600 „ |

*Not received during the week.

LIST OF NEWSPAPERS AND PERIODICALS EXAMINED BY THE SPECIAL BRANCH AS IT STOOD ON THE 15TH JUNE 1912—CONCLUDED.

| No. | Name. | Locality. | Name of Publisher. | Circulation. |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| | URDU—CONCLUDED. | | | |
| | WEEKLY—concluded. | | | |
| 68 | Waqt ... | Lahore ... | Ali Husain ... | 200 copies. |
| 69 | Watan ... | Do. ... | Muhammad Insha Ullah ... | 1,800 „ |
| 70 | Zamindar ... | Do. ... | Zafar Ali Khan, B.A. ... | 750 „ |
| | FORTNIGHTLY. | | | |
| 71 | Biwah Samachar ... | Lahore ... | Ram Chand ... | 300 copies. |
| 72 | Kam Dhenu ... | Ludhiana ... | Daulat Ram ... | 100 „ |
| 73 | Mohyal Gazette ... | Kala, Jhelum District ... | Mehta Sham Das ... | 250 „ |
| | PERSIAN. | | | |
| | FORTNIGHTLY. | | | |
| 74 | Siraj.ul-Akhbar ... | Kabul ... | Abdul Khalik ... | ... |
| | URDU. | | | |
| | MONTHLY. | | | |
| 75 | Arorbans Parkash ... | Lahore ... | Salig Ram ... | 200 copies. |
| 76 | Arya Musafir ... | Jullundur ... | Wazir Chand ... | 1,300 „ |
| 77 | Jauhar ... | Amritsar ... | Muhammad Ismail Khan ... | 200 „ |
| 78 | Kakezai Social Reformer ... | Lahore ... | Fazl Din ... | 200 „ |
| 79 | Makhzan ... | Delhi ... | Abdul Kadir ... | 4,000 „ |
| 80 | Rafiq ... | Lahore ... | Charinji Lal ... | 500 „ |
| 81 | Sadhu ... | Do. ... | Sheobart Lal ... | 500 „ |
| 82 | Martand ... | Do. ... | Kanhya Lal ... | 250 „ |
| 83 | Sughbir Patrika ... | Do. ... | Prab Dial ... | 500 „ |
| 84 | Zaban* ... | Delhi ... | Hamid Husain ... | 500 „ |
| | GURMUKHI. | | | |
| | WEEKLY. | | | |
| 85 | Khalsa Sewak ... | Amritsar ... | Jiwan Singh ... | 1,000 copies. |
| 86 | Punjab Reporter* ... | Do. ... | Ganda Singh ... | ... |
| 87 | Punjabi Surma ... | Lahore ... | Gian Chand ... | 1,000 copies. |

* Not received during the week.

I.—Politics.

(a)—Foreign.

Ill-treatment of Indians in Canada.

1. The Hindu (Lahore), of the 30th May (received on the 7th June) 1912, publishes a note headed "Disgrace of Sikh families in Vancouver." It says that a white man from Europe, America, Australia or Africa is treated in this country as a God or a superior officer. Indians, however, are looked down upon wherever they may go! They are subjected to humiliating treatment and are frequently turned out in disgrace. But all they can do in return is to express indignation against the haughty Governments and countries concerned, and to request their own Government to defend the izzat of its subjects. The heartless manner, adds the paper, in which the wives and children of (some) Sikhs were ordered to be expelled from Vancouver has caused pain, not only to Sikhs, but also to all other Indians.

Ill-treatment of Indians in Australia.

2. The Hindustan (Lahore), of the 31st May (received on the 7th June) 1912, publishes a communication headed "Indians are not allowed to take their wives to Australia." Writing on the above subject, the writer—a Sikh of Australia—complains that the result of the prohibition is that Indians in Australia have been ruining their lives by indulging in diverse vices. Recently, he adds, a Sikh applied for permission to bring his wife from India, but he was told in reply that any of his relations desirous of entering Australia should be able to write a European language. After stating that some time ago a Sikh was sent back to India on the ground that he knew no European language excepting English, he observes that, in order to be able to bring one's wife to Australia, one should first have her entered at an Indian University and next send her to England to learn some continental language. He then goes on to say that the reason why such laws are framed to deal with Indians residing abroad is that the Government of India does not care much for the protection of its subjects. While the doors of India are open for the inhabitants of every (foreign) country her own poor children are wanted nowhere. This is not only an insult to Indians, but also constitutes a foul stain on the fair fame of the Government of India.

The Islamic world.

3. The Vakil (Amritsar), of the 29th May 1912, publishes an article under the heading "Islam—III." In continuation of its previous remarks on the subject (vide paragraph 2 of Selections No. 16), the paper says that, so long as Muhammadans follow the Prophet's teachings, no power on earth can sweep them into oblivion. After remarking that if they ever rise (again) it will be with the aid of Islam, it complains that they are their own enemies and are being misled by their guides. "If we wish to preserve our existence in India," it adds, "we" should first of all learn (1) to fear no one but God, (2) to depend only on "ourselves," (3) to follow the Quran in place of "nominal leaders and Maulvis" and (4) to always trust in God; never giving way to despair.

The Islamic world.

4. The Zamindar (Lahore), of 1st June 1912, reproduces from an Arabic contemporary an article headed "Islam, the champion of justice and peace." The writer praises the above faith and concludes as follows:—"O, followers of Muhammad, walk in the footsteps of your ancestors and care nothing for the world or material things. If greed and avarice have blinded your enemies and they are determined to sweep Musalmans from off the earth's surface, let them stick to their resolution. Open your eyes and reflect whether a Muhammadan can ever live a slave's life. "O, Muslim, throw off thy lethargy, arm thyself with unity and piety and demand thy lost rights; otherwise thy death is far preferable to (thy) present life of disgrace."

Affairs in Tibet.

5. The following is from the Tribune (Lahore), of the 7th June 1912 :—

* * * * * *

"The Government of India is absolutely impassive, and of course it can do nothing. But if it uses its influence with the Chinese Government to restore the old order of things in Tibet and place it within a zone of neutrality, vesting the Dalai Lama with supreme authority, matters would rapidly settle down and Tibet would once more get the peace which she has not known since the ill-advised Younghusband Mission."

(b)—Home.

India and self-government.

6. The Arjun (Lahore), of the 28th May (received on the 6th June) 1912, has a note entitled "India and self-government." Not a few short-sighted Indians, it says, have been crying for a long time past that this country should be made self-governing. But the paper is of opinion that Indians have not as yet proved their fitness for the above form of government. They should first end their internecine feuds, which make crores of them thirst after the blood of one another. Next they should improve their educational, moral and economic condition ; at the same time making the masses unshakeably loyal to Government. It is wrong to refer to the example of self-governing colonies, for the reason that there is a world of difference between them and this country.

Muslim politics.

7. The Paisa Akhbar (Lahore), of the 6th June 1912, publishes a communication from one Nazir Ahmed, B.A. (Alig.) headed "What should now be the policy of Muhammadans in respect of political matters?" The writer says that, in an article headed "The Liberal Party" (vide paragraph 9 of Selections No. 16) the Zamindar asserts that there exist no extremists among Muhammadans, nor can they rise even in the future. When, however, he adds, the adoption of the conduct favoured by the Congresswallas in the beginning led in time to the appearance of extremists among Hindus, should not the same danger be apprehended through the Prophet's followers working on similar lines? In conclusion, he remarks that the correct policy for Muhammadans to follow is the same that was laid down for them by the late Sir Syed Ahmed Khan.

Indian Muhammadans and the reversal of the Partition of Bengal.

8. The Zamindar (Lahore), of the 8th June 1912, has an article headed "The Universal brotherhood of Islam." His Highness Sir Agha Khan, says the paper, has contributed a letter to the Near East on the above subject. Next it quotes an extract from the communication which says that, if the feelings of Muhammadans in one part of the world happen to be wounded, the event at once affects their co-religionists even in other quarters of the globe. The Agha Khan adds that the reversal of the Partition of Bengal and the transfer to Delhi of the Government of India's seat elicited very little comment from the Musalmans of this country and that only those of them (lit. those people) spoke of the occurrence, (and that also) in private talk, who were directly affected by the same. Commenting on the quotation the paper remarks that the two statements—about the Islamic brotherhood and the apathy of the rest of Indian Muhammadans to the fate of their East Bengal brethren—contradict each other. The fact, it adds, is that Muhammadans not only in, but also outside, Bengal regarded the annulment of the Partition as likely to lead to their common communal rights being trampled upon. And if they have not protested loudly enough, the reason is that the bearer of this bitter cup was their King Emperor himself.

The Muslim League and the Muhammadans.

9. The following is from the Tribune (Lahore), of the 11th June 1912 :—

"The London Branch of the Muslim League is responsible for a number of, to say the least, very indiscreet communications which it has during the past six months addressed to His Majesty's Secretary for Foreign Affairs on the subject of Great Britain's attitude in reference to what has been going on in Tripoli, Turkey and Persia. Public opinion among sensible and responsible men both in India and England has unreservedly condemned the highly unreasonable tone of what has been addressed to Government on behalf of or in the name of the League; but it is clear that in a communication only recently addressed the members of the League have very considerably overshot the mark and let themselves completely in for public ridicule and laughter. In a communication addressed to the Secretary of State for Foreign affairs it is stated that the 'Committee has reason to fear that the direct and immediate result of the situation Italy has created in the New East will be to impel large bodies of Musalmans from India as well as the Frontier to endeavour to reach the seat of war as volunteers and it would be impossible for His Majesty's Government to repress the movement without risk of great unpopularity.' Attention is in the same communication called to the 'extreme inconvenience to Musalman pilgrims and the loss to Indian commerce occasioned by the Italian blockade of the Red Sea ports.' The Committee further prays His Majesty's Government 'to take such steps as they may consider expedient to prevent the further development of a situation which they really fear will prove most prejudicial to the interests of humanity and to progress in the eastern world.' These passages have elicited some very severe criticism from the Pall Mall Gazette. But no one can say that the League has not more than deserved it. The Gazette offers its sympathy to the Muhammadan population of India for among other reasons because 'it is represented here (London) by so injudicious and ill-advised a body as the London branch of the All-India Muslim League.' It concludes: 'Musalmans on the Frontier can start for Turkey by way of Afghanistan if they like, but they know they would be killed before they had gone a hundred miles down country. Muhammadans have had over seven months to think about volunteering and it has never even entered their heads.' All this is quite true, and we wish our Muhammadan fellow-countrymen realised the absurdity of making statements for which there is no basis in fact of truth."

Sedition in England, Russia and India.

10. The following is from the Panjabee (Lahore), of the 14th June 1912 :—

"Six years' rigorous imprisonment or transportation for a large period was the usual punishment for sedition in India during the anxious days of 1906 and 1907. Every one felt it was heavy and besides the treatment of prisoners, boys and men who suffered for their indiscretion by being forced to keep company with felons accused with murder and dacoity, excited sympathy for the sufferers. But apparently Government saw no reason to relax the severity of punishments. But how was Tom Mann treated in great Britain for inciting the troops, which is also sedition? He was given six months only, the greater part of which was to be a mere confinement. Yet considerable sympathy is felt for him and the sentence was reduced to two months. The case of Miss Malecka, a Russian refugee in Great Britain, who has been awarded four years' rigorous imprisonment for sedition, excited so much sympathy that Government intervened on her behalf and it is probable the punishment will be greatly reduced.

* * * * * * *

"It may be said that the circumstances in which Indian cases of sedition were tried were not very different from those of Russia. The accused were not in all cases given a very fair treatment. The definition of sedition was strained to its utmost limits and to this day it is not a properly defined crime in India. The evidence of approvers and criminals is not rejected here. And yet few extended their sympathy to those whose patriotism was misdirected and who were guilty of great indiscretion. The new Press Law is declared to deal not only with sedition but with the tone and the style of criticism. This is Indian justice and apparently it differs from British justice and from Russian justice."

The Nicholson Commission.

11. The following is from the Tribune (Lahore), of the 13th June 1912 :—

"It has been suggested in some quarters that a question which the Nicholson Commission should consider is the function of the Commander-in-Chief. According to the old arrangement there were two men at the head of the army. But now the work of the Military Member has devolved upon the Commander-in-Chief. He has now to look to the discipline of the army, its organisation, and its administration. This seems to be too much for one man. Lord Kitchner was a man of extraordinary energy and it was not a difficult matter for him to discharge the double functions. He thought that work could be more satisfactorily done if the sole authority rested with one man. Under the dual system the Military Member had the right to supervise any scheme regarding the administration of the army. He was responsible to the Government for the finances and other necessary arrangements when the army did not go to war. The Commander-in-Chief was supreme in the field, and he was responsible to the Governor-General for military operations. Now in the interest of military discipline all these functions have been merged in one man. It is not necessary that the office of Military Member should be revived but a devolution of functions is called (for) so that there may be a normal division of work and responsibility."

II.—Afghanistan and Trans-Frontier.

12. The Punjab Advocate (Mianwali), of the 30th May (received on the 6th June) 1912, has a letter from its Bannu correspondent headed "Government proclamation and God, the (only) protector of Hindus." The Hindus of the villages ( ? in the neighbourhood of Bannu), the writer states, have been warned by means of a circular order that Arangi, Salim and other (tribal) dacoits have regained their liberty owing to disorder in Khost, and that the above Hindus should, therefore, leave their villages and settle in the city ( ? Bannu). The event has caused feelings of deep uneasiness among village Hindus throughout the (Bannu) district, for the reason that they can now look for protection to God alone. The order is calculated to throw a stain on Government and the administration, while it has made clear that the common village Muhammadans, as also their brethren in receipt of pensions from Government, are, at heart, as great rebels as the aforesaid dacoits. These Musalmans are required by Government to protect Hindus, and receive pensions and allowances to maintain peace; (but they behave) as if they were wholly unwilling to obey Government. They neither cared ( ? for it) before, nor will they do so now, for the reason that the order referred to has had the effect of emboldening them still further. The writer then goes on to say that the Hindus concerned have to recover their debts in these days of harvest, and that they do not know what they should now do in the matter. After asking who will be responsible for the loss which is to be caused to them, he makes the further complaint that no house accommodation is available for them in the city in which they have been told to take up their residence. If it has become an impossibility to afford them protection in their villages, Government should at least make effective arrangements for (enabling them to) dispose of their lands and (other) property and to realise the money due to them. It should also provide house accommodation for them; for, otherwise, there is a fear of their having to lead a life worse than death.

Tribal raids into British territory.

III.—Native States.

13. The Paisa Akhbar (Lahore), of the 7th June 1912, publishes a communication from (Nawab) Abdulla, of the Kasmandi, (United Provinces), under the heading "Exposure of the Hyderabad conspiracy." The writer states that a Madrasi gentleman writes to him to say that his (the Nawab's) expulsion from Hyderabad is ascribable, not to Maulvi Ahmad Hasan ( , Private Secretary to the Nizam), but to Mr. Hankin and the Residency. The Maulvi's hostility to him is, however, an open secret, while he has received a most generous treatment at the hands of Mr. Hankin. As to the Residency, how could it, his benefactor, have given him a fall, and that also in the time of a good-hearted Resident like Colonel Pinhey ? The British Government has done much for him and its representative (in Hyderabad) could not have caused him any injury.

Hyderabad affairs.

In its issue, dated the 8th June 1912, the paper publishes a communication headed "Nawab Abdulla Khan of Kasmandi." The writer—one Nur-ud-Din, of Hyderabad—takes exception to the Nawab's efforts in the press to have himself recalled to Hyderabad.

Commenting on the above the editor says that, in view of the way in which the Nawab has been expelled from the State, the order for his expulsion appears highly inadvisable.

V.—Native Societies and Religious Matters.

14. The Indar (Lahore), of the 31st May 1912, has a note headed "Words from God." The Editor publishes some revelations which he claims to have received from on High. Three of them are as follows :—

Dharmpal.

(1) Raise thou the dead, give hearing to the deaf and sight to the blind, and say to them that the holy God alone is the source of life.

(2) O, thou praised one, I have placed thee above Dayanand, for the reason that thou hast left the mouth, hast advanced to the source, and hast reached my table. I spared thee the thorn which crippled thy brother (? Dayanand) and threw away his labours (lit. rendered his journey useless).

(3) I have sent thee for the guidance of those (Aryas) who have denied my power and have made the false statement that the holy God cannot now speak.

The Quran.

15. The Arya Musafar (Lahore), for April and May (received on the 11th June) 1912, publishes a note headed "Examination of the Quran." The Editor states that for some months past he has been studying the Quran and other Islamic scriptures, and that this study has made it thoroughly clear to him that the propagation of Islam in India was due simply to the country having been under Muslim Kings for a sufficiently long time. It was for Muhammadans, he adds, to place before the Indian people the teachings of the Prophet's Quran as they are to be found in that book. They are not, however, likely to do so, because they know full well that the publication of the teachings actually contained in the Quran would be certain to make the people regard the same with feelings of disgust. The late Pandit Lekh Ram was the best man to do the work, but it is to be regretted that he should have been killed prematurely, and in a grossly mean way, by those (Muhammadans) whose intellects and minds he wished to free and broaden. Continuing, the editor says that it is his personal experience that no other teachings have caused so much injury to the world as those contained in the Quran. He has, therefore, vowed to address himself solely to the task of placing these teachings in the hands of the masses. He intends bringing out not only a cheap edition of a simple and idiomatic translation of the Quran, but also some well-reasoned tracts to explain the teachings of the scripture named. The following are some of the tracts he is at present engaged in writing :—

(1) Life of Muhammad.

(2) The position of the Quran.

(3) Muhammad and the Quran.

(4) The Quran and Niyog.

(5) How Islam spread in India.

(6) God and the Quran.

(7) The greatest achievement of the Quran.

(8) Improbable things in the Quran.

(9) The Quranic paradise.

(10) The Quran and other religions.

(11) The Quran and marriage philosophy.

(12) The Quran and Brahmcharya.

(13) The Quran and human life.

These tracts will, as soon as they are published, be supplied to the subscribers to the Arya Musafar free of charge, while reasonable prices will be charged even to other people.

Propagation of Christianity in India.

16. The Arya Gazette (Lahore), of the 30th May (received on the 6th June) 1912, has an article headed "The Bible Society's wonderful work : for the special attention of Arya Samajes." After publishing some figures relating to the work done by the Bible Societies during the past year, the paper remarks that nine lakhs of copies of the Bible were distributed in this country alone. If Aryas (lit. you) it adds, keep silent even now and do not prepare themselves to stem "this advancing and dangerous tide of Christianity," the inference should be drawn that they care nothing for their national existence. They should bear in mind that the Hindu religion is in danger: the dragons of Islam and Christianity are always on the look-out to swallow it. If they have the least regard for Hindu (Arya)* dignity and if they wish to see their ancient Arya religion and greatness live, it is necessary that they should acquaint the Hindu community with "this dreadful danger" and should display the greatest courage and energy in protecting Hinduism against the same.

*The brackets are the paper's own.

17. The Indar (Lahore), of the 31st May (received on the 6th June) 1912, has an article headed "The mission of the Arya Samaj and Universal peace—IV." In continuation of its previous remarks on the subject (vide paragraph 19 of Selections No. 21) the paper says that whatever the Satyarth Parkash contains about Christ is conceived in a most offensive manner. The unparalleled sacrifice, it adds, which the founder of Christianity made requires that not only should his memory be honoured, but that he should be regarded as the true Son of God. The expressions used in respect of him in the Satyarth Parkash now in circulation are, therefore, not only calculated to cause pain, but also do not speak well of their author. Arya Samajists assert that these expressions are from the pen of Swami Dayanand, but his genuine edition of the Satyarth Parkash, (i. e., that of 1875) contains nothing against Christ. The mischief was wrought after his death; the genuine Satyarth Parkash being made away with and "a tome of lies being prepared in his name."

The Satyarth Parkash and Christ.

18. Writing under the heading "A noteworthy letter and the reply to it," the Indar (Lahore), of the 31st May (received on the 6th June) 1912, publishes a communication from one Narayan Kishan, a Government pensioner, residing in Chak No. 109, Gugera Branch ( , Chenab Canal). The writer says that he has never looked upon Swami Dayanand as a religious guide or imam and that apparently the Editor is desirous of founding a new religious sect. He adds that, as Dharampal writes, Christ may be called a Mahatma, but that Muhammad has no claims to that position. As to the "unitarianism and brotherhood" (of the last named), they have always been in existence like all other eternal truths and had no special connection with the Prophet or his times. Nay, facts go to show that his unitarianism is not worthy the name and that it was based, not on his love for God, but on his hankering after being called His messenger. This conduct on his part was a palpable piece of infidelity or polytheism, but "he has, up to this moment, been unhesitatingly resorting to diverse acts of high-handedness" in order to gratify his craving. During his time of power, as also subsequently, only those persons escaped insults and death who, at the point of the sword or otherwise, acknowledged him to have been a divine messenger. As regards his brotherhood (of man), it was confined to his fearsome following, who were not prepared to regard any (outsider), high or low, as their brother. There was no place in India where this most terrible brotherhood did not consider it meritorious to disgrace the people ( ? Hindus) in a grossly immoral way and to injure them in regard to (both) secular and religious matters. As the dead bodies of Hindus (lit. as the dead in this country) are cremated the pictures of great men occupy here a position almost similar to that assigned to the tombs of Muhammadan saints. There was, however, not a single part of the land where the said ostentatious brotherhood did not insult and destroy, in a most barbarous manner, all such pictures and the places where they were kept. Again, it deeply wounded the feelings of the (Hindu) inhabitants of the country by most cruelly killing in all sacred places highly useful and beloved dumb animals like cows and oxen. The writer does not wish to rake up old grievances: he desires only to point out that there can be no love for such unitarianism and brotherhood or for their author in those minds which are cognisant of true religion.

Dharampal on Muhammad and Dayanand.

Next the paper publishes a reply to the above over the signature of "Sayad-ul-Qalam, Mujaddad-ud-Din, Dharampal Ghazi." The writer begins by saying that Aryas not only regard Swami Dayanand as a religious guide or imam, but also place him far, far above the holy and living God. After remarking that they prepare for a fight when a portrait of the Swami is torn up, he states that the foregoing letter speaks of his desire to found a new religious sect. He wishes to declare in plain language that he undoubtedly considers himself a messenger from God ; that, having created him among a living people (? Muhammadans) He has sent him to a dead community (? Aryas) ; and that he wishes to raise worshippers of the living (God) from among those who worship the dead (Dayanand). The founder of the Arya Samaj is dead, and his name can no more "guide and instruct us" than speaking of a brick or stone. This is what Dharmpal wishes to impress on Arya Samajists. Continuing, he remarks that his correspondent may not regard Muhammad as a Mahatma, but that still there is no reason why he and those who share his views should use offensive language towards the Arabian Prophet. Next he endeavours to refute the charges preferred by Narayan Kishen against the founder of Islam and observes that the remarks about the destruction of pictures, etc., do not become Aryas, who are not idolators, treat all animals alike, and betray a political or anti-Muslim spirit. In conclusion, he takes exception to the conduct of Swami Dayanand in having taught the shameful doctrine of Niyog.

The forthcoming Hindu conference.

19. The Hindu (Lahore), of the 30th May (received on the 7th June) 1912, publishes a communication from one Kahan Chand, an ex-Manager of the Hindustan, who says that the latter journal charges him with having embezzled the amounts which Lala Jaswant Rai has accused Pandit Rambhaj Dat of having misappropriated (vide paragraph 20 of Selections No. 20). The fact, however, is that the English Hindustan had ceased to exist long before he was appointed Manager (and he could not, therefore, have embezzled any subscription to that paper). As regards (the second amount representing the value of) the postage stamps received in respect of the issue of the Hindustan of which one lakh copies were to be printed, Srimati (Sarala Devi) Chaudhrani used to have all the letters opened in her presence and to secure all the stamps received. All remittances on account of the subscription and advertisement charges were also received by her or paid into the bank. How could it, then, have been possible for any person in the Hindustan's employ to misappropriate money belonging to it ? There can be no doubt that it was wrong in the writer to have gone away without having given any information (to his employer). As soon, however, as he and his late brother (who also was employed in the Hindustan office) had left Lahore they sent Pandit Rambhaj Dat a full statement of accounts and promised to pay, as soon as possible, the sum of Rs. 223-12-3 due from them. But it was impossible for the Pandit not to take advantage of their mistake or foolishness : he realised, by means of threats, not Rs. 223-12-3 but Rs. 668 from their aged mother and younger brother.

The Hindustan (Lahore), of the 31st May 1912, publishes a note by Chaudhri Rambhaj Dat headed "Mr. Saghar's removal." The writer says that he has been astonished at learning the conspiracy underlying the deplorable controversy which has been going on about Hindu leaders in this paper and other Hindu journals under the pretext of the discussion of the question of the presidency of the Hindu conference. This conspiracy, he adds, was the work chiefly of some such persons as wish to cause injury to the Hindu community by promoting disunion in its ranks. Continuing, he states that the controversy was started, not only without his being consulted, but even without his knowledge, although on having been hotly attacked from all sides he also felt compelled to write and get something written (in reply). He has now dismissed Mr. Munawwar Khan, Saghar, with a view to ending the mischief and in the best interests of Hindus, their leaders, their press, and the Hindustan. After remarking that he has also asked the new Editor of his paper to avoid the controversy, he quotes an extract from the letter which he wrote to Saghar to dispense with his services and in which he accused the latter of having conspired to breed strife between him and (other) Hindu leaders, to injure Hindus and the Arya Samaj, and to cause misunderstanding between Aryas and Sikhs. Next he regrets that the Hindustan and other Hindu papers should have fallen a prey to Muslim tactics, and should (in consequence) have overstepped the bounds of moderation in writing against each other.

The Arya Samaj.

20. The Arjun (Lahore), of the 4th (received on the 12th) June 1912, publishes an article headed "Swami Dayanand's message from heaven." The paper makes the Swami repeat the charges which have of late been laid at the door of the Arya Samaj by Dharmpal. He is also made to urge the members of the Samaj to remain loyal to the British Government, to abstain from dabbling in politics, and to become truly religious men.

VI.—Legislation.

The Punjab Council regulations and political activity in the Punjab.

21. The following is from the Tribune (Lahore), of the 14th June 1912 :—

"While the other provinces are all busy in considering their Council regulations with a view to secure such modifications in them as may bring about a better and a greater representation of the educated and commercial interests, the Punjabees are sleeping over it in a spirit of total unconcern, although there is no other province where a greater leavening of the Legislative Chamber is required in the general interest of both the Government and the public. Ours is the Council which has the smallest number of elected members. Even Eastern Bengal and Assam, which are educationally and commercially much behind us in importance have a bigger Council with a much larger proportion of elected members. Considered from a communal point of view the constitution of the Council is very disappointing and leaves much room for improvement. The Hindus are very inadequately represented. Out of 5 elected members only one is a Hindu. The constitution of the Municipal groups entitled to return members is defective from more than one point of view. It practically leaves the few European members in each group the masters of the situation. A large number of Districts and Municipalities have altogether no voice in the election of members, for example, in the Delhi (Revenue) Division the Municipalities of Hissar, Rohtak, Karnal and Gurgaon have been altogether ignored. Similarly, an important Municipality like that of Hoshiarpur has no franchise. Then again the electors are hampered in the election of candidates. Considering that most of the Punjab Municipalities (at least all which have got the franchise) are presided over by Deputy Commissioners the restriction of candidates to the members of these official-ridden Municipalities prevents the ablest and the best men from coming forward as candidates and thus the province and the Government are deprived of the ready assistance and intelligent advice of the best and the most qualified of the Punjabees. The Regulations of the Punjab Legislative Council thus stand in need of thorough overhauling. That the personnel of the Punjab Council is very inferior to that of the other Councils can be at once seen by a glance at the Council proceedings. To this Council alone belongs the unique distinction of having a member (elected by a municipal group) who is opposed to the spread of education as detrimental to the interests of good government. The Hindus have a very strong case to put forward for special representation both in the Local and the Imperial Councils, yet the Hindu Sabha is quite mute, though we are sure that in a few months it will be very active in thrusting some of its ornamental members on the constituencies. Are we to conclude that the educated party is yet suffering from the effects of the stupor into which it was thrown by the coup d' etat of 1907? If so, it is time that the educated leaders and the educated classes all over the province, were alive to their duty in the matter. There can be no greater blunder than to assume an attitude of indifference in the matter of Council elections. The Council Halls are now the most effective and the best theatres for political activity. With the Press Act hanging over the heads of newspapers and the Seditious Meetings Act over those of public speakers, one cannot expect much of the political activity on old lines. The rigour with which the Press Act is being administered in the Punjab is specially detrimental to the growth of a healthy political life in the province. It is having a very deleterious and demoralising effect on the Vernacular Press, which in its eager competition for increased circulation is having recourse to sensational personal writings. The so-called Hindu leaders, who in their anxiety to rehabilitate their community in the eyes of the official world went out of their way in denouncing and suppressing all kinds of political activity are now reaping the harvest they had sown. Some of them may in a way be happy at the result, but no responsible Hindu with any real regard for the community and the country can have any but feelings of sorrow and humiliation at their political importance. That the community which leads in education, culture, social reform and commerce should be politically a nonentity, must be a matter of deep regret and concern to every intelligent and self-respecting Hindu. Our political unimportance and inactivity has practically deprived us of the sentiment of self-respect. The humiliations to which the community is being subjected do not affect us much. We are surrounded by an atmosphere of rank self-seekingness. It will be no exaggeration to say that we are selling our people for the merest mess of pottage. The people who have managed to come to the front in the public life of the province within the last 5 years have proved their utter incapacity to protect the interests of the Hindu community in particular and of the province in general. What have they done by way of protest against the inferior position assigned to the province in the Reform Scheme? This is a matter in which Hindus and Muhammadans could have joined hands, as it affects the honour of the province. There are certain other aspects of the Council Regulations in which the Hindus and the Muhammadans can take joint action, for example, in the matter of restrictions imposed on the selection of candidates, etc. Why then, we ask, are the Hindu and Muhammadan leaders sleeping over these affairs? Surely leadership carries with it some responsibilities. Merely cooking our own broth, or advancing one's own interests is not consistent with true leadership. I hope the Hindu and Muhammadan educated classes have had sufficient experience of their representatives in the Council. Are they satisfied with what was done and said in their name in the Council? Look at the debate on the Punjab Municipalities Act, on the education question, on the Punjab Courts Act. One cannot help owning to a sense of humiliation at the disappointing show made by our Councillors. In the matter of education the province is far behind other provinces yet we find that in the grants made from Imperial funds we are treated most unjustly and do not get our due. Why? Is it not because our so-called representatives have failed to make themselves sufficiently vocal and have, so to say, no influence with the Government? Their protests and representations half-hearted as they are fail to make any impression. They are neither respected nor feared. They are easily silenced and snubbed and once snubbed they are demoralised for good. It is thus absolutely necessary that only such men should be sent to the Council as can command respect and a hearing and whom it may not be so easy to snub. It should be noted that having incompetent representatives in the Council is worse than having none. It is of the greatest importance that the matter should be taken up in right earnest by educated men all over the province. A serious effort should be made to have the regulations modified as is being done in Bengal. Failing that, or in any case, care should be taken that only competent and independent men are sent to the Council in the next elections."

VII.—General Administration.

(b)—Police.

Offences against women in the Punjab.

22. The following is from the Panjabee (Lahore), of the 8th June 1912 :—

"It may be asked how it is that in the Punjab offences against women are so large or what the peculiarity of the social influences of this province is which one does not see elsewhere. For one thing, it is the disproportion of the male and female populations of this province. For another, the domination of the Muhammadan element composed of very ignorant tribes who are the descendants of converts from the lower strata of the Hindus, is quite apparent. Hindu religion and Hindu civilisation have an undoubtedly ethical and progressive effect, leading to peacefulness and control of the aggressive and passionate tendencies of men. We do not deny similar wholesome effects in Islam and other religions, but their effect has not so fully permeated among a people made up by the accretions from various castes and communities never completely assimilated to the best side of any religion. These causes naturally act and react upon one another. The small number of female population, which can probably be traced from the time of the Mahabharat, has a weakening effect on that side of human nature which represents all that appeals to the sense of true emotion, culture and art. Consequently, the rough and non-emotional side of human nature and environments gets an undue influence and power which grows with the strength gained in every generation. The problem is a difficult one, but the effect of the disproportion of the sexes added to the curse of ignorance and illiteracy, and very little modified by spiritual influences, are disastrous to social well-being and progress.

"It is difficult to find what classes of people are mostly concerned in the offences against women, to what religion and part of the province they belong. The official reports do not give these details. It would no doubt be interesting to know the criminal records of the province according to religion and district. That would help us to suggest and apply preventive measures. From the reports we can only know that murders, dacoities and similar serious crimes are more frequent and defy remedy in the Central and Western circles of the Province. Moreover, the Jail report gives us the proportion of Hindu (Hindu includes Sikhs) and Muhammadan criminals as 5,703 and 10,469 respectively, whereas their population is almost equal. It seems to us that in regard to crimes in the Punjab generally and to offences against women in particular the Moslem section is mostly in fault. If this be so, it is certainly a serious matter for those who claim 'political importance' to attend first to the social superiority of their forces on which indeed every other superiority is based. It is a matter also for Government to reflect seriously why the Hindu population which is known for its gentle and law-abiding tendencies everywhere should be subjected to the effects of serious crimes coming mostly from a quarter which seeks to stand on preferential grounds and is thus accommodated."

(c)—Municipal and cantonment affairs.

The Nowshera market.

23. The Punjab Advocate (Mianwali), of the 30th May (received on the 6th June) 1912, publishes a letter under the following heading :—

"Nowshera market.

"Worthy of the attention of the Government of Frontier Province.

"Do not go on tormenting loyal people by oppressing (them).

"Do not go on putting the knife to the throat of the poor."

The Hindus of Nowshera, the writer reports, first submitted a petition to the (Cantonment) Magistrate (detailing their grievances in regard to the new market). They were not, however, listened to, after which they memorialised the Quartermaster-General and His Excellency the Viceroy. On the 1st May last "the General" sent for their leader—Lala Nand Lal—as also Lalas Ramanand and Budhu Mal, who, however, are not representative Hindus. He told them to hear him and to make no reply. On Lala Nand Lal wanting to say something he "ill-treated them and used abusive language." They were told, "The beef market has been completed—You people should keep silent and buy vegetables (in it)." After remarking that this is how Hindu leaders (were) treated, the writer complains that the next day the (Cantonment) Magistrate pierced the hearts of Hindus with another arrow ; adding that it is such officers who bring Government into bad odour. This arrow was in the form of a manuscript notice to the effect that the beef, mutton, and vegetable markets had been completed ; that every person was advised to make use of them ; that any person dissuading, or interfering with, or intimidating people using the markets would be most severely dealt with ; and that the police had been authorised to arrest everyone guilty, or suspected (of having been guilty) of (such conduct). It is grossly unjust, comments the writer, that Hindus should be forced into a beef market. Is there no Hindu Councillor, he asks, merciful enough to lay the troubles of his co-religionists of Nowshera before the Viceroy's (Legislative) Council ? Will the Tribune and the Punjabee bring the matter to the notice of Government, and will the Hindu Sabha, Punjab, do its duty (by the Nowshera Hindus) ? Will the (entire) Hindu press take up the question and will Government take pity on Hindus, who have no one else to look to for help ?

(d)—Education.

Indians and the Provincial Educational Service.

24. The following is from the Tribune (Lahore), of the 14th June 1912 :—

"The Pioneer of Allahabad would not only have no Indians in the Indian Educational Service, but it is strongly in favour of having all the better paid posts in the Provincial Educational Service also filled by Europeans. In an article on the Indian Educational Service which was discussed at some length in these columns the other day the Allahabad Anglo-Indian journal wrote :—' One suggestion more. There is an imperative need for the employment of more Europeans as Inspectors, as teachers in secondary schools and as Professors of colleges. The Government of India are watching, doubtless, with considerable anxiety how the secondary schools and colleges have drifted slowly out of the hands of Englishmen into the control of those who are not yet fitted by training or tradition to conduct an essentially European or Western system of education.' In the opinion of the writer in the Pioneer the natives of India are not fit even to be headmasters in secondary schools, but we refuse to believe that this view is shared by the Government of India. If the suggestion made by the Pioneer is accepted the natives of India will be driven out from even the Provincial Service. The question requires to be taken up with vigor and energy. It is very necessary that our countrymen should take effective steps to make it clear to Government that they resent their exclusion from the Indian Educational Service. Pressure should be brought to bear upon the Government of India to make them see that it is in the highest degree unjust and unfair to the people of India to exclude even the best and ablest of them from appointments in the Indian Educational Service. As Inspectors of Schools Europeans will be quite unsuitable. Indeed they will be and are round men in square holes. They do not know the language, and their knowledge of the people and their educational requirements is quite superficial. As headmasters of High Schools they will be still more unsuitable. Their only place is in the colleges and there too they should be appointed only if Indians with the requisite qualifications are not available. As Professors of English literature Europeans might be supposed to possess special suitability but there is no reason why an Indian Professor should prove an inferior teacher of History, Mathematics, Philosophy and Science than Europeans. When it is laid down that none but those who distinguish themselves in British, Continental or American Universities will be appointed to the Indian Educational Service, there will be no lack of really qualified and competent Indians to fill Professional Chairs in Government Colleges."

The Muslim University.

25. The Zamindar (Lahore), of the 1st June 1912, publishes an article headed "The Muslim University." It begins by stating how all classes of Muhammadans enthusiastically welcomed the project under the impression that the proposed University would remove their ignorance and bring them into line with the civilised nations of the world. They will, however, give a wide berth to the institution—

(1) if "the outside (? non-Muslim) element" in its internal administration is so strong as to leave it only nominal independence ;

(2) if its curriculum cannot produce Muhammadans worthy of the name ; and

(3) if Islamia Schools and Colleges th roughout India cannot be affiliated to it.

Continuing, the paper says that if the jurisdiction of the University were not to extend beyond Aligarh the institution would on no account supply the pan-Islamic and special wants of Musalmans, who would not, therefore, feel any joy at the grant of a charter. Report, it adds, says that the Secretary of State desires the University to be only a "local" affair, and it is, therefore, to be wished that the members of the constitution committee would abstain from humouring him. They should rest assured that, in the other event, there will soon rise a strong party among Muhammadans which will insist that, instead of being wasted in establishing a University at Aligarh, the Rs. 35,00,000 collected (from them) should be utilised for founding a number of literary and technical scholarships to enable Muslim youths to receive education in foreign lands, and that a considerable part of the amount should be spent on imparting primary education (to the children of the community).

The Muslim University.

26. The Zamindar (Lahore), of the 8th June 1912, has a note headed "The Muslim University and influential Muslim traitors." Adverting to some recent remarks by the Tribune about the constitution of the Muslim University, the editor assures the paper named that, although unfortunately there do exist some Muhammadans who place their personal ends above safeguarding the real interests of their community, yet these individuals have no influence with their co-religionists. The Prophet's followers will have nothing to do with the University—

(1) if its management is not placed in their hands, and

(2) if all the Islamic educational institutions in India cannot be affiliated to it.

27. The Paisa Akhbar (Lahore), of the 3rd June 1912, has a note headed "Expression of uneasiness at the draft rules and regulations of the Muslim University." It states that the Nawab Vicar-ul-Mulk's recent letter taking exception to the proposed constitution of the University has bred feelings of deep uneasiness among Musalmans in every part of the country. Next the paper examines the communication, and remarks that there exists no reason for the Prophet's followers to feel so much exercised over the rules and regulations of the University.

The Muslim University.

28. The following is from the Tribune (Lahore), of the 7th June 1912 :—

The Moslem University.

"There is a good deal of dissatisfaction in educated and intelligent Muhammadan circles with the draft of the regulations relating to the proposed Moslem University. This dissatisfaction has found abundant and vigorous expression in Muhammadan newspapers throughout Upper India * * *. The more sensible among the Muhammadans have come to think that much need not be excepted from a University which while it would be financed by Muhammadans would be controlled in all essential respects by the Government. Efforts are being made by the more influential men in the community to repress any vigorous adverse criticism of the scheme, but papers such as Comrade, Muslim Gazette, and the Zemindar are not likely to accept the dictation of men who aim more at pleasing Government officials than serving their community. A meeting will shortly be held at Lucknow to consider the regulations and it is hoped that those who object to the scheme will muster strong on the occasion. The proceedings are likely to be lively."

29. The Parkash (Lahore), of the 4th June 1912, publishes an article headed "The Hindu University is also likely to end in smoke." It is quite on the cards, says the paper, that the proposed Hindu University also is to meet the same fate which has befallen the Muslim University. After remarking that "Aryas" (the paper uses the term to denote Hindus) started the movement with the sole object of not being outdone by Muhammadans, it observes that the former have their special educational requirements, with which their very existence as a community is bound up and which several considerations compel Government to abstain from supplying. One of these needs is the encouragement of (lit. protecting) the teaching of Sanskrit and the Vedas, which has so far preserved the national existence of "Aryas." The proposed Hindu University cannot, however, supply this want, for the reason that it would never receive a charter if it did not assign to English the first place in its scheme of studies. It was clearly stated in Sir Harcourt Butler's letter to the Maharaja of Darbhanga that the University should differ from the existing institutions in the matter only of religious education. The second great educational want of "Aryas," the failure to meet which renders their union impossible, is that the Hindi language should be encouraged. The contemplated Hindu University cannot, however, meet even this need. After remarking that English and not Hindi will be the medium of instruction, the paper says that it is, therefore, but natural that there should be a lack of enthusiasm for the institution.

The Hindu University.

30. The following is from the Observer (Lahore), of the 12th June 1912 :—

Constitution of the Muslim University.

"The proceedings of the Committee which assembled at Lucknow to consider the Constitution of the Muslim University were confidential, but it appears from a letter, printed in the Aligarh Institute Gazette over the signature of Raja Sir Muhammad Ali Muhammad Khan, that Nawab Mushtaq Hussain was represented on the Committee by several gentlemen. It is, therefore, gratifying to learn that members and visitors unanimously expressed their satisfaction at the regulations as passed by the Committee. This unanimity will carry its own weight with the public at large, but it cannot bind the Musalmans to accept the recommendations of the Committee in their entirety. Moreover, though the meetings lasted three days, the Statutes were apparently not discussed. Many thoughtful members of the community, however, share the view of Nawab Viqar-ul-Mulk that the Statutes are still susceptible of improvement and opportunity ought to have been taken for amending them in conformity with the public sentiment. As, however, the whole constitution of the Muslim University as passed is to be submitted to public criticism, we trust that the Musalmans will see that the Statutes as well as the Regulations are freed from all avoidable faults and defects. Meanwhile Nawab Mushtaq Hussain has appealed once more to his co-religionists to pay in their promised subscriptions as early as possible."

(h)—Miscellaneous.

31. The Panjab Advocate (Mianwali), of the 30th May (received on the 6th June) 1912, publishes, in black borders, a note headed "The Frontier Province cannot be amalgamated with the Punjab." It deeply pains the Editor to have to announce that the wishes of "the Frontier people" have not been realised, and that the Government of India has rejected the memorial in which the inhabitants of Dera Ismail Khan recently asked it to amalgamate the Frontier Province with the Punjab. The Afghan, he adds, announced "the glad tidings" in a supplement printed with gold ink, but he publishes the news, which has plunged "the Frontier people" into disappointment, with black borders. He hopes, however, that the people named will continue making constitutional efforts (to gain their object).

The Frontier Province.

32. The Panjab Samachar (Lahore), of 1st (received on the 11th) June 1912, publishes an article headed "The United Association of the Indian Press." The paper suggests the establishment of an association representing both the Indian and Anglo-Indian Presses. After remarking that the society should try to remove Government's suspicions it observes that if all classes of journalists were to join hands the Press Act would be repealed or reduced to a dead letter. Continuing, it says that Government wishes to put down not only seditious writings (lit. sedition), but also "religious recriminations" which have of late been going on (in the press). There undoubtedly exist in the country, it adds, pressmen with weak consciences who cause tribulation in order to add to their income. In conclusion, it urges Hindu and Muhammadan journalists to bring these selfish men into the right path.

Suggestion to establish a United Association of the Indian Press.

33. The following is from the Panjabee (Lahore), of the 13th June 1912 :—

The new capital of India.

"It never rains but it pours. First the sister Presidencies rebuked, secondly, the Government of India, thirdly, Mr. Garvin, the inspirer of Tory politics. We now have the Pioneer itself. The Calcutta correspondent of the Pioneer writes under date, the 7th instant:—'The latest phase in local commercial agitation against the Delhi changes is that the Committee of the Calcutta Chamber have put their protest and their case and their trust in Lord Carmichael—and it resolves itself very much into being a case now of "joh ukam."' This is short and sharp like the Donkey's kick. It must, indeed, prove effective."

34. The following is from the Tribune (Lahore), of the 13th June 1912 :—

The foundation stones of the new Delhi.

"Two foundation stones of the new capital were laid in the Government of India Camp in the Durbar area by Their Imperial Majesties the King Emperor and the Queen Empress. This site having been condemned the foundation stones will have to be shifted to the new site. Superstitious people will be inclined to think that this is not an auspicious sign. If the King Emperor's word is irrevocable a stone laid by him should be immovable."

35. The following is from the Panjabee (Lahore), of the 8th June 1912 :—

The Delhi and the Punjab Chief Court.

"In our last issue we published a report to the effect that the details of the administrative changes with regard to the creation of the Delhi enclave were now being settled in consultation with the Punjab Government. In connection with this we are informed, but we have not been able to get the report corroborated, that there is some kind of proposal to create a Judicial Commissionership for the Imperial enclave on the lines of Sind or North-West Frontier Province. If this be so the question arises as to what the Government proposes to do with the appellate jurisdiction of the Punjab Chief Court. We sincerely hope that the Judicial Commissionership of the Imperial enclave will be different from the Judicial Commissionership of the Frontier Province and that there is no idea of taking away the appellate jurisdiction of the Punjab Chief Court. * * * * * If it is contemplated to create another Judicial Commissionership for the Imperial enclave on the above lines and to rank it with the non-chartered High Court of the Punjab we have no hesitation in saying that it is a most retrograde step, unwarranted and indefensible. It will rouse the strongest opposition from the Punjab, and from Delhi in particular, where the laws and customs are not different from those of the Punjab. We hope the Punjab Government will fight tooth and nail against such a proposal, and the people of Delhi should lose no time in marking their sense of strong disapproval of any such step."

Industrial progress in the Punjab.

36. The following is from the Panjabee (Lahore), of the 13th June 1912 :—

"The question of Indian Industrial activity and direction probably requires examination here at more frequent intervals than in more settled countries of the world. For organisations are few and co-operation small between the various agencies that serve one another in leading to the success of any industry. Agriculture, the main industry of Indians, requires the co operation of a number of organised institutions. To begin with we want a more intelligent class of men to become its directors. We want the facilities of capital, water supply, implements, and easy means of conveyance to favourable markets. We want a more equalised system of assessment, the advantages of forests and water sources, the facilities of co-operative working and scientific investigations. In the field of other industries, the supply of cheap capital, the growth of raw produce, the supply of steady and efficient labour and above all the accessibility to steady markets are some of the requirements. It is clear that in the course of industrial progress each of these has to be developed and co-ordinated—a work which is by no means easy in the present conditions of the country. Those who feel discourged by the small progress made in the industrial revival of India will do well to consider the numerous difficulties that beset the path of earnest workers and patroits. As far as the Punjab is concerned, His Honour Sir Louis Dane gave a succinct account of our industrial condition in his memorable speech at the Lahore Exhibition in December, 1909. The Punjab is a province which has a field awaiting development of the greatest possible potentialities. There are large irrigational facilities which enable the people to grow enumerous quantities of raw produce, all of which at present leaves the country. It is the desire of those who look forward anxiously for industrial development, that these raw materials now exported should be utilised into manufactured articles as far as possible within the province. That alone will enrich the country and to this end facilities are being created. Many suggestions have been made as the establishment of agricultural schools, industrial schools, banks, markets, railroads and commercial organisations. Some of these have been adopted and others will be adopted. Defects and deficiencies are noted and improvements are adopted with a view to assimilate them to the local circumstances. But in the meanwhile two defects are noticeable. In the first place, the population is dwindling and there is always a deficiency of labourers. Let alone efficient and skilled labourers; even the unskilled workman is not available as largely as the existing industries require. The wages are said to be sufficiently attractive, but there are not men available and it is well-known that a fairly large number of domestic servants and others are imported from other provinces. Vital statistics disclose the fact that though the birth rates are high, death rates are equally high and increasing in certain districts and in certain period of the year. Under these circumstances there is always a greater tendency for wages to rise and the men and women seeking better employments, so far as they are available. How can industries that are established thrive and how can new industries be started when labour is scanty and cannot be had unless imported and paid highly? Even the Government departments that engage labour on a large scale, feel the difficulty and in one case, as has been explained, convict labour had to be requisitioned and employed with profit to the Jail Department. This is a position that has to be studied and suitable remedies adopted. The twin question of decrease of population and sanitary deficiencies must be taken up with earnestness. The mere fact that large quantities of raw agricultural produce are grown and exported does not lead to the creation of useful agricultural conditions. There must also be a thriving population available to obtain the necessary industrial training and be engaged in various industries. The old industrial organizations are broken up and cottage industries have all but perished. But what has taken their place? In the commercial field, which gives employment to a number of middle men as shop-keepers, brokers, bankers, export and import agents, a certain percentage of literate people are occupied. The total number of men and women employed in factories does not exceed 35,000. The average standard of life and intelligence in the masses is still very low. Nor have the Punjab people received the benefits of a liberal educational policy. It is said that both capital and brains are necessary to develop the industrial resources of the country and at the Industrial exhibitions and on platforms these requirements are most urged. But the social peculiarities of the province and the social disposition of the country forming the basis of economic welfare are given little or no attention. The next question is that of general and industial education. Without a wide and comprehensive scheme of education that will have the effect of raising the general intelligence of the masses, industrial revival can be little more than spasmodic. It is impossible to succeed in the field of open competition with materials so ill-organised and ill-prepared as in this country. Though Indian labour is comparatively cheap, its out-turn is poor and industrial organisers are not much impressed with the quality. There are besides no organizations, and no means of training. These are times of new Universities for which great enthusiasm prevails. Mass education, and higher education receive considerable attention, but technical education as a rule does not receive sufficient attention. The scheme of establishing technological institutions on a comprehensive basis in every province has to be matured and adopted as early as possible. In addition to the utilization of capital and raw produce which are usually advocated as the main instruments of industrial progress, we must adopt schemes of providing adequate and efficient labour. The Factories Act and the Companies Act might give protection to the workman and the investor. But what about a province like the Punjab where the population is dwindling and factories, according to Mr. A. Latifi, are not worked to their fullest capacity for want of working hands? We think it is necessary to concentrate attention on this question and secure such measures as will ensure a more hopeful condition of economic prosperty and industrial development."

C. STEAD,

SIMLA :
The 15th June 1912.

Assistant to the Deputy Inspector-General of Police,
Criminal Investigation Department, Punjab.

Punjab Govt. Branch Press, Simla—19-6-12—No. 24—107—H. L. S.

[ Confidential. ]

[ Vol. XXV. ] [ No. 25. ]

SELECTIONS

FROM THE

NATIVE NEWSPAPERS

PUBLISHED IN THE PUNJAB.

Examined up to 22nd June 1912.

---

CONTENTS.

| | | Page. |
|---|---|---|
| | I.—Politics. | |
| | (a) Foreign— | |
| 1. | Christian powers and the Islamic world (Munir) | 489 |
| 2. | Japan and Islam (Chaudhwin Sadi) ... ... | ib. |
| 3. | The Persian situation (Observer) ... ... | ib. |
| | (b) Home— | |
| 4. | Government of India Bill (Paisa Akhbar) ... | 489 |
| 5. | Mr. Montagu on Indian Muhammadans (Zamindar) ... ... ... ... | 490 |
| 6. | Muslim politics (Millat) ... ... ... | ib. |
| 7. | Proposed settlement of Bengalis in different parts of India (Bharat) ... ... ... | ib. |
| 8. | Moderation and extremism (Paisa Akhbar) ... | 491 |
| 9. | Hindus versus Muhammadans (Observer) ... | ib. |
| 10. | India and the Navy (Tribune) ... ... | ib. |
| 11. | Indian Public Services (Tribune) ... ... | ib. |
| | II.—Afghanistan and Trans-Frontier. | |
| 12. | Raids on the Frontier (Panjabee) ... ... | 492 |
| | III.—Native States. | |
| 13. | Hyderabad affairs (Paisa Akhbar) ... ... | 492 |
| 14. | Kashmir affairs (Vakil) ... ... ... | 493 |
| | IV.—Kine-killing. | |
| 15. | Aryas and cow-killing (Indar) ... ... | 493 |
| 16. | The jhatka question (Khalsa Advocate) ... | ib. |
| | V.—Native Societies and Religious Matters. | |
| 17. | The Arya Samaj and the new metropolis (Parkash, Arjun and Jhang Sial) ... ... ... | 494 |
| 18. | The Arya Samaj (Arjun) ... ... ... | 495 |
| 19. | The Satyarth Parkash (Arjun) ... ... | 496 |
| 20. | The Vedas and revelation (Indar) ... ... | ib. |
| 21. | Lala Munshi Ram (Ditto) ... ... | 497 |
| 22. | The forthcoming Hindu Conference (Jhang Sial Hindustan, Shanti, Jang Sial and Panjabee) ... | ib. |
| 23. | Restoration of a mosque to Muhammadans (Vakil) | 499 |
| 24. | Muhammadans and the Maharaja of Darbhanga (Panjabee) ... ... ... ... | ib. |
| 25. | Dharampal (Rajput Gazette and Moin) ... | ib. |
| | VI.—Legislation. | |
| 26. | The Press Act (Afghan and Zamindar) ... | 500 |
| 27. | Protection of minor girls (Panjabee) ... ... | 501 |
| 28. | A suggestion (Moin) ... ... ... | ib. |
| | VII.—General Administration. | |
| | (a) Judicial— | |
| 29. | A kidnapping case in Burma (Municipal Gazette and Sada-i-Hind) ... ... ... | 502 |
| 30. | Judges of Chief Court and the appointment of Colonel Beaden (Tribune) ... ... | ib. |
| | (b) Police— | |
| 31. | The Ambala riot case (Panjabee) ... ... | 502 |
| 32. | Police and crime in the Punjab (Panjabee) ... | 503 |
| | (c) Municipal and Cantonment affairs— | |
| | Nil. | |
| | (d) Education— | |
| 33. | The Muslim University (Zamindar) ... ... | 503 |
| | (e) Agriculture and questions affecting the land— | |
| | Nil. | |
| | (f) Railways and Communications— | |
| 34. | North-Western Railway (Jhang Sial) ... | 504 |
| | (g) Postal matters— | |
| | Nil. | |
| | (h) Miscellaneous— | |
| 35. | The Frontier Province (Punjab Advocate) ... | 504 |
| 36. | Ditto ( Ditto ) ... | 505 |
| 37. | Punjab and the Birthday Honours (Tribune) ... | ib. |
| 38. | The Linen League ( Ditto ) ... | 506 |
| 39. | The new Capital of India ( Ditto ) ... | ib. |
| 40. | Vaccination ( Ditto ) ... | 507 |

LIST OF NEWSPAPERS AND PERIODICALS EXAMINED BY THE SPECIAL BRANCH AS IT STOOD ON THE 22ND JUNE 1912.

| No. | Name. | Locality. | Name of Publisher. | Circulation. |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| | ENGLISH. | | | |
| | DAILY. | | | |
| 1 | Tribune ... | Lahore ... | Bihari Lal ... | 1,758 copies. |
| | TRI-WEEKLY. | | | |
| 2 | Panjabee ... | Lahore ... | Mul Chand ... | 2,424 copies. |
| | BI-WEEKLY. | | | |
| 3 | Observer ... | Lahore ... | Nizam-ud-din ... | 1,000 copies. |
| 4 | Punjab Times and Frontier News. | Rawalpindi ... | J. R. Thapur ... | 200 „ |
| | WEEKLY. | | | |
| 5 | Arya Patrika ... | Lahore ... | Devi Chand ... | 650 copies. |
| 6 | Harbinger ... | Do. ... | Durga Parshad ... | 300 „ |
| 7 | Khalsa Advocate ... | Amritsar ... | Bahadur Singh ... | 752 „ |
| | FORTNIGHTLY. | | | |
| 8 | Jijnasu ... | Lahore ... | Ishar Das ... | ... |
| | MONTHLY. | | | |
| 9 | D.A.-V. College Magazine ... | Lahore ... | Saraswati Nath ... | 1,000 copies. |
| 10 | Forman Christian College Notes.* | Do. ... | ... | ... |
| 11 | Practical Medicine ... | Delhi ... | ... | ... |
| 12 | Punjab Educational Journal | Lahore ... | R. B. Mohan Lal ... | 700 copies. |
| 13 | Punjab Mission News ... | Do. ... | Revd. Wigram ... | 250 „ |
| 14 | Ravi ... | Do. ... | Mr. B. M. Jones ... | ... |
| 15 | Review of Religions ... | Kadian (Gurdaspur) ... | Sadr Anjuman Ahmadia, Qadian. | 800 copies. |
| 16 | Science Grounded Religion... | Lahore ... | Dev Rattan ... | 25 „ |
| 17 | Teacher ... | Dinga (Gujrat) ... | Kanhaya Singh ... | 200 „ |
| | URDU. | | | |
| | DAILY. | | | |
| 18 | Akhbar-i-'Am ... | Lahore ... | Govind Sahai ... | 630 copies. |
| 19 | Paisa Akhbar ... | Do. ... | Abdul Aziz ... | 1,011 „ |
| 20 | Watan ... | Do. ... | Muhammad Insha Alla ... | ... |
| 21 | Zamindar ... | Do. ... | Zafar Ali Khan, B.A. ... | ... |
| | BI-WEEKLY. | | | |
| 22 | Vakil ... | Amritsar ... | Abdul Aziz ... | 1,970 copies. |
| | WEEKLY. | | | |
| 23 | Afghan ... | Peshawar ... | Saiyid Muhammad Abdulla | 500 copies. |
| 24 | Ahl-i-Hadis ... | Amritsar ... | Sana-ulla ... | 925 „ |
| 25 | Ahluwalia Gazette ... | Do. ... | Lehna Singh ... | 500 „ |
| 26 | Al-Moin ... | Do. ... | Mehraj-ud-din ... | ... |
| 27 | Army News ... | Ludhiana ... | Hira Lal & Co. ... | 1,300 copies. |
| 28 | Arorbans Gazette ... | Amritsar ... | Labh Singh ... | ... |
| 29 | Arya Gazette ... | Lahore ... | Bhowani Das ... | 550 copies. |
| 30 | Badar ... | Qadian, Gurdaspur District | Muhammad Sadiq ... | 200 „ |

* Not received during the month.

LIST OF NEWSPAPERS AND PERIODICALS EXAMINED BY THE SPECIAL BRANCH AS IT STOOD ON THE 22ND JUNE 1912—CONTINUED.

| No. | Name. | Locality. | Name of Publisher. | Circulation. |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| | URDU—CONTINUED. | | | |
| | WEEKLY—continued. | | | |
| 31 | Bharat ... | Jullundur ... | Thakur Sheoratan Singh ... | ... |
| 32 | Chaudhwin Sadi ... | Rawalpindi ... | Haji Ahmad ... | ... |
| 33 | Civil and Military News ... | Ludhiana ... | Saiyid Muhammad ... | 1,325 copies. |
| 34 | Curzon Gazette ... | Delhi ... | Mirza Hairat ... | 111 „ |
| 35 | Delhi Gazette* ... | Do. ... | Sajjad Husain ... | 200 „ |
| 36 | Hakim ... | Qadian, Gurdaspur D s rict | Yakub Ali ... | 900 „ |
| 37 | Haq ... | Delhi ... | Kasim Ali ... | 200 „ |
| 38 | Haq Pasand ... | Amritsar ... | Ram Nath ... | 382 „ |
| 39 | Hindu ... | Lahore ... | Hari Lal Sharma ... | ... |
| 40 | Hindustan ... | Do. ... | Ram Saran Dutt ... | 8,070 copies. |
| 41 | Indar ... | Do. ... | Dharm Pal, B.A. ... | ... |
| 42 | Islam* ... | Do. ... | Abdul Latif ... | 200 copies. |
| 43 | Jhang Sial ... | Jhang ... | Prabh Dyal ... | 2,262 „ |
| 44 | Kapurthala Akhbar ... | Kapurthala ... | Hamid Husain ... | 155 „ |
| 45 | Loyal Gazette ... | Lahore ... | Amar Singh ... | 200 „ |
| 46 | Lytton Gazette ... | Delhi ... | Bulaki Das ... | 1,000 „ |
| 47 | Milap* ... | Lyallpur ... | Jawahar Lal ... | ... |
| 48 | Millat ... | Lahore ... | Shuja Ulla ... | 1,500 copies. |
| 49 | Mister Gazette ... | Do. ... | Ali Bakhsh ... | 150 „ |
| 50 | Munir ... | Jhang ... | Hafiz Khuda Bakhsh ... | 200 „ |
| 51 | Musalman ... | Amritsar ... | Sana-ulla ... | 400 „ |
| 52 | Nur ... | Qadian, Gurdaspur District | Muhammad Yusaf ... | 200 „ |
| 53 | Nur Afshan ... | Ludhiana ... | Revd. Dr. E. M. Wherry ... | 500 „ |
| 54 | Paisa Akhbar ... | Lahore ... | Abdul Aziz ... | 8,377 „ |
| 55 | Parkash ... | Do. ... | Krishan ... | 1,723 „ |
| 56 | Punjab Advocate ... | Mianwali ... | Karm Chand, Bahl ... | 1,000 „ |
| 57 | Punjab Samachar ... | Lahore ... | Hira Lal ... | 705 „ |
| 58 | Rajput Gazette ... | Do. ... | Thakur Sukhram Das ... | 650 „ |
| 59 | Municipal Gazette and Sada-i-Hind.* | Do. ... | Din Muhammad ... | 500 „ |
| 60 | Sadiq-ul-Akhbar ... | Bahawalpur ... | Maulvi Ata Ullah ... | 392 „ |
| 61 | Ditto ... | Rewari ... | Safdar Hussain ... | 200 „ |
| 62 | Sanatan Dharm Pracharak ... | Amritsar ... | Rulia Ram ... | 200 „ |
| 63 | Shanti ... | Rawalpindi ... | Kishan Chand Mohan ... | 300 „ |
| 64 | Sialkot Paper ... | Sialkot ... | Todar Mal ... | 500 „ |
| 65 | Siraj-ul-Akhbar ... | Jhelum ... | Maulvi Fakir Muhammad | 450 „ |
| 66 | Tahzib-ul-Niswan ... | Lahore ... | Mumtaz Ali ... | 240 „ |
| 67 | Victoria Paper ... | Sialkot ... | Gian Chand ... | 600 „ |

*Not received during the week.

LIST OF NEWSPAPERS AND PERIODICALS EXAMINED BY THE SPECIAL BRANCH AS IT STOOD ON THE 22ND JUNE 1912—CONCLUDED.

| No. | Name. | Locality. | Name of Publisher. | Circulation. |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| | URDU—CONCLUDED. | | | |
| | WEEKLY—concluded. | | | |
| 68 | Waqt ... | Lahore ... | Ali Husain ... | 200 copies. |
| 69 | Watan ... | Do. ... | Muhammad Insha Ullah ... | 1,800 „ |
| 70 | Zamindar ... | Do. ... | Zafar Ali Khan, B.A. ... | 750 „ |
| | FORTNIGHTLY. | | | |
| 71 | Biwah Samachar ... | Lahore ... | Ram Chand ... | 300 copies. |
| 72 | Kam Dhenu ... | Ludhiana ... | Daulat Ram ... | 100 „ |
| 73 | Mohyal Gazette ... | Kala, Jhelum District ... | Mehta Sham Das ... | 250 „ |
| | MONTHLY. | | | |
| 74 | Arorbans Parkash* ... | Lahore ... | Salig Ram ... | 200 copies. |
| 75 | Arya Musafir ... | Jullundur ... | Wazir Chand ... | 1,300 „ |
| 76 | Jauhar ... | Amritsar ... | Muhammad Ismail Khan ... | 200 „ |
| 77 | Kakezai Social Reformer ... | Lahore ... | Fazl Din ... | 200 „ |
| 78 | Makhzan ... | Delhi ... | Abdul Kadir ... | 4,000 „ |
| 79 | Rafiq* ... | Lahore ... | Charinji Lal ... | 500 „ |
| 80 | Sadhu ... | Do. ... | Sheobart Lal ... | 500 „ |
| 81 | Martand ... | Do. ... | Kanhya Lal ... | 250 „ |
| 82 | Raghbir Patrika ... | Do. ... | Prab Dial ... | 500 „ |
| 83 | Zaban* ... | Delhi ... | Hamid Husain ... | 500 „ |
| | GURMUKHI. | | | |
| | WEEKLY. | | | |
| 84 | Khalsa Sewak ... | Amritsar ... | Jiwan Singh ... | 1,000 copies. |
| 85 | Punjab Reporter* ... | Do. ... | Ganda Singh ... | ... |
| 86 | Punjabi Surma* ... | Lahore ... | Gian Chand ... | 1,000 copies. |

* Not received during the week.

I.—Politics.

(a)—Foreign.

Christian powers and the Islamic world.

1. The Munir (Jhang), of the 8th June 1912, has an article headed "If a universal war breaks out the responsibility will lie on certain Christian powers." The entire Islamic world, says the paper, is on a bed of thorns because of the treatment which the Muscovites have accorded to Persia in general, and the Meshed shrine in particular. Muhammadans, it adds, can stand no comparison with Russia, but they do not care a pin for this, the sole object of their lives being to sacrifice themselves for their religious and sacred places. Next it refers to the recent rising in Morocco, and goes on to say that the patience of the Turks also has been well-nigh exhausted through Italy daily making further mischief. In short, the Muhammadan world has come to be reduced to the position in which a cat driven to bay flies at the throat of its canine assailant. This means that the excesses and intrigues of certain Christian powers are about to seriously disturb the world's peace, which the British lion alone can preserve. In conclusion, the paper remarks that the Islamic world has of late been enquiring why England does not rescue the oppressed (? Muhammadans) out of the clutches of the oppressors (? the aforesaid Christian powers).

Japan and Islam.

2. The Chaudhwin Sadi (Rawalpindi), of the 8th (received on the 15th) June 1912, publishes an article headed "Propagation of Islam : possibility of Japan embracing Islam : responsibilities of Indian Muhammadans." Adverting to Japan's search after a new religion, the paper opines that there is a great likelihood of her choice falling on the Prophet's faith. Next it says that Indian Muhammadans alone can help in bringing about that result, and that the easiest course for them to adopt would be to distribute broadcast in the Mikado's dominions Arnold's Preaching of Islam, Sir Sayad's Essays on the Life of Muhammad, and Amir Ali's Life and Teachings of Muhammad. In conclusion, it expresses the hope that the Hon'ble Captain Malik Muhammad Mubariz Khan "will undertake to supply the want" (? will finance the undertaking).

The Persian situation.

3. The following is from the Observer (Lahore), of the 15th June 1912 :—

"The Persian Consul-General has just received news from Persia which will afford great pleasure to our readers. It states that Salar-ed-Dowlah has fled from Kermanshah, being defeated by the Imperial troops, who have taken possession of the city. The situation has greatly improved at Shiraz and Bandar Abbas. Intimation has been received that the Government at Teheran is perfectly satisfied that the recent reported encroachment of the Afghans on the Persian border was not of any consequence, and did not indicate any hostile attitude on the part of the Amir's Government. It is believed that the movement of Afghan troops for the customary change of guards gave rise to a false alarm. As for the departure during the continuance of a ministerial crisis of the Persian Regent from Persia, as announced by the Reuter, it was expected from him. Abdul Kasim Khan Nasr-ul-Mulk evidently had a distaste for the Regency. Though appointed in September 1910, he took four-and-a-half, months to reach Teheran and even then made many stipulations before accepting the High office. He may be a great patriot. He may have secretly done much to maintain the integrity and independence of Persia. But his Regency has only synchronised with humiliation upon humiliation for the land of his birth. The dismissal of Mr. Shuster, the abolition of the Majliss, the acceptance of the degrading terms of the Russian ultimatums, the Muscovite atrocities at Tabriz, the desecration of the shrine at Meshed, and the Regent's leaving his country in the hour of its gravest need,—these are the things for which 'one of Persia's best men', as an Anglo-Indian journal styles him, will be remembered by the Muhammadans at large."

(b)—Home.

Government of India Bill.

4. The Paisa Akhbar (Lahore), of the 12th June 1912, publishes an article headed "Bengal Governor's annual stay at Dacca." It was moved by Lord Ronaldshay the paper says, that there should be inserted in the Government of India Bill a section to the effect that "the Governor of Bengal shall reside at Dacca for at least two months in the year." The suggestion was not, however, accepted by Mr. Montagu, who has afforded, in the course of the discussion on the Bill, "deplorable proof" of his ignorance of Indian affairs, especially of the condition of Muhammadans, and of his indifference to the political interests of the (? Indian) Empire. After remarking that he made use of the lame excuse that there existed no precedent for incorporating the suggested section in the Bill, the paper endeavours to meet the objections raised by him against the suggestion. As to the stress, it adds, laid by Mr. Montagu on the promises by the responsible authorities about the Governor of Bengal's annual stay at Dacca, far stronger promises were made in Parliament and the (Viceroy's) Legislative Council that the Partition of Bengal was a "settled fact." When, however, these promises have been utterly disregarded, Muhammadans deserve to be pardoned for distrusting even other promises and for insisting on the same being given the form of law.

Mr. Montagu on Indian Muhammadans.

5. The Zamindar (Lahore), of the 11th June 1912, publishes an article headed "Short-sightedness of the Under-Secretary of State for India." It was but natural, it says, that Indian Muhammadans should have raised their voice against the wholly unfair and improper attack which Mr. Montagu recently delivered against their nationality. Even enlightened and fair-minded Englishmen, adds the paper, have not approved of the conduct of the Under-Secretary of State for this country. After quoting an extract from the United India and Native States in support of the assertion, it says that Mr. Montagu himself admitted sometime ago that the Muhammadans of India were a nation. His conduct, it adds, in now contradicting himself for no reason and in deliberately trying to split up the Muslim nation can only suggest the inference that he regards Musalmans as being so much wax in his hands. If the United India and Native States had known all this, it would assuredly have joined the Bombay Gazette in asking that Mr. Montagu should be compelled to withdraw his words, which have offended seven crores of the King Emperor's Muslim subjects.

Muslim politics.

6. The Millat (Lahore), of the 7th (received on the 14th) June 1912, publishes a leader headed "Our present position and our duty." After referring to the feelings caused among Muhammadans by the reversal of the Partition of Bengal, the paper says that the event had the effect of upsetting even very thoughtful Musalmans and of making them pen and utter words which they ought not to have used. These words, it adds, afforded a golden opportunity for those (Muslim) journals which had been on the look-out for an excuse to cause prejudice against Government and to mislead the (Muhammadan) community. Next the paper takes exception to the conduct of the Nawab Vicar-ul-Mulk in having published in the Aligarh Institute Gazette his well-known letter on the subject of annulment of the Partition. Continuing it observes that things have now come to such a pass that the majority of the Prophet's followers regard those people as their leaders and sympathisers who, only a few months back, used to be looked upon as enemies of the (Islamic) community. Any one desirous of acquiring influence with the Muslim Public now openly defends Congressionist views, and advises Muhammadans to resort to agitation. It, therefore, behoves those leaders whose conduct has misled their co-religionists to mend matters; while the real well-wishers of the community should step forward and declare that those who ask it to join hands with the (National) Congress or to set up an agitation against Government, are its enemies.

Proposed settlement of Bengalis in different parts of India.

7. The Bharat (Jullundur), of the 7th (received on the 13th) June 1912, has an article headed "Commotion among Bengalis and new life." The proposed settlement of a large number of Bengalis at Delhi, in the United Provinces, and in other parts of India, says the paper, would prove instrumental in giving the Hindi language a stimulus, and would also breathe new life into the country. The progress made by the Bengalis, it adds, would be shared by other classes of the people, while the former would learn from the latter things not known to them as yet. Great (and diverse) facilities would thus be afforded to the Indian people, especially to Aryas.

Moderation and extremism.

8. The Paisa Akhbar (Lahore), of the 14th June 1912, publishes an article headed "Moderation overcomes extremism." Referring to the nomination of Mr. Gokhale as President of the next session of the National Congress, the paper remarks that the choice has commended itself to United Bengal and that other provinces also are likely to approve the same. There was a time, it adds, when the Hindu community and Congress leaders looked down upon Mr. Gokhale's politics and praised men like Tilak, Bepin Chandar Pal, and Arabindo Ghosh. Now, however, they have changed their views, and have come to realise that they can secure the colonial form of self-government only with the aid of moderation. Continuing, the paper takes exception to the conduct of those who advise the establishment of a Muslim liberal party and ask the Muhammadan press to indulge in strong writings.

Hindus versus Muhammadans.

9. The following is from the Observer (Lahore), of the 15th June 1912 :—

"While commenting on the nomination of two Muhammadans as Assistant Traffic Superintendents for State Railways, we recently remarked that the Tribune which calls itself an Indian in contradistinction to a Hindu journal ought to have rejoiced at the fact that of the three candidates selected by the Railway Board two were Indians. But so far from rejoicing, our contemporary and other Hindu newspapers have gone into hysterics over the matter. These journals fell into similar convulsions in March last, when of the eight candidates nominated by the Punjab Chief Court for Munsifship six happened to be Muhammadans. A few months later, however, when the Chief Court selected 5 Hindus and only 2 Musalmans as candidates for the E. A. C. Examination, our contemporaries kept absolutely quiet and forgot everything about proportion in the population. Again, only a few days ago the Tribune announced that both the Assistant Sanitary Commissioners appointed in the United Provinces, Dr. Nehru and Dr. Pande, were 'Indians.' It need hardly be pointed out that both these are Hindus, and though the Muslim journals are being accused by our Hindu friends of spreading separatism, not a single Musalman newspaper has passed adverse comments on the nomination of the Hindu Doctors. It is very rare to find a writer in an 'Indian' journal animadverting at favours being lavished on the Hindus. It is only when justice is done to the Musalmans that their ire is roused. In the vocabulary of these journalists 'Indian' and 'Hindu', on the one hand, and 'Musalman' and 'Foreigner', on the other, are apparently synonymous. Well might an Indian Muhammadan say: 'Nationalism, nationalism, what sins are committed in thy name.'"

India and the Navy.

10. The following is from the Tribune (Lahore), of the 16th June 1912 :—

"The enthusiasm for the defence of the Empire has made many ardent Imperialists forget even the propriety of things. India is a well defended country, and it has very little fear of an attack by the sea. Still India pays for the Eastern Squadron which cruises in Indian waters. We also pay a considerable portion of the expenses of the defence of the Persian Gulf. Besides maintaining a large army India has to pay for the training of the British Army in India. As if this were not enough Captain Newman asked in the House of Commons whether the Government of India had made overtures or had been approached with a view to India providing a fleet of cruisers to patrol the coast. Mr Churchill's reply is assuring. He said that the sea defence of India like that of the rest of the Empire rests primerily on the strength of the fleet as a whole. The East India Squadron is quite competent for the purpose. The first Lord of the Admiralty, however, suggested that the present relations between the Admiralty and the Government of India were of a temporary character and subject to reconsideration in due course. We hope this question will be allowed to rest where it is.

Indian public services.

11. The following is from the Tribune (Lahore), of the 20th June 1912 :—

"The news telegraphed by Reuter on the authority of the Times, that the Government has decided to appoint a Royal Commission to enquire into the various public services in India generally, will be received with pleasure throughout India. The way in which Lord Curzon reorganised the various public services in India and the water-tight compartments into which he divided the services, social considerations determining the principle line of demarcation—caused great dissatisfaction throughout the country. Lord Curzon practically ignored the solemn pledges given by Queen Victoria in 1858 and the promises made by successive British statesmen to widen the basis of the employment of Indians in position of trust and responsibility. The lines on which he reorganised the services caused general and widespread dissatisfaction, because he made European birth and nationality an essential—if not the most essential qualification—for the higher and better-paid posts in all branches of the public service. The Indian National Congress has entered most emphatic and vigorous protests against the arrangements made by Lord Curzon. Questions have been asked and Resolutions moved in the Viceregal Legislative Council with the view to show how unsatisfactory is the situation in which the people of India find themselves with reference to their employment in the higher grades of the various branches of the public service. The Liberal Ministery has done well in deciding upon the appointment of a Royal Commission, for a Commission appointed by the Government of India would not have given satisfaction. We have every hope that Indian interests will be adequately represented on the Commission, and that really independent Indian members will find a place on the Commission. The last Commission which investigated into the public services was appointed in 1886 by Lord Dufferin when Viceroy of India. It was presided over by Sir Charles Aitchison, at one time Lieutenant-Governor of the Punjab. It is understood that the Royal Commission to be now appointed will be a strong one and that members will be chosen both from England and from India and they will be 'men of such status, European and Indian, as will ensure full weight being attached to their recommendations.' It is quite true that the choise of a President will require a good deal of discrimination and care. Both the manner in which the enquiry will be made and the final shape that the report might assume will depend very largely on the personality of the President. His Majesty's Government will, it is hoped, 'seek some one high in public estimation and of commanding ability, not a mere politician or an official with narrow views.' We want the Commission to be presided over by some eminent British statesman in whose impartiality and judgment all classes have confidence. It is quite true that the work of the Commission will be largely determined by the direction which the President can give it."

II.—Afghanistan and Trans-Frontier.

Raids on the Frontier.

12. The Panjabee (Lahore), of the 20th June 1912, publishes the following from his Dera Ismail Khan correspondent :—

"The lot of the Hindus on the Frontier is becoming harder and more pitiable day by day. If the chief protection the authorities can offer them against the raiders is an invitation for settling in towns, (as the D. C. of Bannu is said to have explained in a circular) the sooner the Government announces its policy publicly the better. Hindus will then dispose of their lands and houses in villages and shift with bag and baggage to towns. They may lose in other ways but surely their lives will be safe. As matters stand at present, these every day raids in which the Hindus are the chief if not the sole sufferers, are a standing blot on the Frontier administration. People refuse to believe that the mighty British Raj is powerless to put a stop to the ravages of these savage outlaws; and yet they find it equally difficult to believe that having got the power, the authorities have not got the will to stop them! The real defect lies in the system under which Muhammadans are being made to oust Hindus in all departments in this province and entire administration is being gradually Muhammadanised. The Border Police is exclusively Muhammadan; the police consists mainly of Muhammadans; the number of Hindus in the Provincial Service has been reduced to three, one or two of whom are on the verge of retirement; Muhammadan Tahsildars and Naib Tahsildars, some without even having passed the Departmental test and others far below in the list, have been given lifts disproportionate to their attainments while Hindus with better experience and abilities have been left coldly in the shade. Even the Education Department avoids the Hindus. The Pan-Islamic spirit pervades the Muhammadan community now-a-days everywhere and has had its effect on the Trans-border tribes. The fact has judicially been brought to light in several cases that raiders when entering a village have openly shouted that their Moslem brothers should keep away and not interfere with their work (of looting the Hindu Kafirs). It is absolutely necessary for the protection of the Hindus, that the Border Police should entirely be abolished and the Frontier posts guarded by Military Sikhs, Gurkhas, and the like. The civil administration should not be monopolised by the Muhammadans and the Hindus should be placed on an equal footing with them."

III.—Native States.

Hyderabad affairs.
*The brackets are the paper's.

13. The Paisa Akhbar (Lahore), of the 14th June 1912, publishes a communication from (Nawab)* Abdulla Khan, of Kasmandi (United Provinces), under the heading "Exposure of the Hyderabad Conspiracy." The Nawab says that a Madras native paper, which is conducted in English, has sent him, for signature, a typed letter, which covers 4 pages of the foolscap size and bears his name as the writer thereof. The communication, it adds, constitutes, a most unfair attacks on the Nizam and His Highness' government and appeals to Government to at once appoint a (State) Council (to Administer Hyderabad). He also learns from the paper named that an officer of the Hyderabad Police has gone to Madras to secure the manuscripts of all the writings contributed by him (the Nawab) to the local press. After denying that the letter in question was written by him, he says that evidently plots continue to be hatched against him. Next he regrets that "Mr. Hankin's Police" should also he concerned in the conspiracies, and goes on to assert that he has not written to any Indian paper, excepting the Paisa Akhbar, on Hyderabad affairs. As to his writing against His Highness the Nizam, it is an utter impossibility.

Kashmir affairs.

14. The Vakil (Amritsar), of the 8th (received on the 19th) June 1912, has a note headed "Permit and Excise Department, Jammu and Kashmir State." It publishes statements to show that, although Muhammadans form more than 90 per cent. of the population of the State, there are only 19 of them among the 277 officials employed in the aforesaid department. Next it deprecates the indifference of the Darbar and highly-placed Muslim officers in Kashmir to the paucity of Musalmans in the State service. "In the first place," it adds, "no regard is paid to the interests of Muhammadans, and even if there appears a ray of hope it is very soon extinguished in the darkness of (religious) bigotry.

IV.—Kine-killing.

Aryas and cow-killing.

15. The Indar (Lahore), of the 14th June 1912, publishes an advertisement from the Manager announcing the publication of an Urdu translation (priced at Rs. 1-8-0 a copy) of the 1875 edition of the Satyarth Parkash. The advertisement is headed "The genuine Satyarth Parkash and the cow-killing controversy," and says, among other things, that the question of slaughtering kine has been given a political character; that it has been widening the gulf between Hindus and Muhammadans; that the Arya Samaj also has been carried away by this political question; that some short-sighted members of the Samaj miss no opportunity of inflaming Hindus against Muslims and Christians over the killing of cows; but that Swami Dayanand has, in the above edition of the Satyarth Parkash, permitted the killing of kine and oxen on the authority of the Brahman granths.

The jhatka question.

16. The following is from the Khalsa Advocate (Lahore), of the 14th June 1912 :—

"The occasional outburst of the so-called religious feelings of the Muhammadan community in the Punjab against the use of jhatka meat by the Hindus and Sikhs raises a larger question than a local one.

"Hardly a month passes, when we do not hear from some quarter or other of the Province that attempts are being made by the Muhammadan officials to rouse racial feelings in regard to this question. We therefore draw the special attention of the Punjab Government as well as of the Government of India to this problem, which demands judicious and immediate handling by those in authority, if it is required to restore the fullest confidence amongst the Sikhs for an equal and fair treatment at the hands of the Sarkar.

"Sikhs are by nature a Military race and consequently the bulk of them are meat eating. We have pointed out times without number, that for a Sikh to use halal meat is an act of apostasy. The authorities then wish that the Sikhs should either become out and out vegetarians, or degenerate into apostates by resorting to halal meat.

"If not the action of the Deputy Commissioner of Hoshiarpur in the case reported recently in our columns seems inexplicable. That in a matter of this kind, the bonâ fides of the consumers should be doubted and a political or propagandist motive ascribed to the desire of the Hindus and Sikhs to use Jhatka meat, shows that those who are responsible for an order of this kind are not correctly informed about the ritualistic principles of Sikhism or the general feelings of the dumb masses. Unfortunately for us Sikhs the powers that be are mostly surrounded by Muhammadan officials, or refer the matters for enquiry to these departments of service, which eventually happen to be manned mainly by Muhammadan officials. Should the Government be kind enough to collect accurate statistics from all places where this agitation against the Jhatka meat has been raised and start independent enquiries as how many cases out of them may be ascribed to artifical agitation raised by local Muhammadan officials, it would expose to view a state of affairs, which would require an immediate and vigorous action to put a stop to a growing scandal which may, if allowed to grow in magnitude, undermine the faith of a most loyal community in the British sense of Justice.

"As for the religious feelings of the Mussalmans being injured by the use of jhatka meat by the Hindus and Sikhs or by the opening of shops for the sale of the same, the less said the better. We have the authority of the highest Judicial Tribunal of the Province that as a fact Muhammadan religious feelings cannot be and are not wounded by the opening of jhatka shops or by the use by other people of the jhatka meat. Muhammadans do not reverence goats, and when other people slaughter them in a manner not permitted by their Shariat, they are not obliged to go and stare at them. We append below the judgment of the Chief Court of the Punjab, which is so far the only and the best and soundest pronouncement on the subject, and it should serve as an eye-opener to all who are busily engaged in raising a useless agitation over this affair. The Sikhs only pray for a fair treatment and ask that all communities may act upon the noble principle of 'live and let live.'

"As regards the authorities, who control the destinies of the people, we would once more enter our respectful but strong and emphatic protest against any inequitable treatment of the Sikhs in this and other matters. We must say that the conditions laid down in the letter of the Deputy Commissioner to the Vice-President of the Municipal Committee of Hoshiarpur, dated the 30th March 1912, which was printed in our issue of the 22nd May last, are not sound and just. We reproduce elsewhere the order of S. S. Thorburn, Esquire, late Financial Commissioner of the Punjab, passed by him as Commissioner of the Rawalpindi Division in a case of similar nature. Few officers are better acquainted with the Muhammadan feelings in the province than Mr. Thorborn, and we emphatically repeat what he has so well described to be the only principles on which such cases should be decided.

"He says—

"'The only just principle on which to settle it was that Hindus (including Sikhs) should be meted out exactly equal justice with Muhammadans, i. e., religious animosities being roused, if it was found necessary to alter site of Jhatkakhana at all the new site should have been selected so as to give the Hindus and Sikhs the exact same advantage as Muhammadans with respect to their Zibakhana and the same as to jhatka shops and Muhammadan butcher's shops.'

"We shall wait to see what action the authorities now take to settle this affair once for all and may revert to the subject in some later issue."

V.—Native Societies and Religious Matters.

The Arya Samaj and the new metropolis.

17. The Parkash (Lahore), of the 4th June 1912, has a note headed "Necessity for making Delhi the centre of the Arya Samaj" (marked for translation on the 17th). It says that Delhi, having been converted into the metropolis of India, will now receive visits from noted, learned and patriotic people, merchants, noblemen, and ruling chiefs from all parts of the country. After remarking that such a city must be made the centre of the Arya Samaj, the paper observes that the efforts to spread the Samajic movement to all parts of India have not so far been crowned with success. Were, however, Delhi made the stronghold of the Samaj the object in view could, to some extent, be achieved. If the local Arya Samaj were so strong as to influence "people going there" from "all the provinces" they could return to their homes with the Arya influence on them. The Samaj named is strong enough; but, in order to enable it to work all the year round, it is necessary that fearless, virtuous, and able persons should join it and strengthen the hands of the present workers. This want would be supplied to some extent on the location of the head-quarters of the Government of India at Delhi. In order to fully meet the same, however, it is necessary that those (Hindu) gentlemen in Delhi, who believe in the Vedic religion at heart but are not connected with the Arya Samaj, should be induced to join it and to participate in its sorrows and joys. The paper further suggests that a well-behaved, scholarly, and staunch Arya Pandit, e.g., Brahmanand, should make the new metropolis his head-quarters. Again two papers—one conducted in English and the other in Hindi—should be published at Delhi. They should be of a political character, but their proprietors and editors should be Arya Samajists. Their object should consist, not in disseminating the doctrines of the Arya Samaj, but in popularising its work. Mahashai Ram Dev would be the best man to edit the English periodical, but the Gurukula can on no account dispense with his services. After remarking that some other fit person should, therefore, be found for the purpose, the paper suggests that a company with a capital of thirty or forty thousand rupees should be established to start the journals. If Aryas, it adds, were convinced of the necessity of issuing two powerful weeklies, if not dailies, from Delhi, it would not be difficult to collect Rs. 40,000 from them.

The Arjun (Lahore), of the 11th June 1912, comments on the above under the heading "Preparation of the Arya Samaj fort at Delhi." The Parkash, it says, wishes to spread the prevailing Samajic movement, which is a source of hundreds of evils, to all parts of the country. That paper does not desire the dissemination of the Vedic religion, which favours the brotherhood of man and teaches (men) to be loyal to their rulers. Again, its words about making Delhi the stronghold of the Arya Samaj are worthy of being pondered over. Why should the word "fort" be used in respect of the Samaj, which is said to be a religious society ?

The Jhang Sial (Lahore), of the 13th June 1912, says that the Parkash has made a serious mistake, which is likely to result in the condemnation of the Arya Samaj as a body. That paper suggests that two Arya political journals should be issued from Delhi and that Mahashai Ram Dev, Professor, Gurukula, would be the best man to edit the English periodical. Does not this prove that Ram Dev also is a politician and that only political papers can lend support to the Arya Samaj ? Again, does the Editor of the Parkash hold the same view of the papers of those Aryas who are extremists in politics ? If this is so, he should know that the seed he wishes to sow will produce deadly poison for the Samaj. The efforts to try, by means of political papers, to popularise the Arya Samaj without disseminating its doctrines are shameful and unbecoming.

The Arya Samaj.

18. The Arjun (Lahore), of the 11th (received on the 17th) June 1912, has an article headed "Is not the Arya Samaj a political body ? Worthy of the notice of Government." Some members of the Arya Samaj, it says, consider it necessary to take part in politics, and it is owing to these men that not a few Government officers suspect the entire Samaj to be a political body. Continuing, the paper states that Lalas Munshi Ram and Hans Raj attended the National Congress held at Lahore in 1909, while the former's sons, Harish Chandra and Indar Chandra, and Mr. Mahesh Charan Singh, Professor of the Gurukula, were present at the recent session at Calcutta. Nor is this all. Certain associations, which should be regarded as off-shoots of the Arya Samaj, are being placed under the influence of Bengali political workers. Now quite a large number of persons in Samajic circles are openly (showing) "a consciousness of political requirements." Next the paper refers to the note published by the Parkash, dated the 4th instant, under the heading "Necessity for making Delhi the centre of the Arya Samaj" (vide preceding paragraph). The writing, it adds, should show to what extent "the existing Arya Samaj" actually dabbles in politics or is supposed by the journal named to do so. The Parkash suggests that two political papers should be issued from Delhi, and that they should be used, not to disseminate the doctrines of the Samaj, but to popularise its work. Can that paper, however, say how the work of a society can be popularised without making known the objects thereof ? Besides, cannot the work of a religious body like the Arya Samaj be made popular except by means of political newspapers ? It is possible to do so, but the thing is that many a short-sighted Arya Samajist has politics on the brain at all hours. The Samaj is undoubtedly a religious society, but a large number of persons in it are desirous of gradually converting it into a political body. The Editor has frequently talked with these men, but their invariable reply was that, if the circle of the Arya Samaj was to greatly extend in India some time hence, who but Aryas would then take part in political matters? His own opinion is that, if the responsible authorities of the Samaj do not stem the dangerous wave (of politics) which has of late been passing over "Samajic circles," the final results will prove disastrous for both Aryas and the country, while Government will have to face a multitude of difficulties. He than goes on to say that the Parkash writes that it strongly feels the necessity (for publishing two political papers at Delhi), but that it cannot place all its reasons before its readers. This clearly means that, if the real want of political papers were explained in plain language, Government might perhaps look into the matter. The Editor of the Parkash has, therefore, expressed himself in a round-about manner. It may also be mentioned here that he is closely connected, not only with the Arya Samaj, but also with the Pratinidhi Sabha; and that the ideas embodied by him in the aforesaid note are, therefore, calculated to at least exercise considerable influence on the Arya Samajes in the Punjab. Again, he suggests that Ram Dev, Professor of the Gurukula, would be the best person to edit the (English) political paper which he wishes to see issued from Delhi. This also shows clearly enough that the wave of politics referred to has engulfed even the teachers at the Gurukula; for, otherwise, the above suggestion would not have been made. Proceeding, the Arjun remarks that no thoughtful Arya should issue, from Delhi or any other city, any political paper to popularise the Samaj, nor should the responsible authorities allow the publication of the papers spoken of in the Parkash. It further remarks that the Rajput Gazette is still more plain-spoken than the Parkash, and says in its issue, dated the 8th June, that there is nothing criminal in participating in politics, which Government itself wishes Indians to discuss.

The Satyarth Parkash.

19. The Arjun (Lahore), of the 11th (received on the 17th) June 1912, publishes an article headed "Mistakes in the existing Satyarth Parkash and a strong challenge to Arya Samajists." The paper refers to, and controverts, several religious points discussed in the above book. It also quotes the following passage, which, it says, had no place in the original edition, and enquires when and by whom it was included in the Satyarth Parkash:—

"Let alone (their) governing other countries, Aryas do not, owing to adversity, their indolence, negligence and disunion, rule even India with perfect freedom and fearlessness; and foreigners are trampling even on what (still) remains."

The Vedas and revelation.

20. The Indar (Lahore), of the 14th June 1912, has an article headed "The Vedas and revelation." They are grossly mistaken, says the Editor, who assert that the Vedas were revealed in the form of books, and that revelations were made only in the beginning of the world. He believes in inspiration, but holds the view that the sort of inspiration believed in in the Arya Samaj is a silly superstition of barbarous times. The Arya idea of revelation, he adds, reduces God to the position of a common Brahman, and the Vedas to that of "one-eyed angels." Continuing, he remarks that so terrible a war is being waged in "the existing Arya Samaj" against knowledge and commonsense that "any one displaying the least independence of opinion is set down as deserving of being hanged." The fun of it, moreover, is that such fatwas emanate mostly from men who are hypocrites of the first water, and have joined the Samaj with worldly or political motives. These people believe in the Vedas, not because they are the word of God, but because these scriptures can help them in drawing Hindus to one political centre. (Again,) "if they have to make an appeal in the name of a particular animal (? cow)" in order to gain their object, they display no hesitation in doing so. It is, therefore, wholly idle to expect them to soberly reflect over the question of the Vedas and revelation. The Editor then goes on to say that the few revelations made to him and published in some recent issues of the Indar have served as a red rag to a bull. After remarking that there is no Dayanandi paper which has not heaped the obscenest abuse on him, he expresses surprise that those who are not prepared to regard the above few revelations as genuine should look upon the four tomes of the Vedas as revealed books, although these scriptures have not been read by them nor were the contents thereof known to their forefathers. Did it not strike them, he adds, that if his revelations are spurious those contained in the Vedas are likely to prove so? Indeed, he most emphatically asserts that if the revelations received by him are wrong, those in the said books are also wholly so.

The paper has also an article headed "Were the Vedas revealed to human beings or to animals? It begins by referring to the Arya account of the revelation of the Vedas, and goes on to say that if the same is accepted as true the scriptures named appear to have been revealed, not to human beings, but to "beasts of the jungle and village animals,"—horses and donkeys. After stating his reasons for the assertion, the Editor reports a talk which he recently had with Swami Darshananand on the subject of the Vedas, and in the course of which he observed that, according to the Swami's reasoning, one could say that the Vedas were four in number, because the goat had four legs and the cow as many teats.

Lala Munshi Ram.

21. The Indar (Lahore), of the 14th June 1912, publishes an article headed "Lala Munshi Ram has turned Muhammadan." It reports that, on the occasion of the recent anniversary celebrations of the Arya Samaj, Delhi, there was a debate between Dayanandis and the Prophet's followers. The former, it adds, sustained a crushing defeat, and Lala Munshi Ram admitted Muhammad to have been a Messenger from God. After remarking that the Editor is being spoken of as a Musalman owing to his having praised the founder of Islam, it observes that Lala Munshi Ram also may be said to have embraced the said faith, seeing that he, too, has acknowledged the Prophet of Arabia to have been superior to Swami Dayanand. This is, however, merely a clever move on his part, because if he has made the admission with a sincere heart why does he not raise his voice against the Satyarth Parkash, in which highly intemperate language has been used towards Muhammad? Why does he not, moreover, oppose the Shuddhi movement, which is political in character and has been started to augment the number of Hindus and to decrease that of Muhammadans? The Editor then goes on to say that it was Lala Munshi Ram who offered the strongest opposition to his proposal to expunge from the Satyarth Parkash the grossly insulting words used towards Guru Nanak, as also the chapters in refutation of Islam and Christianity. Again, when he destroyed the books written by him to demolish non-Vedic (lit., other) faiths, the Lala expressed the greatest indignation at his conduct. And now when his writings have begun to remove the Muhammadan prejudice against the Arya Samaj, Munshi Ram has lost no time in stepping in with the object of winning the confidence of Musalmans and working mischief afresh. Lala Munshi Ram has commenced singing the praises of the Prophet with a view to crushing the Editor's movement regarding every Arya signing a pledge to remain loyal to Government and to abstain from dabbling in politics. He aims at coming to an understanding with Muhammadans and enabling himself to argue that, when the latter do not sign such a pledge, why should Arya Samajists follow a different course?

The forthcoming Hindu Conference.

22. The Jhang Sial (Lahore), of the 6th (received on the 13th) June 1912, publishes an article headed "The case against the Hindustan: the enchanted fort. Who is responsible for disgracing (Hindu) leaders or having (them) disgraced?" It says that Pandit Rambhaj Dat has been accused of having himself praised in the Hindustan and of having disgraced other (Hindu) leaders. He has, however, published a letter to the effect that he is innocent of the charge laid at his door, and that he, the Hindustan, and its (Hindu) contemporaries have fallen victims to a conspiracy. Next the paper reports an interview which its representative recently had with the Pandit and in the course of which the latter stated that he never told (Munshi Munawwar Khan), Saghar, to write anything against Lalas Shadi Lal and Lajpat Rai, nor did he give him any information against those gentlemen. He, however, did give Saghar (some) notes with which to defend himself against the serious charges of misappropriation of public money levelled against him by Lala Jaswant Rai. He also wrote for him, in "editorial form,"* a statement detailing all the facts and circumstances connected with the purchase by him of the Hindustan newspaper. As to his letter (in the Hindustan) on the subject of the aforesaid conspiracy, Pandit Rambhaj Dat stated that, according to an agreement between Lala Dina Nath and "us" (? the Pandit and his wife), no shareholder (? of the Hindustan) could write against another in that paper. Accordingly, the Lala declined to publish the letter on the ground that it made out the Pandit to have been the author of the conspiracy. The discussion lasted two days and Dina Nath suggested a number of alterations; the last one, which contained the words "Muhammadan conspiracy," having been approved by Rambhaj Dat. Half an hour later, however, he returned (? to the Hindustan office) and had the words deleted, saying that, as several Hindus were identified with the conspiracy, it was grossly unjust to speak of it as a Muslim affair. He penned through the word "Muhammadan," in the original letter as well as in the transfer copy; but it did appear in the Hindustan all the same.

The paper's representative also interviewed Lala Hari Chand, a calligraphist in the Hindustan Press, and was told by the latter that Pandit Rambhaj Dat undoubtedly got the word "Muhammadan" deleted. The Lala could not say by whom the word was restored and why. Dina Nath, too, was interviewed, but his reply was that the Pandit had made some mistakes, for which he was suffering now, and that he (Dina Nath) wished to answer no question likely to still further injure the former.

The Hindustan (Lahore), of the 7th (received on the 13th) June 1912, publishes a letter from Hari Chand aforesaid headed "Deliberate lying by the Jhang Sial." The writer complains that Banka Dyal has put into his mouth words which he did not utter, and has suppressed the things actually said by him.

In a supplement, dated the 7th June 1912, the paper also publishes a letter from Pandit Rambhaj Dat, who says that Banka Dayal has ascribed to him words which he has never used. Again, some parts of the report have been written in such a misleading way as to wholly change the purport of what was said by him (the Pandit). As to his remarks about the conspiracy referred to, they have been so reported as to convey the idea that he considers Dina Nath to have been blameworthy, which, however, is not a fact.

Commenting on the foregoing reports and contradictions, the Shanti (Rawalpindi), of the 8th June 1912, remarks that Banka Dyal has only soiled himself by touching tar. It would have been possible for him, it adds, to throw light on the conspiracy in question only if Pandit Rambhaj Dat had been agreeable to his doing so. Judging, however, by what it knows of the plain-spoken Editor of the Jhang Sial it can say that the statements published by him are thoroughly well-founded. Nevertheless, it was a mistake in him to lay the whole case before the public, although he must have done so with honest motives.

The Jhang Sial (Lahore), of the 13th June 1912, says that the contradictions published in the Hindustan are meant only to shield the real offender. Next the Editor endeavours to rebut the charges levelled against him therein; remarking that Dina Nath is an unprincipled journalist, that the words ascribed to Pandit Rambhaj Dat were spoken by that gentleman in the presence of his wife, and that he (the Pandit) is not the custodian of his own conscience and feels not the least shame in swallowing the leek.

The following is from the Panjabee (Lahore), of the 20th May 1912:—

* * * * * * *

"Time is now approaching for the fourth session. But nothing has yet been done to settle the preliminaries. It seems to us that the ensuing session should be invited to Delhi. Such a course will emphasise its connection with the Punjab and make its growing influence felt in the Counsels of the Empire. Men of public spirit are by no means wanting in Delhi. Nor can any one doubt their title to enforce their opinion on the public. The new Imperial capital which is soon to bear larger and more onerous responsibilities ought to show by its conduct that it is fully prepared for the task. It has to discuss numerous questions of immediate interest to Delhi and its environs. It has to show that its views deserve sympathetic consideration at the hands of the Government. More important than this, its position as the Imperial city affords it an advantage over the Provincial towns in gathering around it the greatest and the best of our men and to appeal to them in the name of the new city to merge personal differences in the common cause. We earnestly hope that the leading citizens of Delhi will consider over the matter and adopt prompt and vigorous measures to show that they neither neglect the cause of the Hindu community nor allow the community to neglect the interests of their brethren in Delhi."

* Copied from the original.

Restoration of a mosque to Muhammadans.

23. The Vakil (Amritsar), of 5th (received on the 13th) June 1912, publishes a note headed "Mosques and Government." It reports that the Juma Mosque at Arandol (Eastern Khandesh), which had for some time past been in the possession of Government, has been restored to Muhammadans through the efforts of the Hon'ble Maulvi Rafi-ud-din Ahmad. Next it reproduces the letter addressed to the Hon'ble Maulvi by the Private Secretary to His Excellency the Governor of Bombay on the subject. The concluding sentence in the communication expresses surprise that Muhammadans should have displayed so much hesitation (in moving) in a matter so simple and calculated to benefit them. The paper draws the attention of all Muhammadans to the words, and remarks that they have in truth become so timid and cowardly that they hesitate to fully lay before Government even their just demands, and that also in spite of their being told by the authorities to help themselves.

Muhammadans and the Maharaja of Darbhanga.

24. The following is from the Panjabee (Lahore), of the 18th June 1912 :—

"The 'Aligarh Institute Gazette' this week is full of praise and sentiments of cordiality for the Maharaja of Darbhanga, who paid a visit to Aligarh last week and gave a cheque for Rs. 25,000 to the Aligarh University funds. Nawab Vicar-ul-Mulk spoke of the strength of brotherly relations between the Hindus and Muhammadans of India. He reminded the Maharaja that at the last Muhammadan Educational Conference held at Delhi, he compared the Hindu and Muslim Universities to the two sacred rivers of India—Ganges and Jamna. He had further pointed out that the Hindu University should be regarded as the Ganges while the Musalmans would be content to have their University looked upon as the Jamna. Another Moslem member said that the University has 'inspired various sections of Indian Muhammadans with one common aim and aspiration.' He said :—'There may be differences in political affairs, there may be religious controversies in certain sections of both communities, but here is this noble movement of our Universities in which we can work shoulder to shoulder in a common cause and with united zeal, and thus pave the way for that ultimate and lasting union.' All these are excellent sentiments and we certainly thank the Moslem dignitaries for them. But will these same honeyed words stand the test of adverse times or occasions of trouble—either when the Pathan breaks the heads of Punjab Hindus or when occasions arise for the distribution of offices as a result of patient and strenuous work by some one else at the risk of many dear things? University is all right, but talk of the Council regulations and say that the Hindus have no less 'political importance' than Moslems, all the red caps from Peshawar to Aligarh and from Dacca to Dancankot, will get crimson as hot coals and even the dear Maharaja of Darbhanga will rank among the unbelievers!

Dharmpal.

25. The Rajput Gazette (Lahore), of 8th (received on the 14th) June 1912, has an article headed "The 'loom' prophet and abusing Hindus." In deciding to "purify" Abdul Ghafur (now Dharmpal), it says, the Arya Samaj overlooked the fact that he was a weaver by birth. It is owing to his extraction, it adds, that he now claims to be a prophet, represents Dayanand as having been an incarnation of Muhammad, and has been openly charging Aryas with being rebels and anarchists. Nor is this all. There is no abuse which this "loom" prophet has not heaped on the followers of Hinduism as a community. Next the paper quotes an extract in which he speaks of the (Punjab) Hindu Sabha as "a hotch-potch of unprincipledness." Continuing, it refers to his various changes of religious beliefs, and says that it is he, and not the Hindu Sabha, that has no principles. It then goes on to say that, of late, he has been defaming Hindus and Arya Samajists by speaking of them as political people. There is, however, nothing criminal in participating in politics, which are taught (even) in Government Colleges and which Government itself wishes Indians to discuss.

The Moin (Amritsar), of the 10th (received on the 18th) June 1912, publishes a letter headed "Mad elephant of the Arya community." The writer—Sardar Aslam Khan, Beloch—states that an Arya speaker at the last anniversary celebrations of the Gurukula remarked in the course of his observations that the mad elephant of the Arya community would shortly trample on non-vedic (lit. other) religions—Christianity, Islam (&c). After saying that this elephant undoubtedly stood for Dharampal, he remarks that the former has commenced his mad career by attacking the Arya Samaj, and that its members are powerless to achieve anything against him. He adds that the Samajes throughout India used to go into raptures over the abuse he was wont to heap on Islam and its founder. Now, however, he is being boycotted by them and Hindus, while tracts are being published to make him out to be the most immoral man in existence.

VI.—Legislation.

The Press Act.

26. The Afghan (Peshawar), of the 5th (received on the 15th) June 1912, has an article headed "Apathy of (our) contemporaries and the Afghan's letter against the rigours of the Press Act." After complaining of the stringency of the above Act, the Editor states that (some time back) it issued a letter to all Indian journalists to ask for their opinions on the said piece of legislation. His object in doing so was to have these opinions translated into English and to submit a memorial to the Viceroy (to pray His Excellency to repeal the Press Act). With the exception of three or four of the addressees, however, all of them have treated his letter with the greatest indifference, and have considered it beneath their dignity to reply to it. He would, therefore, tell them through his paper that the matter is of extreme importance, and that efforts should be made to protect the press against the uncalled-for severity of the Newspapers Act. Next he publishes a copy of his letter, and also transcribes the reply received from the Editor of the Zamindar. (This reply is a reprint of the article which that paper recently published on the subject of the demand of security from the Vakil press,—Vide paragraph 31 of Selections No. 21).

The Zamindar (Lahore), of the 13th June 1912, has an article headed "Value of safety." The Editor says that when the Press law was on the anvil it was strongly supported by all Anglo-Indian papers, excluding only the Empire. They were then under the impression that it was meant only to put down seditious writing, and not to interfere with the legitimate liberty of the press. Their sentiments were echoed by Muslim journals, which argued that Muhammadans, whose loyalty was above suspicion, had nothing to fear from the law in question. Not very long after the passing of the Press Act, however, Islamic papers, which had never even dreamt of writing against Government, began to be called upon to furnish security. This had the effect of opening their eyes to the fact that the Act was fully capable of punishing the innocent along with the guilty. All, however, that they could now do was either to lick the boots of (District) Magistrates, to offer fulsome of flattery to Government and to silently see the rights of the (Muslim) community trampled upon, or to have security demanded from them over trifles through displaying the moral courage to perform the duties of journalism with independence. The Editor then goes on to say that Anglo-Indian papers did not publish even one word of sympathy for those of their Hindu and Muslim contemporaries which have been dealt with under the Press Act. Where indeed, he asks, was the necessity of doing so, seeing that they were under the impression that the Act was meant for only blacks, who alone, they argued, could publish seditious articles. Next it refers to the recent controversy between them and the Secretary of State; and thanks Lord Crewe for having placed them and the native press on the same footing and for "desiring the noses of both whites and blacks to be treated alike to the iron fisticuffs of the Press Act." There is, however, a great difference, he adds, between words and deeds : it is one thing to threaten to use the Act against the Anglo-Indian press, and quite a different thing to carry the threat into execution. Let Government, if it dare, demand security from the Englishman, the Statesman or the Pioneer. The day on which the demand is made will assuredly prove the harbinger of the demise of the Press Act. That day will not, however, come of itself, while "the blackness of the face of the native press" cannot bring about its arrival.

Protection of minor girls.

27. The following is from the Panjabee (Lahore), of the 18th June 1912 :—

* * * * * * *

"The main sections of the Indian Penal Code (we leave out of consideration the connected subsidiary sections) for the prevention of crime against girls and women are sections 361, 366, 372, 373, 375, 497 and 498. Section 361 relates to kidnapping of any minor, male or female from lawful guardianship. The object of the section is to protect children from being seduced for improper purposes as well as to protect the rights of parents and guardians of such minors. The provisions are so comprehensive that kidnapping of a female under sixteen years of age is an offence irrespective of any intent with which it is committed. Any person by merely taking such a girl out of the keeping of her lawful guardian commits an offence under this section ; and it is no defence to say that he had no improper motive or that he believed the girl to be of a higher age. But this section is powerless when any offence against the girl is committed without her being actually taken away from lawful guardianship without the use of fraud or force. In such a case section 366 is also of no help. If the girl owing to her not having attained years of discretion or through ignorance of the criminality of the act, becomes a consenting party to any illicit intercourse, no offence according to the ruling in 114 I. L. R. 04 is made out under 366, Indian Penal Code. Sections 372 and 373 make selling, letting to hire or otherwise disposing of any minor under the age of 16 years as well as buying, hiring or otherwise obtaining possession of such minor for purposes of prostitution or for any unlawful and immoral purpose penal and provide heavy penalties. According to the judicial interpretation of these sections, however, there is no offence unless it is proved that the letting or buying or hiring has been for the purpose of permanent prostitution, for habitual employment for immoral and unlawful purpose. In other words a single act of sexual intercourse is not punishable under this section. Section 375 (rape) does not cover the cases we are referring to. Sections 497 (adultory) and 498 (enticing or taking away or detaining with criminal intent a married woman) apply only to married girls and are intended for the protection of husbands.

"From the aforesaid review of the law as at present stands, a girl of tender years who without being taken out of the keeping of the lawful guardian and without being induced by deceit or compelled by force consents to an illicit intercourse has no remedy in law against her corrupter. The wretch who satisfies his lust by corrupting young virgins is undeterred in the pursuit of his nefarious game. It may be that offences of this description are owing to the prevalence of early marriage not numerous in this country. But now-a-days there is a distinct movement for raising the marriageable age for girls and it is necessary that efficient safeguards for the protection of girls should be taken. The Bill proposed to be introduced by Mr. Dadabhay provides such safeguard by raising the age of consent to 16 as against strangers. The Bill makes no change in the rights of husbands as stated in the exception to 375 I. P. C. Therefore the orthodox community as well as the party of liberal views should both cordially welcome the proposed Bill. We have not seen the draft, but we feel no hesitation in according it a cordial welcome. As regards Mr. Madholkar's Bill, dealing with the evil practice of dedicating minor girls as Devadasis or Muralis attached to temples, in which they are degraded to a life of prostitution we believe every one will agree in welcoming it. We may observe, however, that such dedication is already an offence under 372, Indian Penal Code."

A suggestion.

28. The Moin (Amritsar), of the 10th (received on the 18th) June 1912, publishes a communication headed "Worthy of the notice of the Government of India." The writer—Muhammad Ziaullah, Wasiqa Navis, of Amritsar—says that, as women cannot be punished under Sections 497 and 498 of the Indian Penal Code, the commission of the offences concerned (adultory and enticing away of married women) has been steadily on the increase. He adds that these offences cannot be committed without the consent of women, who, indeed, are the instigators in most cases. He, therefore, urges the members of the Supreme Legislative Council to attend to the matter.

VII.—General Administration.

(a)—Judicial.

A kidnapping case in Burma.

29. The Municipal Gazette and Sada-i-Hind (Lahore), of the 5th (received on the 14th) June 1912, publishes a note headed "This decision clashes with British justice." A European in Burma, the paper reports, forcibly kidnapped a (native) girl and committed rape on her for several months. She managed to give him the slip at last, and a case was formally instituted against the white man. After several hearings, however, the Magistrate murdered justice by passing the order that, as the parents of the girl were utterly poor, "their" (? her) chastity was worth nothing and no punishment could be inflicted on the accused. Again, the Superintendent of Police made the still more (objectionable) remark that the case was a piece of fun. The events are said to have created great excitement in Burma, but although the attention of the Government has been invited to the same, nothing has as yet come of this. The white man's conduct, the Magistrate's order, and the remark by the Superintendent of Police are not, however, such that they should be winked at.

Judges of Chief Court and the appointment of Colonel Beadon.

30. The following is from the Tribune (Lahore), of the 22nd June 1912 :—

"For the first time in the history of the Punjab Chief Court a military officer is about to be appointed a Judge of that Court. In Non-Regulation Provinces military officers are appointed to civil offices, but the usual tendency is to make such provinces Regulation Provinces and to confine the Provincial Commission to civil officers. The neighbouring Province of Sind is an instance in point. The Sind Commission was formerly comprised of both civil and military officers. No military officer, however, was ever appointed a permanent Judge of the Sadar Court. The Sind Commission has now been abolished, the last officer being Mr. Mules, who has now retired and is chairman of the Port Trust of Karachi. All offices are now held by Civilians from the Bombay Presidency. We in the Punjab have not got even so far as Sind and there is no prospect of the Punjab being made a Regulation Province. So far back as 1876 Colonel W. G. Davies, then Commissioner of Delhi, was recommended for a Judgeship of the Chief Court, but the appointment was vetoed by the Secretary of State. Since then no other recommendation of a similar nature has been made. We have been agitating and hoping for the raising of the Chief Court to a Chartered High Court, though we cannot say whether the learned Judges themselves have moved in the matter. The sanction of the Secretary of State to the temporary appointment of Colonel Beadon, as an Additional Judge of the Chief Court, creates a precedent which will be difficult to overrule in future. Of course we have nothing whatsoever to say against Colonel Beadon or any other judicial officer from the army, but the principle at stake is an important one and the precedent now created is a setback. The brand new Province of Behar will have an Executive Council and most likely a High Court, but the Punjab is moving backwards and no effort is made to keep pace with the progressive spirit of the Province."

(b)—Police.

The Ambala riot case.

31. The following is from the Panjabee (Lahore), of the 20th June 1912 :—

"The excerpts from the lengthy judgment which we published in a previous issue should open the eyes of Government both to the spirit of lawlessness which prevails among some at least of the army and to the inadequacy and unpreparedness of the police in cantonments to deal with such a contingency. The lawless spirit of the sepoys of the 23rd Pioneers is a matter for the serious consideration of the army department. But it is the duty of the Local Government to notice the defects and deficiencies in the investigation of the case by the police. The question that suggests itself is whether the investigation and mode of prosecution would not have been stricter and more efficient under other circumstances. The Magistrate suggests that 'the Colonel did not seem in a mood to welcome any police inquiries in his line.' He also says: 'It is clear from the evidence of Inspector Lamacraft and the report which he made to the Cantonment Magistrate (page 24) that when the Inspector went to the 23rd lines to make inquiries in connection with the case the Colonel refused to have anything to do with him and said he would only deal with the police through the Cantonment Magistrate.' The Inspector did his duty in bringing the matter to the Cantonment Magistrate, but what action was taken by the latter to show to the Colonel that he was bound to help the investigation, is not stated. Nor is there anything to suggest that the Superintendent of Police moved the Inspector-General or the Government to get the military obstruction removed for legitimate investigation. The Magistrate says that 'if the Colonel had realised from the beginning that his own men were partly in the wrong, and if he had punished them, these disputes with the bazaar would have stopped. Also I think that if the Colonel, when he threw open the bazaar again, had insisted through his native officers that there was to be no disturbance, there would have been no riot.' This might be so, and perhaps the Colonel was to blame. But if we are to depend on the generosity of the Colonel of a regiment for the safety of the civil population why should we maintain a police at all? The police knew as well as the military that the dispute was a long-standing one, and what action did they take for the protection of the bazaar when they came to know that it was thrown open to the sepoys? Surely the police are not maintained to make arrests after serious rioting. Their duties and responsibilities lie as much in the direction of prevention as in that of prosecution and punishment. These are some aspects of the rioting which should be examined by the Government."

Police and crime in the Punjab.

32. The following is from the Panjabee (Lahore), of the 20th June 1912 :—

"In the course of its review of the administration of the Punjab jails the Civil and Military Gazette says that 'there is a very general opinion that lawlessness is increasing in the Punjab and that the fear of law does not prevent crime as it should do.' In so saying that paper has done no more than add the weight of its own opinion to the volume of existing Indian opinion. But the Police and the Government seem to think differently. In the report of the administration of the Police Department there is no evidence that either the department or the Government is dissatisfied with the preventive work of the Police. Both the department and the Government are so much accustomed to recidivation that they have come to regard 'stern measures' as the 'only panacea' for this social pest. Time was when the Government thought differently from the department. We well remember how in the time of Sir William Mackworth Young the Government review of the Police report was being awaited tremblingly by the departmental demi-gods. In fact on one occasion the Inspector-General so far forgot himself as to take the Secretariat to task for the strictures passed by the Government in its annual review; but by so doing he courted a mild censure from the Government. Latterly there was a modification in this policy and the Government, with the best of intentions, encouraged the Police with good words. This was right to the extent that no public department can ever be reformed by constant criticism. But the Police mistook the good intentions of the Government for weakness. Accordingly the Government review is now awaited for the points of agreement that it contains more than of difference between the department and the Government. It is forgotten that the root trouble lies in this new-born identity; and the plea put forth for 'stern measures.' It is forgotten that where 'habituals' are born criminals, ideas of crime and punishment among the gangs are totally opposed to those of the state. As long as the gang feels that crime pays and that with the Police as at present constituted the chances of escape are many they do not feel deterred from any risk. The risk which they take is no more than the risk which other occupations are attended. Obviously the remedy lies in changing the mode of recruitment to the Police, in enlisting to the force a class of men who can and will be a terror to evil doers; and in keeping the powers of control and check apart from the duties and responsibilities of execution. Surely in the present stage of development the rank and file of the force cannot be taught their duties and responsibilities by praises bestowed upon them in season and out of season."

(d)—Education.

The Muslim University.

33. The Zamindar (Lahore), of the 9th June 1912, has an article headed "Constitution of the Muslim University." It says that the Hon'ble Raja Sir Ali Muhammad Khan, President of the University's Constitution Committee, has contributed a letter to the Aligarh Institute Gazette to say that the draft rules finally submitted to Government will be those approved by the entire (Muhammadan) community. In the first place, adds the Editor, Government will never disregard the unanimous wishes of seven crore Muhammadans and will not go back on the promise made by it in plain language through the Hon'ble Mr. Harcourt Butler. But even if they do not get a University (after their heart) the funds collected could be used to award hundreds of scholarships to Muslim students to acquire technical education abroad, which would prove instrumental in removing "our" economic difficulties. The capital collected for the University constitutes a great power in itself, and "we" can put it to whatever use "we" like. Next the paper reprints the aforesaid communication.

(f)—Railways and Communications.

North-Western Railway.

34. The Jhang Sial (Lahore), of the 13th June 1912, publishes a note headed "Railway and comfort." After remarking that the two do not go together, it says that the Tribune is of opinion that the recent increase in the earnings of the North-Western Railway should be used to provide dining cars and refreshment rooms for "Indian gentlemen." It is, however, highly necessary that before providing luxuries for rich passengers, whose number is always very small, the Railway should afford (diverse) facilities to the general travelling public. Sir Henry Burt should look upon middle class Indians as human beings, and take steps to minister to their comfort a little. He should see that the number of carriages (in every train) is increased, so as to prevent overcrowding in these days of heat. Again, comfortable waiting rooms for intermediate and third class passengers should be built at (all) railway stations. Were, moreover, seats provided on platforms and in waiting rooms, Sir Henry Burt would always be blessed by those whose buttocks would thus escape conversion into sores.

Elsewhere the paper says that the increased income of the North-Western Railway should not be utilised in giving an increase of pay to Goods Clerks and Station Masters, who are in the habit of sucking the life-blood of the public. It is, however, possible, it adds, that increased salaries may perhaps lead some of these officials to part with their dishonest habits. After remarking that they should, at all events, be prevented from taking bribes, the paper observes that it is not difficult to bring charges of bribery home to them, seeing that they receive bribes chiefly from traders, who are in the habit of entering in their account books everything spent by them.

(h)—Miscellaneous.

The Frontier Province.

35. The Punjab Advocate (Mianwali), of the 6th (received on the 13th) June 1912, publishes a leader headed "Final decision about the (fate of the) frontier people and the faithful Afghan." The Government of India, it says, has dashed the hopes of the Frontier people to the ground by returning a disappointing reply (to the memorial from the residents of Dera Ismail Khan praying for the amalgamation of the Frontier Province with the Punjab). After remarking that the reply discloses no satisfactory reason (for Government's refusal to consider the question of the amalgamation), the paper observes that if unrest had broken out in the Frontier Province (which God forbid !) as it did in Bengal, Government would assuredly have had to change its present policy ( ? towards the former part of the country). There is truth, it adds, in the adage "He who has the bludgeon owns the buffalo" (might is right). Continuing, it asserts that, but for the indifference of the press to the fate of the Frontier Province, the Government of India would not have vouchsafed the above curt reply to the said memorial. It then goes on to urge the Frontier people to continue their constitutional efforts to have their province amalgamated with the Punjab; saying that the same will assuredly be crowned with success one day. They should again submit memorials (in which they should) point out defects in the local administration, supply a list of dacoities (by tribesmen) and tell Government that their lives are in danger and that it is the duty of Government not to think of "a single individual" but to remove the troubles of its subjects. If they continue exerting themselves the Punjab Advocate also will devote the rest of its life to keeping up the agitation. It has given up the idea of moving to Lahore: it will continue to stay on at Mianwali and spite its enemies. "Our educated Hindu brothers (of Mianwali)," it adds, "have been doing informer's work in order to keep the pot boiling. We will speak of them in the beginning of next year or publish a separate book about them." Proceeding, it finds fault with the Afghan for that paper's hostility to the amalgamation of the Frontier Province with the Punjab and for devoting its columns to the praises of the Hon'ble Sir George Roos-Keppel, who pays it an annual subsidy of Rs. 800.

In conclusion, it wishes that the Chief Commissioner would look upon all (classes of) the Frontier people with the same eye, and would not be misled by selfish persons and flatterers. It is its earnest prayer that he may rule the Frontier Province for ever, but that he may make justice his guide.

The Frontier Province.

36. The Punjab Advocate (Mianwali), of the 6th (received on the 13th), June 1912, publishes a communication headed "Personal rule." The writer—H. C. Mujram, of Rawalpindi—says that "we" are trying to have the Frontier Province amalgamated with the Punjab, so that "our Frontier brothers" may again be placed abreast of "us" and may regain their lost rights. After remarking that it is unjust to deprive any one of his liberty for no fault, he observes that, as subjects of the just British Government, "we" have the right to lay bare "our" hearts to it. Next he deplores the indifference of "the Frontier people" to their grievances, and goes on to say that the Frontier authorities are ready to resort to every excuse in order to "maintain their personal rule." Truth, he adds, is being murdered in the Frontier Province; while he wishes to know whether it becomes the said authorities to trample on each and every desire of the people (committed to their charge). The latter desire that the Frontier Province should be amalgamated with the Punjab; but the former are opposed to it and have been endeavouring, not only to tear up the memorials prepared by the people, but also to have a (counter-) representation, signed by some short-sighted persons, submitted to His Excellency the Viceroy. Some of "our Punjabi brothers" are under the impression that the Frontier people do not wish to have their grievances redressed. Does not, however, a person wish to cry out even when wounded with a sword? .... But how should he do so, seeing that he is in the grasp of ..... ? And on being questioned by anyone he cuts his long story short into the brief reply :—

"After having killed me the hard-hearted one said,

"'Get yourself killed, but it is forbidden to writhe (in pain).'"

Punjab and the Birthday Honours.

37. The following is from the Tribune (Lahore), of the 19th June 1912 :—

"It is interesting to analyse the Birthday Honours' List with special reference to the proportion of officials and non-officials in the Punjab. The outstanding feature of the List are two: the first that the very few Honours and titles have fallen to the lot of the Punjab and the second that among the gentlemen selected for docoration one way or the other the non-officials are simply nowhere. * * * * It will be seen that out of 14 Honours allotted to the Punjab 13 have gone to the officials and only one to a non-official. In the case of the titles conferred the proportion is almost equally bad, Of the three Khan Bahadurs two are officials and one a non-official, and of the three Rai Bahadurs two are officials and one a non-official. Of the 5 Khan Sahibs all are officials, and among the 7 Rai Sahibs 3 are non-officials. The total number of titles granted to the Punjab is 19, including 4 who belong to departments which are not under the administrative control of the Punjab Government. The number of titles granted on the recommendation of the Punjab Government thus does not exceed fifteen which is a very poor figure considering the extent of the Province, and its importance, historical and other. Of the six non-officials who have been granted titles or Honours three are members of the Punjab Legislative Council, and three Municipal Commissioners and Honorary Magistrates. As these gentry are considered to be more or less officials, in reality not a single non-official in the true sense of the term has received an Honour or a title. We are afraid we cannot congratulate either the Local Government or the Government of India on this utter exclusion of the non-official element from the list of those who are selected for personal distinction by the grant of Honours or titles.

"Another feature of the Honours' List that is deserving of some notice is the institution of the new Imperial Service Medal—the conferment of which appears to be confined to retired chaprasis or jamadars of officials. We are told in the Gazette of India that 'His Imperial Majesty the King Emperor of India has been pleased to grant to the following retired members of His Imperial Majesty's Civil Service not belonging to the Administrative or Colonial branches, the Imperial Service Medal which was instituted by His late Majesty for the recognition of long and meritorious service in branches other than those mentioned above.' As the medal in question is conferred by His Imperial Majesty the King Emperor it naturally ranks higher than all the titles such as Khan Bahadurs, Rai Bahadurs, Rai Sahibs, Khan Sahibs, Rao Bahadurs, Rao Sahibs, and even Rajahs, Nawabs, Maharajahs, Mahamahopadhyaya, Shams-ul-Ulama, which are conferred by His Excellency the Viceroy.

Thus a retired Divisional Judge, or Deputy Commissioner who is made a Rai Bahadur or Khan Bahadur gets a lesser distinction than his own chaprasi who gets an Imperial Service Medal We confess it is difficult for us to understand, much less to appreciate, the wisdom of granting medals to retired chaprassis. A small addition to their pension and a gratuity in cash in the shape of a Khillat would have been appreciated by them much more. A medal can be of no use to them. It cannot rank with any of the medals granted for military service. Most of these military medals carry additional pensions, and these considerably enhance their value. Something may be said about the Imperial Service Order also. In the Birthday Honours' List the persons who have received this distinction are in a very much mixed company. We find the Lieutenant-Governor of Behar and Orisa, Sir Charles Bayley, and the permanent Under-Secretary of State for India, Sir Richmond Ritchie, K. C. B., cheek by jowl with the Registrars of Secretariat Offices, daftardars of a Native State, and Oriental Translators to Government. Verily the ways of Government like those of Providence are inscrutable.

The Linen League.

38. The following is from the Tribune (Lahore), of the 19th June 1912 :—

"Her Excellency Lady Hardinge organised the Linen League last year for the benefit of Indian Hospitals, and Her Excellency's eloquent appeal for the support of Indian and European ladies with reference to the civil and military hospitals of the Punjab and the North-West Frontier Province marks a great step in advance. The League is still in its infancy, but the support it received at the start was marked and its success was practically assured. * * * * We hope Lady Hardinge's appeal for assistance to the ladies of Simla and the Punjab will meet with a generous response and there will be a large number of associates and members from our province. * * * * The work of the League is simple and the subscription very low and within the reach of most people. The scheme is noble and we hope it will appeal to the public. The success of the scheme would, however, be better ensured if there were two or more Indian ladies on the General Committee. We have not the least doubt that the ladies of Her Excellency's Committee will not spare any pains in making this charitable scheme successful. But we think they cannot very well approach a large section of Indian ladies. Indian ladies could have easily done this and thereby secured help from a larger body of ladies.

The new Capital of India.

39. The Tribune (Lahore), of the 21st June 1912, publishes the following under the heading "Veni, Vidi, Vici !"

"The town-planners have come, have seen and have conquered the situation and their achievement might be entirely likened to that of Julius Cæsar were they not to come back again to make another fresh invasion. Against the general expectation of both the Government and the people they have definitely condemned the Durbar area as unsuitable, and recommended a new site for the location of the new city. The condemnation of the Durbar area is final, but it is not definitely stated whether the choice of the new site is also finally recommended. For the latest Press communique states that the Committee, which will be now returning to England, will come out again to Delhi during the winter months and after seeing the ground they will 'complete their plan and make their final recommendations.' The suggestion of the new area is based upon the fact that the ground lies high above the flood levels and has a good natural drainage. Taking these aspects into consideration the Committee have come to the conclusion that it is quite unnecessary for them to see the country during the monsoon, as formerly announced, and that they will return to England and come back again to Delhi in the cold weather. If the announcement of the condemnation of the Durbar area was a surprise, the proposal of the town-planners to return to England and come out again is equally astonishing. The town-planners were appointed for a period of five months and no one ever thought that they would return to England after staying in India for only a few weeks to come out again leisurely in the cool days of winter. It has been a chapter of surprises throughout. It was only a few days ago that a fourth member of the Delhi Committee was recruited in England and is expected in Bombay in a day or two. He is expected to meet the town-planners at Delhi, but it is not yet clearly stated whether he too will be returning with the other experts. The members of the town-planning Committee are 'experts,' but their hurried decision and equally hurried departure for England without waiting to watch the monsoon in its different stages are not very impressive. The monsoon is the test season and it may present some unforeseen defects in the land recommended. It is ordinary commonsense that the advantages and drawbacks of a plot of land should be judged from every point of view. There is no justification for the desire of the town-planners to come back again in the winter and then make their final recommendations. If they have decided and are convinced that the new site requires no watching during the rains, there is no reason why they should wait for the winter to pass their final verdict of approval. In the winter the climatic and sanitary conditions are more or less favourable. What special observations have to be made in the winter? If Captain Swinton and his lieutenants are of opinion that they need not wait for the monsoon that does not put an end to their work. The plans may be prepared. The question of architecture and other things may be attended to. Captain Swinton may make suggestions on the administrative affairs of the new city. Mr. Brodie may look to the engineering and Mr. Lutyen may attend to the architectural requirements.

"Ever since the announcement of the removal of the capital from Calcutta to Delhi, the general impression was that it would be built in the near vicinity of the Durbar area. The attitude of the Government in this matter was clear, for long before the appointment of the town-planners they had definite ideas of their own regarding the construction of the new city. In the despatch of August last we find: 'Many of the works now in progress at Delhi in connection with the construction of roads and railways and the provision of electricity and water for the Durbar and upon which considerable expenditure has been incurred, will be of appreciable value to the Government of India, as permanent works when the transfer is made.' It was on this account that Their Majesties were invited to lay foundation stones of the new Imperial city in the Government of India camp. It is unfortunate that the city cannot be founded exactly where Their Imperial Majesties laid the first stones. But the mistake that the Government of India made is manifest. The railway, roads and other provisions made in connection with the Durbar will no longer be of any use to the new capital as the wisdom of the Government had foreseen. The new site is several miles away from the Durbar area on the south side. The railway and arrangements of water and electric supply at a distance of at least eight miles will not be an ideal arrangement for the new city. It cannot be denied that the Government were convinced that the permanent capital would be built somewhere near the Durbar area if not actually on it. The preparations for the temporary accommodation of the Government were begun in the Durbar area and it was hoped that they would be utilised ultimately in the new capital. But the decision of the town-planners has turned everything topsy-turvy and now there is not the remotest chance of any use being found for the temporary buildings in the new capital. It is evident from the despatch quoted above that the rough estimate of four millions sterling was made by taking into consideration the facilities the Durbar area presented. There has already been some expenditure on the upkeep of the Durbar site and more is being spent on the temporary works. The Government took good care to preserve the polo and foot-ball grounds and the new roads. Of what use will they be now? The new site is sure to enormously increase the cost of building the new city. The Government have already spent a considerable amount on the temporary buildings. The Circuit House and other buildings for the accommodation of the Imperial Government are already under improvement or construction, though much progress has not been made with them. Will any Member of Council put a question at the Simla session of the Council asking for estimates of these temporary buildings and the new capital on the new site? Government may avert further useless expenditure by building the temporary accommodation near the new site and not in the Durbar area for in that case some of those buildings may be utilised in future in the permanent capital. These temporary constructions may be built more solidly. It may be argued that the initial expenses in that case will be greater, but we think it would be cheaper than making two kinds of accommodation, one permanent and the other temporary, with a distance of 8 or 10 miles between them.

"The verdict of the town-planners has come as a shock for it has shattered the possibility of the Durbar city of canvas being converted into the permanent capital. It will involve the Government in much heavier expense and a definite financial policy will now have to be settled. If the Government had waited for the final recommendations of the Committee they could have easily built the temporary buildings near the new site thereby saving a considerable amount of money and making the best use of the outlay. So far the Government and the town-planners have gone different ways. The Government have already made many serious mistakes and it is unwise to persist in them. Economy should be practised in every direction. The temporary buildings ought to be built on the other side of the Ridge near the recommended area and no further expenses should be incurred by allowing the members of the town-planning Committee to take pleasure trips at the expense of the taxpayers."

Vaccination.

40. The following is from the Tribune (Lahore), of the 15th June 1912 :—

"About the time we were noticing the question in the House of Commons about the law of vaccination in the Punjab a correspondent writing to some contemporaries in the Bombay Presidency was drawing attention to the difference of the law on the subject in England and India. As we have pointed out vaccination is compulsory in the larger cities of India. Let us take the instance of Calcutta. Under the municipal law of that city every birth has to be reported at the nearest police station. At the time the report is made the person who makes it is handed a printed form in which it is stated that the newly-born child must be vaccinated within a year on pain of a penalty being inflicted on the father or guardian. Presumably therefore every child is vaccinated in Calcutta. Nevertheless, periodical epidemics of small-pox break out in the city when there is no immunity for even those who have been successfully revaccinated and the mortality becomes frightfully high. As we ourselves believe in vaccination we cannot say that it affords no immunity against small-pox, but it is clear that it affords no absolute immunity. In England the Compulsory Vaccination Act was in force for forty-six years, but so strong was the objection that it had to be amended in 1898 and honest objectors were exempted. As a matter of fact many English parents do not have their children vaccinated. Why should the law be different in India? At the same time, there is no uniformity in the application of the law in India. It is compulsory in some of the large cities but in villages and rural areas, there is no systematic vaccination and compulsory vaccination is out of the question. Why should the conscientious objector in the city be treated differently from the ignorant and superstitious villager who considers vaccination dangerous? That clause ought to be introduced in the Indian law also. When the agitation in England was going on against compulsory vaccination Professor Francis William Newman wrote:—'Against the body of a healthy man Parliament has no right of assault whatever under pretence of the Public Health. Nor any the more against the body of a healthy infant. To forbid perfect health is a tyrannical wickedness just as much as to forbid chastity or sobriety. No lawgiver can have the right. The law is an unendurable usurpation and creates the right of resistance.'"

C. STEAD,

SIMLA:

The 22nd June 1912.

Assistant to the Deputy Inspector-General of Police, Criminal Investigation Department, Punjab.

P. G. B. Press, Simla—27-6-12—No. 28—107—H. L. S.

[ Confidential. ]

[ Vol. XXV. ] [ No. 26. ]

SELECTIONS

FROM THE

NATIVE NEWSPAPERS

PUBLISHED IN THE PUNJAB.

Examined up to 29th June 1912.

---

CONTENTS.

Page.

I.—Politics.

(a) Foreign—

1. Lord Kitchener and Egypt (Paisa Akhbar) ... 515
2. China, Japan and Siam and the Vedic religion (Parkash) ... ib.
3. A defaulting English Peer (Tribune) ... ib.
4. Hindus in America (Panjabee) ... ib.

(b) Home—

5. The Nicholson Committee (Civil & Military News) 516
6. The Indian services (Paisa Akhbar) ... ib.
7. Indian Muhammadans and the doings in Tripoli and Persia (Civil & Military News) ... ib.
8. Appointment of European Factory Inspectors in India (Panjabee) ... ib.
9. Mr. Montagu and the Muhammadans of India (Tribune) ... 517
10. Behar and the Punjab (Tribune) ... ib.
11. Proposed partition of the Mymensingh district (Tribune) ... ib.
12. Lord Crewe on India (Panjabee) ... ib.
13. The Supply and Transport Corps and the Nicholson Committee (Panjabee) ... 518

II.—Afghanistan and Trans-Frontier.

Nil.

III.—Native States.

Nil.

IV.—Kine-killing.

14. A pamphlet on cow-killing (Hindustan) ... 518

V.—Native Societies and Religious Matters.

15. Hindus and Muhammadans (Millat) ... 519
16. Muhammadans (Vakil) ... ib.
17. Sikhs and Hindus (Sanatan Dharam Parcharak) ... ib.
18. A preacher of the Radha Swami sect and Sikhs (Parkash) ... 520
19. The Arya Samaj (Ahl-i-Hadis) ... ib.
20. Ditto (Vakil) ... ib.
21. Dharampal and the Vedas (Arjun) ... ib.
22. Dharampal (Parkash) ... ib.
23. A riddle (Arjun) ... 521
24. Muhammad and Dayanand (Indar) ... ib.
25. The recent controversy about the Presidency of the Hindu Conference (Jhang Sial) ... ib.

Page.

VI.—Legislation.

26. A suggestion (Civil & Military News and Siraj-ul-Akhbar) ... 522
27. The Punjab Council Regulations (Tribune) ... ib.
28. Musalmans and the Council Regulations (Observer) ... ib.

VII.—General Administration.

(a) Judicial—

29. The Judicial administration of the new metropolis (Paisa Akhbar) ... 523
30. Colonel Beadon's appointment to the Punjab Chief Court (Panjabee) ... 524
31. Colonel Beadon's appointment to the Punjab Chief Court (Panjabee) ... ib.
32. Appeals in criminal cases (Panjabee) ... ib.

(b) Police—

33. Muslims and Crime (Panjabee) ... 525

(c) Municipal and Cantonment affairs—

Nil.

(d) Education—

34. The Hindu University (Jhang Sial) ... 525
35. Arabic and Sanskrit State scholarships (Paisa Akhbar) ... ib.

(e) Agriculture and questions affecting the land—

36. The Punjab Canal Colonies (Zamindar) ... 525

(f) Railways and Communications—

Nil.

(g) Postal matters—

Nil.

(h) Miscellaneous—

37. The Frontier Province (Punjab Advocate) ... 526
38. Ditto ( Ditto ) ... ib.
39. Battle of scripts in the Punjab (Jhang Sial) ... 527
40. Dina Nath ( Ditto ) ... ib.

LIST OF NEWSPAPERS AND PERIODICALS EXAMINED BY THE SPECIAL BRANCH AS IT STOOD ON THE 29TH JUNE 1912.

| No. | Name. | Locality. | Name of Publisher. | Circulation. |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| | ENGLISH. | | | |
| | DAILY. | | | |
| 1 | Tribune ... | Lahore ... | Bihari Lal ... | 1,758 copies. |
| | TRI-WEEKLY. | | | |
| 2 | Panjabee ... | Lahore ... | Mul Chand ... | 2,424 copies. |
| | BI-WEEKLY. | | | |
| 3 | Observer ... | Lahore ... | Nizam-ud-din ... | 1,000 copies. |
| 4 | Punjab Times and Frontier News. | Rawalpindi ... | J. R. Thapur ... | 200 „ |
| | WEEKLY. | | | |
| 5 | Arya Patrika ... | Lahore ... | Devi Chand ... | 650 copies. |
| 6 | Harbinger ... | Do. ... | Durga Parshad ... | 300 „ |
| 7 | Khalsa Advocate ... | Amritsar .. | Bahadur Singh ... | 752 „ |
| | FORTNIGHTLY. | | | |
| 8 | Jijnasu ... | Lahore ... | Ishar Das ... | ... |
| | MONTHLY. | | | |
| 9 | D.A.-V. College Magazine ... | Lahore .. | Saraswati Nath ... | 1,000 copies. |
| 10 | Forman Christian College Notes.* | Do. .. | ... | ... |
| 11 | Practical Medicine ... | Delhi ... | ... | ... |
| 12 | Punjab Educational Journal | Lahore ... | R. B. Mohan Lal ... | 700 copies. |
| 13 | Punjab Mission News ... | Do. ... | Revd. Wigram ... | 250 „ |
| 14 | Ravi ... | Do. ... | Mr. B. M. Jones ... | ... |
| 15 | Review of Religions ... | Kadian (Gurdaspur) ... | Sadr Anjuman Ahmadia, Qadian. | 800 copies. |
| 16 | Science Grounded Religion... | Lahore ... | Dev Rattan ... | 25 „ |
| 17 | Teacher ... | Dinga (Gujrat) ... | Kanhaya Singh ... | 200 „ |
| | URDU. | | | |
| | DAILY. | | | |
| 18 | Akhbar-i-'Am ... | Lahore ... | Govind Sahai ... | 630 copies. |
| 19 | Paisa Akhbar ... | Do. ... | Abdul Aziz ... | 1,011 „ |
| 20 | Watan ... | Do. ... | Muhammad Insha Alla ... | ... |
| 21 | Zamindar ... | Do. ... | Zafar Ali Khan, B.A. ... | ... |
| | BI-WEEKLY. | | | |
| 22 | Vakil ... | Amritsar ... | Abdul Aziz ... | 1,970 copies. |
| | WEEKLY. | | | |
| 23 | Afghan ... | Peshawar ... | Saiyid Muhammad Abdulla | 500 copies. |
| 24 | Ahl-i-Hadis ... | Amritsar ... | Sana-ulla ... | 925 „ |
| 25 | Ahluwalia Gazette ... | Do. ... | Lehna Singh ... | 500 „ |
| 26 | Al-Moin ... | Do. ... | Mehraj-ud-din ... | ... |
| 27 | Army News ... | Ludhiana ... | Hira Lal & Co. ... | 1,300 copies. |
| 28 | Arorbans Gazette ... | Amritsar ... | Labh Singh ... | ... |
| 29 | Arya Gazette ... | Lahore ... | Bhowani Das ... | 550 copies. |
| 30 | Badar ... | Qadian, Gurdaspur District | Muhammad Sadiq ... | 200 „ |

* Not received during the month.

LIST OF NEWSPAPERS AND PERIODICALS EXAMINED BY THE SPECIAL BRANCH AS IT STOOD ON THE 29TH JUNE 1912—CONTINUED.

| No. | Name. | Locality. | Name of Publisher. | Circulation. |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| | URDU—CONTINUED. | | | |
| | WEEKLY—continued. | | | |
| 31 | Bharat ... | Jullundur ... | Thakur Sheoratan Singh ... | ... |
| 32 | Chaudhwin Sadi ... | Rawalpindi ... | Haji Ahmad ... | ... |
| 33 | Civil and Military News ... | Ludhiana ... | Saiyid Muhammad ... | 1,325 copies. |
| 34 | Curzon Gazette ... | Delhi ... | Mirza Hairat ... | 111 " |
| 35 | Delhi Gazette* ... | Do. ... | Sajjad Husain ... | 200 " |
| 36 | Hakim ... | Qadian, Gurdaspur District | Yakub Ali ... | 900 " |
| 37 | Haq ... | Delhi ... | Kasim Ali ... | 200 " |
| 38 | Haq Pasand ... | Amritsar ... | Ram Nath ... | 382 " |
| 39 | Hindu ... | Lahore ... | Hari Lal Sharma ... | ... |
| 40 | Hindustan ... | Do. ... | Ram Saran Dutt ... | 8,070 copies. |
| 41 | Indar ... | Do. ... | Dharm Pal, B.A. ... | ... |
| 42 | Islam ... | Do. ... | Abdul Latif ... | 200 copies. |
| 43 | Jhang Sial ... | Lahore ... | Prabh Dyal ... | 2,262 " |
| 44 | Kapurthala Akhbar ... | Kapurthala ... | Hamid Husain ... | 155 " |
| 45 | Loyal Gazette ... | Lahore ... | Amar Singh ... | 200 " |
| 46 | Lytton Gazette ... | Delhi ... | Bulaki Das ... | 1,000 " |
| 47 | Milap* ... | Lyallpur ... | Jawahar Lal ... | ... |
| 48 | Millat ... | Lahore ... | Shuja Ulla ... | 1,500 copies. |
| 49 | Mister Gazette ... | Do. ... | Ali Bakhsh ... | 150 " |
| 50 | Munir ... | Jhang ... | Hafiz Khuda Bakhsh ... | 200 " |
| 51 | Musalman ... | Amritsar ... | Sana-ulla ... | 400 " |
| 52 | Nur ... | Qadian, Gurdaspur District | Muhammad Yusaf ... | 200 " |
| 53 | Nur Afshan ... | Ludhiana ... | Revd. Dr. E. M. Wherry ... | 500 " |
| 54 | Paisa Akhbar ... | Lahore ... | Abdul Aziz ... | 8,377 " |
| 55 | Parkash ... | Do. ... | Krishan ... | 1,723 " |
| 56 | Punjab Advocate ... | Mianwali ... | Karm Chand, Bahl ... | 1,000 " |
| 57 | Punjab Samachar ... | Lahore ... | Hira Lal ... | 705 " |
| 58 | Rajput Gazette ... | Do. ... | Thakur Sukhram Das ... | 650 " |
| 59 | Municipal Gazette and Sada-i-Hind.* | Do. ... | Din Muhammad ... | 500 " |
| 60 | Sadiq-ul-Akhbar ... | Bahawalpur ... | Maulvi Ata Ullah ... | 392 " |
| 61 | Ditto ... | Rewari ... | Safdar Hussain ... | 200 " |
| 62 | Sanatan Dharm Pracharak ... | Amritsar ... | Rulia Ram ... | 200 " |
| 63 | Shanti ... | Rawalpindi ... | Kishan Chand Mohan ... | 300 " |
| 64 | Sialkot Paper ... | Sialkot ... | Todar Mal ... | 500 " |
| 65 | Siraj-ul-Akhbar ... | Jhelum ... | Maulvi Fakir Muhammad | 450 " |
| 66 | Tahzib-ul-Niswan ... | Lahore ... | Mumtaz Ali ... | 240 " |
| 67 | Victoria Paper ... | Sialkot ... | Gian Chand ... | 600 " |

*Not received during the week.

LIST OF NEWSPAPERS AND PERIODICALS EXAMINED BY THE SPECIAL BRANCH AS IT STOOD ON THE 29TH JUNE 1912—CONCLUDED.

| No. | Name. | Locality. | Name of Publisher. | Circulation. |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| | URDU—CONCLUDED. | | | |
| | WEEKLY—concluded. | | | |
| 68 | Waqt* ... | Lahore ... | Ali Husain ... | 200 copies. |
| 69 | Watan ... | Do. ... | Muhammad Insha Ullah ... | 1,800 „ |
| 70 | Zamindar ... | Do. ... | Zafar Ali Khan, B.A. ... | 750 „ |
| | FORTNIGHTLY. | | | |
| 71 | Biwah Samachar ... | Lahore ... | Ram Chand ... | 300 copies. |
| 72 | Kam Dhenu ... | Ludhiana ... | Daulat Ram ... | 100 „ |
| 73 | Mohyal Gazette ... | Kala, Jhelum District ... | Mehta Sham Das ... | 250 „ |
| | PERSIAN. | | | |
| | FORTNIGHTLY. | | | |
| 74 | Siraj-ul-Akhbar ... | Kabul ... | Abdul Khalik ... | ... |
| | URDU. | | | |
| | MONTHLY. | | | |
| 75 | Arorbans Parkash ... | Lahore ... | Salig Ram ... | 200 copies. |
| 76 | Arya Musafir ... | Jullundur ... | Wazir Chand ... | 1,300 „ |
| 77 | Jauhar ... | Amritsar ... | Muhammad Ismail Khan ... | 200 „ |
| 78 | Kakezai Social Reformer ... | Lahore ... | Fazl Din ... | 200 „ |
| 79 | Makhzan ... | Delhi ... | Abdul Kadir ... | 4,000 „ |
| 80 | Rafiq ... | Lahore ... | Charinji Lal ... | 500 „ |
| 81 | Sadhu ... | Do. ... | Sheobart Lal ... | 500 „ |
| 82 | Martand ... | Do. ... | Kanhya Lal ... | 250 „ |
| 83 | Raghbir Patrika ... | Do. ... | Prab Dial ... | 500 „ |
| 84 | Zaban* ... | Delhi ... | Hamid Husain ... | 500 „ |
| | GURMUKHI. | | | |
| | WEEKLY. | | | |
| 85 | Khalsa Sewak ... | Amritsar ... | Jiwan Singh ... | 1,000 copies. |
| 86 | Punjab Reporter* ... | Do. ... | Ganda Singh ... | ... |
| 87 | Punjabi Surma* ... | Lahore ... | Gian Chand ... | 1,000 copies. |

* Not received during the week.

I.—Politics.

(a)—Foreign.

Lord Kitchener in Egypt.

1. The Paisa Akhbar (Lahore), of the 15th June 1912, publishes a note headed "New reforms by Lord Kitchener in Egypt." It is gratifying to learn, says the paper, that His Lordship has been exerting himself to do something to promote the welfare of the Egyptian public, especially the peasantry. Among other things, it adds, he has established savings banks for the benefit of cultivators, and has also passed a law limiting the rate of interest to 9 per cent. per annum. After remarking that this law will prove a veritable divine blessing for the Egyptians, especially the Fellahin, the paper asks the Government of India to pass a similar law for this country.

China, Japan and Siam and the Vedic religion.

2. The Parkash (Lahore), of the 18th (received on the 25th) June 1912, publishes a communication headed "Need of the Vedic religion in China and Japan: a voice from China." The writer—one Ram Chandra, residing at Shanghai—says that a religious revolution is about to take place in China, and that if Hindus do not attend to the matter Christian Missionaries will be certain to permanently plant the banner of Christianity in the Celestial Empire. After remarking that China, Japan, and Siam are in search of a national religion, he calls upon the Aryas to try to propagate the Vedic faith in those countries.

A defaulting English Peer.

3. The following is from the Tribune (Lahore), of the 25th June 1912 :—

"Among the visitors to the Delhi Coronation Durbar was the Duke of Manchester. The following advertisement appeared in the Times of 31st May last :—

In the Court of A. Latifi, Esquire, I.C.S., District Judge, Delhi.

Civil suit No. 25 of 1912.

Kanji Mal & Co., of Delhi,—Plaintiffs, against

Duke of Manchester,—Defendant.

Claim for Rs. 2,437-12-0.

Whereas it has been proved to the satisfaction of this Court that summons cannot be served upon the defendant in the ordinary way it is hereby notified that if he will not present himself in this Court on 1st August 1912, either personally or through an authorised agent, ex-parte proceedings will be taken against him.

Given under my hand and the seal of the Court, this 1st day of May 1912.

(Sd.) A. LATIFI,

District Judge, Delhi.

A commercial paper which ought to know remarks that Kanji Mal's experience is not singular, though we have not heard of any other case being taken to court. It is almost incredible that a British nobleman of the rank of the Duke of Manchester should be evading payment for articles purchased from an Indian trader. A decree of an Indian court can be executed in England and we can only hope for the credit of the British nobility that such a scandal will be avoided."

Hindus in America.

4. The following is from the Panjabee (Lahore), of the 27th June 1912 :—

"The peculiar case of fraud brought by the Vancouver authorities against Hussain Rahim—'The Hindu' on the 4th May, which we noticed in the last issue of the Panjabee, has ended in an equally strange manner. He was charged with having got his name entered in the list of voters, though, as 'a Hindu,' he was, by law, debarred from exercising that privilege. Hussain Rahim contended that it was not his fault that he aspired for privileges which in themselves do not constitute an offence. If the Registrar was so far blind as not to see any technical objection but to register his name among those of the voters, he must thank himself. The jury considered his case for 2¾ hours, but could not come to a verdict. The vote was 11 to 1 for acquittal, and Rahim was therefore allowed to go on a promise to return should the Crown desire to renew the case. This is the position assigned to the Hindus in America by the Colonial Government. There are also other cases whose decision shows that Hindus are neither 'white' nor 'black' and they are denied the privileges of both."

(b)—Home.

The Nicholson Committee.

5. The Civil and Military News (Ludhiana), of the 10th (received on the 20th) June 1912, has a note headed "The Army Expenditure Reduction Committee." Writing about the Nicholson Committee, the paper says that the Indian Silladar cavalry is admittedly the least expensive cavalry in the world. Again, it adds, the Silladar system is liked by men and officers; and there is, consequently, no reason why it should not be extended to the whole of the army, including the British garrison.

The Indian services.

6. The Paisa Akhbar (Lahore), of the 20th June 1912, has a note headed "Indian services and a Royal Commission of Inquiry." The London Times states, it remarks, that the Home Government has decided to appoint a Commission to make inquiries in regard to the public services of India. If the statement is well founded, it adds, the decision is highly opportune, coinciding as it does with the momentous change of this country's capital. After remarking that it will be welcomed by Indians with hearts full of pleasant hopes, the paper refers to the great strides which they have made in English education during the past fifty years. It is, therefore, necessary, it adds, that the European element in the public services should be decreased and that Indians should be given the fullest opportunity of "displaying their ability in administering the country." In conclusion, it suggests that the personnel of the Commission will be satisfactory only if it includes (some) non-official Indians.

Indian Muhammadans and the doings in Tripoli and Persia.

7. The Civil and Military News (Ludhiana), of the 10th (received on the 20th) June 1912, publishes an article headed "It is useless for Muhammadans to complain to the British Government against Russia and Italy." The recent Russian bombardment of a mosque and shrine at Meshad, it says, was due to freebooters and enemies of the Persian Government having sought shelter in those places. Again, it adds, the event has had the effect of ending cases of loot and murder in the part of the Shah's dominions concerned. Nor is this all. After the mosque and the shrine had been cleared of law-breakers they were restored to the Sajjada-nashins, who thereupon tendered their thanks to the Russian Government. Indian Muhammadans, however, have been holding meetings to complain against Russia and to ask the British Government to interfere with her. This is an absurd proceeding on their part. In the first place, Russia also owns crores of Muslim subjects and is thus acquainted with the religious feelings of Muhammadans. She is, besides, an independent and powerful country and the British Government can exert no sort of pressure on her. It is equally useless for Indian Musalmans to trouble it with representations in connection with the Turco-Italian war. The London Branch of the Muslim League was justly told by the Home Government that it (the latter) could not shape the policy of foreign countries.

Appointment of European Factory Inspectors in India.

8. The following is from the Panjabee (Lahore), of the 22nd June 1912:—

"The appointment of natives of India even to the humbler offices requiring no extraordinary capacity is being denied. From the question asked in the House of Commons, it appears that Factory Inspectors, in India, should be appointed mainly from Europeans. Why? We are told it is because, the factory managers are mostly Europeans! Really, in that case most people to be dealt with in the police department are Indians. Why then are not Indian S. P.'s appointed? In the factories, it is the machinery and workmen who ought to be inspected. What does Mr. Montagu mean by saying that Factory Inspectors will have to be mostly Europeans? It is because the machinery is imported from Europe? What will happen if they are imported from Japan or America? Will Inspectors be Japanese or American?"

Mr. Montagu and the Muhammadans of India.

9. The following is from the Tribune (Lahore), of the 23rd June 1912 :—

"The protest made by the Muhammadans of India against Mr. Montagu's remarks in the House of Commons against the Muhammadans of East Bengal have proved effective as is apparent from the apology made by the Under-Secretary of State for India. * * * * This means that Mr. Montagu has abandoned his previous position, which was historically correct, and has recognised the expediency of yielding to Muhammadan indignation. Whatever the merits our Muhammadan countrymen have scored a victory upon which they are to be congratulated."

Behar and the Punjab.

10. The following is from the Tribune (Lahore), of the 23rd June 1912 :—

"Without implying any disparagement to the newly created province of Behar and Orissa a comparison between that province and the Punjab will be found instructive. As a part of the province of Bengal there was not much occasion to judge Behar independently. It was admittedly behind Bengal and it was certainly ahead of Orissa. The Beharis have been making strenuous efforts to improve their position though they felt they were seriously handicapped by the competition with the Bengalis. But when Behar was lopped off from Bengal it had to take its stand by itself and to be judged on its own merits. For administrative purposes it was made at once a Lieutenant-Governorship with an Executive Council. Whether it gets a High Court of its own in the near future or not it is under the jurisdiction of the Calcutta High Court, the best and strongest High Court in India. If it is admitted that every province is entitled to the form of Government which it deserves can it be doubted for one moment that the Punjab is entitled to be placed at least on the same administrative level as Behar? There are educational and other institutions in the Punjab which are the admiration of all India. In various paths of public activity the Punjab has shown an energy, capacity and a quality of self-reliance which are recognised on all hands. Its industrial development within the last ten or fifteen years is almost phenomenal. Is then the claim at all extravagant that administratively the Punjab should be placed on at least the same level as Behar which has nothing like the record of the Punjab? Is it not time for the Punjab to have an Executive Council and a High Court? The real source of weakness in the Punjab is the absence of an organised and insistent public opinion and the insouciance of the Local Government. If these were to disappear the Punjab would get its rights within a reasonable length of time.

Proposed partition of the Mymensingh district.

11. The following is from the Tribune (Lahore), of the 26th June 1912 :—

"This time it is not on a large scale that there is a proposed partition but there is a proposal to divide the Mymensingh district of Bengal into two and this has given rise to a good deal of public feeling. The idea is to make two sub-divisions, Jamalpur and Tangail, one district and the rest of the present district another. The reason for this division is that the existing facilities of communication are not satisfactory. Strong public protests are being already made and an agitation is likely to be set on foot if the scheme is persisted in. Communications can be easily improved and the district kept intact. Anything that savours of partition should not be brought forward in Bengal just now."

Lord Crewe on India.

12. The following is from the Panjabee (Lahore), of the 27th June 1912 :—

"The vexed question of autonomy for India was again the topic of severe comments in the House of Lords during the debate on the Government of India Bill. Lord Curzon ventured to criticise the paragraph 3 of the August Despatch in which the autonomous independence of the Indian provinces is mentioned as the goal in view. On this sore subject Lord Crewe made very surprising remarks. He said :—

"There is a certain political school in India, of Indians altogether, free from the taint of disloyalty, who while agreeing that India must remain under the British rule, look forward to something approaching the self-government enjoyed by the Dominions. I say quite frankly I see no future for India on those lines. I think the experiment one impossible to try. Consequently it is my duty, standing here as Secretary of State for India, to repudiate altogether that reading of the despatch which implies anything of the kind, or that it is the hope or goal of the policy of His Majesty's Ministers or the present Government of India.

"There is no doubt that this statement of policy is emphatic and has given complete satisfaction to both Lord Curzon and Lord Cromer. There is no question of losing India here, but the statement of Lord Crewe must be logical and consistent, if it is to be considered at all authoritative. Indians may not look forward to self-government on any Colonial lines, but we cannot see how the principle of provincial autonomy could be carried out to the end unless the fullest measure of popular Government is conceded as education advances in India. There is a historic as well as a constitutional view of the matter independent of policy. Lord Crewe has doubtless enunciated the present policy in clear and unmistakable language. But that policy should be tested in the light of both constitutional and historical arguments and truths. When this is done, we are confident that the Indian self-government under the British Empire is as unimpeded as any other, and India will have it in the fulness of time in spite of narrow declarations of policies."

The Supply and Transport Corps and Nicholson Committee.

13. The Panjabee (Lahore), of the 25th June 1912, publishes the following from a correspondent under the nom-de-plume "A well-wisher" :—

"Much useful work is anticipated as a result of the deliberations of the 'Nicholson Committee' which has been appointed to enquire into the most important question of the Military expenditure and is for the present holding its sitting at Simla for the purpose.

"It is well known that the immediate predecessor of the Supply and Transport Corps, the Commissariat Department, was by far too economic in its administration and it may be pertinent to enquire to what extent the multiplication of the details and consequently the cost thereof which has to be borne by the public Exchequer has helped the efficiency of the Corps. Here is a significant fact that a Department which used to discharge its responsibilities most efficiently in its joint capacity as such has been split into three distinct services, viz., the Supply, the Transport, and the Military Grass Farms, which more or less working independently of each other have to be maintained independently as well. And, yet, this is not all. The cost of their up-keep has increased enormously. Prior to the year 1912 a store-keeper held responsible charge of the department with his assistant on salaries ranging from Rs. 30 to Rs. 50 per mensem and had to make good whatever deficiencies that might occur in the stores. Now quite a number of highly paid Commissioned, Warrant, and Non-Commissioned Officers look to it, and thus in addition to a considerably increased cost of its up-keep 'Loss Statements' and other 'Contingent expenses are frequent which go towards swelling the charges. The stores, no less, are subject to considerable loss in 'transit' and godowns which is also borne on account.

"There may be a point in favour of the 'Transport' in that it has been organised on the Military system into so many different 'corps' and 'cadres' with their own Officers Commanding, Second in Commands, Warrant Officers and Non-Commissioned Officers, which although entailing great expense, may, from a Military point of view, put their efficiency at a premium, but, what about the Military Grass Farms? This is in fact to supervise a contractor's work which was previously done by the officers of the Commissariat Department. The business is carried on practically in the same manner as it was done previously, although it then entailed no extra expenses. Such being the state of affairs in general it is hoped that the committee will be pleased to take into consideration the comparative cost of the administration of both the old and newly organised services and see for themselves whether the object for which so expensive a change was brought about has been realised.

"While on this subject I may also be permitted to say a word respecting the pay and prospect of the Agents in the Supply and Transport Corps. A Supply Agent has got to fulfil and come up to a certain standard of educational attainments and social status which does or ought to bring him fairly on an equal footing with the Naib-Tahsildars, Sub-Inspectors of Police, Excise Superintendents and Upper Subordinates of the Public Works Department, but while these can rise to a maximum of Rs. 800 per mensem, the salary of the Supply Agents is fixed from Rs. 30 to 50 per mensem. It is a matter for regret that while the cost is multiplied on the one hand by the introduction of highly paid foreign element, the Government found it inconvenient to better the prospects of the poor Supply Agents.

Rawalpindi, June 15. A WELL-WISHER."

IV.—KINE-KILLING.

A pamphlet on cow-killing.

14. The Hindustan (Lahore), of the 14th June 1912, says that one Hakim Abulbarkat Abdul Raoof has sent for review his pamphlet on the question of (cow) sacrifice. The publication, it adds, is likely to mislead uninformed people, while the quotations given in it from (different) Hindu books (? to prove that the ancient Hindus used to kill cows) have been under discussion for the last thirty years. Continuing, the paper remarks that the Hakim has compiled the pamphlet in consequence of the Bengal Government's desire to appoint a committee to devise means to prevent cow-killing riots and to effect a reconciliation between Hindus and Muhammadans. After remarking that he does not wish the committee to arrive at any unanimous opinion, it says that he compares cow-killing with jhatka, whereas the comparison lies between jhatka and halal. In conclusion, it observes that the pamphlet is calculated to add fuel to the fire.

V.—Native Societies and Religious Matters.

Hindus and Muhammadans.

15. The Millat (Lahore), of the 14th June 1912, publishes an article headed "The Musalmans of Spain and India." After giving an account of the expulsion of the Moors from Spain, it remarks that if the sceptre had gone back to Hindus they would assuredly have put Muhammadans to the sword, reduced them to the position of slaves or Sudras, driven them into jungles and mountains, or turned them out of the country. Indeed, it adds, if the residents of the land (Hindus), who speak of Musalmans as mlechhas, were to gain the upper hand, they would (undoubtedly) accord the above savage treatment to the latter. God, however, wished to preserve the Prophet's followers, and consequently he placed India under the English, who treated Hindus and Muhammadans alike. (To be continued.)

Muhammadans.

16. Writing under the heading "Be Muhammadans" the Vakil (Amritsar), of the 19th (received on the 26th) June 1912, says that some time back Mr. Abbas Tyebji, Judge, High Court, Baroda, had a talk with a representative of the Temps on the political and economic affairs of Indian Musalmans. After quoting an extract from the report which has appeared in a recent number of the Modern Review, the paper remarks that the Prophet's followers, not only in this country, but even in other lands, assuredly look upon the Sultan as their Caliph. It is, however, absolutely wrong to say that they also acknowledge His Majesty as their political leader. Again, Indian Muhammadans are undoubtedly England's subjects, and it is their religious duty to be loyal to the English. "But it does not follow that we should break the glass of our Islamic brotherhood and sympathy to atoms by dashing it against the rock of communal treason and should sacrifice our minority at the altar of the goddess of the majority." Besides, experience shows that the only service which those (i.e., Hindus) who take pride in being Indians first of all are rendering to the country consists in their determination to trample on minorities and in their zeal for sowing the seed of "disunion and mutual enmity." Continuing, the paper says that Muslim nationality is no "local" affair, and knows no "geographical or historical boundaries." If Indian Musalmans, therefore, it adds, have their eyes always turned to Turkey there is nothing wrong in this. It then goes on to say that Mr. Tyebji hit the nail on the head when he made the remark that they had blind men for their political leaders. If they were to throw off their lethargy even now they would find all the avenues of progress open to them. Flattery alone cannot please even Government, and the (Muslim) community should bring to their senses those of its members who are given to the burning of incense. They should be given to understand that the Islamic faith does not countenance "this mean thing." In conclusion, the paper says that Muhammadans should learn to stand on their own legs, as outside help always makes for weakness. They should not ask for Government's help in everything, nor is it beneficial for them to imitate Hindus in all matters.

Sikhs and Hindus.

17. The Sanatan Dharam Parcharak (Amritsar), of the 16th June 1912, publishes a communication headed "Are not Sikhs Hindus?"

The writer—"Aghufta," of Amritsar—says that he is determined not to discontinue the controversy until he has brought neo-Sikhs round to his Next he calls upon them to answer the following questions :—

(1) They say that it is no act of merit to bathe in the Ganges, &c., but is it meritorious to have a dip in the tanks at the Golden Temple and at Tarn Taran ?

(2) Will they, who ridicule idol worship, say whether one can acquire merit by bowing to the Tahli Sahib, Kotha Sahib, Beri Sahib and even the Granth Sahib ?

(3) They make fun of (Hindu) gods and goddesses, but will they say why Guru Gobind sought help from the Devi and performed a havan to her ?

(4) Do they offer food and gifts (shradh) to the manes of the Gurus? If so, why do they not follow the same practice in regard to their forefathers?

(5) They profess to make no difference between Hindus and Muhammadans, but why do they not eat and drink at the latter's hands and enter into matrimonial relations with them?

(6) If they are non-Hindus why do they not discard their present Hindu names?

The writer then challenges neo-Sikhs to a discussion.

A preacher of the Radha-Swami sect and Sikhs.

18. Writing under the heading "The long hair of 500 Sikhs cut off," the Parkash (Lahore), of the 11th (received on the 20th) June 1912, says that a correspondent of the Khalsa Samachar reports that a preacher of the Radha-Swami sect has been at work in Smeli, a village ten miles distant from Kolpur, Jammu State, and that he has had the long hair of about 500 Sikhs in the place cut off.

The Arya Samaj.

19. The Ahl-i-Hadis (Amritsar), of the 14th (received on the 21st) June 1912, has a note headed "Second epoch (in the history) of the Arya Samaj." The Arya Samaj, it says, which once used to severely attack Islam and its founder, has now begun to openly praise the Prophet. After remarking that Lala Munshi Ram and his son did so in the speeches made by them in the Batala and Delhi Arya Samajes towards the end of May last, the paper observers that the second epoch in the history of the Samaj will be one of peace, and will unite Hindus and Muhammadans.

The Arya Samaj.

20. The Vakil (Amritsar), of the 19th (received on the 26th) June 1912, publishes a note headed "The Arya Samaj is a dangerous body." Innumerable incidents, it says, have placed it beyond doubt that the Samaj is a purely political society, and that it has been taking a prominent part in political agitation. Next the paper summarises the article which recently appeared in the Arjun under the heading "Is not ths Arya Samaj a political body"? (Vide paragraph 18 of Selections No. 25). Continuing, it remarks that no one should now deny that the Samaj is a political institution; that it has been making use of religion only to gain its objects; and that its existence is likely to prove dangerous for the rulers and the ruled alike.

Dharmpal and the Vedas.

21. The Arjun (Lahore), of the 18th (received on the 25th) June 1912, has a note headed "Challenge to Dharmpal." The Editor says that, in an article published in the Indar, dated the 14th June, Dharmpal denies that the Vedas are revealed books. After remarking that the statement is incorrect he challenges the latter to a discussion on the subject.

Dharmpal.

22. The Parkash (Lahore), of the 11th (received on the 20th) June 1912, has an article headed "Will you continue under deception about Abdul Ghafur even now?" It calls Dharmpal an irreligious man and says that he has been changing his religious convictions with a special object. Next it refers to the books written by him against Islam, the Dev Samaj, and the founders of those religious systems, shortly after his conversion to the Vedic faith. It also makes mention of the praises which he then bestowed on the Vedas, the Arya Samaj, and Swami Dayanand, and which led to his being lionised by Aryas. His books, it adds, had a very large sale, the subscribers to his magazine exceeded 1,000, and presents of hundreds of rupees began to be made to him. After stating that all this put thousands into his pockets, the paper remarks that his head was now turned and that he heaped insults on several prominent Arya Samajists. The wholly false charges levelled by him against Doctor Charanjiv, who kept him in his house for several months and treated him like a son, led to his prosecution by the gentleman named. The case showed what a degraded man he was, while it also had the effect of setting him against Lala Munshi Ram. There was no abusive word which he did not use towards the Lala, and, because of the latter, he also made unholy efforts to injure the Gurukula. On Aryas, however, calling down shame on him for this conduct he began to attack the Samaj, to ridicule its doctrines, and to insult its founder. Again, not content with having placed Dayanand below Muhammad, he represented himself, in order to hurt the feelings of Aryas, as being superior to the firstnamed. The paper then goes on to say that the money realised by Dharmpal from Arya Samajists has well-nigh been spent; that he is now in straitened circumstances; that he has recently announced the (re)publication of the edition of the Satyarth Parkash which was condemned by Dayanand; and that his object consists in getting some more money out of the Samaj before leaving it, as also in affording its opponents an opportunity of causing injury to it. Next it shows how the cost price of the book comes only to about annas 4 a copy, whereas the price fixed by Dharmpal is six times the amount, viz, Re. 1-8. Continuing, it urges Aryas not to put a single anna into his pockets, and also asks Muhammadans not to make much of him in their opposition to the Samaj. He is a source of danger not only for the Arya Samaj, but also for all other systems of religion. He calls himself a brother, not only of Dayanand, but even of Christ and Muhammad, to insult whom, moreover, he represents himself as an inspired man.

A riddle.

23. The Arjun (Lahore), of the 18th (received on the 25th) June 1912, has a note headed "Swami Dayanand's signature on a letter from another person." It states that page 685 of the Swami's life, published under the Arya Pratinidhi Sabha's authority, contains a copy of a letter from some unknown person to one Thakar Das, a Jain. After remarking that the epistle has, however, been reproduced over the signature "Dayanand Saraswati," the paper asks the Editor of the Parkash to read the riddle.

Muhammad and Dayanand.

24. The Indar (Lahore), of the 14th June 1912, has a note headed "Muhammad and widow-marriage; Swami Dayanand and niyog." The Musafir (Agra), it states, writes that the Editor has given no reason for his preference of the Prophet over the founder of the Arya Samaj. One reason, it adds, is that, while Muhammad advised widows to remarry, Dayanand invented for them a shameful doctrine like niyog.

The recent controversy about the Presidency of the Hindu Conference.

25. The Jhang Sial (Lahore), of the 20th June 1912, has a leader headed "The case against the Hindustan. The Enchanted Castle has fallen." The paper charges Dina Nath with having disgraced Hindu leaders or having subjected them to disgrace. The articles concerned, it adds, are said to have been written by Pandit Rambhaj Dat, and to have been published by Munshi Munawar Khan, Saghar. Can, however, Dina Nath deny that he knew of these writings (? before their appearance in the Hindustan)? He was at Lahore at the time, examined and usually replied to the letters (received in the Hindustan office) and took verbal part in the controversy referred to. He could have, if he had so wished, prevented the publication of the said articles and averted the mischief wrought by them. This being so, he has been guilty of an "offence," and it is, therefore, necessary that he should be punished by the public. He has committed the most heinous sin against (his) community. He saw the leaders of Hindus disgraced, and did nothing to avert the disgrace; although he could have done so. He saw Saghar cause disunion in the ranks of Hindus, but deliberately abstained from doing his duty in the matter. Can he, moreover, deny that, as part proprietor of the Hindustan, he is responsible for the policy of that paper? He has undoubtedly a partner in Pandit Rambhaj Dat, but the latter is a mere puppet in his hands.

The paper has also a cartoon, in which "the general public" is displayed in the act of garlanding Banka Dayal for having run Dina Nath to earth.

VI.—Legislation.

A suggestion.

26. The Civil and Military News (Ludhiana), of the 10th (received on the 20th) June 1912, has a note headed "Worthy of the attention of the Government of India." After remarking that Government has established co-operative credit societies to rescue agriculturists out of the clutches of Mahajans, the paper suggests that there should be passed a law to fix Rs. 9 per cent. per annum as the maximum rate of interest.

The Siraj-ul-Akhbar (Jhelum), of the 11th (received on the 20th) June 1912, complains of the usurious rates of interest charged by sahukars, and says that if Government wishes to preserve the existence of poor zamindars it should soon enact a law like the one suggested in the foregoing paragraph.

The Punjab Council Regulations.

27. The following is from the Tribune (Lahore), of the 26th June 1912 :—

"Beyond the brief information that the recommendations of the Punjab Government in connection with the revision of the regulations for the nomination and election of additional members of the Punjab Legislative Council have been sent to the Government of India the public knows nothing about the nature of those recommendations. In Bengal the new Governor gave the landholders an opportunity of making suggestions for the revision of the regulations and, on behalf of the educated classes, Messrs. Surendranath Banerjea and Bhupendranath Basu had opportunities of long consultations with the members of the Executive Council. We must of course admit that the example of the Bengal Government has not been followed by other provincial Governments, but nowhere are the regulations more defective than in the Punjab nor the representation so inadequate and unsatisfactory. It is not much beyond the truth to say that the interests which require most to be represented in the Punjab Legislative Council are neglected, while there is nothing like alert, vigilant and effective criticism in the Council itself for want of informed and independent Councillors. It is also unfortunate that no representation of any kind has been made to the Punjab Government by any public body and there is nothing tangible to show that there is dissatisfaction with either the manner in which the Indian Councillors discharge their duties or their ability to represent the people. The dead weight of political inertia has paralysed all classes of the community and nothing can be heard of except mutual bickerings. True it is that we must first deserve before we desire, but we, in the Punjab, have done neither and we have ourselves to blame if the educated classes cannot make themselves heard in the Punjab Legislative Council."

Mussalmans and the Council Regulations.

28. The following is from the Observer (Lahore), of the 26th June 1912 :—

"It will be remembered that the Council Regulations promulgated in 1909 were tentative and Government promised to revise them in the light of actual experience. That experience has by this time been gained; while the territorial redistribution, necessitated by carrying out the momentous administrative changes announced by His Imperial Majesty the King Emperor at Delhi, further calls for a readjustment of the seats in the Imperial Council and for the re-framing of the Regulations governing the elections to the latter as well as the Councils of the Punjab, Behar, and Bengal. The whole question is under consideration, and now that the opinions of all the Provincial Governments are before the Government of India, we may ere long expect the publication of final orders on the subject.

"We would, therefore, take this opportunity of inviting the attention of the Government of India to two or three points of importance and place before them our views as representing the opinions of the Indian Mussalmans. In the first place, we trust—indeed, we are confident—there will be no tampering with the privilege of separate representation which has been conceded to the Musalmans over the larger part of the country. The history of the struggle that raged round the point three years ago, the heated discussion to which it gave rise, both in the press and at representative Muslim meetings, and the various phases of the controversy—all this cannot have been so soon forgotten by the public as well as the Government; and the definite, repeated and categorical pledges authoritatively given to the Musalmans constitute the bed-rock on which the entire superstructure of their claims is based. We refer to this in the certain belief that nothing will now be done to recede from the position then taken up and that advantage will not be taken of the proposed revision of the Regulations to impair in any way the strength of Muslim representation or to deprive the Muhammadan community of the valuable right of separate representation. That is the basic priniciple of the Muslim position and the slightest interference with it cannot but create the gravest dissatisfaction. In the second place, we would urge upon the Government of India the necessity of removing the anomaly of the Punjab Muhammadans being denied the privilege of separate representation on the Provincial Council. While our co-religionists in other Provinces enjoy this right, it is not only anomalous but unjust as well that the Punjab Musalmans should not be considered fit to participate in the general concession. The argument that separate representation is not necessary in the Punjab, where the Musalmans form the majority of the population cannot prove convincing, for it is well known that in the now defunct Province of Eastern Bengal, where the Muslim proportion in the Provincial population was even larger than in the Punjab, the Musalmans enjoyed the privilege of separate representation on the Provincial Council. Again, the fact that of the five elected members of the Punjab Council, three happen to be Mussalmans is a matter of pure accident and due to a fertuitous combination of circumstances, which cannot be expected to repeat, indeed we are positive will not repeat, themselves this time or on future occasions. This is thus a matter of vital importance and ought to receive the earnest consideration of the Government of India when they are revising the Regulations for the constitution of the Punjab Council.

"Then, again, we see no wisdom in restricting the choice of the various electorates to their own members, especially in the case of Municipal, District and Cantonment Committees. The rule is that persons seeking election at the hands of the latter to the Provincial Council must themselves be members of one of these Committees and that no one who is not a member or an ex-member of any of the three can be returned by them to the Council. We are positive this restriction is not only unnecessary but that it seriously stands in the way of right men coming forward to contest the elections. The old rules, in force from 1893 to 1909 placed no restriction of the kind on the choice of the electorates, with the result that not infrequently these bodies sent up as Councillors men who, though they had not served on the Committees at all, were fully competent to discharge their duties on the Council Chamber with credit to themselves and advantage to the whole Province. It cannot be contended that those who are not members of the local boards do not necessarily possess the requisite qualities enabling them to work as members of Legislative Councils. On the other hand, the fact is that under the existing constitution of most of these boards and in face of the methods of election to them, men of light and leading always hesitate to come forward to seek the sufferage of the electorate that chooses their members. If the restriction referred to above were removed it would enable qualified men to enter the Councils without going through, what so often proves to be, the impossible ordeal of being elected to the local boards.

"In this connection, a Lahore paper makes a pointed reference to Muhammadan graduates elsewhere than in the Punjab having got the franchise to elect members to the Provincial Legislative Councils, while they are denied such a privilege in this Province. We are inclined to agree with our contemporary in deploring the distinction, but the remedy lies not in doing away with communal representation outside the Punjab also, as the paper appears to pray for, but in introducing the principle of separate Muslim respresentation in this Province as well, and then creating special Muhammadan electorates, which would of course include Muslim graduates of some years' standing. If similar rights were conferred upon our Hindu fellow countrymen and if Hindu graduates too secured the franchise to elect their representatives to the Provincial Council, we would be the first to welcome such an arrangement. But by dumping the two communities together in one group, you cannot advance the cause of mutual amity and good will between them. This can be secured only by a frank recognition of the rights of one another and by agreeing to a fair and equitable distribution of the elective seats on the Council, not on the basis of Municipal and District Board electorate but on communal electorates. While replying to the question of our contemporary we have no position in declaring that the educated section of the Muhammadan community in the Punjab is not 'satisfied with the quality of the representation it enjoys' in this Province and that it is anxious, deeply anxious, to improve this quality on the next chance. It, however, rests with the Hindu community to take advantage of this feeling of the Muslim community to effect an all-round improvement in the present constitution of the Punjab Council, or to effectively smother all possibility of improvement by continuing to harp on the supposed over-representation of the Musalmans and eliminating the chances of good men being sent to the Councils by fighting elections on purely sectarian lin es."

VII.—General Administration.

(a)—Judicial.

The judicial administration of the new metropolis.

29. The Paisa Akhbar (Lahore), of the 21st June 1912, publishes a leader headed "The judicial administration of Imperial Delhi." After expressing satisfaction at the recent formal announcement regarding the formation of the Delhi enclave, the paper says that the administration of the new metropolis should, in all respects, be such as to serve as an example for the whole of India. For instance, it adds, British rule in India rests on justice and liberty, and it is, therefore, necessary that the Imperial ilaqa should be superior to the rest of India in both these respects, i.e., while its executive officers should not be allowed to interfere with the legitimate liberty of the people, its judicial system should be the strongest possible. The Government of India admits the necessity of separating judicial and executive functions, and it would be advisable for it to try the experiment in the Delhi enclave.

Colonel Beadon's appointment to the Punjab Chief Court.

30. The following is from the Panjabee (Lahore), of the 22nd June 1912 :—

"The Pioneer says that 'as a special case' the Secretary of State has agreed to the appointment of Colonel Guy Beadon, District and Sessions Judge, Ambala, to officiate as a temporary additional Judge of the Chief Court in place of Mr. H. Scott-Smith. The exception which the Government tries to make of this appointment involves the weakening of a great principle which the province should try to vindicate. The reversion of Mr. Scott-Smith after trying him as a Chief Court Judge for four or five months and the elevation of a junior over his head leaving the reverted candidate to find what consolation he could in a holiday at home are other matters which this exceptional appointment raises. Considering it exclusively as a matter of principle, we have not the least hesitation in objection to it. At a time when the Imperial Government is favourably considering the establishment in the newest Province of a Chartered High Court, which should have a fixed proportion of Barrister Judges, we in the Punjab are asked to walk backwards like the crab and revert to the forgotten days of military domination. This appointment has done away with a precedent which has been jealously maintained all these years. We say whether or not the appointment to a Chief Court Judgeship is strictly governed by the Civil Service Act, there seems little doubt that in making this appointment the Government has relied on Sir Courtney Illbert's interpretation that 'the schedule of reserved posts, which is still in force, does not apply to non-regulation Provinces such as the Punjab, Oudh, the Central Provinces and Burma, where the higher Civil posts may be, and in practice often are, filled up by military officers belonging to the Army and others.' But this interpretation covers only the scheduled posts which are—

(1) Civil and Session Judges, or Chief Judicial Officers of districts.

(2) Additional and Assistant Judges.

(3) Magistrates or Chief Magisterial Officers of districts.

(4) Joint Magistrates.

(5) Assistant Magistrates or Assistant to Magistrates.

"It is clear from this that a Chief Court Judgeship is not one to which military men or even Civilians are entitled to be promoted. Nevertheless the Government apparently shelters itself under the clause that the Punjab is a non-regulation Province and ignores the claims of the Bar for an appointment which a civilian has vacated. We hope this appointment will form the subject of a question in the Imperial Council or in Parliament.

Colonel Beadon's appointment to the Punjab Chief Court.

31. The following is from the Panjabee (Lahore), of the 25th June 1912 :—

"Colonel Guy Beadon, the newly-appointed Judge of the Punjab Chief Court will enter upon his duties on Thursday, the 4th July, Mr. Scott-Smith proceeding home on furlough the same day. Colonel Beadon is an exceptionally able Judge. His judgments compare favourably with those of many Civilian judges. He has not made a special study of law and is in no sense a lawyer, yet his strong common-sense and his analytical faculty have enabled him to win the applause of the Bar and the litigant public. While fully appreciating these merits and his ability to examine facts we cannot overlook the breach of principle involved in his elevation to the Chief Court. We hope this would be the first and last blunder of the kind."

Appeals in criminal cases.

32. The following is from the Panjabee (Lahore), of the 27th June 1912 :—

"The large percentage of releases on appeal in criminal cases in the Punjab has been noticed by the Government in their review of the Punjab Jail administration report for 1911. It is said that the judicial statistics do not disclose anything that is abnormal except the extraordinary difference in the percentage of the releases on appeal—29 per cent., as compared with 3 per cent. in Bengal, 5 in Bombay and 8 in the United Provinces. The difference is certainly disquieting, but it is unfair to conclude that this is the peculiar result of the year 1911 in this province. * * * The state of criminal administration, the difficulties of the police, and the failings of the people—all are subject to a system which is admittedly very defective. The causes that underlie this single feature of abnormal releases are deep-rooted and all-pervading. As we said at the outset, the first defect is the educational backwardness and want of zeal in spreading knowledge among a virile population. The other defects are of the police and the judiciary, which could not rise much above their environments. We are glad that the Punjab Government have by chance stumbled on this awkward feature of jail statistics. It is a good enough clue to trace the sources of evil and if they work upon it in the spirit of Oliver Cromwell, it ought to end in the overhauling of the three largest departments of the greatest concern to the people—viz., the Education, the Police and the Judiciary."

(b)—Police.

33. The following is from the Panjabee (Lahore), of the 22nd June 1912 :—

Moslems and Crime.

"The increase in serious crime in the Punjab does not seem to be in any way extraordinary to some people. The Comrade of Calcutta has betrayed considerable impatience at the analysis of crime in this Province. It disbelieves the statement we made recently that a class of people never completely brought within the best side of any religion revel in criminal deeds. Although in the police reports we cannot find how crime is apportioned among the three important religious groups in the Punjab, we have ample testimony in the reports to the preponderance of crime among Muhammadans. For instance, we showed from the Jail administration report that the Moslem convicts form nearly two-thirds of the whole. Their number is 10,255 as against 5,899 of both Hindus and Sikhs and we note that this proportion has been maintained for over 10 years. Is this not a feature requiring social remedies from those who frequently put forward their religious claim as determining their political status?"

(d)—Education.

34. The Jhang Sial (Lahore), of the 20th June 1912, publishes a letter headed "End of the Hindu University." The writer refers to the recent article in the Parkash on the subject of the Hindu University (vide paragraph 29 of Selections No. 24), and denies that Hindus started the movement with the object only of not being outdone by Muhammadans. That paper's opposition to the scheme, he adds, is due solely to the management of the University not having been placed in the hands of the Arya Pratinidhi Sabha. Next he contends that religion and language, on which the Parkash has laid so much stress, have nothing to do with the national existence or unity.

The Hindu University.

35. The Paisa Akhbar (Lahore), of the 17th June 1912, has a note headed "Arabic and Sanskrit scholarships." It is neither just nor expedient, says the paper, to grant only one scholarship for the scientific study of Arabic in Europe, as against two in the case of the Sanskrit language.

Arabic and Sanskrit State scholarships.

(e)—Agriculture and questions affecting the land.

36. The Zamindar (Lahore), of the 23rd June 1912, publishes an article headed "Garden and Meadow." It says that the crores of maunds of grain produced in the canal colonies in the Punjab have undoubtedly improved the financial condition of the colonists to a considerable extent. No marked improvement has, however, been effected in the general condition of the country, for the reason that the grain and other products raised are exported to foreign lands; while the money received in exchange is spent on imported articles, in court fees, the fees of lawyers, and in paying interest to money lenders. In short, adds the paper, owing to the absence of indigenous industries in the land only foreign nations and countries have profited by "the agricultural wealth" of India. Continuing, it says that the settlers in the Punjab colonies are only living machines for producing raw material in abundance, and that they have not the sense to use the outturn to promote the economic welfare of their country. After remarking that they will remain so till education becomes general among them, it goes on to say that the network of canals, which overspreads the whole country, has undoubtedly facilitated the work of colonising waste lands. Thoughtful people have, however, begun to fear serious injury to both the colonies and the country at large from the deforestation carried on for purposes of colonisation. The paper then publishes a letter in which the correspondent says that the disappearance of the Lyallpur bar has had the effect of raising the prices of milk, ghi, cattle, and fuel in the ilaqa. The (adjoining) jungles in the Montgomery and Multan districts, he adds, which now help in the maintenance of lakhs of cattle, camels, sheep, and goats, will also have been colonised in a year or two in consequence of the opening of "the new canal." Again, to the best of his information, reserved forests alone will have been left after the lapse of a year. Where, he asks, will the cattle in the above districts go then (to graze), and what will become of the animals which are now taken there during fodder famines? After remarking that nothing is so far said to have been done in the matter, he says that ten years hence

The Punjab Canal Colonies.

(1) ghi will not be available for food;

(2) fuel will sell 10 or 15 seers per rupee;

(3) mutton and goat's flesh will sell at 1 or 1¼ seers the rupee, and Muhammadans will not be able to get animals to sacrifice;

(4) camels and bullocks will not be available for purposes of transport within the country;

(5) cows will die out, and the lives of the people will be in danger for want of milk;

(6) not a drop of rain will fall; and

(7) the dearth of cattle will necessitate the use of machinery, but the ignorance of cultivators (their leaders are against education) will prevent them from working the same.

In conclusion, the writer remarks that the special attention should be paid to the Forest Department, and that the Forest laws and Act VII of 1878 should be amended.

(h)—Miscellaneous.

37. The Punjab Advocate (Mianwali), of the 13th (received on the 20th) June 1912, publishes a communication headed "Should the North-West Frontier Province be amalgamated with the Punjab?" The writer asks whether the Muhammadans of Swat, Buner, Waziristan, &c., should be made peaceful men by being allowed to mix with the Panjabis, or whether they should be handed over to bigoted Mullahs to be converted into Ghazis. Next he suggests that the Frontier Province and the Punjab should be re-amalgamated and placed under a Governor, so that the Pathans concerned may cease to be bigots and refrain from sucking the life-blood of Hindus. Should this be impracticable, he adds, the Dera Ismail Khan tahsil at least should again be included in the Punjab.

The Frontier Province.

38. The Punjab Advocate (Mianwali), of the 13th (received on the 20th) June 1912, has a letter headed "Personal Rule." In continuation of his previous remarks on the subject (vide paragraph 36 of Selections No. 25), the writer—"H. C. Mujrim," of Rawalpindi—begins by explaining the difference between personal

The Frontier Province.

rule and the democratic form of the government. The people of India ( ? Hindus), he adds, were long in "the evil abyss" of despotism. "The lovers of personal rule" ( ? Muslims) had things their own way. They dishonoured the grown-up daughters and daughters-in-law of the ruled, and made every effort to favour "a particular community" by exterminating others ( ? Hindus). With a change in "our" fortunes, however, "the British Government arrived, and, emerging out of the shadow of personal rule, we came under the flag of democracy on the plain of liberty . . . . But alas ! Lord Curzon, the enemy of the democracy, cut off two important limbs from our body and handed them over to despotism." One of them, Bengal, has been reinvigorated by "the beloved son of Christ" (His Majesty the King Emperor), but the cry of the other, the unfortunate Frontier Province, has not been listened to up to the present. It is true that the inhabitants of this part of the country have not protested like the Bengalis, still their "path is beset with (even) greater obstacles." The Government of Bengal, although despotic, used to follow democratic principles to some extent, but the government of the Frontier Government gives a wide berth to the said principles. "The favourite wife's" love has rendered it mad and it is engaged in trampling on the rights of the Hindu community (lit. others). It granted allowances to "the favourite wife," but the thanks "she" returned on getting sufficient to eat . . . . (there follows a blank here). The infatuated husband, however, who is always thinking of pleasing "her," had a paper started, to amuse and to breathe a spirit of jehad into "her," by paying a subsidy of Rs. 800 a year out of the Kabul Fund ( , which is a "private" affair and out of which Rs. 3,00,000 is spent in allowances to tribesmen, &c., with the sanction of the Government of India according to the wishes of the Chief Commissioner*). After remarking that this paper took the inauspicious form of the Afghan, the writer says that "when this . . . . woman of civilisation (? the Afghan's Editor), who had been brought up to youth among mountains, visited the journalistic world and witnessed the struggle of 'other' European women, she at once jumped out of her clothes and became ready to commit murder and loot." The result was the Nadir-Shahi loot (of Peshawar) in March 1910 ; but this was not calculated to anger the lovelorn husband in the least, and he did not interfere with "her" in any way. He murdered justice, in that while he had the Afghan started under the circumstances referred to, he ended the days of the Frontier Advocate, the only organ of the helpless . . . . . (? Frontier Hindus). Again, when the Hon'ble Mr. Sinha asked a question in the Viceroy's Council on the subject of the subsidy paid to the Afghan and the Government of India called for an explanation (in the matter), "the husband" told the plain lie that the payment of the subsidy had been discontinued some months previously, which was, however, the reverse of true. (To be continued.)

* The brackets are the correspondents.

39. The Jhang Sial (Lahore), of the 20th June 1912, publishes an article headed "Copy of translation of the order by the Appellate Court." The writing is in the form of a Judicial pronouncement by "Mr. English Speaker-and-Writer," and endeavours to reply to the arguments which are generally used to prove the superiority, so far as the Punjab is concerned, of the Urdu script to the English, Gurmukhi, and Hindi characters. It adds that English has become more popular in this province than Urdu ; that every script should have fair field to win popularity ; and that the people should be at liberty to use any characters they like.

Battle of scripts in the Punjab.

40. The Jhang Sial (Lahore), of the 20th June 1912, publishes a letter headed "An open challenge to Lala Dina Nath." The writer—"Akhtar," of Lucknow—says that the Hindu community has allowed itself to be deceived in regard to the Lala. He has known Dina Nath since the latter was on the Paisa Akhbar's staff and used to cut the throats of Hindus in a most heartless manner. The writer does not expect him to deny that he started the Hindustan to earn his bread, and not in any sense to serve the followers of Hinduism. Indeed, Dina Nath had the simplicity to tell him that, as there was no "living" Hindu paper then, "the bargain" would undoubtedly prove more profitable to him than working for the Paisa Akhbar. After remarking that he had the good fortune to secure the services of matchless writers like Amba Parshad and Zia-ul-Haq, the writer states that it was admitted by Lala Dina Nath in the course of his trial (in 1907) that he had been running his paper and press as only business concerns. At the time of his release from jail, the former adds, the relations between Hindus and Muhammadans were strained, and this led Dina Nath to pose as a "nationalist" Hindu and to defend the Hindu cause with the help of (Munawwar Khan) Saghar. He is not much of a writer himself, and the correspondent offers to pay him Rs. 50 if he should (successfully) contradict the foregoing statements.

Dina Nath.

C. STEAD,

SIMLA :
The 29th June 1912.

Assistant to the Deputy Inspector-General of Police,
Criminal Investigation Department, Punjab.

P. G. B. Press, Simla—4-7-12—No. 32—107-H. L. S.

[ Confidential. ]

[ Vol. XXV. ] [ No. 27. ]

SELECTIONS

FROM THE

NATIVE NEWSPAPERS

PUBLISHED IN THE PUNJAB.

Examined up to 6th July 1912.

---

CONTENTS.

Page.

I.—Politics.

(a) Foreign—

1. The Islamic world (Zamindar) ... 535
2. Europe and the Islamic world (Vakil) ... ib.

(b) Home—

3. British rule in India (Muin) ... 536
4. The Public Service Royal Commission (Civil & Military News) ... ib.
5. Muhammadans and Government (Munir) ... ib.
6. Indian Muhammadans and their political rights (Observer) ... 537
7. Lord Crewe on the Government of India Act (Tribune and Panjabee) ... ib.
8. Sir Louis Dane's successor (Panjabee) ... 539
9. Self-government and sweets (Lord Crewe on the Government of India Act) (Panjabee) ... ib.
10. The All-India Hindu League (Tribune) ... 540
11. The new move of the Punjab Muslim League (Panjabee) ... ib.
12. President of the next National Congress (Tribune) 541
13. The Viceroy's rumoured recall (Ditto) ib.
14. Rumoured strained relations between the Viceroy and the Secretary of State over the cost of temporary works at Delhi (Tribune) ... ib.

II.—Afghanistan and Trans-Frontier.

15. Tribal raids into British Territory (Punjab Advocate) ... 541
16. Hindus of Afghanistan (Hindustan) ... 542

III.—Native States.

Nil.

IV.—Kine-killing.

17. The Hoshiarpur Jhatka case (Khalsa Advocate) ... 542

V.—Native Societies and Religious Matters.

18. The Jhang Sial on Hindu women (Hindustan and Rajput Gazette) ... 543
19. Sikhs and Hindus (Sanatan Dharam Parcharak) 544
20. Six great men of India (Parkash, Arjan and Hindustan) ... ib.
21. Biloches (Muin) ... 545
22. Juvenile convicts and the Salvation Army (Vakil) ib.
23. The Hon'ble Mian Muhammad Shafi as Secretary of the Punjab Muslim League (Muin) ... 546

Page.

VI.—Legislation.

24. Sikhs and Legislative Councils (Khalsa Advocate) 546
25. Council elections and Muhammadans (Panjabee) ... 547

VII.—General Administration.

(a) Judicial—

26. Colonel Beadon's appointment to the Punjab Chief Court Bench (Paisa Akhbar) ... 547
27. The Mian Mir shooting case (Panjabee, Tribune and Observer) ... 548

(b) Police—

28. Police mal-practices in the Punjab (Panjabee) ... 549

(c) Municipal and Cantonment affairs—

Nil.

(d) Education—

Nil.

(e) Agriculture and questions affecting the land—

Nil.

(f) Railways and Communications—

Nil.

(g) Postal matters—

29. Complaint against some Muhammadan postal clerks at Rawalpindi (Shanti) ... 550

(h) Miscellaneous—

30. The Parkash newspaper (Arjan) ... 550
31. The New Capital of India (Tribune) ... 551
32. A Press Panchayat for the Punjab (Panjabee) ... ib.

LIST OF NEWSPAPERS AND PERIODICALS EXAMINED BY THE SPECIAL BRANCH AS IT STOOD ON THE 6TH JULY 1912.

| No. | Name. | Locality. | Name of Publisher. | Circulation. |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| | ENGLISH. | | | |
| | DAILY. | | | |
| 1 | Tribune ... | Lahore ... | Bihari Lal ... | 1,758 copies. |
| | TRI-WEEKLY. | | | |
| 2 | Panjabee ... | Lahore ... | Mul Chand ... | 2,424 copies. |
| | BI-WEEKLY. | | | |
| 3 | Observer ... | Lahore ... | Nizam-ud-din ... | 1,000 copies. |
| 4 | Punjab Times and Frontier News. | Rawalpindi ... | J. R. Thapur ... | 200 „ |
| | WEEKLY. | | | |
| 5 | Arya Patrika ... | Lahore ... | Devi Chand ... | 650 copies. |
| 6 | Harbinger ... | Do. ... | Durga Parshad ... | 300 „ |
| 7 | Khalsa Advocate ... | Amritsar ... | Bahadur Singh ... | 752 „ |
| | FORTNIGHTLY. | | | |
| 8 | Jijnasu ... | Lahore ... | Ishar Das ... | ... |
| | MONTHLY. | | | |
| 9 | D.A.-V. College Magazine ... | Lahore ... | Saraswati Nath ... | 1,000 copies. |
| 10 | Forman Christian College Notes.* | Do. ... | ... | ... |
| 11 | Practical Medicine ... | Delhi ... | ... | ... |
| 12 | Punjab Educational Journal | Lahore ... | R. B. Mohan Lal ... | 700 copies. |
| 13 | Punjab Mission News ... | Do. ... | Revd. Wigram ... | 250 „ |
| 14 | Ravi ... | Do. ... | Mr. B. M. Jones ... | ... |
| 15 | Review of Religions ... | Kadian (Gurdaspur) ... | Sadr Anjuman Ahmadia, Qadian. | 800 copies. |
| 16 | Science Grounded Religion... | Lahore ... | Dev Rattan ... | 25 „ |
| 17 | Teacher ... | Dinga (Gujrat) ... | Kanhaya Singh ... | 200 „ |
| | URDU. | | | |
| | DAILY. | | | |
| 18 | Akhbar-i-'Am ... | Lahore ... | Govind Sahai ... | 630 copies. |
| 19 | Paisa Akhbar ... | Do. ... | Abdul Aziz ... | 1,011 „ |
| 20 | Watan ... | Do. ... | Muhammad Insha Alla ... | ... |
| 21 | Zamindar ... | Do. ... | Zafar Ali Khan, B.A. ... | ... |
| | BI-WEEKLY. | | | |
| 22 | Vakil ... | Amritsar ... | Abdul Aziz ... | 1,970 copies. |
| | WEEKLY. | | | |
| 23 | Afghan ... | Peshawar ... | Saiyid Muhammad Abdulla | 500 copies. |
| 24 | Ahl-i-Hadis ... | Amritsar ... | Sana-ulla ... | 925 „ |
| 25 | Ahluwalia Gazette ... | Do. ... | Lehna Singh ... | 500 „ |
| 26 | Al-Moin ... | Do. ... | Mehraj-ud-din ... | ... |
| 27 | Army News ... | Ludhiana ... | Hira Lal & Co. ... | 1,300 copies. |
| 28 | Arorbans Gazette ... | Amritsar ... | Labh Singh ... | ... |
| 29 | Arya Gazette ... | Lahore ... | Bhowani Das ... | 550 copies. |
| 30 | Badar ... | Qadian, Gurdaspur District | Muhammad Sadiq ... | 200 „ |

* Not received during the month.

LIST OF NEWSPAPERS AND PERIODICALS EXAMINED BY THE SPECIAL BRANCH AS IT STOOD ON THE 6TH JULY 1912—CONTINUED.

| No. | Name. | Locality. | Name of Publisher. | Circulation. |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| | URDU—CONTINUED. | | | |
| | WEEKLY—continued. | | | |
| 31 | Bharat ... | Jullundur ... | Thakur Sheoratan Singh ... | ... |
| 32 | Chaudhwin Sadi ... | Rawalpindi ... | Haji Ahmad ... | ... |
| 33 | Civil and Military News ... | Ludhiana ... | Saiyid Muhammad ... | 1,325 copies. |
| 34 | Curzon Gazette ... | Delhi ... | Mirza Hairat ... | 111 " |
| 35 | Delhi Gazette* ... | Do. ... | Sajjad Husain ... | 200 " |
| 36 | Hakim ... | Qadian, Gurdaspur District | Yakub Ali ... | 900 " |
| 37 | Haq ... | Delhi ... | Kasim Ali ... | 200 " |
| 38 | Haq Pasand ... | Amritsar ... | Ram Nath ... | 382 " |
| 39 | Hindu ... | Lahore ... | Hari Lal Sharma ... | ... |
| 40 | Hindustan ... | Do. ... | Ram Saran Dutt ... | 8,070 copies. |
| 41 | Indar ... | Do. ... | Dharm Pal, B.A. ... | ... |
| 42 | Islam* ... | Do ... | Abdul Latif ... | 200 copies. |
| 43 | Jhang Sial ... | Lahore ... | Prabh Dyal ... | 2,262 " |
| 44 | Kapurthala Akhbar ... | Kapurthala ... | Hamid Husain ... | 155 " |
| 45 | Loyal Gazette ... | Lahore ... | Amar Singh ... | 200 " |
| 46 | Lytton Gazette ... | Delhi ... | Bulaki Das ... | 1,000 " |
| 47 | Milap ... | Lyallpur ... | Jawahar Lal ... | ... |
| 48 | Millat ... | Lahore ... | Shuja Ulla ... | 1,500 copies. |
| 49 | Mister Gazette ... | Do. ... | Ali Bakhsh ... | 150 " |
| 50 | Munir ... | Jhang ... | Hafiz Khuda Bakhsh ... | 200 " |
| 51 | Musalman ... | Amritsar ... | Sana-ulla ... | 400 " |
| 52 | Nur ... | Qadian, Gurdaspur District | Muhammad Yusaf ... | 200 " |
| 53 | Nur Afshan ... | Ludhiana ... | Revd. Dr. E. M. Wherry ... | 500 " |
| 54 | Paisa Akhbar ... | Lahore ... | Abdul Aziz ... | 8,377 " |
| 55 | Parkash ... | Do. ... | Krishan ... | 1,723 " |
| 56 | Punjab Advocate ... | Mianwali ... | Karm Chand, Bahl ... | 1,000 " |
| 57 | Punjab Samachar ... | Lahore ... | Hira Lal ... | 705 " |
| 58 | Rajput Gazette ... | Do. ... | Thakur Sukhram Das ... | 650 " |
| 59 | Municipal Gazette and Sada-i-Hind.* | Do. ... | Din Muhammad ... | 500 " |
| 60 | Sadiq-ul-Akhbar ... | Bahawalpur ... | Maulvi Ata Ullah ... | 392 " |
| 61 | Ditto ... | Rewari ... | Safdar Hussain ... | 200 " |
| 62 | Sanatan Dharm Pracharak ... | Amritsar ... | Rulia Ram ... | 200 " |
| 63 | Shanti ... | Rawalpindi ... | Kishan Chand Mohan ... | 300 " |
| 64 | Sialkot Paper ... | Sialkot ... | Todar Mal ... | 500 " |
| 65 | Siraj-ul-Akhbar ... | Jhelum ... | Maulvi Fakir Muhammad | 450 " |
| 66 | Tahzib-ul-Niswan ... | Lahore ... | Mumtaz Ali ... | 240 " |
| 67 | Victoria Paper ... | Sialkot ... | Gian Chand ... | 600 " |

*Not received during the week.

LIST OF NEWSPAPERS AND PERIODICALS EXAMINED BY THE SPECIAL BRANCH AS IT STOOD ON THE 6TH JULY 1912—CONCLUDED.

| No. | Name. | Locality. | Name of Publisher. | Circulation. |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| | URDU—CONCLUDED. | | | |
| | WEEKLY—concluded. | | | |
| 68 | Waqt ... | Lahore ... | Ali Husain ... | 200 copies. |
| 69 | Watan ... | Do. ... | Muhammad Insha Ullah ... | 1,800 „ |
| 70 | Zamindar ... | Do. ... | Zafar Ali Khan, B.A. ... | 750 „ |
| | FORTNIGHTLY. | | | |
| 71 | Biwah Samachar ... | Lahore ... | Ram Chand ... | 300 copies. |
| 72 | Kam Dhenu ... | Ludhiana ... | Daulat Ram ... | 100 „ |
| 73 | Mohyal Gazette ... | Kala, Jhelum District ... | Mehta Sham Das ... | 250 „ |
| | MONTHLY. | | | |
| 74 | Arorbans Parkash* ... | Lahore ... | Salig Ram ... | 200 copies. |
| 75 | Arya Musafir ... | Jullundur ... | Wazir Chand ... | 1,300 „ |
| 76 | Jauhar ... | Amritsar ... | Muhammad Ismail Khan... | 200 „ |
| 77 | Kakezai Social Reformer ... | Lahore ... | Fazl Din ... | 200 „ |
| 78 | Makhzan ... | Delhi ... | Abdul Kadir ... | 4,000 „ |
| 79 | Rafiq* ... | Lahore ... | Charinji Lal ... | 500 „ |
| 80 | Sadhu ... | Do. ... | Sheobart Lal ... | 500 „ |
| 81 | Martand ... | Do. ... | Kanhya Lal ... | 250 „ |
| 82 | Raghbir Patrika ... | Do. ... | Prab Dial ... | 500 „ |
| 83 | Zaban* ... | Delhi ... | Hamid Husain ... | 500 „ |
| | GURMUKHI. | | | |
| | WEEKLY. | | | |
| 84 | Khalsa Sewak* ... | Amritsar ... | Jiwan Singh ... | 1,000 copies. |
| 85 | Punjab Reporter* ... | Do. ... | Ganda Singh ... | ... |
| 86 | Punjabi Surma* ... | Lahore ... | Gian Chand ... | 1,000 copies. |

* Not received during the week.

I.—Politics.

(a)—Foreign.

1. The Zamindar (Lahore), of the 26th June 1912, publishes a poem entitled "Light invaded by darkness." The writer—the well-known poet Riaz of Lucknow—says that (at one time) Islam dispersed the darkness of heathenism and planted its banner in the four quarters of the globe. To-day, however, Persia is said to be about to pass out of its hands, while every Frenchman is playing halaku in Morocco. (Again), Italy has landed her forces in Tripoli and "Satan's (the Italian) army" has realised its heart's desires. (She) who has no regard for (her) word has also taken some (Turkish) islands by practising deception: no promise made by heathen has ever turned out true. After remarking that the Russian bear has beaten the Italian dog hollow, the poet speaks of the alleged Muscovite oppression in Persia. Continuing, he writes:—

The Islamic world.

"How can Russia's acts of oppression in Meshed be recounted,

"(Seeing that) this offspring of Satan has outdone even the fallen angel?"

Next he gives an account of the Russian bombardment of the Meshed shrine; and goes on to say that England alone hung down her head at Russia's oppression, and that if the existing state of affairs continues the Sultan will soon unfurl the Prophet's banner. Proceeding, he cries to the King Emperor, saying:—

"(It would be) a pity if the wishes of thy subjects were not gratified.

"The enemy would see lakhs of volunteers,

"If one (Muslim) from (each) family set out to immolate himself.

"Let the art of war be soon taught to us,

"(So that) the cry may go up

"Thy India has proved Arabia."

After remarking that (if the flag were thus unfurled) Muhammadans from all countries would go to Persia's rescue, the writer observes that, if the keen (Muslim) dagger were to come out (of its sheath), even rivers of blood would not quench its thirst, and that "British officers would outdo even the Turks." He then sighs for the time when the Russian capital will be pillaged and when

"All will say, 'The desires of Muhammadans have been fully realised';

"(When) we will say, 'The British Government is a defender of Islam';

"(And when) all will say, 'The King Emperor has proved to be a Muhammadan at heart'."

2. The Vakil (Amritsar), of the 26th June (received on the 2nd July) 1912, publishes a summary of a speech which an Arab leader recently made on a battlefield in Tripoli. The speaker began by referring to the aggression of (Christian) Europe in regard to the Muslim world, and said that it was in consequence of their not acting upon the teachings of Islam that Muhammadans had lost several of the countries once conquered by them. If Muhammadans, he added, were true followers of the Prophet, no power on earth could vanquish them. "European powers have insulted Islam by occupying Muhammadan countries. They have compelled the gentry and nobility to live the degraded life of slavery; and are busy devising means to end even the remaining greatness of Islam, under the pretext of disseminating civilisation and enlightenment."

Europe and the Islamic world.

(b)—Home.

British rule in India.

3. The Muin (Amritsar), of the 24th June (received on the 2nd July) 1912, publishes an article headed "Permanence of British rule in India is necessary—I." The paper says that not a few Indians hate the British as an alien Government, and desire a change of rule for their country. They dwell only on the defects of the present Government, and pay no thought to its excellences and to the great boons conferred by it on India. The Editor admits that, from a national standpoint, it is undoubtedly an alien Government, and that (as such) it has a number of defects; not infrequently some of its Anglo-Indian officers—there are blacksheep in every fold—are guilty of the grossest irregularities and oppression; and there is considerable exaggeration in British statesmen's claim that they rule India for the benefit exclusively of Indians. He adds that the World's history bears witness that no nation has ever willingly left any country after having once conquered it. After remarking that Indians should not expect the English to act differently, he states that, not long ago, the following remark was made by Lord Curzon at a meeting in London, "We will sacrifice our last man and shilling to retain possession of India." Continuing, it says that the people of this country expected great things from the present Liberal ministry; but even "Honest John," the biographer of Burke, contented himself with granting only a few nominal concessions. There is also truth in the statement, he adds, that the English, in order to benefit their own country and nation, do not pay as much attention to the Industrial advancement of India as they should, and that they have bound down indigenous arts and commerce by various unfair legal restrictions. He then goes on to say that the above are the only objections which can be raised against British rule (in India), but that, human nature being what it is, neither arguments nor cries can make the English remove the same. Justice, moreover, demands that "we" Indians should also acknowledge the blessings (some of these are mentioned by the Editor) which "our" present rulers have conferred on us. "We" should specially bear in mind that it is owing to Government having imparted Western education to "us" that "we" have been fired with the high ambition of obtaining self-government. It is, therefore, neither human nor gentlemanly in "us" to wield this powerful weapon (education), which Government has placed in "our" hands, to ruin and disgrace "our" present rulers. "We" should use it against the enemies of "our" beneficent Government in order to add to its stability.

The Public Service Royal Commission.

4. The Civil and Military News (Ludhiana), of the 24th June (received on 1st July) 1912, has an article headed "The Public Service Royal Commission." Adverting to the announcement by the Times that a Royal Commission is about to be appointed to enquire into the public services of India, the paper remarks that the president should be an impartial, open-minded and experienced man, possessing soundness of judgment. After suggesting Lord Minto's name for the position, it says that the time has come when Indians should be freely appointed Deputy Commissioners, Commissioners, and even Lieutenant-Governors and Governors, and when all public posts in the country should be distributed equally between Europeans and Indians. It adds that half the members of the commission should be Indians and that the Indian members should consist, not of officials, but of men like Messrs. Gokhale, Wacha and S. N. Bannerji, the Nawab of Mahmudabad, His Highness the Agha Khan, Maulvi Rafi-ud Din Ahmad, and Mian Muhammad Shafi.

Muhammadans and Government.

5. The Munir (Jhang), of the 24th June (received on the 2nd July) 1912, publishes a note headed "Why do Muhammadans greatly love Government?" They do so, it replies, because they can live only under the protection of the British Government. Hindus, it adds, may not be enemies of Government, but they can undoubtedly do without it. Being, however, a weaker community, Musalmans require a Government which will not allow them to be injured by the stronger party. And, but for the present regimé, they would have been washed away by the wave of bigotry which has of late been passing over Hindus. The latter, who have a large standing in every department (of the public service), would be able to look after their interests in the event of the English going away from India. Muhammadans would, however, be swallowed up by them; and this is why the former regard their life as bound up with the British occupation of the country.

Indian Muhammadans and their political rights.

6. The following is from the Observer (Lahore), of 3rd July 1912 :—

"The way in which Mr. Montagu has admitted his tremendous mistake in regard to the solidarity of Indian Musalmans is not only a credit to the moral courage of the Under-Secretary for India, but also instructive in another sense. During the discussions on the Government of India Bill Mr. Montagu has repeatedly sought to differentiate between agitation revolutionary and agitation constitutional. As an example of the former type he referred to the seditious propaganda which led to the bomb outrages in Bengal. This he unhesitatingly denounced. But he instanced the present Hindu agitation against the Dacca University as practically an example of legitimate agitation. To the same category belongs the recent Muslim agitation over the Under-Secretary of State's remarks about the Indian Muhammadans. We are glad to state that The Observer was the first Muslim paper to protest against these remarks, to be followed closely by the Paisa Akhbar, the Aligarh Institute Gazette, which published a translation of our comments in its editorial columns, and other Musalman journals. How successful the agitation has proved can best be seen from the result.

To quote Sir Syed's words against even such agitation, under these circumstances, as is being done by some people, smacks rather of anti-deluvianism, if not worse. Agitation is the very breath of an Englishman's nostrils. If a man who has a grievance sits with folded hands and does not try to submit his complaint to the proper authorities, thinking that Government will deal out justice to him of their own accord, such a man will be regarded by a majority of Englishmen as an absolute idiot. The late Sir Syed was obliged to modify in his old age the views held by him against agitation in his middle age, and as the Aligarh Institute Gazette says, if the great man were alive to-day his opinions would have undergone a still greater change. Any one who has studied the Qoran will be struck with the strong language in which the blind following by the idolatrous Arabs of the customs of their ancestors is animadverted upon. Should the Indian Musalmans shut their eyes resolutely to the signs of the times and blindly follow the advice of Sir Syed which was suited to a different time? Any attempt to prevent the Mussalmans from taking their proper share in the legislation of the country and from asserting their rights and giving expression to their wishes and aspirations in these days is bound to end ingnominiously. What is required is to guide the new spirit into proper channels, to counsel the Musalmans to be respectful in their language and constitutional in their means, to be persistent in their efforts and systematic in their methods, not to give way to despair in view of temporary failure, nor to lose heart in face of the immensity of opposition. Loyalty is ingrained in the Muslim heart and the Musalmans will and must scruplously continue to avoid the use of disrespectful or inflammatory language and of unconstitutional or revolutionary methods. It cannot be too often and too carefully impressed upon them that their own interests, apart from other considerations, demand the permanence of British rule in India; but that consistently with the prestige and stability of the Paramount Power and the orderly and peaceful administration of the land, they may take concerted action to apprise their rulers of their innermost sentiments and with regard to important questions submit their points of view in a manner at once loyal and outspoken. Those who tender advice of this sort are bound to prove right-seeing men and true well-wishers of the British Government; while counsellors of the other type will have themselves to thank if people refuse to listen to them and even ascribe motives to their pleadings. This is the lesson which Mr. Montagu's climbing-down inculcates. It is time that some of our publicists took this lesson to heart."

Lord Crewe on the Government of India Act.

7. The following is from the Tribune (Lahore), of the 29th June 1912 :—

"Perhaps the best criticism on Lord Crewe's speech so far as it refers to the despatches of last year on the administrative changes is that of the Calcutta merchant who said that while Lord Crewe tells us what clause 3 of the Government of India's despatch does not mean he does not say what it does mean. Mr. Surendranath Banerjea's surmise that Lord Crewe was compelled to repudiate Mr. Montagu in order to insure the passage of the Government of India Bill through the House of Lords is a shrewd one, for there is no other reason why the repudiation should have been delayed so long and why the misunderstanding should have been allowed to remain for six months without any attempt to remove it. It is desirable to recall the language of the despatch itself in order to find out what is being now repudiated by the Secretary of State for India. In the despatch of the 25th August 1911 the Government of India wrote in paragraph 3:— 'The maintenance of the British Rule in India depends on the ultimate supremacy of the Governor-General in Council; and the Indian Councils Act of 1909 itself bears testimony to the impossibility of allowing matters of vital concern to be decided by a majority of non-official votes. Yet the country will have to be satisfied and the question will be how this devolution of power can be conceded without impairing the supreme authority of the Governor-General in Council. The only possible solution of the difficulty would appear to be gradually to give the provinces a larger measure of self-government until at last India would consist of a number of administrations, autonomous in all provincial affairs, with the Government of India above them and possessing power to interfere in case of misgovernment; but ordinarily restricting the functions to matters of Imperial concern.' Lord Crewe now says that India cannot look forward to have the self-government of the Dominions. This ideal, in his opinion, is a revolutionary one, though not in the odious sense of a desire to break up the British Empire. Lord Crewe knows that this ideal is held by the best men in India and is not likely to be relinquished, and more unlikely things than the realisation of this ideal have happened. However, this has nothing to do with the interpretation to be placed upon the language of the despatch of the Government of India. Lord Crewe admitted that it was the duty of the Government 'to encourage every reasonable and possible want or desire on the part of the inhabitants of India to participate in the further management of their own affairs.' He has repudiated Mr. Montagu and has implied that the sentence in the despatch cannot bear the meaning put upon it. But he carefully refrained from saying what provincial autonomy means.

The following is from the Panjabee (Lahore), of the 2nd July 1912 :—

"There is no reason why any section of Indians should wax indignant over Lord Crewe's repudiation of the claim of Indians for 'something approaching the self-government enjoyed by the Dominions.' On the other hand in the interests of progress this clear, unequivocal and authoritative pronouncement ought to be welcomed as tending to help the shaping of a definite policy by those of our leaders who thought we were standing on the threshold of the promised land. Self-government and provincial autonomy are not institutions which can be had for mere asking, not to say unasked, anywhere in this world; and the reference to it in Lord Hardinge's Despatch of August last was at the best vague, pointless and somewhat misleading and illusory. The present interpretation of the Secretary of State, though conflicting with his own previous interpretation and with that of his brilliant Under-Secretary, should be taken as laying the dust of controversy after ceaseless wrangling extending over a period of six months. If this has brought the Liberal Ministers peace of mind at a time when they are distracted, India should not grudge the sacrifice it has been called upon to make in respect of the memorable Despatch. But that does not mean peace either to ex-Viceroys or to Tory statesmen who seem to be anxious to perpetuate Mr. Kidd's ideal of imperial domination in this country. With the broadening of opportunities and responsibilities, it lies entirely with us to show that we do not come under Mr. Kidd's definition of inferior races and that therefore the Tory statesmen should revise their notions of our capabilities in organisation, control and government. Indian politicians can no longer be in the fool's paradise as to self-government within the empire being got as easily as some fancied it could be.

"This controversy has happily ended so far as the interpretation of the Despatch is concerned. The question now arises what should be the policy of Indian politicians whose loyalty to British connection is unsullied. Eighteen months ago when His Excellency the Viceroy told a deputation of the Indian National Congress that several prominent Congress leaders were members in the Supreme Legislative Council, not only Anglo-Indian papers but even Mr. Malabari's journal, the Spectator, contended that there was no more work left either for the Congress or for any of its off-shoots, the conferences. This view of the superfluity of political propagandism gained further strength last December on the announcement of the administrative changes; and every one thought that the Government of the country was no longer alien in spirit or action and that therefore the attitude of the elected representatives of the people on the Legislative Council was becoming more and more dedicate. Non-officials, it was contended, should not constitute themselves into a standing opposition to Government, but should on the contrary identify themselves with the Government so far as to render outside opposition to measures ineffectual and unmeaning. It was His Excellency the Governor of Bombay, who preached a sermon to the veteran Parsi pugilist on the obliteration of all traces of distinction between elected and nominated members. Following his example His Honour the Lieutenant-Governor of the Punjab said that we in this Province had practically no Government party and Opposition party. With Lord Crewe's repudiation of our claim for a modified form of self-government leaders of public opinion in India are now forced to consider whether in the existing circumstances there can be a general identity of aims and objects between the Government and the people irrespective of the merits of each separate proposal. If such identity is impossible, the question arises further, what should be the attitude of non-official members, whether elected or nominated? In the interest of progress it is essential that these questions should be answered without the least attempt at tergiversation.

"It seems to us that the position of non-officials, elected and nominated in the Legislative Councils, should be independent and uncompromising. The futile attempt of the last two-and-a-half years to conform public opinion to 'received standards' i.e., the standards set up by the Anglo-Indian administrators, should be abandoned even by the so-called 'natural leaders,' the representative of land holders, zamindars and other titled nobility. Real, live public opinion, i.e., the concensus of opinion prevailing among educated Indians who are fully competent to frame a policy for the future, should be allowed to prevail, irrespective of the frowns and smiles of officials. We may make this point clear by a reference to one or two concrete cases. In the Imperial Legislative Council, if non-official members like the Hon'ble Sir Gangadhar Chitnavis, the Hon'ble Mr. Dadabhoy and the Hon'ble Khan Bahadur Mian Muhammad Shafi had thought less for 'received standards,' Indian members would certainly have made as great an impression of the potency of public opinion on most questions as on the stoppage of indentured emigration. Similarly in the Punjab Legislative Council there are non-official members who are afraid of exercising their right of interpellation without first consulting one or other of their official supporters. This is hardly the attitude by which Indians can prove their competency for self-government in however modified a form. Of course non-officials must be willing to judge every proposal of the Government on its merits and accord their support to Government where such measures are not in conflict with public opinion. This will help us to increase our influence and push forward our claims for a recognition of our right. But in the main non-officials should consider themselves to constitute the Opposition. They should examine every measure from the people's point of view rather than from that of the administrator who is politically different from the nation. Lord Crewe's repudiation leaves us no alternative. We have to merge our differences, and combine for a common cause."

Sir Louis Dane's successor.

8. The following is from the Panjabee (Lahore), of the 2nd July 1912 :—

"We understand that in Simla several names are now being mentioned in connection with the appointment of a successor to Sir Louis Dane as Lieutenant-Governor of the Punjab. The latest report is likely to cause some trepidation among the aspirants, if it is true. It was Capital which made the first announcement. It said that Sir Henry McMahon would succeed Sir Louis Dane and would avail himself of short leave in England prior to his assumption of office. A few days later the Madras Times mentioned the names of other possible candidates. It referred at some length to Mr. O'Dwyer and Mr. E. D. Maclagan, but contended that the former was not more acceptable than Sir Henry McMahon, although Sir Henry was not without disqualifications. The writer in the Times expressly stated that, if Sir Henry McMahon were selected, the establishment of an Executive Council would be necessary to keep up the progressive spirit of the administration. At the same time he suggested that the appointment of Mr. Maclagan would be as popular in the Punjab as that of Sir James Meston in the United Provinces. We cannot say what chance Mr. Maclagan has, but there is no doubt that his appointment would be hailed with delight by all classes of people in this Province. Mr. Maclagan is head and shoulders superior to the rest of the local candidates now in the running for the highest office. He has left an indelible mark of his mastery of administrative details in every one of the high offices he has filled and shown that he brings to the consideration of questions a mind absolutely fresh and untainted by prejudices of sorts. But he is neither pushful nor bumptious, qualities which seem essential for success in our days. We have, however, no doubt that, if it pleases His Excellency the Viceroy to select him, he will certainly be as popular as Sir James Meston."

Self-government and sweets. (Lord Crewe on the Government of India Act.)

9. The following is from the Panjabee (Lahore), of the 2nd July 1912 :—

[ WITH APOLOGIES TO SIR FRANCIS C. GOULD. ]

"There was once a boy who was fond of eating sweetmeats. For he had never eaten sweetmeats before nor had he seen them, nor had his father nor mother seen or eaten any and his ancestors for ten generations had been living on water and gruel.

"One day the boy chanced to go into the bazaar where he saw brilliantly lighted sweet-shops, rows and rows of them, and he was beyond himself with delight at the sight of it all. A sympathetic passer-by gave him an anna's worth of jilebi which the boy ate with infinite delight, which also gave much pleasure to his friend.

"Again and again the boy came to the bazaar and was treated with a small bit which he ate with relish and said: 'How lovely!' Each time he ate, he thanked his giver and expressed unfeigned delight such as no creature ever did before.

"On day the boy went to the shop-keeper and said to him: 'Won't you give me more?' The more he gave him, the more did he want; at last the shopee said to the boy in a stern voice: 'You shan't have any more sweets.'

"The boy got sulky. He did not come for some days and did not ask for sweets. One day he was overheard saying to a playmate that he would loot the shop and have all the sweets for himself.

"Thereupon the shop-keeper went and fetched the boy by force. He said to him 'Look here, young lad. I will thrash you if you loot my shop of sweets. But if you are civil and come to me like a good boy, I'll give you a seer a day.' 'All right, thank you, said the boy, with evident satisfaction and went away.

"But he immediately came round again by the other way and said: 'Why shouldn't I have a whole shop of it, if I can have a seer a day?'

"'You won't be able to digest it,' said the owner, 'but when you grow a man, you will.'

"'Thank you,' said the boy, and went away. Next day he told everybody that he was promised a whole shop of sweets. On hearing this next door man scolded the sweet-seller for making such a foolish promise. Thereupon the shop-keeper repudiated any such promise and said: 'I can't imagine a time when the boy will have the whole shop of sweets.'

"The boy over-heard this at a distance and became very angry.

"'How mean!' he said to himself, but he did not protest lest he might lose the seer of sweets he was getting every day. He is wondering how he can have a whole sweet shop for himself."

The All-India Hindu League.

10. The following is from the Tribune (Lahore), of the 2nd July 1912 :—

"The need for an All-India Hindu League is felt keenly in this country. There are Hindu Sabhas in some Provinces. But they are not at all in a flourishing condition. In the Punjab where Hindu interests are the worst protected and where the danger to them is both great and real we have a Hindu Sabha, but it is worse than useless. It is in a more or less moribund condition. It carries little or no weight in the counsels of the community. In fact popular confidence in the Sabha is utterly lacking. Its affairs require a most careful and thorough scrutiny. Its constitution stands in need of a thorough overhauling if it is to command public confidence and support. Again what about the All-India Hindu Sabha which our distinguished and eminent countryman Mr. Sarada Charan Mitra was going to organise? Has the scheme ended in smoke? It is a pity if it has. Extinction threatens the Hindu community and it is absolutely necessary that it should give up its present lethargic attitude. There is no room just now in India for a laissez faire policy. The necessity for vigilance and watchfulness is great and the community, which chooses to sleep over its best interests; which is content with entrusting its affairs to men, by whom self-interest and self advertisement are regarded as above everything else, or men, whose indifference to public weal is equalled only by their utter lack of moral courage, or men, who are incapable of independence of judgment and who cannot see things in their true light, is bound to find itself left behind in the race for progress and prosperity. In the Punjab the Hindu interests need the utmost safeguarding, and it is in the Punjab that the community is without a safe and reliable organisation to promote its interests. What is, then, to be done? The Hindus should be up and doing. They should give up sloth and indifference. They must judge men, who profess to be their leaders, by their record of public work, by their moral and intellectual equipment, and by the strength and zeal of their patriotic fervour. There should be no other test. This test alone will exclude the self-seeker, the sycophant, the toady and the dupe of over-weening conceit and vanity."

A new move of the Punjab Muslim League.

11. The following is from the Panjabee (Lahore), of the 4th July 1912 :—

"The case of the late Inspector Habib Ali Khan has been fully investigated by the authorities and is now before a court of law. The proceedings of the court will doubtless bring to light every circumstance connected with it. Reports of sorts that are current as regards certain outside standards of investigation and recording of statement or statements should not be believed by the public. But we are surprised to find that the Punjab branch of the Muslim League has gone out of its way to express a hope 'that the crime will be thoroughly sifted by the authorities.' No one who supports law and order can entertain a different hope in this or in any other case. It is inconceivable, therefore, why there should be any distrust anywhere as to the thoroughness of the sifting by the authorities. Murders take place frequently in this as in other provinces. The anxious desire now evinced by the Punjab Muslim League for thorough sifting does not seem to have manifested itself in any other case. Only lately a Muhammadan Railway Guard of the North-Western Railway was clubbed to death while asleep by a porter who is said to be a Syed. Evidently the argus-eyed League did not consider it important enough to demand a thorough sifting.

Attempts, such as this, calculated to give a racial aspect to the case are to be strongly deprecated. Even when investigation was in progress two of the Urdu papers, the Paisa Akhbar and the Zamindar, gave currency to a report that the murder was the result of a conspiracy. The former paper went the length of stating that the Inspector had known it, had apprehended trouble and had made a record to that effect in his diary. Such attempts at prejudging the case ought to be firmly put down by the Government. Apparently some of the vernacular papers derive pleasure in giving a racial turn to every conceivable question as was done by them when Professor Rama Murti was exhibiting his feats of physical strength."

President of the next National Congress.

12. The following is from the Tribune (Lahore), of the 4th July 1912 :—

"The statement that the Behar Reception Committee had recommended the name of Mr. Gokhale for the Presidentship of the Congress was somewhat premature though it first appeared in some Bengal papers. The offer was first made to Mr. Ramsay Macdonald, who has however replied that it will be impossible for him to come out. Behar is now likely to nominate Mr. Gokhale. The other names proposed are His Highness the Aga Khan and Mr. Gandhi. The Aga Khan would be a distinct accession of strength to the Congress, but it is unlikely that he will be in India next cold weather. Mr. Gandhi's unique services and sacrifice must result in his being called to the presidential chair of the Congress some time or other."

The Viceroy's rumoured recall.

13. The following is from the Tribune (Lahore), of the 4th July 1912 :—

"One of the items of news of the latest mail is, according to the Manchester Despatch, a rumour in diplomatic circles that Lord Hardinge may shortly be recalled from India to join the Foreign Office once more. It is reported that important changes are pending and the return of Lord Hardinge would strengthen the department, specially as there are important questions dealing mostly with the Middle East. This is different from the report that was authoritatively contradicted the other day that the relations between Lord Crewe and Lord Hardinge were greatly strained over the move of the Government of India to Delhi next winter. We believe there is as little truth in the report that Lord Hardinge will have to go back to the Foreign Office before the expiry of his term in India. His work here is as important as it may be elsewhere and the Ministry can have no intention of recalling him before his time."

Rumoured strained relations between the Viceroy and the Secretary of State over the cost of temporary works at Delhi.

14. The following is from the Tribune (Lahore), of the 5th July 1912 :—

"The rumour about the strained relations between the Viceroy and the Secretary of State, which has been contradicted on high authority, seems to have originated in reports which were current in Simla that the Secretary of State had stopped all further expenses on temporary works in connection with the new capital. Why this should have led to any difference of opinion is difficult to understand. The Government of India must be as anxious as the Secretary of State to curtail expenditure on the temporary works considering that they will form no part of the permanent capital. As regards the decision of the Government of India to move to Delhi next winter, it was arrived at while Lord Crewe was in India, though public opinion is generally opposed to such a precipitate and unnecessarily expensive hurry. The real question that will have to be settled between the Secretary of State and the Government of India is the meeting of the cost of the construction of the new capital. The Durbar area having been condemned the cost of construction will be much larger than the original approximate estimate and it must be decided whether this is to be met partly from current revenue and partly from loans. The cases against the diversion of current revenue towards the building of the city is much stronger now than when Mr. Gokhale first put it in the Legislative Council."

II.—Afghanistan and Trans-Frontier.

Tribal raids into British territory.

15. The Punjab Advocate (Mianwali), of the 20th (received on the 26th) June 1912, has a note headed "Dacoity in Shaker Khel, Teri tahsil." Two Hindu boys, it reports, were carried away in the above dacoity, which was committed on the 25th May last. One of them managed to escape, it adds, but the dacoits demand a ransom of 12,000 Kabul rupees for the other. After remarking that his father cannot afford to pay them such a large sum of money, it asks the Government of the Frontier to look into the matter and save Hindus from ruin.

Hindus of Afghanistan.

16. The Hindustan (Lahore), of the 21st June 1912, publishes a communication from one Hari Chand, of Rawalpindi, headed "What I saw in Afghanistan, I saw the lives, property and izzat of Hindus in danger. All the Hindu Sabhas in India should carefully read (this)." The writer alleges that the Hindus of Afghanistan are treated in a cruel and unjust manner, and that their lives, property and izzat are injured on all occasions from motives of bigotry and for the benefit of Muhammadans. So long, he adds, as "we" do not carry on a vigorous agitation on their behalf, they will continue to be subjected to the grossest injustice and high-handedness. After remarking that the existing state of affairs commenced after the death of the late Amir and the accession of Habib Ulla Khan, he refers to six cases of murder and dacoity in which the victims were Hindus and the culprits have had no punishment inflicted on them. He adds that there have been hundreds of other similar cases; and goes on to say that it is only in cases in which Hindus are murdered that the offenders are not brought to book, a different procedure being, however, followed in those in which the victims happen to be Musalmans. As an instance, he reports that (some time back) a Muhammadan was murdered in a village near the town of Kacha (?) and that the culprit was not arrested in spite of strenuous efforts to run him to earth. This led to the Governor of the ilaqa issuing the novel order (it is probable that the same was promulgated after consultation with the Amir)* that every Hindu should pay one rupee, in addition to the jazia due from him, to enable Rs. 700 to be paid to the survivors of the murdered Musalman, and that if the amount were not "willingly" paid, force would be employed to exact the same. Continuing, the writer states that Hindus (lit. people) are, because of such orders, migrating to British territory, and that they are harassed by Muhammadans in every way.

IV.—Kine-Killing.

The Hoshiarpur Jhatka case.

17. The following is from the Khalsa Advocate (Amritsar), of the 28th June 1912 :—

"We understand that the matter was discussed in the Municipal Committee on the 14th June, and that notwithstanding the unanimity of the Hindu members and the sympathies of the Deputy Commissioner a most ridiculous resolution has been passed at the instance of the Muhammadan members of the Committee, who opposed a fair settlement of the matter tooth and nail. The resolution passed is said to be to the effect that a register be opened in the District Board office on which Sikhs residing at Hoshiarpur or anywhere within a radius of five miles from the town may sign their names, within one week, if they require a Jhatka shop. Has a similar register been ever kept for the opening of Halal meat shops? Or are the people using Jhatka meat to be treated especially as a criminal tribe? Is this a fair settlement of the most unfair and unlawful objection raised by a few short-sighted Muhammadan fanatics? In our last we reproduced a judgment of Mr. Thorburn, late Financial Commissioner of the Punjab, showing the only principal on which disputes of the nature can be equitably settled. Have the Muhammadans been ever compelled to apply for a license to open their Halal meat shops? If not, then what power has the Municipal Committee to interfere with the opening of Jhatka meat shops?

"We call the immediate attention of the Government to this most unjust treatment with the Sikhs, and request that in the interests of peace and good Government the matter may be settled by a general notification of the principles enunciated in the judgments of the Chief Court and Mr. Thorburn, as reproduced by us in our last, and that if the Government wishes that a serious situation brought about by the shortsightedness of Mussalman officials at Hoshiarpur be saved by timely interference. We are not yet aware as to who has been put in charge of the Register and what influences are being used to prevent the people from coming and signing in them. We will however make enquiries and expose the state of affairs prevailing there. But merely out of maintaining our self-respect we would advise our brothers at and near Hoshiarpur not to sign the said register at all as a protest against the inequitable nature of the resolution passed. The resolution is something in the nature of the Asiatic Registration Act of the South African Colonists against which the Indian passive resisters protested most strongly and refused to register themselves merely to save their self-respect. Why should the Sikhs wishing to use Jhatka meat be required to register their names? Is not Halal meat definitely prohibited to them by the tenets of their religion? Is not every Sikh at the time of his baptism (pahul) enjoined, on pain of apostasy, not to use Kutha, which is another name for Muhammadan the Halal meat? Has not every member of society a free right to use whichever article of diet best suits him? Do not Muhammadans freely exercise their right of preparing and using Kutha meat, though so strictly prohibited to the Sikhs, with such serious penalty as apostasy.

* The brackets are the writer's.

"We repeat that unless timely action of the Government saves the situation, matters may become serious."

V.—Native Societies and Religious Matters.

The Jhang Sial on Hindu women.

18. The Hindustan (Lahore), of the 21st June 1912, has an article from Dina Nath's pen headed "A serious attack on the chastity of Panjabi women." The writer says that there has recently been published an article under the heading "Panjabi women," in which the chastity of the women of this province has been assailed in such a filthy way as to set one's blood on fire. Christian Missionaries, he adds, have issued such shameful literature to blacken the character of Indians, that some books written by them are not so much as touched by thoughtful people. The aforesaid article, however, is so disgusting as to surpass even the literature named, while it emanates from the pen, not of a foreigner actuated by selfish motives, but of a Hindu journalist. Next the writer asserts that no society or country in the world has a higher standard of chastity than that which Hindu women have always kept in view. Continuing, he complains that the writing under reference not only wounds the feelings of Hindus; but also asserts in a very shameful manner that the Hindu women of the Punjab care nothing for chastity, and that no stratum (of Hindu society), high or low, can boast of chaste women. After remarking that it represents all classes of (Hindu) women as being always ready to sell their chastity, he states that, according to it, in low (Hindu) castes not only can virgins be sold, but all women—from five to fifty years old—have their own price; while every married immoral woman can pass her days with her paramour. As to the wives of cultivators and labourers, it says that they cannot tolerate ill-treatment from their husbands even for a minute; running away and deserting their children over a single hard word. It also wounds the susceptibilities of crores of villagers by asserting that whores are not looked down upon in villages, with the result that no (village) woman regards (sexual) immorality in any bad light. It does not spare even (Hindu) shop-keepers; and remarks that, when the wife (of a bania) discovers that her husband is less attached to her than to his scales, she tries to find amusement elsewhere and loses her chastity. As regards the wives of raises and gentlemen, they are driven to immorality through living a luxurious life and the indifference of their pleasure-loving husbands. Dina Nath then goes on to say that the writing is conceived in an immoral tone; that it is highly offensive and objectionable; and that it is calculated to lacerate the heart of every Hindu. After stating that it has appeared in the Jhang Sial, he enquires what punishment the (Hindu) public is going to inflict on Banka Dyal; saying that it would be a great offence to let him escape scot-free. In conclusion, he suggests that the offender should be made to tender an apology, and to promise to abstain from publishing in future writings like the one in question.

The Hindustan (Lahore), of the 28th June 1912, publishes a cartoon, in which the Jhang Sial, which is represented by a snake, is seen biting "Hindu mother" and as being attacked by a number of Editors, including those of the Zamindar and the Loyal Gazette.

Another cartoon displays "Banka Dyal, the restive horse of the journalistic world," in the act of being branded by Dina Nath. Several Editors stand round with whips in their hands; but Dina Nath asks them to spare the animal, saying that it should only be branded "The restive horse." In other words, he adds, it should at once be made thoroughly clear to the public that Banka Dyal is an unprincipled and foul-mouthed Editor, after which his opinion will carry no weight and he will be unable to work any injury by means of his writings.

The Rajput Gazette (Lahore), of the 22nd June 1912, publishes similar remarks under the heading "Obscene writing in the Jhang Sial." It adds that Hindus should punish the foul-mouthed Banka Dyal by ex-communicating him and boycotting his paper.

19. The Sanatan Dharam Parcharak (Amritsar), of the 24th June 1912, publishes a poem headed "Sikhs should attend (to this)." The writer—one Pandit Chiranji Lal, Senior Class, Mission High School, Jullundur City—refers to the past greatness of this country. Next, he says that, when Aurangzeb unsheathed his sword against Hindus (lit., India), the Sikh Gurus appeared on the scene and laid down their lives in defence of the Hindu community and religion. Continuing, he deprecates the attitude of neo-Sikhs towards Hindus, and urges them to unite with the latter. In conclusion, he says—

Sikhs and Hindus.

"God, let them, through Thy grace, discard bigotry.

"Who is such a devil as he who causes estrangement ?"

20. The Parkash (Lahore), of the 25th June 1912, publishes an article headed "Who are the six great men of India" ? The paper states that it has received only 1,005 replies to the above question, which it recently put to its readers and the general public (vide paragraph 21 of Selections No. 20). After remarking that the senders of these replies, however, represent every part of India, as also every religion (professed in the country), it says that the following six men have received the largest number of votes :—

Six great men of India.

| | Name. | No. of votes obtained. |
|---|---|---|
| 1. | Mr. G. K. Gokhale ... ... ... | 762 |
| 2. | Mahatma Munshi Ram ... ... ... | 603 |
| 3. | Lala Lajpat Rai ... ... ... | 533 |
| 4. | Mr. B. G. Tilak "Maharaj" ... ... | 492 |
| 5. | Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya ... ... | 475 |
| 6. | Mr. Dadabhoy Naoroji ... ... ... | 443 |

Continuing, it observes that when the Hindustan put the same question to its readers in 1907 the palm was awarded to the following gentlemen :—

1. Dadabhoy Naoroji.
2. Tilak.
3. Surendra Nath (Banerji).
4. The Maharaja of Baroda.
5. Gokhale.
6. Lajpat Rai.

If the two decisions, it adds, were considered to reflect the public mind, the inference would be that Babu Surendra Nath Banerji and the Maharaja of Baroda have fallen in the public estimation during the past five years ; and that Mahatma Munshi Ram and Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya have raised themselves in the eyes of the public during the same period. The fall of the Gaekwar is due perhaps to "the Darbar incident," to his having recently been made a co-respondent in a divorce case in England, or to "his political existence which took the form of political activity up till 1907" (sic). After expressing its inability to understand why Babu Surendra Nath has come to lose in popularity, the paper says that the rise of Pandit Madan Mohan and Mahatma Munshi Ram in the public estimation is due, in the former's case, to (his work in connection with) the Hindu University scheme and, in that of the latter, to the steady and silent way in which he has been serving the public. It then goes on to say that the 8th place has been won by Lala Hans Raj (403 votes), who was far below Munshi Ram on the Hindustan's list, on which the latter occupied the 7th place. This would show, it adds, that both these men have greatly risen in the eyes of the public since 1907. It further remarks that the 9th place goes to the Maharaja of Baroda; while, strangely enough, Ajit Singh secures the 10th place. The 13th and 14th places have been obtained by Hardyal and Rambhaj Dat, respectively, and the following men have also been voted for :—

Bipin Chandra Pal.

Amba Parshad.

Brahmchari Harish Chandra (Lala Munshi Ram's son).

Dina Nath.

Brahmchari Indar Chandra (Lala Munshi Ram's son).

Professor Ram Dev (of the Gurukula).

Bhai Parma Nand.

Chidambaram Pillai (a prisoner in the Tinnevelly riot case).

Maulvi Liakat Hussain.

Pulin Bihari Das (an ex-Bengali deportee).

Editor of the Parkash.

Pindi Das (, Editor of the defunct India).

Krishna Kumar, Mitra (an ex-Bengali deportee).

Sardar Kishen Singh (Ajit Singh's brother).

Lala Jaswant Rai.

The Arjan (Lahore), of the 25th June (received on the 2nd July) 1912, expresses surprise that votes should have been given even for Ajit Singh, Amba Parshad, Arabindo Ghosh, Har Dyal and Bipin Chandar Pal, "who may be said to hold extremist views." Again, it adds, the Parkash has received 492 votes for Mr. Tilak, who is one of the first six men.

The Hindustan (Lahore), of the 28th June 1912, says that, if the opinions of the readers of the Parkash are taken to represent the public mind, Mahatma Munshi Ram and Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya seem to have risen in the estimation of the public during the past few years.

Biloches.

21. The Muin (Amritsar), of the 24th June (received on the 2nd July) 1912, has an article headed "The Biloch community—I." After remarking that the Biloches have remained unaffected by the awakening visible in India, the paper deplores their backwardness in education. Next it says that they live chiefly in villages, and suggests that primary schools should be established even at outposts in the Biloch ilaka, scholarships being awarded (to enable Biloch boys to attend these institutions). Continuing, it charges Biloch Zamindars with standing in the way of the spread of education in their part of the country from selfish motives. The Editor then goes on to say that he has, in order to prompt Muhammadans to better the lot of their Biloch co-religionists, undertaken to edit the paper without any remuneration. In conclusion, he complains that, because of administrative considerations, the Biloches have been divided into three sections residing in Biluchistan, Sind and the Punjab, respectively; with the result that the various parts of the community are amenable to different laws, have different objects, think differently, and have been estranged from one another.

Juvenile convicts and the Salvation Army.

22. The Vakil (Amritsar), of the 26th June (received on the 2nd July) 1912, has a paragraph headed "A movement to make convicts sell their religion." It is under consideration, says the paper, that those juvenile convicts in the Lahore Central Jail who may wish to pass the unexpired term of their imprisonment in "the Salvation Army Colony at Lahore" will be released on certain conditions. A Committee, adds the paper, was recently appointed to draw up the rules, but it has not as yet transpired what that body has done in the matter. There can, however, be no doubt that it has been decided to make over juvenile convicts to the Salvation Army on certain conditions. The paper has no objection to the proposal, but it would like to know whether it is not shameful for Muhammadans that they should so far have been supplanted even in preaching to and giving (good) advice to convicts. If a prisoner should embrace Christianity by the efforts of the Salvation Army, the blame would lie at the door neither of Government nor of the zealous members of the said Army. After remarking that the prisoner's co-religionists alone would be to blame, the Vakil expresses the hope that Muhammadans will realise the importance of the matter, and take in hand the reformation of at least their own co-religionists in Jails.

The Hon'ble Mian Muhammad Shafi as Secretary of the Punjab Muslim League.

23. The Muin (Amritsar), of the 24th June (received on the 2nd July) 1912, has a note headed "The Hon'ble Mr. Muhammad Shafi in a new role." The gentleman named, it says, has succeeded in "obtaining possession" of the Punjab Muslim League by having himself re-elected as its Secretary. The event, it adds, raises the question what the poor Punjab Muhammadans should do to safeguard their religious, political, and communal interests and to lay their real feelings before Government, seeing that they now have no political society worthy the name to do this work for them. The havoc which the dishonest and treacherous Christian powers of Russia and Italy have of late been working in Islamic countries has converted every Muhammadan home in the Punjab into a place of mourning. Is there, however, any association in this province which can acquaint Government with "this strong feeling" on the part of the Prophet's followers. Again, 90 per cent. of the Punjab Muhammadans, who are engaged in agriculture, are kept out of their legitimate rights and are being crushed under the weight of a multitude of "unfair penalties and hardships of law and procedure." What is it possible to do, asks the paper, to promote the welfare of this dumb, friendless and oppressed section (of the Muhammadan community) ? It also enquires whether it is not possible for Punjab Mussalmans to leave the so-called (Muslim) League alone and organise a new political association.

VI.—Legislation.

Sikhs and Legislative Councils.

24. The following is from the Khalsa Advocate (Amritsar), of the 28th June 1912 :—

* * * * * *

"The Government has held out most sacred pledges for the conservation of the interests of minorities but pretty little has been done in their case. In fact they have been deprived of what little they think their right. Forsooth while in the old Provincial Council the proportion of Sikh members was about $\frac{1}{8}$th, in the new councils it has dwindled down to about $\frac{1}{10}$th and $\frac{1}{30}$ in the Provincial and Imperial Councils respectively. To the Sikhs therefore the Reform Scheme has been but a retrograde step.

"It is sad indeed, that the Khalsa who were but yesterday the terror of the Frontier the sovereign power of the Punjab and allies of Britain, should be thrown entirely on mercy of their erstwhile subjects under progressive British Rule.

"It won't do to conceal the truth that the Sikhs have nothing in common with their neighbours in respect of some of the most vital principles of life. The Community is bettering itself, schools are opening, associations are forming and a hundred and one works of reform are being taken into hand. It is a matter of common knowledge however and it is being painfully felt by the organisers that in every one of these paths of reformation and amelioration our friends of other denominations are in some cases putting obstacles in our way both directly as well as indirectly. Excuses are found to damage our institutions, combinations are formed to shatter our organization and the remedy often lies in the sympathy and interest of the Government themselves. The sympathy and interest, again, cannot be expected to spring up without the Government possessing a knowledge of the circumstances. Even in matters religious, we are sadly hampered. While for all the people of the world, religious freedom is a unique blessing of the British supremacy, it is the Sikhs alone whose solemn baptisms are often farces because of the law and who are not even in some places allowed to observe their simple religious rites like the preparation of Jhatka meat. All this is because Sikhs are not allowed a voice. We have reached pretty nigh the verge of extinction and words alone (though very precious in themselves) cannot save us. As the ex-rulers of the land and as the real gatekeepers of India, we cannot but approach our benign Government with the request that in the interest of the very existence of this people, it is necessary that an elective element be introduced that ⅓rd if not one half of the seats in the Provincial Council and at least four in the Imperial may be reserved for the community.

"It is worse than useless to take in mere figure heads, who have nothing in common with the wishes and aspirations of the community at large. Representatives on the councils should be the persons who stand on the claims of service to people and not on their titles and acres alone. The Government have at their disposal other means of showing their good will towards them.

"The people of the Punjab know that it is the Sikhs who are working under some of the worst disabilities in all walks of life, but very few words have been spoken for them ever since Lord Morley's scheme has been received with acclamation in some quarters.

"We, therefore, appeal once more to the wide-awake head of the province, Sir Louis Dane, His Excellency Lord Hardinge and the Secretary of State to make a top-to-bottom overhauling of electorates to allow the Sikhs a just preferential treatment and afford them an adequate voice in the councils, by affording facilities to real representatives to be elected by the Sikhs themselves."

Council elections and Muhammadans.

25. The following is from the Panjabee (Lahore), of the 4th July 1912 :—

"Only recently, Mr. Montagu complained that charges of breaking political pledges as regards India had become more numerous than quarrels over domestic pledges. But the remark has not apparently touched the Punjab Muslim League. For it has just reminded the Government of India of 'the vital necessity of fulfilling the solemn pledges' repeatedly given to the Muslim communities in regard to Council elections—viz, separate representation. They do not seem to be satisfied with mere separation but they want also adequate representation. So separate representation is not adequate. But the Punjab Muslim League is devoid of humour in suggesting that Muslims here are in a minority and require the protection of separate and special treatment. Its plea is to get what is given to other Muslims in other provinces on the newly fought-out principle that Muslims are a homogeneous community! If, therefore, they do not get separate treatment in the Punjab, then how can they be regarded as homogeneous? This is a new terror to Mr. Montagu, and if Lord Hardinge does not accept the new 'homogeneous' interpretation of the 'solemn promise,' he might find himself hit again by a score or so of indignant resolutions flying across the seas from the eight provinces of India. And that proves again the homogeneity, the exclusiveness, the separatism and speciality, political and otherwise, of the dominant community in the Punjab."

VII.—General Administration.

(a)—Judicial.

Colonel Beadon's appointment to the Punjab Chief Court Bench.

26. The Paisa Akhbar (Lahore), of the 26th June 1912, has a note headed "Military Judge in the Punjab Chief Court." Adverting to the appointment of Colonel Beadon to officiate as a Judge of the Chief Court, Punjab, as a special case, the paper remarks that, in view of his high abilities and vast experience, the Colonel may be relied upon to perform his new duties in an excellent manner. The precedent, however, which the appointment has created for the elevation of Military men to the bench of the Chief Court, can never be viewed by the people with feelings of satisfaction and approval. In the first place, adds the paper, there is always a great difference between the abilities of civilians and military men, for the latter have no opportunity of acquiring a knowledge of law in the beginning of their official career. Again, Indians generally fear military men, and cannot expect a Military Judge to be as sympathetic and keen of judgment as a civilian.

The Mian Mir shooting case.

27. The following is from the Panjabee, (Lahore), of the 29th June 1912 :—

